SECOND PRENTICE: Work swiftly!

THIRD PRENTICE: Help us place the Marker's platform!

DAVID: You my labor and industry shame:
Work by yourselves; I claim my own affairs.

SECOND PRENTICE: What airs he takes!

THIRD PRENTICE: A model Prentice!

FIRST PRENTICE: His time is lent to a shoemaker.

THIRD PRENTICE: His last and pen he holds together.

SECOND PRENTICE: While cobbling he writes his stuff.

FIRST PRENTICE: He scribbled verses on rough leather.

THIRD PRENTICE: (with expressive gesture). We'll soon give him tanning enough!
(They pursue their work, laughing.)

DAVID: (after observing the meditating knight awhile, calls loudly:) "Now begin!"

WALTER: (looking up, surprised). What is it?

DAVID: (still louder). "Now begin!"—So cries the "Marker;"
Then you must sing up:—don't you know that?

WALTER: Who is the Marker?

DAVID: Don't you know that?
Were you never at trials of song?

WALTER: No, never with a tradeworker for a judge.

DAVID: Are you a "Poet?"

WALTER: Maybe so!

DAVID: Are you a "Singer"?

WALTER: I don't know!

DAVID: But you've been "Schoolman," surely, and "Scholar"?

WALTER: The terms I've never heard, nor seen.

DAVID: And yet you would be at once a Master?

WALTER: Why should that seem to threaten disaster?

DAVID: Oh Lena! Lena!

WALTER: What do you say?

DAVID: Oh Magdalena!

WALTER: Show me the way!

DAVID: Good sir, the Singer's crowning deed
Is not accomplished with such speed.
In Nuremberg a famous Master
Has taught me Art—Hans Sachs.
For twelve months now he's been my pastor
That I might be a Scholar.
How to make shoe and poetry too,

hab' ich das Leder glatt geschlagen, lern' ich Vocal und Consonanz sagen;
wichst' ich den Draht gar fein und steif, was sich da reimt, ich wohl begreif';
den Pfriemen schwingend, im Stich die Ahl',
was stumpf, was klingend was Mass und Zahl,— den Leisten im Schurz—was lang, was kurz, was hart, was lind,
hell oder blind,
was Waisen, was Mylben, was Kleb-Sylben, was Pausen, was Körner, Blumen und Dörner, das Alles lernt' ich mit Sorg' und Acht:
wie weit nun, meint ihr, dass ich's gebracht?

WALTHER: Wohl zu 'nem Paar recht guter Schuh'?

DAVID: Ja, dahin hat's noch lange Ruh'!
Ein "Bar" hat manch Gesätz und Gebänd'; were da gleich die rechte Regel fänd', die richt'ge Naht,
und den rechten Draht, mit gutgefügten "Stollen," den Bar recht zu versohlen.
Und dann erst kommt der "Abgesang";
dass er nicht kurz, und nicht zu lang,
und auch keinen Reim enthält, der schon im Stollen gestellt.—
Wer Alles das merkt, weiss und kennt, wird doch immer noch nicht Meister genennt.

WALTHER: Hilf Gott! Will ich denn Schuster sein?
In die Singkunst lieber führ' mich ein.

DAVID: Ja, hätt ich's nur selbst erst zum "Singer" gebracht!
Wer glaubt wohl, was das für Mühe macht?
Der Meister Tön' und Weisen, gar viel an Nam' und Zahl, die starken und die leisen, wer die wüsste allzumal!
Nehmt euch ein Beispiel dran, und lasst von dem Meister-Wahn!
Denn "Singer" und "Dichter müsst" ihr sein eh' ihr zum "Mesiter" kehret ein, zu Wort' und Reimen, die er erfand, aus Tönen auch fügt eine neue Weise, der wird als "Meistersinger" erkannt.

WALTHER: (rasch). So bleibt mir nichts als der Meisterlohn!
Sol ich hier singen, kann's nur gelingen, find' ich zum Vers auch den eig'nen Ton.

At once I pursued both studies.
Solid and smooth the leather beating,
Vowels and consonants I'm repeating;
When I have waxed my threat full well
All about rhymes I learn to tell;
While making stitches
With fingers neat,
I'm learning which is
The time and beat;
While true to my last—
The long, the short,
The hard, the light,
Gloomy and bright,
Contractions and snippings
And word-clippings,
The pauses, the corns,
The flowers and thorns,—
All these I learn with great pains and care:
How far now, think you, I've brought the affair?

WALTER: Perhaps to a pair of right good shoes?

DAVID: Yes, I pursued so far the Muse!
A "Stave" has parts and forms of its own;
Who can master all its rules alone?
With proper thread
And a fitting head
It takes a learned man, sir,
To sole and heel your "Stanza."
And then we have the "After-Song,"
Must not be short, nor yet too long,
Nor repeat a rhyme again
Which the first part did contain.
When all this is read, marked and learned,
Even yet the name of Master's not earned.

WALTER: Help me, God! Must I then cobbling learn?
Rather let us turn to your singing.

DAVID: Ah, if I only could be a "Singer"!
Such labor is far too great for me.
The Tones and Modes we render Have many forms and names;
The harsh ones and the tender:—
Who would try to frame a list?
So be advised by this:
Shun dreams of Master-bliss!
A "Singer" and "Poet," both, do you see,
Previous to "Master" one must be.

WALTER: (quickly). I only think of the Master-gain!
If I sing,
Victory I wring
Only through verse with the proper strain.

DAVID: (der sich zu den Lehrbuben gewendet). Was macht ihr denn da!—Ja, fehl ich beim Werk, verkehrt nur richtet ihr Stuhl und Gemerk!—
Ist denn heut' "Singschul'?"—dass ihr's wisst, das kleine Gemerk!—nur "Freiung" ist!
Die Lehrbuben, welche Anstalt getroffen hatten, in der Mitte der Bühne ein grösseres Gerüste mit Vorhängen aufzuschlagen, schaffen auf David's Weisung dies schnell bei Seite und stellen dafür ebenso eilig ein geringeres Brettbodengerüste auf; darauf stellen sie einen Stuhl mit einem kleinen Pult davor, daneben eine grosse schwarze Tafel, daran die Kreide am Faden aufgehängt wird; um das Gerüst sind schwarze Vorhänge angebracht, welche zunächst hinten und an beiden Seiten, dann auch vorn ganz zusammengezogen werden.

DIE LEHRBUBEN: (während der Herrichtung).
Aller End' ist doch David der Allergescheit'st!
Nach hohen Ehren gewiss er geizt:
's ist Freiung heut';
gar sicher er freit,
als vornehmer "Singer" schon er sich spreizt!
Die "Schlag"-reime fest er inne hat,
"Arm-Hunger"-Weise singt er glatt; die "harte-Tritt"-Weis' doch kennt er am best', die trat ihm sein Meister hart und fest!
(Sie lachen.)

DAVID: Ja, lacht nur zu! Heut' bin ich's nicht; ein Andrer stellt sich zum Gericht:
der war nicht "Schüler," ist nicht "Singer," den "Dichter," sagt er, überspring' er;
denn er ist Junker, und mit einem Sprung er denkt ohne weit're Beschwerden heut' hier "Meister" zu werden.
D'rum richtet nur fein das Gemerk dem ein Dorthin!—Hierher!—Die Tafel an die Wand, so dass sie recht dem Merker zu Hand!
(sich zu Walther unwendend.)
Ja, ja!—dem "Merker!"—Wird euch wohl bang?
Vor ihm schon mancher Werber versang.
Sieben Fehler giebt er euch vor, die merkt er mit Kreide dort an;
were über sieben Fehler verlor, hat versungen und ganz verthan!
Nun nehmt euch in Acht!
Der Merker wacht,
Glück auf zum Meistersingen!
Mögt' ihr euch das Kränzlein erschwingen
Das Blumenkränzlein aus Seiden fein,
Wird das dem Herrn Ritter beschieden sein?

DAVID: (turning to the Prentices). What are you doing?—Because I'm not there You're placing the platform and chairs all wrong!—
Is today "Song-class?"—You know how!
Make the stage smaller!—It is "Trial" now.
(The Prentices, who were preparing to erect a large platform hung with curtains in the middle of the stage, put this away, by David's direction, and build instead a smaller platform of boards; on this they place a seat with a little desk before it, near this a large blackboard to which they hang a piece of chalk by a string; round this erection are hung black curtains, which are drawn round the back and sides and then over the front.)

PRENTICES: (during their work).
Oh! of course Mister David is cleverer than most!
Doubtless he's hoping to get a high post:
It is Trial-day,
He'll try away;
That he's now quite a "Singer" is his boast!
That "Whack"-rhyme he knows all through and through;
The "Sharp-hunger" tune he'll sing you too;
But the "Hearty-kick" strain is what he knows best;
His master often plays it with zest.
(they laugh.)

DAVID: Aye, jeer away! but not at me,
Another laughing-stock you'll see:
He never was "Scholar," learnt no singing,
But yet over "Poets" would be springing;
A noble knight he.
In single flight he Thinks without any disaster
Here to rise to a "Master."
So settle with care
Both stage and chair
Come here!—Place there the board on the wall,
That on it the Marker's fingers may fall!
(turning to Walter.)
Aye, aye!—the "Marker"!—Aren't you afraid?
With him have many their failures made.
Seven faults you are suffered to make;
They're marked with his chalk, every one;
If you commit one farther mistake,
You're "outsung" and declared "outdone."
So have care!
The Marker's there.
Godspeed your Master singing?
May you the chaplet be winning!
The wreath of flowers in silk so bright,
I hope it may fall to your lot, sir knight!

DIE LEHRBUBEN: (welche das Gemerk zugleich geschlossen, fassen sich an und tanzen einen verschlungenen Reihen draum.)
wird das dem Herrn Ritter beschieden sein?
(Die Einrichtung ist nun folgendermassen beendigt:—Zur Seite sind gepolsterte Bänke in der weise aufgestellt. Am Ende der Bänke, in der Mitte der Scene, befindet sich das "Gemerk" benannte Gerüste, welches zuvor hergerichtet worden. Zur linken Seite steht nur der erhöhte, kathederartige Stuhl ("der Singstuhl") der Versammlung gegenüber. Im Hintergrunde, dem grossen Vorhang entlang, steht eine lange niedere Bank für die Lehrlinge.—Walther, verdriesslich über das Gespött der Knaben, hat sich auf die vorders Bank niedergelassen. Pogner und Beckmesser kommen im Gespräch aus der Sacristei; allmählich versammeln sich immer mehrere der Meister. Die Lehrbuben, und sie die Meister entreten sahen, sind sogleich zurückgegangen und harren ehrerbietig an der hinteren Bank. Nur David stellt sich anfänglich am Eingang bei der Sacristei auf.)

POGNER: (zu Beckmesser). Seid meiner Treue wohl versehen; was ich bestimmt, ist euch zu nutz;
im Wettgesang müsst ihr bestehen;
wer böte euch als Meister Trutz?

BECKMESSER: Doch wollt ihr von dem Punkt nicht weichen, der mich—ich sag's—bedenklich macht;
kann Evehen's Wunsch den Werber streichen, was nützt mir meine Meisterpracht?

POGNER: Ei sagt! leh mein', vor allen Dingen sollt' euch an dem gelegen sein?
Könnt ihr der Tochter Wunsch nicht zwingen, wie möchtet ihr wohl um sie frei'n?

BECKMESSER: Ei ja! Gar wohl!
D'rum eben bitt ich,
das bei dem Kind ihr für mich sprecht, wie ich geworben zart und sittig, und wie Beckmesser grad' euch recht.

POGNER: Das thu' ich gern.

BECKMESSER: (bei Seite). Er lässt nicht nach!
Wie wehrt' ich da 'nem Ungemach?

PRENTICES: (who have closed the Marker's place, take hands and dance in a ring round it.) "The wreath of flowers in silk so bright,
Pogner and Beckmesser enter from the sacristy, conversing; gradually the other Masters assemble. The Prentices on seeing the Masters enter disperse and wait respectively by the back bench. Only David stands by the entrance to the sacristy.)

POGNER: (to Beckmesser). Trust me, my friendship is unshaken;
What I intend is for your good:
This trial must be undertaken;
None doubts your Mastership: who could?

BECKMESSER: But won't you falter in that matter
Which caused—in truth—my doubtful mood?
If Eva's whim the whole can alter,
What use is all my Masterhood?

POGNER: Ah, what! It seems you've mainly rested
On that your hopes equivocal?
But if her heart's not interested,
How come you're wooing her at all?

BECKMESSER: Why yes, that's true! Therefore I drop a Request that you will speak for me;
Say that my wooing's fair and proper,
That with Beckmesser you agree.

POGNER: With right good will.

BECKMESSER: (aside). He won't give way!
How shall I avoid disappointment?

WALTHER: (der, als er Pogner gewahrt, aufgestanden und ihm entgegen gegangen ist, verneight sich vor ihm). Gestattet, Meister!

POGNER: Wie! mein Junker!
Ihr sucht mich in der Singschul' hie?
(Sie begrüssen sich.)

BECKMESSER: (immer bei Seite, für sich). Verstünden's die Frau'n!
Doch schlectes Geflunken
Gilt ihnen mehr als all' Poesie.

WALTHER: Hie eben bin ich am rechten Ort.
Gesteh' ich's frei, vom Lande fort
Was mich nach Nürnberg trieb, War nur zur Kunst die Lieb'.
Vergass ich's gestern euch zu sagen, heut' muss ich's laut zu künden wagen:
ein Meistersinger möcht ich sein.
Schliesst, Meister, in die Zunft mich ein.
(Andere Meister sind gekommen und herangetreten.)

POGNER: (zu den nächsten).
Kunz Vogelgesang—Freund Nachtigal!
Hört doch, welch' ganz besonderer Fall!
Der Ritter heir, mir wohlbekannt, hat der Meisterkunst sich zugewandt.
(Begrüssungen.)

BECKMESSER: (immer noch für sich). Noch such' ich's zu wenden:
doch sollt's nicht gelingen;
versuch ich des Mädchens Herz zu ersingen;
in stiller Nacht, von ihr gehört, erfahr' ich, ob auf mein Lied sie schwört.
(Er wendet sich.)
Wer ist der Mensch?

POGNER: (zu Walther). Glaubt, wie mich's freut!
Die alte Zeit dünkt mich erneu't.

BECKMESSER: (immer noch für sich). Er gefällt mir nicht!

POGNER: (fortfahrend). Was ihr begehrt, soviel an mir euch sei's gewährt.

BECKMESSER: (ebenso). Was will der hier!—Wie der Blick ihm lacht!

POGNER: (ebenso). Half ich euch gern zu des Gut's Verkauf, in die Zunft nun nehm' ich euch gleich gern auf.

BECKMESSER: (ebenso). Holla! Sixtus! Auf den hab' Acht!

WALTHER: (zu Pogner). Hab Dank der Güte aus tiefstem Gemüthe!
Und darf ich denn hoffen, Steht heut' mir noch offen zu werben um den Preis, dass ich Meistersinger heiss'?

BECKMESSER: Oho! Fein sacht?
Auf dem Kopf steht kein Kegel!

WALTER: (who, on perceiving Pogner, has risen and advanced to meet him now bows to him). Permit me, Master!

POGNER: What! Sir Walter?
You've sought me in the school down here?
(They greet one another.)

BECKMESSER: (still to himself). If women had taste! But they prefer to palter Than to hear poetry.

WALTER: This truly should be my proper groove.
I frankly state that what did move
Me from my land to part
Was solely love of Art.
I had forgotten to announce it,
But now in public I pronounce it:
A Master Singer I would be.
Open, Master, the Guild to me.
(Other Masters have entered and advanced.)

POGNER: (to those near him).
Kunz Vogelgesang—Friend Nachtigal!
Hear what I've got to tell you all!
This noble knight, a friend of mine,
Seeks to shine in the Master Art.
(Greetings and introductions.)

BECKMESSER: (still aside). Once more I'll approach him, but if he'll not waver I'll strive with my voice to win the maid's favor;
In silent night, heard only by her.
I'll see if my singing her heart can stir.
(turns.)
What man is that?

POGNER: (to Walter). 'Faith, I am glad!
Old times are come again, my lad.

BECKMESSER: (aside). I don't like his looks!

POGNER: (continuing). In your demand
My influence you may command.

BECKMESSER: (as before). What wants he here, with his smiling air?

POGNER: (as before). Truly I helped you your lands to sell,
In our Guild I'll enter you now as well.

BECKMESSER: (as before). Hallo, Sixtus? of him beware!

WALTER: (to Pogner). Best thanks I proffer
And gratitude offer!
Then have I permission
To seek for admission
As striver for the prize.
And Master Singer to rise?

BECKMESSER: Oho! that's nice!
His ideas are not paddled!

POGNER: Herr Ritter, diess geh' nun nach der Regel.
Doch heut' ist Freiung: ich schlag' euch vor;
mir leihen die Meister ein willig Ohr.
(Die Meistersinger sind nun alle angelangt, zuletzt auch Hans Sachs.)

SACHS: Gott grüss' euch, Meister!

VOGELGESANG: Sind wir beisammen?

BECKMESSER: Der Sachs ist ja da!

NACHTIGALL: So ruft die Namen!

FRITZ KOTHNER: (zicht eine Liste hervor, stellt sich zur seite auf und ruft). Zu einer Freiung und Zunftberathung Ging an die Meister ein' Einladung; bei Nenn' and Nam',
ob jeder kam,
ruf' ich nun auf, als letzt-entbot'ner, der ich mich nenn' und bin Fritz Kothner.
Seit ihr da, Veit Pogner?

POGNER: Hier zu Hand.
(Er setzt sich.)

KOTHNER: Kunz Vogelgesang?

VOGELGESANG: Ein sich fand.
(Setzt sich.)

KOTHNER: Hermann Ortel?

ORTEL: Immer am Ort.
(Setzt sich.)

KOTHNER: Balthazar Zorn?

ZORN: Bleibt neimals fort.
(Setzt sich.)

KOTHNER: Konrad Nachtigall?

NACHTIGALL: Treu seinem Schlag.
(Setzt sich.)

KOTHNER: Augustin Moser?

MOSER: Nie fehlen mag.
(Setzt sich.)

KOTHNER: Niklaus Vogel?—Schweigt?

EIN LEHRBUBE: (sich schnell von der Bank erhebend). Ist krank.

KOTHNER: Gut' Bess'rung dem Meister!

ALLE MEISTER: Walt's Gott!

DER LEHRBUBE: Schön Dank!
(Setzt sich wieder.)

KOTHNER: Hans Sachs?

DAVID: (vorlaut sich erhebend). Da steht er!

SACHS: (drohend zu David). Juckt dich das Fell?—
Verzeiht, Meister!—Sachs ist zur Stell'.
(Er setzt sich.)

KOTHNER: Sixtus Beckmesser?

POGNER: Sir Walter, these things with rules are saddled.
Today is "Trial"; I'll state your case:
The Masters will always lend me their ears.
(The Master Singers have now all assembled, Sachs the last.)

SACHS: God greet you, Masters!

VOGELGESANG: Has everyone arrived?

BECKMESSER: Yes, Sachs is here too.

NACHTIGAL: Let names be given.

FRITZ KOTHNER: (produces a list, stands apart from the rest and calls:) To hold a Trial-examination, Masters, I give you invitation:
Of one and all
The names I call,
And first my own, which, though I note never,
I answer to and am Fritz Kothner.
Are you there, Veit Pogner?

POGNER: Here at hand.
(sits.)

KOTHNER: Kunz Vogelgesang?

VOGELGESANG: Yes, here I am.
(sits.)

KOTHNER: Herman Ortel?

ORTEL: Comes when he ought.
(sits.)

KOTHNER: Balthazar Zorn?

ZORN: I'm never late.
(sits.)

KOTHNER: Conrad Nachtigal?

NACHTIGAL: True as my song.
(sits.)

KOTHNER: Augustin Moser?

MOSER: Here all along.
(sits.)

KOTHNER: Nicholas Vogel?—No?

A PRENTICE: (jumping up from his seat at back). He's ill.

KOTHNER: God send him recovery!

ALL THE MASTERS: Amen!

PRENTICE: Good will!
(sits down again.)

KOTHNER: Hans Sachs?

DAVID: (officiously rising). He's there, sir!

SACHS: (threatening David). Tingles your skin?— Excuse me, Master!—Sachs has come in.
(sits.)

KOTHNER: Sixtus Beckmesser?

BECKMESSER: Immer bei Sachs, dass den Reim ich lern' von "bluh' und wachs'."
(Er setzt sich neben Sachs, dieser lacht.)

KOTHNER: Ulrich Eisslinger?

EISSLINGER: Hier!
(Setzt sich.)

KOTHNER: Hans Foltz?

FOLTZ: Bin da.
(Setzt sich.)

KOTHNER: Hans Schwarz?

SCHWARZ: Zuletzt: Gott wollt's!
(Setzt sich.)

KOTHNER: Zur Sitzung gut und voll die Zahl, Beliebt's, wir schreiten zur Merkerwahl?

VOGELGESANG: Wohl eh'r nach dem Fest.

BECKMESSER: (zu Kothner).
Pressirt's den Herrn?
Mein Stell' und Amt lass' ich ihm gern.

POGNER: Nicht doch, ihr Meister!
Lasst das jetzt fort.
Für wicht'gen Antrag bitt' ich um's Wort.
(Alle Meister stehen auf und setzen sich wieder.)

KOTHNER: Das habt ihr, Meister!
Sprecht!

POGNER: Nun hört, und versteht mich recht!—
Das schöne Fest, Johannis-Tag, ihr wisst, begeh'n wir morgen;
auf grüner Au', am Blumenhag, bei Spiel und Tanz im Lustgelag, an froher Brust geborgen, vergessen seiner Sorgen, ein Jeder freut sich wie er mag.
Die Singschul' ernst im Kirchenchor die Meister selbst vertauschen;
mit Kling und Klang hinaus zum Thor auf off'ne Wiese ziehn sie vor, bei hellen Festes Rauschen;
das Volk sie lassen lauschen dem Frei-Gesang mit Laien-Ohr.
Zu einem Werb' und Wett-Gesang
gestellt sind Siegespreise, und beide rühmt man weit und lang, die Gabe wie die Weise.
Nun schuf mich Gott zum reichen Mann;
und giebt ein Jeder wie er kann, so musst' ich fleissig sinnen,
was ich gäb' zu gewinnen, dass ich nicht käm' zu Schand':
so höret, was ich fand.—
In deutschen Landen viel gereis't, hat oft es mich verdrossen, dass man den Bürger wenig preis't, ihn karg nennt und verschlossen.
An Höfen, wie an nied'rer Statt, des bitt'ren Tadels ward ich satt, das nur auf Schacher und Geld sein Merk' der Bürger stellt'.
Dass wir im weiten deutschen Reich die Kunst einzig noch pflegen, d'ran dünkt' ihnen wenig gelegen;
doch wie uns das zur Ehre gereich', und dass mit hohen Muth wir schätzen, was schön und gut, was werth die Kunst, und was sie gilt, das ward ich der Welt zu zeigen gewillt D'rum hört, Meister, die Gab', die als Preis bestimmt ich hab':
dem Singer, der im Kunst-Gesang vor allem Volk den Preis errang am Sankt Johannistag, sie er, wer er auch mag, dem geb' ich, ein Kunst-gewog'ner,
von Nürenberg Veit Pogner, mit all' meinem Gut, wie's geh' und steh' Eva, mein einzig Kind, zur Eh'.

DIE MEISTER: (sehr lebhalt durcheinander). Das nenn' ich ein Wort! Ein Wort, ein Mann!
Da sieht man, was ein Nürnberger kann!
D'rob preis't man euch noch weit und breit, den wack'ren Bürger Pogner Veit!

DIE LEHRBUBEN: (lustig aufspringend). Alle Zeit, weit und briet: Pogner Veit!

VOGELGESANG: Wer möchte da nicht ledig sein!

SACHS: Sein Weib gäb' gern wohl mancher drei'n!

NACHTIGALL: Auf, ledig' Mann!
Jetzt macht euch dran!

POGNER: Nun hört noch, wie ich's ernstlich mein!
Ein' leblos' Gabe stell' ich nicht:
ein Mägdlein sitzt mit zu Gericht.
Den Preis erkennt die Meister-Zunft; doch gilt's der Eh', so will's Vernunft, dass ob der Meister Rath die Braut den Ausschlag hat.

BECKMESSER: (zu Kothner).
Dünkt euch das klug?

KOTHNER: (laut). Versteh' ich gut, irh gebt uns in des Mägdlein's Huth?

BECKMESSER: Gefährlich das!

KOTHNER: Stimmt es nicht bei, wie wäre dann der Meister Urtheil frei?

BECKMESSER: Lasst's gleich wählen nach Herzen's Ziel, und lasst den Meistergesang aus dem Speil!

POGNER: Nicht so! Wie doch? Versteht mich recht!
Wem ihr Meister den Preis zusprecht, die Maid kann dem verwehren,

BECKMESSER: Always near Sachs,
Then I have a rhyme to "bloom and wax."
(sits close to Sachs, who laughs.)

KOTHNER: Ulric Eisslinger?

EISSLINGER: Here!
(sits.)

KOTHNER: Hans Foltz?

FOLTZ: I'm here.
(sits.)

KOTHNER: Hans Schwarz?

SCHWARZ: The list now halts.
(sits.)

KOTHNER: The meeting's full; a good show.
Shall we make choice of a Marker now?

VOGELGESANG: The Festival first.

BECKMESSER: (to Kothner). If you are pressed,
I'll yield my turn to you with zest.

POGNER: Not yet, my Masters! let that alone.
A weighty matter I would make known.
(All the Masters rise and reseat themselves.)

KOTHNER: With pleasure, Master!
Tell!

POGNER: Then hear, and mark me well!—
St. John's most holy festal day,
You know, we keep tomorrow;
In meadows green, among the hay,
With song and dance and merry play.
Each heart will gladness borrow
And cast aside all sorrow;
So each will sport as best he may.
The Singing-school we Masters here
A staid church-choir will christen:
From out the gates with merry cheer
To open meadows we will steer,
While festal banners glisten:
The populace shall listen
To Master Songs with layman's ear.
For those who best succeed in song
Are gifts of various sizes,
And all will hail, full loud and long,
Both melodies and prizes.
I am thank God! a wealthy man;
And, as each gives what he can,
I've ransacked every coffer
To find a prize to offer,
Not to be brought to shame:—
Now, hear what I've thought—Through German lands when I have roved
It pained me, as I listened,
To hear the burghers are not loved,
Deemed selfish and close-fisted.
In low life, as in courts the same,
I always heard the bitter blame
That only treasure and gold
Can hold the burgher's thoughts.
That we in all Empire's bounds Alone have promoted Art.
I fancy they scarcely have noted:
But how this adds to our honor,
And how, with proudest care,
We treasure the good and rare,
What Art is worth—what it can do—
Now have I a mind to show you.
So hear, Masters, what thing
As a prize I mean to bring.—
The singer, to whose lyric skill
The public voice the prize shall win,
On John the Baptist's day,—
Be he whoever he may—
I, Pogner, an Art supporter,
A townsman of this quarter,
Will give, with my gold and goods beside,
Eva, my only child, for bride.

THE MASTERS: (animatedly to one another). That's nobly said!
Brave words—brave man!
You see now what a Nuremberger can!
So far and wide we'll raise always
The worthy burgher Pogner's praise!

PRENTICES: (jumping up merrily). All our days raise and blaze Pogner's praise!

VOGELGESANG: Who would not now be unmarried!

SACHS: There's some would give their wives with glee.

NACHTIGAL: Come, single man,
Do all you can.

POGNER: My meaning you must clearly see:
No lifeless gift I offer you;
The maid shall sit in judgment too.
Our Guild shall declare the winner:
But as to marriage, it is but fair
That she despite the Masters' choice,
The bride should have a voice.

BECKMESSER: (to Kothner). Do you like that?

KOTHNER: (aloud). You mean to say That we must obey the maiden?

BECKMESSER: It's dangerous!

KOTHNER: I cannot see
How then our judgment would be free.

BECKMESSER: Let her choose as may please her heart,
And leave the Master Song business apart.

POGNER: No, no? why so? Let me correct!
Any man whom we all elect
May be by her rejected,
But never another accepted:

doch nie einen Andren begehren:
ein Meistersinger muss er sein;
nur wen ihr krönt, den soll sie frei'n.

SACHS: Verzeiht!
Vielleicht schon ginget ihr zu weit.
Ein Mädchenherz und Meisterkunst erglüh'n nicht stets von gleicher Brunst;
der Frauen Sinn, gar unbelehrt, dünkt mich dem Sinn des Volks gleich werth.
Wollt ihr nun vor dem Volke zeigen, wie hoch die Kunst ihr ehrt;
und lasst ihr dem Kind die Wahl zu eigen, wollt nicht, dass dem Spruch es wehrt':
so Lasst das Volk auch Richter sein;
mit dem Kinde sicher stimmt's überein.

DIE MEISTER: (unruhig durcheinander). Oho! Das Volk?
Ja, das wäre schön!
Ade dann Kunst und Meistertön'!

NACHTIGALL: Nein, Sachs! Gewiss, das hat keinen Sinn!
Gäbt ihr dem Volk die Regel hin?

SACHS: Vernehmt mich recht! Wie ihr doch thut!
Gesteht, ich kenn' die Regeln gut;
und dass die Zunft die Regeln bewahr', bemüh' ich mich selbst schon manches Jahr Doch einmal im Jahre fänd' ich's weise, dass man die Regeln selbst probir', ob in der Gewohnheit trägem G'leise ihr' Kraft und Leben sich nicht verlier'; und ob ihr der Natur noch seid auf rechter Spur, das sagt euch nur,
wer nichts weiss von der Tabulatur.
(Die Lehrbuben springen auf und reiben sich die Hände.)

BECKMESSER: Hei! wie sich die Buben freuen!

SACHS: (eifrig fortfahrend).
D'rum mocht's euch nie gereuen, dass jährlich am Sankt Johannisfest, statt dass das Volk man kommen lässt, herab aus hoher Meister-Wolk' ihr selbst euch wendet zu dem Volk'.
Dem Volke wollt ihr behagen;
nun dächt' ich' läg' es nah', ihr liesst es selbst euch auch sagen, ob das ihm zur Last geschah?
Das Volk und Kunst gleich blüh' und wachs', bestellt ihr so, mein ich, Hans Sachs.

VOGELGESANG: Ihr meint's wohl recht!

KOTHNER: Doch steht's drum faul.

A Master Singer he must be;
None may she wed uncrowned by you.

SACHS: But say!
Perhaps that were too much to say.
The fire that warms a maiden's heart
Is not like flames of Master-Art;
Undisciplined, the female mind
Level with public voice I find.
So, if you hold to public vision
Your high esteem of Art,
If you desire the girl's decision
Should not thwart the matter,
Then let the people too decide;
With the maiden's voice they'd coincide.

THE MASTERS: (uneasily amongst themselves). Oho! The people! What an idea!
It is then goodbye to Art, I fear!

NACHTIGAL: Nay, Sachs! Indeed that is absurd!
We to obey the people's word?

SACHS: Pray, understand! Don't talk like that!
Of course I have the rules all pat;
And that our Guild should keep them too
For many a year I've worked with you.
But once in each year I think it would be better
To have these very rules well tried,
For fear that, rusted by use and custom's fetter,
Their force and life perhaps have died.
If Truth and Nature pure
Still in your laws endure,
You'll learn for sure
Where nothings known of the Tabulature.
(The Prentices jump up and rub their hands.)

BECKMESSER: Hey! Are not the boys contended!

SACHS: (earnestly continuing).
So may it never be repented
That once, on St. John's day, every year
You do not bring the people here,
But bend your Guild of Masters proud Right willingly towards the crowd.
You cater here for the masses:
I think then it were but right
To ask the vote of those classes
And hear if they find delight.
Thus Art and Nation shall bloom and wax
By your good help, say I, Hans Sachs.

VOGELGESANG: That's very right!

KOTHNER: And yet all wrong!

NACHTIGALL: Wenn spricht das Volk, halt' ich das Maul.

KOTHNER: Der Kunst droht' allweil Fall und Schmach, läuft sie der Gunst des Volkes nach.

BECKMESSER: D'rin bracht' er's weit, der hier so dreist:
Gassenhauer dichtet er meist.

POGNER: Freund Sachs, was ich mein', ist schon neu:
zuviel auf einmal brächte Reu'!—
So frag' ich, ob den Meistern gefällt Gab' und Regel, wie ich's gestellt?
(Die Meister erheben sich.)

SACHS: Mir genügt der Jungfer Ausschlag-Stimm.

BECKMESSER: (für sich.) Der Schuster weckt doch stets mir Grimm!

KOTHNER: Wer schreibt sich als Werber ein?
Ein Junggesell muss es sein.

BECKMESSER: Vielleicht auch ein Wittwer? Fragt nur den Sachs!

SACHS: Nicht doch, Herr Merker!
Aus jüng'rem Wachs
als ich und ihr muss der Freier sein, soll Evchen ihm den Preis verleih'n.

BECKMESSER: Als wie auch ich?—Grober Gesell!

KOTHNER: Begehrt wer Freiung, der komm' zur Stell'!
Ist Jemand gemeld't, der Freiung begehrt?

POGNER: Wohl, Meister! Zur Tagesordnung kehrt!
Und nehmt von mir Bericht, wie ich auf Meister-Pflicht einen jungen Ritter empfehle, der wünscht, dass man ihn wähle, und heut' als Meistersinger frei'.—
Main Junker von Stolzing, kommt herbei!
(Walter tritt vor und verneigt sich).

BECKMESSER: (für sich). Dacht' ich mir's doch! Geht's da hinaus, Veith?
(Laut.)
Meister, ich mein', zu spät ist's der Zeit.

DIE MEISTER: (durcheinander).
Der Fall ist neu.—Ein Ritter gar?
Soll man sich freu'n?—Oder wär' Gefahr?
Immerhin hat's ein gross Gewicht, dass Meister Pogner für ihn spricht.

KOTHNER: Soll uns der Junker willkommen sein, zuvor muss er wohl vernommen sein.

POGNER: Vernehmt ihn gut!
Wünsch' ich ihm Glück,
nicht bleib' ich doch hinter der Regel zurück.
Thut, Meister, die Fragen!

NACHTIGAL: When riff-raff speak I'll hold my tongue.

KOTHNER: Our Art would quickly be disgraced,
If it were swayed by public taste.

BECKMESSER: He's tried for that who talks so loud;
Clap-trap stuff he writes for the crowd.

POGNER: Friend Sachs, what I propose is new;
Too many novelties won't do!—
I ask then, if you Masters will hold
My offer on the terms just told?
(The Masters rise assentingly.)

SACHS: I am content the maid should decide.

BECKMESSER: (aside). That cobblerman I can't abide!

KOTHNER: What candidate comes to me?
A bachelor he must be?

BECKMESSER: He may be a widower! How about Sachs?

SACHS: No, No, good Marker! Of younger wax Must be the suitor who comes to woo
Our Eva, than myself or you.

BECKMESSER: Than even I?—Mannerless knave!

KOTHNER: If suitors offer, their names I crave!
Is anyone here who seeks to essay?

POGNER: Well, Masters, to the work of the day!
And be it understood That I, as Masters should,
To this knight have offered protection,
Who seeks for our election,
To woo, as Master Singers may.—
Sir Walter von Stolzing, step this way!
(Walter advances and makes obeisance.)

BECKMESSER: (aside). Just as I feared! So that's what he schemes?
(aloud.)
Masters, it is too late now, it seems.

THE MASTERS: (to one another)
The case is new.—A noble knight?
Should we be glad? Do you think it right?
Nevertheless it should have great weight
That Pogner is his advocate.

KOTHNER: Before this young man's certified by us
He must first of all be tried by us.

POGNER: Do not mistake me: I wish him well,
But against the rules I'm the last to rebel.
Come, Masters, and task him!

KOTHNER: So mög' uns der Junker sagen:
ist er frei und ehrlich geboren?

POGNER: Die Frage gebt verloren, da ich euch selbst dess' Bürge steh';
dass er aus frei und edler Eh': von Stolzing Walther aus Frankenland, nach Brief' und Urkund' mir wohlbekannt.
Als seines Stammes letzter Spross, verliess er neulich Hof und Schloss und zog nach Nürnberg her, dass er hier Bürger wär'.

BECKMESSER: (zum Nachbar). Neu Junker-Unkraut! Thut nicht gut.

NACHTIGALL: (laut). Freund Pogner's Wort Genüge thut.

SACHS: Wie längst von den Meistern beschlossen ist, ob Herr, ob Bauer, hier nichts beschiesst:
hier fragt sich's nach der Kunst allein, wer will ein Meistersinger sein.

KOTHNER: D'rum nun frag' ich zur Stell':
welch' Meister's seid ihr Gesell'?

WALTHER: Am stillen Herd in Winterzeit, wenn Burg und Hof mir eingeschnei't, wie einst der Lenz so lieblich lacht', und wie er bald wohl neu erwacht', ein altes Buch, vom Ahn' vermacht, gab das mir oft zu lesen:
Herr Walther von der Vogelweid', der ist mein Meister gewesen.

SACHS: Ein guter Meister!

BECKMESSER: Doch lang' schon todt:
wie lehrt' ihm der wohl der Regel Gebot.

KOTHNER: Doch in welcher Schul' das Singen mocht' euch zu lernen gelingen?

WALTHER: Wann dann die Flur vom Frost befreit, und wiederkehrt die Sommerzeit, was einst in langer Winternacht das alte Buch mir kund gemacht, das schallte laut in Waldespracht, das hört' ich hell erklingen:
im Wald dort auf der Vogelweid', da lernt' ich auch das Singen.

BECKMESSER: Oho! Von Finken und Meisen lerntet ihr Meister-Weisen?
Das mag denn wohl auch dar nach sein!

VOGELGESANG: Zwie art'ge Stollen fasst' er da ein.

KOTHNER: One question I would ask him:
Is he free and born in good standing?

POGNER: I'll answer your demand
And be, myself, his guarantee
That he is nobly born and free:
Sir Walter Stolzing, Franconian knight;
My friends his praise both speak and write.
The last survivor of his race,
He lately left his native place to come To Nuremberg
And make this town his home.

BECKMESSER: (to his neighbor). Young, good-for-nothing! This is nice!

NACHTIGAL: (aloud). Friend Pogner's word will quite suffice.

SACHS: We Masters did long since decide,
Nor lord nor peasant should be denied.
Art is indeed the sole concern
Of those who would learn Master-Song.

KOTHNER: First I ask you tell us
What Master taught you your Art.

WALTER: By silent hearth in winter time,
When house and hall in snow did hide,
How once the Spring so sweetly smiled
And soon should wake to glory mild.
An ancient book my sire compiled Set all before me duly:
Sir Walter of the Vogelweid,
Has been my master, truly.

SACHS: A goodly master!

BECKMESSER: But long since dead!
So what could he have read of our precepts?

KOTHNER: But did you learn your knowledge
Of singing in school or cottage.

WALTER: Yes, when the fields defied the frost,
Beneath returning summertime,
What once in dreary winter's night
Within that book I read aright
Now pealed aloud through forest bright:
I heard the music ringing.
The wood before the Vogelweid'—
It was there I learned my singing.

BECKMESSER: Oho! The finch and the linnet Taught you all in a minute?
That's your style of song, without doubt.

VOGELGESANG: Two proper Stanzas he has made out.

BECKMESSER: Ihr lobt ihn, Meister Vogelgesang?
Wohl weil er vom Vogel lernt' den Gesang?

KOTHNER: (beiseit' zu den Meistern). Was meint ihr, Meister? Frag' ich noch fort?
Mich dünkt, der Junker ist fehl am Ort.

SACHS: Das wird sich bäldlich zeigen: Wenn rechte Kunst ihm eigen, und gut er sie bewährt, was gilt's, wer sie ihm gelehrt?

KOTHNER: seid ihr bereit, ob euch gerieth mit neuer Find' ein Mesiterlied nach Dicht' und Weis' en'r eigen zur Stunde jetzt zu zeigen?

WALTHER: Was Winternacht, was Waldes Pracht, was Buch und Hain mich wiesen;
was Dichter-Sanges Wundermacht mir heimlich wollt' erschliesen; was Rosses Schritt
beim Waffen-Ritt, was Reihen-Tanz bei heitrem Schanz mir sinnend gab zu lauschen:
gilt es des Lebens höchsten Preis um Sang mir einzutauschen, zu eig'nem Wort, und eig'ner Weis' will einig mir es fliessen, als Meistersang, ob den ich weiss, euch Meistern sich ergiessen.

BECKMESSER: Entnahmt ihr 'was der Worte Schwall?

VOGELGESANG: Ei nun, er wagt's!

NACHTIGALL: Merkwürd'ger Fall!

KOTHNER: Nun, Meister, wenn's gefällt, werd' das Gemerk bestellt.—
Wähl der Herr einen heil'gen Stoff?

WALTHER: Was heilig, mir, der Liebe Panier
schwing' und sing' ich, mir zu Hoff'.

KOTHNER: Das gilt uns weltlich.
Drum allein, Merker Beckmesser schliesst euch ein!

BECKMESSER: (aufstehend und dem Gemerk zu schreitend). Ein sau'res Amt und heut' zumal; wohl giebt's mit der Kreide manche Qual.—
Herr Ritter, wisst: Sixtus Beckmesser Merker ist; hier im Gemerk
verrichtet er still sein strenges Werk, Sieben Fehler giebt er euch vor, die merkt er mit der Kreide dort an:
wenn er über sieben Fehler verlor, dann versang der Herr Rittersmann.— Gar fein er hört;
doch dass er euch den Muth nicht stört,

BECKMESSER: You praise him, Master Vogelgesang,
That from the bird's instruction he sang?

KOTHNER: (aside, to the Masters) What think you, Masters? shall I proceed?
I fear this gallant will not succeed.

SACHS: The affair shall soon be sifted:
If he's gifted with true Art
And treats it as he ought,
What does it matter where he's taught?

KOTHNER: Are you prepared, before this throng,
To straight produce a Master-Song,
With music set correctly,
And sing it us directly?

WALTER: What winter night.
What wood so bright.
What book and Nature brought me,
What Poet-Songs of magic might Mysteriously have taught me,
On horses' tramp,
On field and camp,
On knights arrayed
For war parade,
My mind exerted its powers;
So not life's highest prize
I must convert to song.
Each word and tone, my own alone,
I will attempt to sing you:—
A Master Song, if such it be,
My Masters, I will bring you.

BECKMESSER: Can any one trace his meaning?

VOGELGESANG: Good sooth, he's bold!

NACHTIGAL: Peculiar case!

KOTHNER: Now, Masters, if you will,
The Marker's place we'll fill.
What sacred theme do you choose, sir knight?

WALTER: My sacred treasure is
The banner of love,
Swung and sung to my delight!

KOTHNER: Secular be it. Now inside, Marker Beckmesser, please hide.

BECKMESSER: (rising and going, as if reluctantly, to the Marker's box). Unpleasant work, and more so now:
My chalk will harrass you, I know it!
Sir knight, now listen!
Sixtus Beckmesser goes to mark.
Here in this cell
He silently does his duty fiercely.
Seven faults are given you clear:
With chalk on a slate they are scored:
But if more mistakes than seven appear,
Then, sir knight, without hope you are floored.—
My ears are keen;
But as, if what I do were seen,

säh't ihr ihm zu,
so giebt er euch Ruh', und schliesst sich gar hier ein,— lässt Gott euch befohlen sein.
(Er hat sich in das Gemerk gesetzt, streckt mit dem Letzten den Kopf höhnisch freundlich nickend heraus, und zieht den vorderen Vorhang, den zuvor einer der Lehrbuben geöffnet hatte, wieder ganz zusammen, so dass er unsichtbar wird).

KOTHNER: (hat die von den Lehrbuben aufgehängten "Leges Tabulturae" von der Wand genommen). Was euch zum Liede Richt' und Schnur, vernehmt nun aus der Tabulatur.
(Er liest.)
"Ein jedes Meistergesanges Bar, stell' ordentlich ein Gemässe dar aus unterschiedlichen Gesetzen, die Keiner soll veletzen.
Ein Gesetz besteht aus zweenen Stollen die gleiche Melodie haben sollen;
der Stoll' aus etlicher Vers' Gebänd', der Vers hat seinen Reim am End'.
Darauf so folgt der Abgesang, der sei auch etlich' Verse lang, und hab' sein' besondere Melodei, als nicht im Stollen zu finden sei.
Derlei Gemässes mehre Baren Soll ein jed' Meisterlied bewahren; und wer ein neues Lied gedicht', das über vier der Sylben nicht eingreift in andrer Meister-Weis',— des' Lied erwerb' sich Meister-Preis."— Nun setzt euch in the Singestuhl!

WALTHER: Hier in den Stuhl?

KOTHNER: Wie's Brauch der Schul'.

WALTHER: (besteight den Stuhl und setzt sich mit Misbehagen). Für dich, Geliebte, sei's gethan!

KOTHNER: (sehr laut). Der Sänger sitzt.

BECKMESSER: (im Gemerk, sehr grell). Fanget an!

WALTHER: (nach einiger Sammlung). Fanget an!
So rief der Lenz in den Wald, dass laut es ihn durchhallt:
und wie in fern'ren Wellen der Hall von dannen flieht, von weither nah't ein Schwellen, das mächtig näher zeiht;
es schwillt und schallt, es tönt der Wald
von holder Stimmen Gemenge; nun laut und hell schon nah' zur Stell', wie wächst der Schwall!
Wie Glockenhall
ertos't des Jubels Gedränge!

You might be curbed.
Be not disturbed;
I hide myself from view:—
So Heaven be kind to you.
(He has seated himself in the box and with the last words stretches his head out with a scornfully familiar nod, then pulls to the front curtains, which a Prentice has opened for him, so that he becomes invisible.)

KOTHNER: (taking down the "Leges Tabulaturae," which the Prentices had hung upon the wall). All that belongs to song mature Now hear read from the Tabulature.— (reads.)
"Each Master-Singer-created Stave
Its regular measurement must have,
By sundry regulations stated
And never violated.
What we call a 'section' is two Stanzas;
Nor each the self-same melody answers:
A Stanza several times doth blend,
And each line with a rhyme must end.
Then come we to the 'After-Song,'
Which must be also some lines long,
And have its especial melody,
Which from the other must diff'rent be.
So Staves and Sections of such measure
A Master-Song may have at pleasure.
He who a new song can outpour,
Which in four syllables—not more—Another strain doth plagiarize.
He may obtain the Master Prize."—
Now sit you on the Singer's stool!

WALTER: Here, on this stool?

KOTHNER: It is the rule.

WALTER: (mounting the stool, with dissatisfaction). For you, beloved, it will be done.

KOTHNER: (loudly). The Singer sits!

BECKMESSER: (from his box, very harshly). Do begin!

WALTER: (after a short consideration). Now begin!—
So the Spring cries through woodlands,
And makes them loudly ring:
Then, as to distance urging,
The echoes ripple there,
From far there comes a surging
That swells with intense power:
It booms and bounds,
The forest sounds
With thousand heavenly voices;
Now loud and clear, Approaching near,
The murmurs steal
Like bells that peal;

Der Wald, wie bald
antwortet' er dem Ruf, der neu ihm Leben schuf, stimmte an das süsse Lenzes-Lied!— (Man hat aus dem Gemerk wiederholt unmuthige Seufzer des Merkers, und heftiges Anstreichen mit der Kreide vernommen. Auch Walther hat es bemerkt, und fährt, dadurch für eine kurze Weile gestört, fort.) In einer Dornenhecken, von Neid und Gram verzehrt, musst' er sich da verstecken, der Winter, Grimm-bewehrt:
von dürrem Laub umrauscht er lauert da und lauscht, wie er das frohe Singen zu Schaden könnte bringen.—
(Unmuthig vom Stuhle aufsteigend.) Doch: fanget an!
So rief es mir in die Brust, als noch ich von Liebe nicht wusst.
Da fühlt' ich's tief sich regen, als weckt' es mich aus dem Traum;
mein Herz mit bebenden Schlägen erfüllte des Busen's Raum:
das Blut, es wall't mit Allgewalt, geschwellt von neuem Gefühle;
aus warmer Nacht mit Uebermacht schwillt mir zum Meer der Seufzer Heer in wildem Wonne Gewühle: die Brust mit Lust antwortet sie dem Ruf, der neu ihr Leben schuf:
stimmt nun an das hehre Liebes-Lied!

BECKMESSER: (der immer unruhiger geworden, reisst den Vorhang auf). Seid ihr nun fertig?

WALTHER: Wie fraget ihr?

BECKMESSER: (die ganz mit Kreidestrichen bedeckte Tafel heraushaltend). Mit der Tafel ward ich fertig schier.
(Die Meister müssen lachen.)

WALTHER: Hört doch! Zu meiner Frauen Preis gelang' ich jetzt erst mit der Weis'.

BECKMESSER: (das Gemerk verlassend). Singt, wo ihr wollt! Hier habt ihr verthan—Ihr Meister, schaut die Tafel euch an:
so lang' ich leb', ward's nicht erhört:
ich glaubt's nicht, wenn ihr's all' auch schwört!
(Die Meister sind im Aufstand durcheinander.)

WALTHER: Erlaubt ihr's, Meister, dass er mich stört?
Blieb' ich von Allen ungehört?

Exultant Nature rejoices!
This call,
How all
The wood makes an answer
As life again awakes,
Pouring forth
A tender song of Spring!—
(During this, repeated groans of discouragement and scratchings of the chalk are heard from the Marker. Walter hears them also, and after a momentary pause of discomposure, continues.) There, like a hiding craven, torn with hate and envy,
A thorny hedge his haven,
Sits Winter, all forlorn.
In withered leaves arrayed
His lurking head is laid;
He seeks the joyous singing
To sorrow to be bringing.— (Rising from the stool in displeasure.)
But—"Now begin!"
So cried a voice in my breast
Before I guessed anything of love;
There stirred a deep emotion
And waked me, as I had slept:
My heart with throbbing commotion
My bosom's restraint overlept:
My blood did course
With giant force,
To novel sensations soaring;
From warmth of night
With boundless might Sighs hurried me
Towards the sea,
The pent-up passion outpouring
The call
How all
My breast makes an answer,
As it takes life anew,
Pouring forth
A glorious lay of love!

BECKMESSER: (who has grown still more restless, tears open the curtains). Is it nearly finished?

WALTER: What means the call?

BECKMESSER: (holding out the slate completely covered with chalk marks). I've finished with the slate, that's all!
(The Masters cannot restrain their laughter).

WALTER: Yet hear! My lady's praise to ring
I ought to sing my second verse.

BECKMESSER: (leaving his box). Sing where you will! Here you're finished.—
My Masters, see the slate, everyone:
The likes of this I never knew;
I'd credit no man's oath, to that!
(The Masters are in a commotion.)

WALTER: Do you let him, Masters, plague me so?
Shall I be heard by you or not?

POGNER: Ein Wort, Herr Merker,
Ihr seid gereizt?

BECKMESSER: Sei Merker fortan, wer darnich geizt,
Doch dass der Ritter versungen hat, beleg' ich erst noch vor der Meister Rath.
Zwar wird's 'ne harte Arbeit sein:
wo beginnen, da wo nicht aus noch ein?
Von falscher Zahl, und falschen Gebänd'
schweig ich schon ganz und gar;
zu kurz, zu lang, wer ein End' da
fänd';
Wer meint hier im Ernst einen Bar?
Auf "blinde Meinung" klag' ich allein:
sagt, konnt' ein Sinn unsinniger
sein?

MEHRERE MEISTER: Man ward nicht klug! Ich muss gesteh'n Ein Ende konnte Keiner erseh'n.

BECKMESSER: Und dann die
Weis'! Welch tolles Gekreis' aus "Abenteuer-" "blau Rittersporn"-Weis'
"hoch Tannen"-und "Stolz Jüngling"-Ton!

KOTHNER: Ja, ich verstand gar nichts davon!

BECKMESSER: Kein Absatz wo, kein' Coloratur,
von Melodei auch nicht eine Spur!

MEHRERE MEISTER: (durcheinander.) Wer nennt das Gesang?
's ward einem bang!
Eitel Ohrgeschinder!
Gar nichts dahinter!

KOTHNER: Und gar vom Singstuhl ist er gesprungen!

BECKMESSER: Wird erst auf die
Fehlerprobe gedrungen?
Oder gleich erklärt, dass er versungen?

SACHS: (der vom Beginn an Walther mit zunehmendem Ernste zugehört). Halt! Meister!
Nicht so geeilt!
Nicht jeder eure Meinung theilt.—
Des Ritters Lied und Weise, sie fand ich neu, doch nicht verwirrt;
verliess er uns're G'leise, schritt er doch fest und unbeirrt.
Wollt ihr nach Regeln messen, was nicht nach eurer Regeln Lauf,
der eig'nen Spur vergessen, sucht davon erst die Regeln auf!

BECKMESSER: Aha! Schon recht!
Nun hört ihr's doch;
den Stümpern öffnet Sachs ein Loch, da aus und ein nach Belieben ihr Wesen leicht sie trieben.
Singet dem Volk auf Markt und Gassen;
hier wird nach dem Regeln nur eingelassen.

POGNER: One word, friend Marker! You're somewhat wroth?

BECKMESSER: Be Marker he who likes henceforth,
But that this man is quite out-sung
You can decide among yourselves.
'Faith! it is somewhat hard to show
The faults when there's nor top nor toe.
To laws of metric accent defied
I gave no heed at all;
Too short-too long—, I never spied
an end;
Who'd think it was meant for a Stave?
Against "clouded meaning" I but inveigh:
Could sense be more nonsensical, say?

SEVERAL MASTERS: We were not wise, I must confess:
No man could ever guess his meaning.

BECKMESSER: And then the tune!
What muddle insane
Of "Bold adventure"—"Blue-knight-spur" strain,
"High fir-tree" and "Proud youth"-tone!

KOTHNER: Yes, I understood precisely none of it, I own!

BECKMESSER: Not one full close,
no grace-notes you see!
And not a trace of melody!

SEVERAL MASTERS: (to one another). Who'd call that a song?
It is shockingly wrong:
It is but empty chatter,
No meaning nor matter!

KOTHNER: And from the seat he has risen unheeding!

BECKMESSER: To weigh the mistakes is our next proceeding;
Have you all agreed on his failure?

SACHS: (who listened to Walter from the first with serious interest). Stay, Master! Not quite so fast!
Not all have passed like opinion—
The song you've so derided
To me is new, but not confused:
Though it was not guided by us
His course was firm, as though well used.
One way you measure solely
A work that your rules do not fit;
Resign your own views wholly,
Some other rules apply to it.

BECKMESSER: Aha! That's fine!
Just listen,
Sachs opens a gap for fools that way,
Where in and out at pleasure
Their minds a course can measure.
Let in the streets the rabble holloa;
Here must we at least some discipline follow.

SACHS: Herr Merker, was doch solch ein Eifer?
Was doch so wenig Ruh'?
Eu'r Urtheil, dünkt mich, wäre reifer, hörtet ihr besser zu.
Darum, so komm' ich jetzt zum Schluss,
dass den Junker zu End' man hören muss.

BECKMESSER: Der Meister zunft, die ganze Schul' gegen den Sachs da sind wie Null.

SACHS: Verhüt' es Gott, was ich begehr', dass da nicht nach den Gesetzen wär'.
Doch da nun steht's geschrieben,
"der Merker werde so bestellt, dass weder Hass noch Lieben
"das Urtheil trübe, das er fällt."
Geht der nun gar auf Freiers-Füssen, wie sollt' er da die Lust nicht büssen, den Nebenbuhler auf dem Stuhl' zu schmähen vor der ganzen Schul'?
(Walther flammt auf.)

NACHTIGALL: Ihr geht zu weit!

KOTHNER: Persönlichkeit!

POGNER: (zu den Meistern). Vermeidet, Meister, Zwist und Streit.

BECKMESSER: Ei, was kümmert's doch Meister Sachsen, auf was für Füssen ich geh'?
Liess' er drob' lieber Sorge ich wachsen, dass nichts mir drück' die Zeh'!
Doch seit mein Schuster ein grosser Poet, gar übel es um mein Schuhwerk steht!
da seht, wie es schlappt,
und überall klappt!
All' seine Vers' und Reim' liess' ich ihm gern daheim, Historien, Speil' und Schwänke dazu, brächt' er mir morgen die neuen Schuh'!

SACHS: Ihr mahnt mich da gar recht:
doch schickt sich's, Meister,
sprecht,
dass, find' ich selbst dem Eseltreiber ein Sprüchlein auf die Sohl', dem hochgelahrten Herrn Stadtschreiber ich nichts d'rauf schreiben soll?
Das Sprüchlein, das eu'r würdig sei, mit all' meiner armen Poeterei fand ich noch nicht zur Stund;
doch wird's wohl jetzt mir kund wenn ich des Ritters Lied gehört:—
d'rum sing' er nun weiter ungestört!
(Walther, in grosser Aufregung, stellt sich auf den Singstuhl.)

SACHS: Friend Marker, why in such a flutter?
Wherefore so angry, pray?
A riper judgment you might utter
If better heed you'd pay.
And so, to speak my final word,
The young knight to the end must be heard.

BECKMESSER: The Master's Guild,
the school and all, Weighed against Sachs' word must fall.

SACHS: The Lord forbid I should demand Anything contrary to our law's command.
But surely there it is written:
"The Marker shall be chosen so,
By prejudice unbitten,
That he may show no bias.
If this one turns his steps to wooing
Can he refrain from doing a wrong.
To bring to shame before all the school
His rival yonder on the stool?
(Walter flames up.)

NACHTIGAL: You go too far!

KOTHNER: You are too free!

POGNER: (to the Masters). I pray you, Masters, cease this bickering.

BECKMESSER: Hey! Why does Master Sachs need to mention, Which way may my steps be turned?
With the state of my solo his attention
Might be better concerned!
But since my shoemaker follows
the Muse,
It fares ill with my boots and shoes.
Just look, how they're split!
See, here's a great slit!
All of his verse and rhyme
I would declare sublime;
His dramas, plays, his farces and all,
If with my new pair of shoes he'd call.

SACHS: (scratching his head). I fear you have me there:
But, Master, if it is fair
That on the merest boor's shoe-leather
I frame some little verse,
I ask you, worthy town-clerk, whether
You should not have the same?
A motto such as you require.
With all my poor poetic fire
I've not yet hit upon:
But it will come.
When I have heard the knight's song through:
So let him sing on without delay!
(Walter much put out, remounts the Singer's seat.)

DIE MEISTER: Genug! Zum Schluss!

SACHS: (zu Walther). Singt, dem Herrn Merker zum Verdruss!

BECKMESSER: (holt, während Walter beginnt, dem Gemerk die Tafel herbei, und hält sie während des Folgenden, von Einem zum Andern sich wendend, zur Prüfung den Meistern vor, die er schliesslich zu einem Kreis um sich zu vereinigen bemüht ist, welchem er immer die Tafel zur Einsicht vorhält). Was sollte man da noch hören?
Wär's nicht nur uns zu bethören?
Jeden der Fehler gross und klein, sehr genau auf der Tafel ein.—
"Falsch Gebänd," "unredbare Worte," "Kleb-Sylben," hier "Laster" gar;
"Aequivoca," "Reim am falschen Orte," "verkehrt," "verstellt" der ganze Bar;
Ein "Flickgesang" hier zwischen den Stollen;
"blinde Meinung" allüberall;
"unklare Wort," "Differenz," hie "Schrollen," da "falscher Athem," hier "Überfall."
Ganz unverständliche Melodei Aus allen Tönen ein Mischgebrau'!
Scheu'tet ihr nicht das Ungemach,
Meister, zählt mir die Fehler nach!
Verloren hätt' er schon mit dem acht',
doch so weit wie der hat's noch Keiner gebracht:
wohl über fünzig, schlect gezählt!
Sagt, ob ihr euch den zum Meister wählt?

DIE MEISTER: (durcheinander). Ja wohl, so ist's! Ich seh' es recht!
Mit dem Herrn Ritter steht es schlecht.
Mag Sachs von ihm halten, was er will, hier in der Singschul' schweig' er still!
Bleibt einem Jeden doch unbenommen, wen er sich zum Genossen begehrt?
Wär' uns der erste Best' wilkommen, was blieben die Meister dann werth?—
Hei! Wie sich der Ritter da quält!
Der Sachs hat ihn sich erwählt.—
's ist ärgerlich gar! D'rum macht ein End'!
Auf, Meister, stimmt und erhebt die Händ'!

POGNER: (für sich). Ja wohl, ich seh's, was mir nicht recht:
mit meinem Junker steht es schlecht!
Weiche' ich hier der Übermacht, mir ahnet, dass mir's Sorge macht.
Wie gern säh' ich ihn angenommen, als Eidam wär' er mir gar werth;

THE MASTERS: Enough! Conclude!

SACHS: (to Walter). Sing, despite the Markers' angry mood!

BECKMESSER: (as Walter recommences, fetches out his board from the box and shows it, during the following, first to one and then to another, to convince the Masters, whom he at last gathers into a circle round him while he continues to exhibit his slate).
What rubbish is this to shock us?
He surely means to mock us!
Every fault, both grave and slight,
I have marked on the board.—
"Faulty verse"—"Unsingable phrases"—
"Word-clippings" and "Vices" grave—
"Equivocal"—"Rhymes in wrong places"—
"Reversed"—"Displaced" is all the Stave.
A "Patch-work-Song" between the two verses "Clouded meaning" in every part—
"Uncertain words," then a "Change," that worse is—There's "Breath ill-managed"—here's sudden start"— "Incomprehensible melody"—
A hotch-potch, made of all tones that be.
It you do not halt at such toil,
Masters, count after me each fault.
Already with the eighth he was spent,
But so far as this sure none ever went!
Well over fifty, roughly told.
Say, would you hold this man a Master?

THE MASTERS: (to one another). Ah yes, that's true! it is plain indeed
That this young knight cannot succeed
By Sachs he may be thought a genius.
But in our singing-school he's nothing.
Who should in justice remain neglected,
If this novice were made a Master?
If all the world's to be elected,
What good were the Masters' high grade?
Ha! look how the knight is enraged!
Hans Sachs on his side has engaged.—
It is really too bad! Quick, make an end!
Up, Masters, speak and your hands extend!

POGNER: (aside). Ah yes, I see! it is sad indeed:
My poor young knight will scarcely succeed!
Should I retract my first decree,
I fear there'd be sad results.
I'd like to see him no more neglected;
My kinship he would not degrade:

nenn' ich den Sieger nun willkommen, wer weiss, ob ihn mein Kind begehrt!
Gesteh' ich's, dass mich das quält ob Eva den Meister wählt!

WALTHER: (in übermüthig verzweifelten Begeisterung, hoch auf dem Singstuhl aufgerichtet, und auf die unruhig einander sich bewegenden Meister abblickened). Aus finst'rer Dornenhecken Die Eule rauscht' hervor, thät rings mit Kreischen wecken der Raben heis'ren Chor:
in nächt'gem Heer zu Hauf wie krächzen all' da auf, mit ihren Stimmen, den hohlen, die Elstern, Kräh'n und Dohlen!
Auf da steigt
mit gold'nem Flügelpaar ein Vogel wunderbar:
sein strahlend hell Gefieder licht in den Lüften blinkt; schwebt selig hin und wieder, zu Flug und Flucht mir winkt.
Es Schwillt das Herz von süssem Schmerz, der Noth entwachsen Flügel; es schwingt sich auf zum kühnen Lauf,
zum Flug durch die Luft aus der Städte Gruft, dahin zum heim'schen Hügel;
dahin zur grünen Vogelweid', wo Meister Walther einst mich freit';
da sing' ich hell und hehr der liebsten Frauen Ehr':
auf da steigt,
ob Meister-Kräh'n ihm ungeneigt, das stolze Minne-Lied,— Ade! ihr Meister, hienied'!
(Er verlässt mit einer stolz verächtlichen Gebärde den Stuhl und wendet sich zum Fortgehen.)

SACHS: (Walther's Gesang folgend). Ha, welch' ein Muth!
Begeist'rungs-Gluth!—
Ihr Meister, schweight doch und hört!
Hört, wenn Sachs euch beschwört!—
Herr Merker da! gönnt doch nur Ruh'!
Lasst And're hören! gebt das nur zu!
Umsonst! All eitel Trachten!
Kaum vernimmt man sein eigen Wort!
Des Junkers will Keiner achten:—
das heiss' ich Muth, singt der nock fort!
Das Herz auf dem rechten Fleck: ein wahrer Dichter-Reck!
Mach' ich, Hans Sachs, wohl Vers' und Schuh', ist Ritter der une Poet dazu.

DIE LEHRBUBEN: (welche längst sich die Hände rieben und von der Bank aufsprangen, schliessen jetzt gegen das Ende wieder ihren Reihen und tanzen um das Gemerk.) Glück auf zum Meistersingen,

And when the victor is elected,
Who knows if he will please my child?
Some trouble I presage,
For Eva can I engage?

WALTER: (in wild and desperate enthusiasm, standing erect in the singer's seat and looking down on the commotion of the Masters).
From gloomy thicket breaking Behold the screech-owl swoop,
With circling flight awaking
The raven's croaking troop!
In sombre ranks they rise
And utter piercing cries;
With voices hoarse and hollow
The dawns and magpies follow!
Up then soars,
By golden pinions stirred,
A wondrous lovely bird.
Each brightly glowing feather Gleams in the glorious day;
It signs me here and there
To float and flee away.
The swelling heart,
With pleasing smart,
Sore need supplied with wings;
It mounts in flight
To giddy height.
From the city's tomb,
Through heaven's pure dome,
To hills of home it goes.
Towards the verdant Vogelweid'
Where Master Walter lived and died;
And there I'll rightly raise
In song my lady's praise:
Up shall soar,
When raven-Masters croak no more,
My noble loving lay.—
Farewell, Masters, for always!
(With a gesture of proud contempt he leaves the Singer's seat and quits the building.)

SACHS: (following Walter's song). Ha! what a flow Of genius' glow!—
My Masters, now give over!
Listen, when Sachs implores!
Friend Marker, there! grant us some peace!
Let others listen!—Why don't you cease?—
No use! A vain endeavor!
I can scarcely hear my own voice.
They'll never heed the young fellow.
He's bold indeed to persevere!
His heart must be placed aright:
A true-born poet-knight!—
Hans Sachs may make both voice and shoe;
He is a knight and a poet too.

PRENTICES: (who have been rubbing their hands in glee and jumping up from their bench, towards the end, take hands and dance in a ring round the Marker's box).
God speed your Master-singing.
And may you soon be winning the

mögt ihr euch das Kränzlein erschwingen:
Das Blumenkränzlein aus Seiden fein,
wird das dem Herrn Ritter beschieden sein?

BECKMESSER: Nun, Meister, kündet's an!
(Die Mehrzahl hebt die Hände auf.)

ALLE MEISTER: Versungen und verthan!
(Alles geht in Aufregung auseinander; lustiger Tumult der Lehrbuben, welche sich des Gemerkes und der Meisterbänke bemächtigen, wodurch Gedränge und Durcheinander der nach dem Ausgange sich wendeden Meister entsteht.—Sachs, der allein im Vordergrunde verblieben, blickt noch gedankenvoll nach dem leeren Singestuhl; als die Lehrbuben auch diesen erfassen, und Sachs darob mit humoristisch unmuthiger Gebärde sich abwendet, fällt der Vorhang.)

ACT II

Die Bühne stellt im Vordergrunde eine Strasse in Längendurschschnitten dar, welche in der Mitte von einer schmalen Gasse, nach dem Hintergrunde zu krumm abbiegend, durchschnitten wird, so dass sich in Front zwei Eckhäuser darbieten, von denen das eine, reichere, rechts—das Haus Pogner's, das andere, einfachere—links—das des Hans Sachts ist.—Zu Pogner's Hause fuhrt von der vorderen Strasse aus eine Treppe von mehreren Stufen vertiefte Thür, mit Steinsitzen in den Nischen. Zur Seite ist der Raum, ziemlich nah an Pogner's Hause, durch eine dickstämmige Linde abgegränzt; grünes Gesträuch umgiebt sie am Fuss, vor welchem auch eine Steinbank angebracht ist.—Der Eingang zu Sachsen's Haus ist ebenfalls nach der vorderen Strasse zu gelegen: eine getheilte Ladenthüre führt hier unmittelbar in die Schusterwerkstatt; dicht dabei steht ein Fliederbaum, dessen Zweige bis über den Laden hereinängen. Nach der Gasse zu hat das Haus noch zwei Fenster, von welchen das eine zur Werkstatt, das andere zu einer dahingterliegenden Kammer gehört. Alle Häuser, namentlich auch die der engeren Gasse, müssen praktikabel sein.

The wreath of flowers in silk so bright,
I hope it may fall to your lot, sir knight!

BECKMESSER: Now Masters, give it your tongue!
(Most of them hold up their hands.)

ALL THE MASTERS: Rejected and outsung!
(General confusion, augmented by the Prentices, who shoulder the benches and Marker's box, causing hindrance and disorder to the Masters who are crowding to the door. Sachs remains alone in front, looking pensively at the empty seat: when the boys remove this too, he turns away with a humorous gesture of discouragement, and the curtain falls.)

ACT II

The stage represents in front the section of a street running across, intersected in the middle by a narrow alley which winds crookedly towards the back, so that in C are two corner houses, of which one, a handsome one R, is that of Pogner, the other, simpler L, is Sachs's shop.—A flight of several steps leads up to Pogner's door; porch sunk in, with stone seats. At side R a lime tree shades the place before the house; green shrubs at its foot, surrounding a stone seat.—The entrance to Sachs's house is also towards the street; a divided door leads into the cobbler's workshop; close by, an elder-tree spreads its boughs over it. Two windows, one of the workshop, the other of an inner chamber, looking on to the valley. All houses in both street and alley must be practicable.

Genial summer evening; during the first scene, night gradually closes.

David ist darüber her, die Fensterläden nach de Gasse zu von aussen zu schliessen. Andere Lehrbuben thun das Gleiche bei andern Häusern.

LEHRBUBEN: (während der Arbeit). Johannistag! Johannistag!
Blumen und Bänder so viel man mag!

DAVID: (für sich). "Das Blumenkränzlein von Seiden fein, mögt' es mir balde beschieden sein!"

MAGDALENE: (ist mit eniem Korbe am Arme aus Pogner's Haus bekommen und sucht David unbemerkt sich zu nähern). Bst! David!

DAVID: (nach der Gasse zu sich unwendend). Ruft ihr schon wieder?
Singt allein eure dummen Lieder!

LEHRBUBEN: David, was soll's?
Wär'st nicht so stolz, schaut'st besser um,
wär'st nicht so dumm!
"Johannistag! Johannistag!"
Wie der nur die Jungfer Lene nicht kennen mag!

MAGDALENE: David! hör' doch!
Kehr' dich zu mir!

DAVID: Ach, Jungfer Lene! Ihr seid hier?

MAGDALENE: (auf ihren Korb deutend). Bring' dir was Gut's!
schau' nur hinein!
Das soll für mein lieb' Schätzel sein.—
Erst aber schnell, wie ging's mit dem Ritter?
Du riethest ihm gut? Er gewann den Kranz?

DAVID: Ah, Jungfer Lene! Da steht's bitter; der hat verthan und versungen ganz!

MAGDALENE: Versungen? Verthan?

DAVID: Was geht's euch nur an?

MAGDALENE: (den Korb, nach welchem David die Hand ausstreckt, heftig zurückziehend).
Hand von der Taschen!
Nichts da zu naschen!—
Hilf Gott! Unser Junker verthan!—
(Sie geht mit Geberden der Trostlosigkeit nach dem Hause zurück.) (David sich ihr verblüfft nach).

DIE LEHRBUBEN: (welche unbemerkt näher geschlichen waren, gelauscht hatten und sich jetzt, wie glückwünschend. David präsentiren). Heil, Heil zur Eh' dem jungen Mann!
Wie glücklich hat er gefrei't!
Wir hörten's All', und sahen's an;

David is putting up the shutters outside. Other Prentices are doing the same for other houses.

PRENTICES: (as they work). Midsummer day! Midsummer day!
Flowers and ribbons in goodly display!

DAVID: (aside). "The wreath of flowers in silk so fine,
Would that tomorrow it might be mine!"

MAGDALENA: (coming out of Pogner's house with a basket on her arm and seeking to approach David unperceived). Hist! David!

DAVID: (turning towards the alley). Whom are you calling?
Get along with your foolish squalling!

PRENTICES: David, what cheer?
Why so severe?
Turn round your skull,
If you're not dull!
"Midsummer day! Midsummer day!"
And he can't see Mistress Lena right in his way!

MAGDALENA: David, listen! Turn round, my dear.

DAVID: Ah, Mistress Lena! You are here?

MAGDALENA: (pointing to her basket). Here's something nice;
peep in and see it!
It is all for my dear lad to eat.—
Tell me though first, what of Sir Walter?
You counselled him well? Has the crown been won?

DAVID: Ah, Mistress Lena, how I falter!
He was outsung and declared outdone.

MAGDALENA: Rejected! Outdone!

DAVID: What ails you, dear one?

MAGDALENA: (snatching the basket away from David's outstretched hand). Hands off the basket!
Dare you to ask it?—
Good luck! Our chevalier outdone!
(She hastens back into the house, wringing her hands in despair.)
(David looks after her dumbfounded.)

PRENTICES: (who have stolen near and overheard, now advance to David as if congratulating him). Hail to the Prentice and his bride!
How well his wooing speeds!
We all have heard and seen beside:
She upon whom he feeds

der er sein Herz geweiht, für die er lässt sein Leben, die hat ihm den Korb nicht gegeben.

DAVID: (auffahrend). Was steht ihr hier faul?
Gleich haltet eu'r Maul!

DIE LEHRBUBEN: (David umtanzend). Johannistag! Johannistag!
Da frei't ein Jeder wie er mag.
Der Meister frei't!
Der Bursche frei't!
Da gibt's Geschlamb' und Geschlumbfer!
Der Alte freit die junge Maid der Bursche die alte Jumbfer!— Juchhei! Juchhei! Johannistag!
(David ist im Begriff, wüthend drein zu schlagen, als Sachs, der aus der Gasse hervorgekommen, dazwichen tritt. Die Buben fahren auseinander.)

SACHS: Was gibt's? Treff ich dich wieder am Schlag?

DAVID: Nicht ich! Schandlieder singen die.

SACHS: Hör nicht d'rauf! Lerns' besser wie sie!—
Zur Ruh'! in's Haus! Schliess' und mach' Licht!

DAVID: Hab' ich noch Singstund'?

SACHS: Nein, singst nicht!
Zur Straf' für dein heutig' frech Erdreisten.—
Die neuen Schuh' steck' auf den Leisten!
(Sie sind Beide in die Werkstatt eingetreten und gehen durch innere Thüren ab. Die Lehrbuben haben sich ebenfalls zerstreut.)
(Pogner und Eva, wie vom Spaziergange heimkehrend, die Tochter leicht am Arme des Vaters eingehenkt, sind beide schweigsam und in Gedanken die Gasse heraufgekommen.)

POGNER: (noch auf der Gasse, durch eine Klinze im Fensterladen von Sachsen's Werkstatt spähend). Lass seh'n, ob Nachbar Sachs zu Haus?— Gern spräch' ich ihn. Trät' ich wohl ein?
(David kommt mit Licht aus der Kammer, setzt sich damit an den Werktisch am Fenster and macht sich über die Arbeit her.)

EVA: Er scheint daheim: kommt Licht heraus.

POGNER: Thu' ich's?—Zu was doch!—Besser, nein!
(Er wendet sich ab.)
Will Einer Selt'nes wagen, was liess' er da sich sagen?— (Nach einigem Sinnen).
War er's nicht, der meint', ich ging zu weit?
Und blieb ich nicht im Geleise, war's nicht in seiner Weise?—
Doch war's vielleicht auch—Eitelkeit?—

Within his heart's true casket,
Has gone and refused him the basket!

DAVID: (flying out). Be off with you, boys!
Give over your noise!

PRENTICES: Midsummer day! Midsummer day!
All go a-courting as they may.
The Masters woo,
The workmen too,
Old folks as well as the babbies!
And graybeards grim
Wed maidens slim,
Young fellows wed ancient spinsters.—
Hooray! Hooray! Midsummer day!
(David is about to fly at the boys in his rage, when Sachs, who has come down the alley, steps between them. The Prentices separate.)

SACHS: What now? Are you again in a fray?

DAVID: Not I! You sang a mocking stave.

SACHS: Pay no heed: show how to behave!—
Get in! To bed! Shut up and light!

DAVID: Have I to sing, sir?

SACHS: Not tonight!
As punishment for today's offending
Put all these shoes on the lasts for mending.
(Both go into the workshop and exit through an inner door. The Prentices have also dispersed.)
(Pogner and Eva, as if returning from a walk, come silently and thoughtfully down the alley, the daughter leaning on her father's arm.)

POGNER: (still in the alley, peeping through a chink in Sachs' shutter). Let's see if Sachs is in tonight:
I'd speak with him. Suppose I call?
(David comes out of the inner room with a light and sits down to work at a bench by the window.)

EVA: He seems at home: I see a light.

POGNER: Shall I?—Why should I, after all?
(Turns away.)
If strange things I should venture, Might I not earn his censure?
(After some reflection.)
Who said that I went too far? it was he.
Yet if I exceeded our rules,
I have but done as he did!—
But that might be mere vanity.

(Zu Eva.)
Und Du, mein Kind, du sagst mir nichts?

EVA: Ein folgsam Kind, gefragt nur spricht's.

POGNER: Wie klug! Wie gut!—
Komm', setz' dich hier ein' Weil' noch auf die Bank zu mir.
(Er setzt sich auf die Steinbank unter der Linde).

EVA: Wird's nicht zu kühl?
's war heut' gar schwül.

POGNER: Nicht doch, 's ist mild und labend;
gar lieblich lind der Abend.
(Eva setzt sich, beklommen.)
Das deutet auf den schönsten Tag, der morgen dir soll scheinen.
O Kind, sagt dir kein Herzensschlag, welch' Glück dich morgen treffen mag, wenn Nürenberg, die ganze Stadt mit Bürgern und Gemeinen, mit Zünften, Volk und hohem Rath vor dir sich soll vereinen, dass du den Preis, das edle Reis, ertheilest als Gemahl dem Meister deiner Wahl.

EVA: Lieb' Vater, muss es ein Meister sein?

POGNER: Hör' wohl: ein Meister deiner Wahl (Magdalene erscheint an der Thür und winkt Eva.)

EVA: (zerstreut). Ja,—meiner Wahl.—Doch tritt nun ein—Gleich, Lene, gleich!—zum Abendmahl.

POGNER: (ärgerlich aufstehend). 's giebt doch keinen Gast?

EVA: (wie oben). Wohl den Junker?

POGNER: (verwundert). Wie so?

EVA: Sahst ihn heut' nicht?

POGNER: (halb für sich). Ward sein nicht froh.—
Nicht doch!—Was denn?—Ei! werd' ich dumm?

EVA: Lieb Väterchen, komm! Geh', kleid' dich um:

POGNER: (voran in das Haus gehend). Hm!—Was geht mir im Kopf doch 'rum?
(Ab.)

MAGDALENE: (heimlich). Hast was heraus?

EVA: (ebenso). Blieb still und stumm.

MAGDALENE: Sprach David; meint', er habe verthan.

EVA: Der Ritter?—Hilf Gott, was fing' ich an!
Ach, Lene! die Angst: wo 'was erfahren?

(To Eva.)
And you, my child, your thoughts are hidden?

EVA: Good children only speak when bidden.

POGNER: How sharp! How good!—come now,
And sit beside me on this bench.
(Sits on the stone seat under the linden tree.)

EVA: Too chill to stay;
It was close all day.

POGNER: Oh no! it is mild and charming;
The evening air is calming.
(Eva sits, nervously.)
A token of a fair tomorrow
And brilliant in its weather.
Oh child! does not your heart declare
The joys that tomorrow does prepare,
When Nuremberg, yes, all the town,
Both rich and poor together,
The Guilds, the burghers of renown
Will meet in highest feather,
To see you rise
And give the prize
To him, the Master's head,
To whom you shall be wed?

EVA: Dear father, can anyone but a Master win?

POGNER: Be sure a Master is your fate.
(Magdalena appears at the door and signs to Eva.)

EVA: (disturbed). Yes—it is my fate.—But now come in—Yes, Lena, yes!—our suppers wait.

POGNER: (rising vexedly.) But we have no guests?

EVA: (as before). Not Sir Walter?

POGNER: (surprised). Hey, what?

EVA: Did you not meet?

POGNER: (half to himself). I want him not.—
Why no!—What now?—Ah! dare I guess?

EVA: Dear father, come in and change your dress.

POGNER: (going into the house before her). Hum!—What way does my fancy go?
(exit.)

MAGDALENA: (secretly). Why do you wait?

EVA: (the same). Be still! speak low!

MAGDALENA: Saw David—says that he hasn't won.

EVA: Sir Walter?—Oh heavens? what's to be done!
Ah, Lena, I quake; who will disclose all?

MAGDALENE: Vielleicht vom Sachs?	MAGDALENA: Perhaps Hans Sachs?
EVA: Ach, der hat mich lieb! Gewiss, ich geh' hin.	EVA: Ah, he's fond of me! It is well, I will go.
MAGDALENE: Lass drin nichts gewahren! Der Vater merkt' es, wenn man jetzt blieb'.— Nach dem Mahl: dann hab' ich dir noch 'was zu sagen, was Jemand geheim mir aufgetragen.	MAGDALENA: Mind not to expose all! If you stay longer your father will see.— When we've supped: another thing I'll unfold you, A secret which some one has just now told me.
EVA: Wer denn? Der Junker?	EVA: Who was it? Sir Walter?
MAGDALENE: Nichts da! Nein! Beckmesser.	MAGDALENA: Not he, no: Beckmesser.
EVA: Das mag 'was Rechtes sein! (Sie gehen in das Haus.) (Sachs ist, in leichter Hauskleidung, in die Werkstatt zurückgekommen. Er wendet sich zu David, der an seinem Werktische verblieben ist.)	EVA: Worth hearing, I should say! (They go into the house.) (Sachs, in light indoor dress, has re-entered the workshop. He turns to David, who is still at his work-bench.)
SACHS: Zeig' her!—'s ist gut.— Dort an die Thür' rück mir Tisch und Schemel herfür!— Leg' dich zu Bett! Wach' auf bei Zeit, verschlaf' die Dummheit, sei morgen gescheit!	SACHS: Come here!—that's right.—There by the door Put my stool and work-bench before.— Then get to bed! Earlier rise; Sleep off your folly, tomorrow be wise!
DAVID: (richtet Tisch und Schemel). Schafft ihr noch Arbeit?	DAVID: (arranging bench and stool). Are you still working?
SACHS: Kümmert dich das?	SACHS: What's that to you?
DAVID: (für sich). Was war nur der Lene?—Gott weiss, was!— Warum wohl der Meister heute wacht?	DAVID: (aside). What ailed Magdalena?—I wish I knew!— And why works my Master by this light?
SACHS: Was stehts' noch?	SACHS: Why wait you?
DAVID: Schlaft wohl, Meister!	DAVID: Good night, Master!
SACHS: Gut' Nacht! (David geht in die Kammer ab).	SACHS: Good night! (Exit David in the inner room.)
SACHS: (legt sich die Arbeit zurecht, setzt sich an der Thüre auf den Schemel, lässt dann die Arbeit weider liegen, und lehnt, mit dem Arm auf den geschlossenen Untertheil des Ladens gestützt, sich zurück). Wie duftet doch der Flieder so mild, so stark und voll! Mir lös't es weich die Glieder, will, dass ich gern was sagen soll.— Was gilt's was ich dir sagen kann? Bin gar ein arm einfältig Mann! Soll mir die Arbeit nicht schmecken, gäb'st, Freund, lieber mich frei: thät' besser das Leder zu strecken, und liess' alle Poeterei!— (Er versucht wieder zu arbeiten. Lässt ab und sinnt.) Und doch, 's will halt nicht geh'n.— Ich fühl's—und kann's nicht versteh'n.— kann's nicht behalten,—doch auch nicht vergessen; und fass' ich es ganz,—kann ich's nicht messen.— Doch wie auch wollt' ich's fassen was unermesslich mir schien? Kein' Regel wollte da passen, und war doch kein Fehler drin.— Es klang so alt und war so neu,— wie Vogelsang im süssen Mai:— wer ihn hört, und wahnbethört sänge dem Vogel nach, dem brächt' es Spott und Schmach.— Lenzes Gebot, die süsse Noth, die legten's ihm in die Brust: nun sang er, wie er musst'! Und wie er musst', so konnt' er's; das merkt' ich ganz besonders: dem Vogel, der heut' sang, dem war der Schnabel hold gewachsen; macht' er den Meistern bang, gar wohl gefiel er doch Hans Sachsen. (Eva ist auf die Strasse getreten, hat schüchtern spähend sich der Werkstatt genähert, und steht jetzt unvermerkt an der Thüre bei Sachs.)	SACHS: (arranges his work, sits on his stool at the door and then, laying down his tools again, leans back, resting his arm on the closed lower half of the door). The elder's scent is waxing So mild, so full and strong! Its charm my limbs relaxing: Words unto my lips would throng.— What boot such thoughts as I can span? I'm but a poor, plain-minded man! When work's despised altogether, You, friend, set me free; But I'd better stick to my leather And let all this poetry be!— (He tries again to work. Leaves off and reflects.) And yet—it haunts me still.— I feel, but comprehend ill;— Cannot forget it,—and yet cannot grasp it.— I measure it not, even when I clasp it.— But how then would I gauge it! It was measureless to my mind; No rule could fit it or cage it, Yet there was no fault to find. It seemed so old, yet new in its chime— Like songs of birds in sweet Maytime:— He who heard And, fancy-stirred, Sought to repeat the strain, But shame and scorn would gain.— Spring's command And gentle hand His soul with this did entrust: He sang because he must! His power rose as needed; That virtue well I heeded. The bird who sang to-day Has got a throat that rightly waxes: Masters may feel dismay, But well content with him Hans Sachs is. (Eva comes out into the street, peeps shyly towards the workshop and advances unnoticed to the door by Sachs.)
EVA: Gut'n Abend Meister! Noch so fleissig?	EVA: Good evening, Master! Still at labor?
SACHS: (ist angenehm überrascht aufgefahren). Ei, Kind! Lieb' Evchen? Noch so spät! Und doch, warum so spät noch, weiss ich: die neuen Schuh'	SACHS: (starting up in agreeable surprise). Ah, child! Sweet Eva! still about? And yet I guess the cause, fair neighbor: The new-made shoes?
EVA: Wie fehl er räth! Die Schuh' hab' ich noch gar nicht probiert; sie sind so schön, so reich geziert, dass ich sie noch nicht an die Füss' mir getraut.	EVA: How far you're out! The shoes I have not even tried; They are so fine, so richly made. I dare not confide such gems to my feet.
SACHS: Doch sollst sie morgen tragen als Braut?	SACHS: You'll wear them, though, tomorrow as bride?
EVA: (hat sich dicht bei Sachs auf den Steinsitz gesetzt). Wer wärd denn Bräutigam?	EVA: (who has now seated herself on the stone seat by Sachs). Who is to be bridegroom then?
SACHS: Weiss ich das?	SACHS: Can I tell?
EVA: Wie wisst denn ihr, ob ich Braut?	EVA: How do you know I'm to be bride?
SACHS: Ei was! Das weiss die Stadt.	SACHS: Eh, well! Everyone knows.
EVA: Ja, weiss es die Stadt. Freund Sachs gute Gewähr dann hat. Ich dacht', er wüsst' mehr.	EVA: Yes, everyone knows. That's proof positive, I suppose. I thought you knew more.
SACHS: Was sollt' ich wissen?	SACHS: What should I know?
EVA: Ei seht doch. Werd' ich's ihm sagen müssen? Ich bin wohl recht dumm?	EVA: See there! Must I show my meaning? How dull I must be?
SACHS: Das sagt' ich nicht.	SACHS: I say not so.
EVA: Dann wär't ihr wohl klug?	EVA: Then you must be bright!
SACHS: Das weiss ich nicht.	SACHS: That I don't know.
EVA: Ihr wisst nichts? Ihr sagt nichts—Ei, Freund Sachs! Jetzt merk' ich wahrlich, Pech is kein Wachs. Ich hätt' euch für feiner gehalten.	EVA: You know nothing—You say nothing? Ah, friend Sachs! I see now clearly: pitch is not wax. I really believed you were sharper.

SACHS: Kind!
Beid', Wachs und Pech vertraut mir sind Mit Wachs strich ich die Seidenfäden, damit ich die zieren Schuh' dir gefasst:
heut' fass' ich die Schuh' mit dicht'ren Drähten, da gilt's mit Pech für den derben Gast.

EVA: Wer ist denn der? Wohl 'was Rechts?

SACHS: Das mein' ich!
Ein Meister stolz auf Freiers Fuss, denkt morgen zu siegen ganz alleinig:
Herrn Beckmesser's Schuh' ich richten muss.

EVA: So nehmt nur tüchtig Pech dazu:
da kleb' er drin, und lass' mir Ruh'!

SACHS: Er hofft dich sicher zu ersingen.

EVA: Wieso denn der?

SACHS: Ein Junggesell;
's giebt deren wenig dort zur Stell'.

EVA: Könnt's einem Wittwer nicht gelingen?

SACHS: Mein Kind, der wär' zu alt für dich.

EVA: Ei was, zu alt! Hier gilt's der Kunst:
wer sie versteht, der werb' um mich!

SACHS: Lieb' Evchen! Machst mir blauen Dunst?

EVA: Nicht ich! ihr seid's; ihr macht mir Flausen!
Gesteht nur, dass ihr wandelbar;
Gott weiss, wer jetzt euch im Herzen mag hausen!
Glaubt' ich mich doch drin so manches Jahr.

SACHS: Wohl, da ich dich gern in den Armen trug?

EVA: Ich seh's, 's war nur, weil ihr kinderlos.

SACHS: Hatt' einst ein Weib und Kinder genug.

EVA: Doch starb eure Frau, so wuchs ich gross.

SACHS: Gar gross und schön.

EVA: Drum dacht' ich aus, irh nähm't much für Weib und Kind in's Haus.

SACHS: Da hätt ich ein Kind und auch ein Weib:
's wär' gar ein lieber Zeitvertreib!
Ja, ja! das hast du dir schön erdacht.

EVA: Ich glaub', der Meister mich gar verlacht?
Am End' gar liess' er sich auch gefallen, dass unter der Nas' ihm weg von Allen der Beckmesser morgen mich ersäng?

SACHS: My dear!
Both pitch and wax are well known here.
With wax I rubbed the silken stitching
With which I sewed your pretty shoes:
The thread for these coarser ones I'm pitching;
It is good enough for a man to use.

EVA: Whom do you mean? Some grandee?

SACHS: Yes, Marry!
A Master proud, who boldly woos,
Expecting tomorrow all to carry:
For Master Beckmesser I make these shoes.

EVA: Then pitch in plenty let there be.
To stick him fast and leave me free.

SACHS: He hopes by singing to attain you.

EVA: Why should he hope?

SACHS: Why should he not?
Few bachelors are on the spot.

EVA: Might not a widower hope to gain me?

SACHS: My child, I am too old for you.

EVA: Ah, stuff—too old! Art is the thing:
Who masters that, is free to woo.

SACHS: Dear Eva! Are you flattering?

EVA: Not I! It is you who is an imposter!
Admit now, your affections veer;
Heaven knows whom now your heart may foster!
I'd thought it my own this many a year.

SACHS: Because in my arms I often carried you?

EVA: I see! you had no child of your own.

SACHS: I once had wife and children too.

EVA: But they are dead and I am grown.

SACHS: Grown tall and fair.

EVA: It was my idea
That I might fill their places here.

SACHS: Then I should have child and also wife:
That were indeed a joy in life!
Yes, that was an idea, I vow!

EVA: I think you're trying to mock me now.
In short, it would give you little sorrow,
If under your nose from all tomorrow
This Beckmesser sang me away!

SACHS: Wie soll't ich's wehren, wenn's ihm geläng?—
Dem wüsst' allein dein Vater Rath.

EVA: Wo so ein Meister den Kopf nur hat!
Käm' ich zu euch wohl, fänd' ich's zu Haus?

SACHS: Ach, ja! Hast recht! 's ist im Kopf mir kraus; hab' heut' manch' Sorg' und Wirr' erlebt:
da mag's dann sein, dass 'was drin klebt.

EVA: Wohl in der Singschul'? 's war heut Gebot.

SACHS: Ja, Kind: eine Freiung machte mir Noth.

EVA: Ja, Sachs! Das hättet ihr gleich soll'n sagen; plagt' euch dann nicht mit unnützen Fragen.
Nun sagt, wer war's, der Freiung begehrt?

SACHS: Ein Junker, Kind, gar unbelehrt.

EVA: Ein Junker? Mein, sagt!—und ward er gefreit?

SACHS: Nichts da, mein Kind! 's gab gar viel Streit.

EVA: So sagt! Erzäht, wie ging es zu?
Macht's euch Sorg', wie liess' mir es Ruh'?—
So bestand er übel und hat verthan?

SACHS: Ohne Gnad' versang der Herr Rittersmann.

MAGDALENE: (kommt zum Haus heraus und ruft leise): Bst! Evchen! Bst!

EVA: Ohne Gnade? Wie?
Kein Mittel gäb's, das ihm gedieh'?
Sang er so schlecht, so fehlervoll, dass nichts mehr zum Meister ihm helfen soll?

SACHS: Mein Kind, für den ist Alles verloren, und Meister wird der in keinem Land;
denn wer als Meister ward geboren, der hat unter Meistern den' schlimmsten Stand.

MAGDALENE: (näher). Der Vater verlangt.

EVA: So sagt mir noch an,
ob keinen der Meister zum Freund er gewann?

SACHS: Das wär' nicht übel? Freund ihm noch sein!
Ihm, vor dem All' sich fühlten so klein!
Den Junker Hochmuth, lasst ihn laufen, mag er durch die Welt sich raufen;
was wir erlernt mit Noth und Müh', dabei lasst uns in Ruh' verschnaufen!
Hier renn' er nichts uns über'n Haufen:
sein Glück ihm anderswo erblüh'!

SACHS: If he succeeded what could I say?
It would rest on what your father said.

EVA: Where does a master keep his head!
Were I with you could it be found?

SACHS: Ah yes! you're right! all my brain turns round;
I've been annoyed and vexed today:
And in my mind some traces stay.

EVA: Aye, in the Song-school? You met, I see.

SACHS: Yes, child: an election has worried me.

EVA: Oh Sachs! but you should at once have said so!
Then my tongue would not have plagued your head so.
Now say, who was it that sought entrance?

SACHS: A knight, my child, and quite untaught.

EVA: A knight? Dear me!—And did he succeed!

SACHS: Why no, my child! we disagreed.

EVA: Dear me! how strange! relate it, please.
If you are vexed can I be gay?—
Then he was defeated and baffled quite?

SACHS: Truly hopeless the case of the noble knight.

MAGDALENA: (comes to the house door and calls softly). Hist! Eva! Hist!

EVA: Truly hopeless! and why?
Were there no means to help him by?
Sang he so ill, so faultily
He never a Master can hope to be?

SACHS: My child, it is a hopeless disaster;
No leader he'll be in any land;
For when one is born to be a Master,
Among other Masters he cannot stand.

MAGDALENA: (approaching). Your father awaits.

EVA: But tell me the end,
If none of the Masters he won for a friend.

SACHS: That is a good joke! friend could we call
One before whom we all felt so small?
My young lord Haughty, let him toddle,
In the world to cool his head.
What we have learned with toil and care,
Let us digest in peace unburied!
Here we must be worried by no one,
So let his fortune shine elsewhere!

EVA: (erhebt sich heftig). Ja, anderswo soll's ihm erblüh'n.
als bei euch garst'gen, neid'schen Mannsen;
wo warm die Herzen noch erglüht, trotz allen tück'schen Meister Hansen!
Ja. Lene! Gleich! ich komme schon!
Was trüg' ich hier für Trost davon?
Da riecht's nach Pech, dass Gott erbarm'!
Brennt' ers lieber, da würd' er doch warm.
(Sie geht heftig mit Magdelene hinüber und verweilt sehr aufgeregt dort unter der Thüre.)

SACHS: (nickt bedeutungsvoll mit dem Kopfe). Das dacht' ich wohl. Nun heisst's: schaff' Rath!
(Er ist während des Folgenden damit beschäftigt, auch die obere Ladenthüre so weit zu schliessen, dass sie nur ein wenig Licht noch durchlässt: er selbst verschwindet so fast ganz.)

MAGDALENE: Hilf Gott! was bliebst du nur so spät?
Der Vater reif.

EVA: Geh' zu ihm ein:
ich sei zu Bett in Kämmerlein.

MAGDALENE: Nicht doch! Hör' nur! Komm' ich dazu?
Beckmesser fand mich: er lässt nicht Ruh', zur Nacht sollst du dich an's Fenster neigen, er will dir'was schönes singen und geigen, mit dem er dich hofft zu gewinnen, das Lied, ob dir das zu Gefallen gerieth.

EVA: Das fehlte auch noch!—
Käme nur Er!

MAGDALENE: Hast' David geseh'n?

EVA: Was soll mir der?

MAGDALENE: (halb für sich). Ich war zu streng; er wird sich grämen.

EVA: Siehst du noch nichts?

MAGDALENE: 's ist als ob Leut' dort kämen.

EVA: Wär' er's?

MAGDALENE: Mach' und komm jetzt hinan!

EVA: Nicht eh'r, bis ich sah den theursten Mann!

MAGDALENE: Ich täusche mich dort: er war es nicht.—
Jetzt komm, sonst merkt der Vater die G'schicht'!

EVA: Ach! meine Angst!

MAGDALENE: Auch lass uns berathen, wie wir des Beckmesser's uns entladen.

EVA: Zum Fenster gehst du für mich.

EVA: (rising hastily). Yes, elsewhere, it will shine, I know,
In spite of what your envious pack says;
Some place where hearts still warmly glow
With no deceitful Master Sachses!—
Yes, Lena! Yes! I'm coming, dear!—
Nice consolation I get here!
I smell the pitch, Heaven keep us whole!
Burn it, rather, and warm up your soul.
(She crosses over hastily with Magdalena and remains in agitation at her own door.)

SACHS: (with a meaningful nod of his head). I thought as much!
Now then they'll chatter!
(During the following he closes the upper half of his door also, so nearly as only to leave a little crack of light, he himself being quite invisible.)

MAGDALENA: Good lack! why have you stayed so late?
Your father called.

EVA: Go you instead
And say that I am gone to bed.

MAGDALENA: No, no! Hark now! I have news too?
Beckmesser found me; such a to-do!
Tonight, if you stayed at the window,
He said he would come and serenade you.
The song he intends for your winning he'll sing,
To try if your approval it will bring.

EVA: He need not trouble—Where can he be!

MAGDALENA: Has David been here?

EVA: What's that to me?

MAGDALENA: (half to herself). I was too harsh; he's vexed, I fear.

EVA: No one in sight?

MAGDALENA: Someone draws near.

EVA: Is it he?

MAGDALENA: Come; it is time to depart.

EVA: Not till I've seen the man of my heart.

MAGDALENA: I made a mistake, it is not he.
Come in, for fear your father should see.

EVA: What shall I do?

MAGDALENA: We'll hold consultation
As to this Beckmesser's invitation.

EVA: Stand at the window for me.

MAGDALENE: Wie ich?—
Das machte wohl David eiferlich?
Er schläft nach der Gassen! Hihi! 's wär fein!—

EVA: Dort hör' ich Schritte.

MAGDALENE: Jetzt komm's, es muss sein!

EVA: Jetzt näher!

MAGDALENE: Du irrst! 's nichts, ich wett'.
Ei, komm! Du musst, bis der Vater zu Bett.
(Pogner's man hört innen Stimme.)

POGNER: He! Lene! Eva!

MAGDALENE: 's ist höchste Zeit!
Hörst du's? Komm'! der Ritter ist weit.
Walther ist die Gasse heraufgekommen; jetzt biegt er um Pogner's Haus herum. Eva, die bereits von Magdalenen am Arm hineingezogen worden war, reisst sich mit einem leisen Schrei los, und stürzt Walther entgegen.

EVA: Da ist er!

MAGDALENE: (hineingehend).
Nun haben wir's! Jetzt heisst's: gescheit!
(Ab.)

EVA: (ausser sich). Ja, ihr seid es!
Alles sag' ich,
denn ihr wisst es;
Alles klag' ich,
denn ich weiss es;
ihr seid beides Held des Preises, und mein einz'ger Freund!

WALTHER: (leidenschaftlich).
Ach, du irrst! Bin nur dein Freund, doch des Preises
noch nicht würdig, nicht den Meistern ebenbürtig:
mein Begeistern fand Verachten, und ich weiss es,
darf nicht trachten nach der Freudin Hand!

EVA: Wie du irrst! Der Freundin Hand, ertheilt nur sie den Preis, wie deinen Muth ihr Herz erfand, reicht sie nur dir das Reis.

WALTHER: Ach nein, du irrst! Der Freudin Hand, wär' Keinem sie erkoren, wie sie des Vaters Wille band, mir wär sie doch verloren.
"Ein Meistersinger muss er sein:
Nur wen ihr krönt, den darf sie frei'n!"
So sprach er festlich zu den Herrn, kann nicht zurück, möcht' er's auch gern!
Das eben gab' mir Muth;
wie ungewohnt mir alles schien,

MAGDALENA: What, I?
It would rouse poor David's jealousy.
He sleeps on the street side. He, he! what fun!

EVA: I hear a footstep!

MAGDALENA: Come now, let us run!

EVA: It nears us!

MAGDALENA: You're wrong, I'll bet my head.
Do come! You must, till your father's in bed.

POGNER: (calling within). Hey! Lena! Eva!

MAGDALENA: No more delay!
Do you hear? Come—your knight's far away.
(Walter has come up the alley and now turns the corner by Pogner's house. Eva, who is being dragged indoors by Magdalena, tears herself free with a slight cry and rushes towards Walter.)

EVA: It is he!

MAGDALENA: (going in). Now all's up! Be quick, I say!
(Exit.)

EVA: (transported). It is my true love!
Yes, my own love!
I conceal nothing.
All is known, love:
I reveal all
For I know it:
It is you, love,
Hero-Poet
And my only friend!

WALTER: (sorrowfully). Ah, you're wrong! I'm only your friend;
Not as poet
Masters prize me,
For my station
They despise me:
Inspiration
They can not brook,
And—I know it—
I may not look
To my lady's hand!

EVA: You are wrong! Your lady's hand Awards the prize alone.
Your courage commands my heart
Be then the wreath your own.

WALTER: Ah, no, you're wrong!
my lady's hand,
Though no one else should gain it,
Upon the terms your father planned
I never may attain it.
"A Master Singer he must be:
None may you wed uncrowned by you."
Thus to the Guild he firmly spoke:
What he has pledged he may not break.
That spurred my heart's desire,
Though strange to me were place

ich sang mit Lieb' und Gluth, dass ich den Meisterschlag verdien'.
Doch diese Meister!
Ha, diese Meister!
Dises Reim-Gesetze
Leimen und Kleister!
Mir schwillt die Galle, das Herz mir stockt, denk' ich der Falle, darein ich gelockt!—
Fort in die Freiheit!
Dorthin gehör' ich,
da wo ich Meister im Haus!
Soll ich dich frei'n heut', dich nun beschwör ich,
flieh', un folg' mir hinaus!

EVA: (fasst ihn besänftigend bei der Hand). Geliebter, spare den Zorn!
's war nur des Nachtwächters Horn.
Unter der Linde
birg' dich geschwinde:
hier kommt der Wächter vorbei.

MAGDALENE: (an der Thüre, leise). Evchen! 's ist Zeit! mach' dich frei!

WALTHER: Du fliehst?

EVA: Muss ich denn nicht?

WALTHER: Entweichst?

EVA: Dem Meistergericht.
(Sie verschwindet mit Magdalene im Hause.)

DER NACHTWAECHTER: (ist während dem in der Gasse erschienen, kommt singend nach vorn, biegt um die Ecke von Pogner's Haus und geht nach links zu weiter ab). "Hört ihr Leut' und lasst euch sagen, die Glock' hat Zehn geschlagen:
bewahrt das Feuer und auch das Licht,
damit Neimand kein Schad' geschicht!
Lobet Gott den Herrn!"
(Als er hiermit abgegangen, hört man ihn abermals blasen.)

SACHS: (welcher hinter der Ladenthüre dem Gespräche gelauscht, öffnet jetzt, bei eingezogenem Lampenlicht ein wenig mehr). Ueble Dinge, die ich da merk':
eine Entführung gar im Werk!
Aufgepasst! das darf nicht sein!

WALTHER: (hinter der Linde). Käm sie nicht wieder? O der Pein!—
Doch ja! sie kommt dort!—Weh' mir, nein!
Die Alte ist's!—doch aber—ja!

EVA: (ist in Magdalene's Kleidung wieder zurückgekommen und geht auf Walther zu). Das thör'ge Kind: da hast du's! da!
(Sie sinkt ihm an die Brust.)

WALTHER: O Himmel! Ja! nun wohl ich weiss, dass ich gewann den Meisterpreis!

and folk;
I sang, all love and fire,
And strove to make a Master-stroke.
Oh, but these Masters!
Think of these Masters!
With their cramping rules,
Like clinging pitch-plasters!
I choke with passion.
My heart's unnerved!
Think of the fashion
In which I was served!
Hence, as a rover!
Freedom before me—
Still I'm a Master at home!
As I'm your lover
Now I implore you,
Come, and together we'll roam!

EVA: (taking him soothingly by the hand). Beloved, govern your wrath!
It is but the watchman goes forth.—
Hide beneath the lime-tree;
Lose no more time! See,
The watchman passes this way.

MAGDALENA: (at the door, softly). Eva! it is late: come in, I say!

WALTER: You fly?

EVA: Must I not flee?

WALTER: You fear—?

EVA: The powers that be!
(She disappears with Magdalena into the house.)

THE WATCHMAN: (has meanwhile appeared in the alley. He comes forward singing, turns the corner of Pogner's house and exit L.). "Hark to what I say, good people, Strike ten from every steeple.
Put out your fire and dim your light,
That none may come to harm this night.
Praise the Lord of Heaven!"
(He has by this time gone off, but his horn is still heard.)

SACHS: (who has listened to the foregoing from behind his shop-door, now opens it a little wider, having shaded his lamp). Pretty doings now are in hand!
Here's an elopement being planned.
I'm awake! This must not be.

WALTER: (behind the lime tree). Has she then left me? Woe is me!—
Yet no! who comes here?—Ah, not she!
It is Magdalena—Yet surely!—You!

EVA: (returns in Magdalena's dress and goes to Walter). Your foolish child, she's all yours now!
(She sinks to his breast.)

WALTER: O heaven! here before my eyes
I see indeed the Master-prize!

EVA: Doch nun kein Besinnen!
Von hinnen! Von hinnen!
O wären wir weit schon fort!

WALTHER: Hier durch die Gasse: dort!
finden wir vor dem Thor Knecht und Rosse vor.
(Als sich Beide wenden, um in die Gasse einzubiegen, lässt Sachs, nachdem er die Lampe hinter eine Glaskugel gestellt, einen hellen Lichtschein durch die ganz wieder geöffnete Ladenthüre, quer über die Strasse fallen, so dass Eva und Walther sich plötzlich hell beleuchtet sehen.)

EVA: (Walther hastig zurückziehend). O weh', der Schuster! Wenn der uns säh'!
Birg' dich! komm' ihm nicht in die Näh'!

WALTHER: Welch' and'rer Weg führt uns hinaus?

EVA: (nach rechts deutend). Dort durch die Strasse: doch der ist kraus, ich kenn' ihn nicht gut; auch stiessen wir dort auf den Wächter.

WALTHER: Nun denn: durch die Gasse!

EVA: Der Schuster muss erst vom Fenster fort.

WALTHER: Ich zwing ihm, dass er's verlasse.

EVA: Zeig' dich ihm nicht: er kennt dich!

WALTHER: Der Schuster?

EVA: 's ist Sachs!

WALTHER: Hans Sachs? Mein Freund?

EVA: Glaub's nicht!
Von dir zu sagen Uebles nur wusst' er.

WALTHER: Wie, Sachs? Auch er?—Ich lösch' ihm das Licht!
(Beckmesser ist, dem Nachtwaechter in einiger Entfernung nachschleichend, die Gasse herauf gekommen, hat nach den Fenstern von Pogner's Hause gespäht, und an Sachsen's Hause angelehnt, zwischen den beiden Fenstern einen Steinsitz sich ausgesucht, auf welcehm er sich, immer nur nach dem gegenüberliegenden Fenster aufmerksam lugend, niedergelassen hat; jetzt stimmt er eine mitgebrachte Laute.)

EVA: (Walther zurückhaltend.) Thu's nicht!—Doch horch!

WALTHER: Einer Laute Klang?

EVA: Ach, meine Noth!

WALTHER: Wie, wird dir bang?
Der Schuster, sieh, zog ein das Licht—
so sei's gewagt!

EVA: Now no more delay!
Let's hasten away!
Oh would that we were gone!

WALTER: Here, through this alley: on!
Servants at the gate
Wait with my horses.
(As they turn to dive into the alley Sachs places his lamp behind a water-globe and sends a bright stream of light through the now wide open door across the street, so that Eva and Walter suddenly find themselves illuminated.)

EVA: (hastily pulling Walter back). Ah me! the cobbler! What would he say!
Hide!—keep well out of his way!

WALTER: What other road leads to the gate?

EVA: (pointing R). Round by the street here, but it is not straight;
I know it not well; besides, we should meet With the watchman.

WALTER: Well then, through the alley?

EVA: The cobbler must first leave his windowseat.

WALTER: I'll force him then.
Here's for a sally!

EVA: Don't show yourself: he knows you!

WALTER: Who is he?

EVA: It is Sachs.

WALTER: Hans Sachs? my friend?

EVA: Not quite!
He is busy with slanders against you.

WALTER: What, Sachs? He too?—
I'll put out his light!
(Beckmesser comes up the alley slinking at some distance in the rear of the Watchman. He peers up at Pogner's windows and, leaning against Sachs' house, seeks out a stone seat on which he places himself, still looking at the upper windows, and now he commences to tune a lute he has brought with him.)

EVA: (restraining Walter). Wait! Listen now!

WALTER: A lute I hear.

EVA: What a mishap!

WALTER: Why need you fear?
The cobbler's light has ceased to glare:
Let's make the attempt!

EVA: Weh'! siehst du denn nicht?
Ein And'rer kam, und nahm dort Stand.

WALTHER: Ich hör's und seh's—ein Musikant.
Was will der hier so spät des Nachts.

EVA: 's ist Beckmesser schon!

SACHS: (als er den ersten Ton der Laute vornommen hat, von einen plötzlichen Einfall erfasst, das Licht wieder etwas eingezogen leise auch den unteren Theil des Ladens geöffnet, und seinen Werktisch ganz unter die Thüre gestellt. Jetzt hat er Eva's Ausruf vernommen). Aha! ich dacht's!

WALTHER: Der Merker? Er! in meiner Gewalt?
Draufau! den Lung'rer mach ich kalt!

EVA: Um Gott! So hör! Willst den Vater wecken?
Er singt ein Lied, dann zieht er ab,
Lass dort uns im Gebüsch verstecken.—
Was mit den Männern ich Müh' doch habe!
(Sie zieht Walther hinter das Gebüsch auf die Bank unter der Linde.) (Beckmesser klimpert voll Ungeduld heftig auf der Laute, ob sich das Fenster nicht öffen wolle. Als er endlich anfangen will zu singen, beginnt Sachs, der soeben das Licht wieder hell auf die Strasse fallen liess, laut mit dem Hammer auf den Leisten zu schlagen, und singt sehr kräftig dazu).

SACHS: Jerum! Jerum!
Halla halla he!
Oho! Trallalei! o'he!
Als Eva aus dem Paradies von Gott dem Herrn verstossen, gar schuf ihr Schmerz der harte Kies an ihrem Fuss, dem blossen.
Das jammerte den Herrn, ihr Füssen hat er gern,
und seinem Engel rief er zu:
"da mach' der armen Sünd'rin Schuh':
Und da der Adam, wie ich seh', an Steinen dort sich stösst die Zeh', das recht fortan
er wandeln kann, so miss' dem auch Stiefeln an!"

BECKMESSER: (alsbald nach Beginn des Verses) Was soll das sein?— Verdammtes Shrein!
Was fällt dem groben Schuster ein?
(Vortretend.)
Wie, Meister? Auf? So spät zur Nacht?

SACHS: Herr Stadtschreiber! Was, ihr wacht?—
Die Schuh machen euch grosse Sorgen?
Ihr seht, ich bin dran: ihr habt sie morgen.

EVA: Ah! Do you not see there?
Some other comes to spoil our plan.

WALTER: I hear and see: some player man.
What wants he here so late at night?

EVA: It is Beckmesser!

SACHS: (on hearing the first sounds of the lute has, as if struck with a new idea, withdrawn his light, gently opened the lower half of his shop-door and placed his work-bench on the threshold. He now hears Eva's exclamation).
Aha! I'm right.

WALTER: The Marker here? and placed in my power?
Here goes! The fool shall regret this hour!

EVA: Oh, heaven! Stop. Would you wake my father?
He'll sing his song and quit us then.
Let's hide behind the foliage rather.
Oh dear! what trouble you give, you men!
(She draws Walter behind the bushes on the bench under the lime-tree.) (Beckmesser impatiently tinkles on his lute waiting for the window to open. As he is about to commence his song, Sachs turns his light full on the street again and begins to hammer loudly on his last, singing lustily the while.)

SACHS: Tooral looral!
Tiddy fol de rol!
Oho! Tralala! Oho!
When mother Eve from Paradise
Was driven by the Almighty,
Her naked feet, so small and nice,
By stones were sorely riven.
This troubled much the Lord,
Her footsies he adored;
An angel he did straightway choose:
"Go make that pretty sinner shoes!
And as poor Adam limps around
And breaks his toes on stony ground,
That well and wide
His legs may stride, Measure him for boots beside!"

BECKMESSER: (as Sachs begins to sing). What is it now?
Atrocious row!
That vulgar cobbler's drunk, I believe!
(advancing.)
What Master! Up, so long after dark!

SACHS: You also out, Master Town-clerk?
The shoes perhaps on your mind are weighing?
You see me at work: I'm not delaying.

BECKMESSER: Hol' der Teufel die Schuh'!
Ich will hier Ruh'!

WALTHER: (zu Eva.) Wie heisst das Lied? Wie nennt er dich?

EVA: Ich hört' es schon: 's geht nicht auf mich.
Doch eine Bosheit steckt darin.

WALTHER: Welch' Zögerniss! Die Zeit geht him!

SACHS: (weiter arbeitend). Jerum! Jerum!
O Eva! Hör' mein Klageruf, mein Noth und schwer Verdrüssen!
Die Kunstwerk', die ein Schuster schuf, sie tritt die Welt mit Füssen!
Gäb nicht ein Engel Trost, der gleiches Werk erlos't, und rief mich oft in's Paradies, wie dann ich Schuh' und Stiefel liess'!
Doch wenn der mich in Himmel hält, Dann liegt zu Füssen mir die Welt, und bin in Ruh'
Hans Sachs ein Schuhmacher und Poet dazu.

BECKMESSER: (das Fenster gewahrend, welches jetzt sehr leise geöffnet wird). Das Fenster geht auf:—Herr Gott, 's ist sie!

EVA: (zu Walther). Mich schmertzt das Lied, ich weiss nicht wie!
O fort, lass' uns fliehen!

WALTHER: (das Schwert halb zeihend). Nun denn: mit dem Schwert!

EVA: Nicht doch! Ach halt'!

WALTHER: Kaum wär' er's werth!

EVA: Ja, besser Guduld! O lieber Mann!
Dass ich so Noth dir machen kann!

WALTHER: Wer ist am Fenster?

EVA: 's ist Magdalene.

WALTHER: Das heiss' ich vergelten: fast muss ich lachen.

EVA: Wie ich ein End' und Flucht mir ersehne!

WALTHER: Ich wünscht' er möchte den Anfang machen.
(Sie folgen dem Vorgang mit wachsender Theilnahme.)

BECKMESSER: (der während Sachs fortführt zu arbeiten und zu singen, in grosser Aufregung mit sich berathen hat). Jetzt bin ich verloren, singt er noch fort!—
(Er tritt an den Laden heran.) Freund Sachs! So hört doch nur ein wort!
Wie seid ihr auf die Schuh' versessen!
Ich hatt' sie wahrlich schon vergessen.
Als Schuster seid ihr mir wohl werth, als Kunstfreund doch weit mehr

BECKMESSER: Deuce take boots and shoe!
Be quiet!

WALTER: (to Eva). What is that song. He speaks of you.

EVA: I know it well; he does not mean me.
But hidden malice here I trace.

WALTER: What vile delay! Time flies apace!

SACHS: (continuing his work).
Tooral looral!
Tiddy fol de rol!
O Eve! Hear how my poor heart aches
By brief and trouble sodden;
The works of Art a cobbler makes
All under foot are trodden.
Did not an angel bring
For such work comforting,
And call me to Heaven's gate.
I'd quickly leave this trade I hate!
But when he takes me up on high,
The world beneath my feet does lie:
Then rest woo
Hans Sachs, the shoe-Maker and the Poet too.

BECKMESSER: (watching the window, which now opens softly). The window's open:—Oh heavens! it is she!

EVA: (to Walter). Why does that song dispirit me?
O, let us hurry!

WALTER: (half drawing his sword). But one way remains!

EVA: Oh no! Stop!

WALTER: He's hardly worth the pains!

EVA: Yes, patience is best. Oh dearest love.
That I should such a trouble prove!

WALTER: Who's at the window?

EVA: It is Magdalena.

WALTER: That's retribution: it sets me grinning.

EVA: Would we could end, and fly this arena!

WALTER: I only wish he'd make a beginning.
(They follow the proceedings with increasing interest.)

BECKMESSER: (who, while Sachs has continued his song and work, takes counsel with himself in great perturbation). Now if he continues I am undone!
(He advances to the shop.)
Friend Sachs! pray hear a word—just one!
You work there at my shoes so fleetly,
While I'd forgotten them completely.
The cobbler worshipful I deem;
The critic, though, I more esteem.
Your taste, I know, is seldom verehrt.

Eu'r Urtheil, glaubt, das halt' ich hoch;
drum bitt' ich: hört das Liedlein doch, mit dem ich morgen möcht' gewinnen,
ob das auch recht nach euren Sinnen.
(Er klimpert, mit seinen Rücken der Gasse zugewendent, auf der Laute, um die Aufmerksamkeit der dort an Fenster sich zeigenden Magdalene zu beschäftigen, und sie dadurch zurückzuhalten.)

SACHS: Ei lasst mich doch in Ruh'!
Wie käm' solche Ehr' mir zu?
Nur Gassenhauer dicht' ich aum meisten;
drum sing' ich zur Gassen, und hau auf den Leisten.
(Fortarbeitend.) Jerum! Jerum?
Halla halla hei!

BECKMESSER: Verfluchter Kerl!—Den Verstand verlier' ich, mit seinem Lied voll Pech und Schmierich!— Schweight doch! Weckt ihr die Nachbarn auf?

SACHS: Die sind's gewohnt: 's hört Keiner drauf.
"O Eva! Eva! schlimmes Weib!"

BECKMESSER: Verdammte Bosheit!—Gott, und 's wird spät: am End' mir die Jungfer vom Fenster geht!
(Er klimpert wie um anzufangen.)

SACHS: (aufschlagend). Fanget an! 's pressirt!
Sonst sing' ich für mich!

BECKMESSER: Haltet ein! nur das nicht!—Teufel! wie ärgerlich!—
Wollt ihr euch denn als Merker erdreisten, non gut, so merkt mit dem Hammer auf den Leisten:—
nur mit dem Beding, nach den Regeln scharf;
aber nichts, was nach den Regeln ich darf.

SACHS: Nach den Regeln, wie sie der Schuster kennt, dem die Arbeit unter den Händen brennt.

BECKMESSER: Auf Meister-Ehr'!

SACHS: Und Schuster-Muth!

BECKMESSER: Nicht einen Fehler: glatt und gut!

SACHS: Dann ging't ihr morgen unbeschuht.
Setzt euch denn hier!

BECKMESSER: (an die Ecke des Hauses sich stellend). Lasst hier mich stehen!

SACHS: Warum so fern?

wrong,
So, please you, hear this little song,
With which I seek to win tomorrow;
Your estimate I fain would borrow.
(With his back turned to the alley he strums on the lute to attract the attention of Magdalena and keep her at the window.)

SACHS: Oh peace, and let me be!
Why seek to honor me?
It is clap-trap stuff that I put together:
I sing in the streets while I hammer my leather.
(continuing to work.)
Tooral looral!
Tiddy fol de rol!

BECKMESSER: Confound the rogue!—How he's racking my brain!
His ditty reeks of pitch and blacking!—
Silence! Neighbors and all you'll awake.

SACHS: They're used to this; no heed they'll take.—
"Oh Eve! oh Eve, you wicked wench!"—

BECKMESSER: Atrocious malice!—Zounds! it grows late!
She'll go from the window if I wait longer!
(He strums a prelude.)

SACHS: (With a blow of his hammer). "Now begin!" Look sharp, or I too shall sing!

BECKMESSER: Anything but that!
Hush!—What a maddening thing?
Would you aspire to the post of Marker.
Then hammer away as you desire to:
But you must agree to restrain your tool:
Not strike unless I'm breaking the rule.

SACHS: Though a cobbler I'll keep the rules like you,
If my fingers itch to complete this shoe.

BECKMESSER: Your Master's word?

SACHS: And cobbler's truth.

BECKMESSER: If it is faultless, fair and smooth—

SACHS: Then you must go unshod, forsooth!
Sit down here!

BECKMESSER: (placing himself at the corner of the house). I'd rather leave you.

SACHS: Why so far off?

BECKMESSER: Euch nicht zu sehen, wie's Brauch in der Schul' vor dem Gemerk.

SACHS: Da hör' ich euch schlecht.

BECKMESSER: Der Stimme Stärk' ich so gar leiblich dämpfen kann.

SACHS: Wie fein!—Nun gut denn!—Fanget an!
(Kurzcs Vorspiel Beckmesser's auf der Laute, wozu Magdalene sich briet in das Fenster legt.)

WALTHER: (zu Eva). Welch' toller Spuck! Mich dünkt's ein Traum:
den Singstuhl, scheint's, verliess ich kaum!

EVA: Die Schläf' umweht's mir, wie ein Wahn:
ob's Heil, ob Unheil, was ich ahn'?
(Sie sinkt wie betäubt an Walther's Brust: so verbleiben sie.)

BECKMESSER: (zur Laute). "Den Tag seh ich erscheinen, der mir wohl gefall'n thut . . .
(Sachs schlägt auf.) (Beckmesser zuckt, fährt aber fort.)
"Da fasst mein Herz sich einen guten und frischen Muth."
(Sachs hat zweimal aufgeschlagen. Beckmesser wendet sich leise, doch wüthend um.) Treibt ihr hier Scherz?
Was wär' nicht gelungen?

SACHS: Besser gesungen:
"da fasst mein Herz sich einen guten und frischen Muth."

BECKMESSER: Wie sollt' sich das reimen auf "seh' ich erscheinen?"

SACHS: Ist euch an der Weise nichts gelegen?
Mich dünkt, 'sollt' passen Ton und Wort.

BECKMESSER: Mit euch hier zu streiten?—Lasst von den Schlägen, sonst denkt ihr mir dran!

SACHS: Jetzt fahret fort!

BECKMESSER: Bin ganz verwirrt!

SACHS: So fangt noch 'mal an:
Drei Schläg ich jetzt pausiren kann.

BECKMESSER: (für sich). Am Besten, wenn ich ihn gar nicht beacht':—
wenn's nur die Jungfer nicht irre macht!
(Er räuspert sich und beginnt wieder.)
"Den Tag seh' ich erscheinen, der mir wohl gefallen thut;
das fasst mein Herz sich einen guten und frischen Muth, da denk' ich nicht an Sterben, lieber an Werben um jung Mägdalein's Hand.
Warum wohl aller Tage schönster mag dieser sein?
Allen hier ich es sage:

BECKMESSER: Not to perceive you:
The Marker in school hides in his place.

SACHS: But I shall barely hear you.

BECKMESSER: My powerful bass
Will not then stun you with its din.

SACHS: That's good!—All right then!—"Now begin" (Short prelude on the lute by Beckmesser, during which Magdalena leans out of the window.)

WALTER: (to Eva). What crazy sounds! It is like a dream:
Still in the Singer's seat I seem.

EVA: Sleep steals upon me like a spell.
For good or evil, who can tell?
(She sinks as if stupefied on Walter's breast. In this position they remain.)

BECKMESSER: (with his lute). "I see the dawning daylight
With great pleasure I do.
(Sachs knocks.)
(Beckmesser starts but continues.)
"For now my breast takes a right Courage both fresh and—" (Sachs has dealt two blows. Beckmesser turns around slowly, but in anger.) Is this a jest?
What do you find bad there?

SACHS: Better have had there,
"For now my breast Takes a right courage fresh and—"

BECKMESSER: How would that lay right
To rhyme with my "daylight?"

SACHS: The melody do you think does not matter?
Both words and notes should fit in song.

BECKMESSER: Absurd discussion!—Leave off that clatter!
Or is it a plot?

SACHS: Oh get along!

BECKMESSER: I'm quite upset!

SACHS: Begin it once more,
And three bars rest meanwhile I'll score.

BECKMESSER: (aside). It is better that I pay no attention:—
If only she is not scared away?
(He clears his throat and begins again.)
"I see the dawning daylight,
With great pleasure I do;
For now my heart takes a right Courage both fresh and new.
I do not think of dying,
Rather of trying
A young maiden to win.
Oh why does the weather
Then today so excel?
I to all say together
It is because a damsel
By her beloved father,

weil ein schönes Fräulein von ihrem lieb'n Herrn Vater, wie gelobt hat er,
ist bestimmt zum Eh'stand.
Wer sich getrau', der komm und schau'
da steh'n die hold lieblich Jungfrau, auf die ich all' mein' Hoffnung bau':
darum ist der Tag so schön blau, als ich anfänglich fand."
(Von der sechsten Zeile an hat Sachs wieder aufgeschlagen, wiederholt, und meist mehrere Male schnell hintereinander; Beckmesser, der jedesmal schmerzlich zusammenzuckte, war gelnöthigt, bei Bekämpfung der innern Wuth, oft den Ton, den er immer zärtlich zu halten sich bemüht, kurz und heftig auszustossen, was das Komische seines gänzlich prosodielosen Vortrages sehr vermehrte.—Jetzt bricht er wüthend um die Ecke auf Sachs los).

SACHS: Seid ihr nun fertig?

BECKMESSER: (in höchster Angst). Wie fraget ihr?

SACHS: (die Schuhe trimphirend aus dem Laden heraushaltend).
Mit den Schuhen ward ich fertig schier!
Das heiss' ich mir rechte Merkerschuh':—
mein Merkersprüchlein hört dazu!
Mit lang' und kurzen Hieben, steht's auf der Sohl' geschrieben;
da les't es klar
und nehmt es wahr, und merkt's euch immerdar.—
"Gut Lied will Takt," wer den verzwackt, dem Schreiber mit der Feder haut ihn der Schuster auf's Leder, Non lauft in Ruh', habt gute Schuh';
der Fuss euch drin nicht knackt:
ihn hält die Sohl' im Takt!
(Er lacht laut.)

BECKMESSER: (der sich ganz in die Gasse zurückgezogen, und an die Maurer zwischen den beiden Fenstern von Sachsen's Hause sich anlehnt, singt, um Sachs zu übertäuben, zugleich, mit grösster Anstrengung, schreiend und athemlos hastig, seinen dritten Vers). "Darf ich Meister mich nennen, das bewähr' ich heut' gern, weil nach dem Preis ich brennen muss dursten und hungern.
Nun ruf' ich die neun Musen dass an sie blusen mein dicht'rischen Verstand.
Wohl kenn ich alle Regeln, halte gut Maass und Zahl;
doch Sprung und Ueberkegeln wohl passirt je einmal, wann der Kopf, ganz voll Zagen, zu frie'n will wagen um ein jung Mägdleins Hand.
Ein Junggesell
trug ich mein Fell, mein Ehr', Amt, Würd' und Brod zur Stell', dass euch mein Gesang wohl gefäll', und mich das Jungfräulein erwähl', wenn sie mein Lied gut fand."

NACHBARN: (erst einige, dann mehrer, öffnen, während des Gesanges, in der Gasse die Fenster und gucken heraus). Wer heult denn da? Wer kreischt mit Macht?
Ist das erlaubt so spät zur Nacht?
Gebt Ruhe hier! 's ist Schlafenzeit!—
Nein, hört nur, wie der Esel schreit!—
Ihr da! Seid still, und scheert euch fort!
Heult, kreischt und schreit an and'rem Ort!

DAVID: (hat ebenfalls den Fensterladen, dicht bei Beckmesser, ein wenig geöffnet—und lugt hervor). Wer Teufel hier?—Und drüben gar?
Die Lene ist's,—ich seh' es klar!
Herr Je! das war's, den hat sie bestellt;
der ist's, der ihr besser als ich gefällt!—
Nun warte! du kriegst's! dir streich' ich das Fell!— Zum Teufel mit dir verdammte Gesell'!
(David ist, mit einem Knüppel bewaffnet, hinter dem Laden aus dem Fenster hervorgesprungen, zerschlägt Beckmesser's Laute und wirft sich über ihn selbst her.)

MAGDALENE: (die zuletzt, um den Merker zu entfernen, mit übertrieben beifälligen Bewegungen herabgewinkt hat, schreit jetzt laut auf). Ach Himmel! David! Gott, welche Noth!
Zu Hülfe! zu Hülfe! Sie schlagen sich todt.

BECKMESSER: (mit David sich balgend). Verfluchter Kerl! Lässt du mich los?

DAVID: Gewiss! Die Glieder brech' ich dir blos!
(Sie balgen und prügeln sich in einem fort.)

At his wish rather,
To be wed goes in.
The bold man who Would come and view,
May see the maiden there so true,
Of whom my hopes I firmly glue:
Therefore is the sky so bright blue,
As I said to begin."
(From the 6th line onward, Sachs has continued to hammer repeatedly on the various false accents; Beckmesser, who has started painfully at each blow, is forced to make his notes short and jerky in the effort to control his inward rage; this increases the comical effect of his doggerel performance.—Now he bursts out at Sachs round the corner.)
(Beckmesser, keeping his eyes fixed on the window, has perceived with rising chagrin Magdalena's evident signs of dissatisfaction; he has sung louder and more hurriedly in order to overpower the continued hammering of Sachs.—He is about to continue when the latter, knocking the key of the last out and withdrawing the shoe, rises from his stool and leans out over the shop-door.)

SACHS: Haven't you finished?

BECKMESSER: (in great trepidation). What means your call?

SACHS: (triumphantly holding out the shoes from the door). I've finished with the shoes, that's all!—
I call that a famous Marker's shoe:
Now hear my Marker's maxim, too.—
By long and short strokes dinted
Here on the sole it is printed!
Behold it here,
Let it be clear,
And hold it ever dear.—
"Good songs must scan."
On any man,
Even the Town-clerk, who'd transgress it
The cobbler's strap shall impress it.—
Now run along.
Your shoes are strong;
Trust to your feet:
They'll keep you on the beat.
(He laughs loudly.)

BECKMESSER: (who has retired into the alley again and leaned against the wall between Sachs's two windows, hastens on with third verse, shouting breathlessly with violent efforts to drown Sachs's voice). "That I've a Master's learning Willingly I'd show her,
To win the reward burning
I'm with thirst and hunger.
Now I call the nine Muses To witness whose is
The poetic gift true.
I lay no faulty stresses,
In the rules I'm no dunce;
Some little awkwardnesses
May excused be for once,
When one's heart fear is swaying
At thus essaying
A fair maiden to woo.
A bachelor,
I'd give my gore,
My place, rank, honor, all my store,
If you would my song not abhor;
And the maiden would me adore
If she admires it too."

NEIGHBORS: (first a few, then more, open their windows in the alley during the song and peep out). Who's howling there? Who bawls so loud?
So late at night, is that allowed?—
It is time for bed! Be still, I say!
Just listen to that donkey's bray!—
You there! Shut up and beat retreat!
Go halloa in some other street!

DAVID: (who has opened his shutter close to Beckmesser). Whoever's this?—and who's up there?
It is Magdalena, I declare!
'Oddzounds that's it—I clearly see
It is he she favors more than me!—
You'll catch it! Just wait! I'll tan your skin!
The devil help you when I begin!
(David, arming himself with a cudgel, springs out of the window, knocks Beckmesser's lute out of his hands and throws himself upon him.)

MAGDALENA: (who at last, to make the Marker go, has made exaggerated gestures of pleasure at him, now cries aloud). Oh heavens! David! Lord, how I'm thrilled!
A rescue! a rescue! or both will be killed!

BECKMESSER: (struggling with David). Infernal rogue! Let me alone!

DAVID: I will when I've broken every bone.
(They continue to struggle and fight.)

DIE NACHBARN: (an den Fenstern). Seht nach! Springt zu! Da würgen sich zwie!

ANDERE NACHBARN: (auf die Gasse heraustretend). Heda! Herbei! 's giebt Prügelei!
Ihr da! aus einander! Gebt freien Lauf!
Lass ihr nicht los, wir schlagen drauf?

EIN NACHBAR: Ei seht! Auch ihr da! Geht's euch 'was an?

EIN ZWEITER: Was sucht ihr hier?
Hat man euch 'was gethan?

ERSTER NACHBAR: Euch kennt man gut!

ZWEITER NACHBAR: Euch noch viel besser!

ERSTER NACHBAR: Wie so denn?

ZWEITER NACHBAR: (zuschalagend). Ei, so!

MAGDALENE: (hinabschreiend). David! Beckmesser!

DIE LEHRBUBEN: (kommen dazu). Herbie! Herbei!
's giebt Keilerei!

EINIGE: 's sind die Schuster!

ANDERE: Nein, 'sind die Schneider!

DIE ERSTEREN: Die Trunkenbolde!

DIE ANDEREN: Die Hungerleider!

DIE NACHBARN: (auf der Gasse durcheinander). Euch gönnt' ich's schon lange!— Wird euch wohl bange?
Das für die Klage!—
Seht euch vor, wenn ich schlage!—
Hat euch die Frau gehetzt?—
Schau wie es Prügel setzt!—
Seid ihr noch nicht gewitzt?—
So schlagt doch!—Das silzt!—
Dass ich, Hallunke!—
Hie Färbertunke!—
Wartet, ihr Racker!
Ihr Maasseahzwacker!—
Esel!—Dummrian!—
Du Grobian!— Lümmel du!—
Drauf und zu!

DIE LEHRBUBEN: (durcheinander, zugleich mit den Nachbarn). Konnt man die Schlosser nicht?
Die haben's sicher angericht'!—
Ich glaub' die Schmiede werden's sein.—
Die Schreiner seh' ich dort beim Schein—Hei! Schau' die Schäffler dort beim Tanz.—
Dort seh' die Bader ich im Glanz.—
Krämer finden sich zur Hand mit Gerstenstang und Zuckerkand; mit Pfeffer, Zimmt, Muscatennuss, Sie riechen schön.
Sie riechen schön.
doch haben viel Verdruss, und bleiben gern vom Schuss.—
Seht nur, der Hase
Hat üb'rall die Nase!—

NEIGHBORS: (at the windows). Look there! Go it!—They're hard at it now!

OTHER NEIGHBORS: (coming into the alley). Halloa! What's up?
See, here's a row!
You there! stand back! Give him fair play!
If you don't part we'll join the fray.

ONE NEIGHBOR: Halloa! Have you come? Why are you here?

A SECOND: What's that to you? Don't interfere!

FIRST NEIGHBOR: You're a big rogue!

SECOND NEIGHBOR: You are no better!

FIRST NEIGHBOR: Prove it then!

SECOND NEIGHBOR: (hitting out). There!

MAGDALENA: (screaming down). David! Beckmesser!

PRENTICES: (entering). Hooray! hooray! Here's cudgel play!

SOME: It's the cobblers!

OTHERS: No, it's the tailors.

THE FIRST: The drunken patches!

OTHERS: The starveling railers!

NEIGHBORS: (in the street to one another). That pays what I owe you!— Coward! I know you!—
Take that to requite you!—
Mind your eye if I smite you!—
Was your wife's temper high?
See how the cudgels fly!—
Haven't you found your wits?—
Lay on, then!—That hits!—
Rogue, there's a thumper!—
You counter-jumper!—
You gutter-sweeper?—
You false-measure-keeper!—
Blockhead!—Looby!—
You great booby!—
Dolt, I say!—
Don't give way!

PRENTICES: (to one another with the Neighbors). We know the locksmiths' way:
They surely started this fray!—
I think the smiths began the fight.—
I see the joiners by the light.—
Look where the coopers come along
And now the barbers join the throng.—
There the Guild of grocers comes,
With lollipops and sugar-plums,
With pepper, spice and cinnamon.
How nice they smell!
How nice they smell!
But they don't like the fun,
And wish that it were done.
See that fool there
With his nose everywhere!

Meinst du damit etwa mich?—
Mein' ich damit etwa dich?
Da hast's auf die Schnautze!—
Herr, jetzt setzt's Plautze!—
Hei! Krach! Hagelwetterschlag!
Wo das sitzt, da wächst nichts nach!
Keilt euch wacker, haut die Racker!
Haltet selbst Gesellen Stand;
wer da wich', 's wär wahrlich Schand'?
Drauf und dran!
Wie ein Mann
steh'n wir alle zur Keilerei!
(Bereits prügeln sich Nachbarn und Lehrbuben fast allegemein durcheinander.)

DIE GESELLEN: (von allen Seiten dazu kommend). Heda! Gesellen 'ran!
Dort wird mit Streit und Zank gethan
Da giebt's gewiss gleich Schlägerei; Gesellen, haltet euch dabei!
'Sind die Weber und Gerber!—
Dacht ich's doch gleich!—
Die Preisverderber!
Spielen immer Streich'!
Dort den Metzger Klaus, den kennt man heraus!—
Zünfte! Zünfte
Zünfte heraus!—
Schneider mit dem Bügel!
Hei! hie setzt's Prügel!
Gürtler!—Zinngiesser!—
Leimsieder!—Lichtgiesser!— Tuchscherer her!
Leinweber her!
Hierher: Hierher!
Immer mehr? Immer mehr!
Nur tüchtig drauf? Wir schlagen los:
jetzt wird die Keilerei erst gross!—
Lauft heim, sonst kriegt ihr's von der Frau; Hier giebt's nur Prügel-Färbeblau!
Immer 'ran!
Mann für Mann!
Schlagt sie nieder!
Zünfte! Zünfte! Heraus!—

DIE MEISTER: (und Aelteren Bürger von verschiedenen Seiten dazu kommend). Was giebt's denn da für Zank und Streit?
Das tos't ja weit und breit!
Gebt Ruh' und scheer sich jeder heim!
Sonst schlag' ein Hageldonnerwetter drein!
Stemmt euch hier nicht mehr zu hauf, oder sonst wir schlagen drauf.—

DIE NACHBARINNEN: (aus den Fenstern, durcheinander). Was ist denn da für Streit und Zank?
's wird einem wahrlich Angst und bang!
Da ist mein Mann gewiss dabei;
gewiss kommt's noch zur Schlägerei!
He da! Ihr dort unten, so seid doch nur gescheit!

Pray did I allude to you?
There's one nose I've pounded!
Lord! how that sounded!—
Hey! whack! fire and fury oh!
Where that fell no hair will grow!
Cudgels, whack hard!
Smash the blackguard!
Show yourselves worth freemen's name:
To give way would be a shame!
Join the brawl,
Each and all.
We are ready to help the row!
(Gradually the Neighbors and Prentices have come to a general fight.)

JOURNEYMEN: (arriving from all quarters). Hallo! Companions, come!
The people here seem quarrelsome.
There'll surely be some fighting then:
Be ready, lusty journeymen.
It is the weavers and tanners!—
Which well I know!—
It is like their manners!—
They always do so!—
Klaus the butcher is there;
He's one to beware!—
Guilds! Guilds!
Guilds everywhere!—
Tailors here are hieing!—
See the cudgels flying!
Girdlers!—Pewterers!
Glue-boilers; Fruiterers
Cloth-workers here!
Linenweavers here!
Come here! Come here!
More appear! More appear!
All do your best! We're going to strike!
Now will the fight be something like!—
Run home! your wife is after you!
Here you'll get painted black and blue!
There they go!
Blow for blow!
Knock them over!
Guildsmen! Guildsmen! come out!

THE MASTERS: (and Old Burghers arriving on all sides). What is this noise of brawl and fight,
That sounds far through the night?
Leave off and let each go his way,
Or else there'll be the deuce to pay!
Don't crowd up like this in bands,
Or else we too must use our hands.—

WOMEN: (at the windows, to one another). What is this noise of fight and brawl?
It really terrifies us all!
My husband's there, as sure as fate!
Some one will get a broken head!
Hey sirs! You below there,
Be reasonable now!
Are you then all so ready
To join a vulgar row?

Seid ihr zu Streit und Raufen gleich Alle so bereit?
Was für ein Zanken und Toben!
Da werden schon Arme erhoben!
Hört doch! Hört doch!
Seid ihr denn toll?
Sind euch die Köpfe
vom Weine noch voll?
Zu Hilfe! Zu Hilfe!
Da schlägt sich mein Mann!
Der Vater! der Vater!
Sieht man das an?
Christian! Peter!
Niklaus! Hans!
Auf! schreit Zeter!— Hörst du nicht, Franz?
Gott! wie sie walken!
Wasser her! Wasser her!
Giesst's ihn' auf die Köpfe!
(Die Rauferei ist allgemein geworden. Schreien und Toben.)

MAGDALENE: (am Fenster verzweiflungsvoll die Hände ringend). Ach Himmel! Meine Noth ist gross?— David! So hör' mich doch nur an!
So lass' doch nur den Herren los!

POGNER: (ist im Nachtgewand oben an das Fenster getreten und zieht Magdalene herein). Um Gott! Eva! schliess' zu!—
Ich seh', ob im Haus unten Ruh'!
(Das Fenster wird geschlossen; bald darauf erscheint Pogner an der Hausthüre.)
(Sachs hat, als der Tumult begann, sein Licht gelöscht und den Laden soweit geschlossen, dass er durch eine kleine Oeffnung stets den Platz unter der Linde beobachten konnte.) (Walther und Eva haben mit wachsender Sorge dem anschwellenden Tumulte zugesehen. Jetzt fasst Walther Eva dicht in den Arm.)

WALTHER: Jetzt gilt's zu wagen, sich durchzuschlagen.
(Mit geschwungenen Schwerte dringt er bis in die Mitte der Bühne vor.—Da springt Sachs mit einem Satz aus dem Laden auf die Strasse und packt Walther beim Arm.)

POGNER: (auf der Treppe). He, Lene, wo bist du?

SACHS: (die halbohnmächtige Eva auf die Treppe stossend). In's Haus, Jungfer Lene!
(Pogner empfängt sie und zieht sie beim Arme herein.)
(Beckmesser, durch Sachs von David befreit, sucht sich eilig durch die Menge zu flüchten.)
(Im gleichen Augenblicke, wo Sachs auf die Strasse sprang, hörte man rechts zur Seite im Vordergrunde einen besonders starken Hornruf des Nachtwaechter's. Lehrbuben, Buerger und Gesellen suchten in eiliger Flucht sich nach allen Seiten hin zu entfernen: so dass die Bühne sehr schnell gänzalich geleert ist, alle Hausthüren hastig geschlossen und auch die Nachbarinnen von den Fenstern, welche sie zugeschlagen, verschwunden sind.—Der Vollmond tritt hervor und scheint hell in die Gasse hinein.)

DER NACHTWÄCHTER: (betritt im Vordergrunde rechts die Bühne, reibt sich die Augen, sieht sich verwundert um, schüttelt den Kopf und stimmt mit etwas bebender Stimme seinen Ruf an):
Hört ihr Leut', und lasst euch sagen:
die Glock' hat Elfe geschlagen.
Bewahrt euch vor Gespenstern und Spuck, dass kein böser Geist eu'r Seel' beruck'!
Lobet Gott den Herrn!
(Er geht während dem langsam die Gasse hinab. Als der Vorhang fällt, hört man den Hornruf des Nachtwaechter's wiederholen.)

ACT III

(In Sachsen's Werkstatt, Kurzer Raum. Im Hintergrund die halb geöffnete Ladenthüre, nach der Strasse führend. Rechts zur Seite eine Kammerthüre. Links, das nach der Gasse gehende Fenster, mit Blumenstöcken davor, zur Seite ein Werktisch. Sachs sitzt auf einem grossen Lehnstuhle an diesem Fenster, durch welches die Morgensonne hell auf ihn hereinscheint; er hat vor sich auf den Schoose einen grossen Folianten und ist im Lesen vertieft.—David lugt spähend von der Strasse zur Ladenthüre herein: da er sieht, dass Sachs seiner nicht achtet, tritt er herein, mit einem Korbe im Arm, denn er zuvörderst schnell und verstohlen unter den andern Werktisch beim Laden stellt;—dann von neuem versichert, dass Sachs ihn nicht bemerkt, nimmt er den Korb vorsichtig herauf, und untersucht den Inhalt: er hebt Blumen und Bänder heraus; endlich findet er auf dem Grunde eine Wurst und einen Kuchen, und lässt sich sogleich an, diese zu verzehren, als Sachs der ihn fortwährend nicht beachtet, mit starkem Geräusch eines der grossen Blätter des Folianten umwendet.)

What a confusion and holloa!
Now blows will be certain to follow!
Hark! hark!
Are you insane?
Are you still fuddled
With wine on the brain?
O murder! murder!
My man's in the fight!
There's father! there's father!
Look! what a sight!
Christian! Peter!
Nicholas! Hans!
Watch! be fleeter!—
Don't you hear, Franz?
Lord! how the hair flies!
See how they go it!
Water here! Water, quick!
Throw it on their heads!
(The row has become general. Shrieks and blows.)

MAGDALENA: (wringing her hands despairingly at the window). Oh heaven! what is to be done!—
David, for goodness' sake attend!
Do leave the gentleman alone!

POGNER: (coming to the window in his night-gown, pulls Magdalena in). Come in, Eva! Odd so!
I'll see if all is right below.
(The window is shut and Pogner appears below at the door).
(Sachs at the commencement of the row has extinguished his light and set his door ajar, so as still to be able to watch the place under the lime-tree.)
(Walter and Eva have observed the riot with increasing anxiety. Now Walter seizes Eva in his arms.)

WALTER: Now we may do it—
Cut our way through it!
(Brandishing his sword he forces his way to the middle of the stage.—Sachs rushes with one bound out of his shop and grasps Walter's arms.)

POGNER: (on the steps). Ho? Lena! where are you?

SACHS: (pushing the half-fainting Eva up the steps). Go in, Mistress Lena!
(Pogner receives her and pulls her within.)
(Sachs brandishing his knee-strap, with which he has cleared a path to Walter, now catches David one, and, kicking him into the shop drags Walter, whom he still holds, indoors with him, closing and barring the door behind them.)
(Beckmesser, released from David by Sachs, seeks hasty flight through the crowd.)
(At the moment Sachs rushes into the street a loud note from the Nightwatchman's horn is heard R. U. E. Prentices, Burghers and Journeymen, panic struck, seek flight on all sides, so that the stage is speedily completely cleared: all the doors are closed and women gone from windows, which are also shut.—The full moon shines out and brightly illumines the now peaceful alley.)

THE WATCHMAN (enters R. U. E., rubs his eyes, stares about him in surprise, shakes his head, and in a somewhat tremulous voice calls out:) "Hark to what I say, good people!
Eleven strikes from every steeple.
Defend you all from specter and sprite;
Let no power of ill your souls frighten!
Praise the Lord of Heaven!"
(He goes slowly up the alley. As the curtain falls his distant horn is still heard.)

ACT III

(In Sachs's workshop. Front scene. At back the half-open shop-door leads to the street. R the door of a chamber. L the window looking into the alley, flowers in pots before it; a work bench beside it. Sachs sits at this window in a great arm chair, the bright morning sun streaming in on him; he has a large folio on his lap and is absorbed in reading.—David peeps in at the door from the street; on seeing that Sachs does not notice him he enters with a basket on his arm, which he first hides quickly under the other work bench; then again assured that Sachs does not heed him, he carefully takes it out again and investigates the contents: he lifts out the flowers and ribbons and at last finds at the bottom a sausage and a cake; these he is about to devour when Sachs, who is still unconscious of his presence, turns over a leaf of his book with a loud rustle.)

DAVID: (fährt zusammen, verbirgt das Essen und wendet sich.) Gleich! Meister! Hier!—
Die Schuh' sind abgegeben
In Herrn Beckmesser's Quartier.—
Mir war's ihr reif't mich eben?
(Bei Seite.)
Er thut' als säh' er mich nicht?
Da is er bös, wenn er nicht spricht!
(Sich demüthig sehr allmählich nähernd.)
Ach, Meister! woll't ihr mir verzeih'n!
Kann ein Lehrbub' vollkommen sein?
Kenntet ihr die Lene, wie ich,
da vergäb't ihr mir sicherlich.
Sie ist so gut, so sanft für mich,
und blickt mich oft an, so innerlich:
wenn ihr mich schlagt, streichelt sie mich,
und lächelt dabei holdseliglich!
Muss ich cariren, füttert sie mich,
und ist in Allem gar lieblich.
Nur gestern, weil der Junker versungen, hab' ich den Korb ihr nicht abgerungen:
das schmerzte mich; und da ich fand, dass Nachts Einer vor dem Fenster stand, und sang zu ihr, und schrie wie toll,
da hieb ich dem den Buckel voll.
Wie käm' nun da 'was Gross' drauf an?
Auch hat's uns'rer Lieb' gar gut gethan:
die Lene hat eben mir Alles erklärt, und zum Fest Blumen und Bänder bescheert.
(Er bricht in immer grössere Angst aus.)
Ach, Meister! sprecht doch nur ein Wort!
(Bei Seite.)
Hätt' ich nur die Wurst und den Kuchen erst fort!

SACHS: (der unbeirrt weiter gelesen, schlägt jetzt den Folianten zu. Von dem starken Geräusch erschrickt David so, dass er strauchelt und unwillkürlich vor Sachs auf die Knie fällt. Sachs sieht über das Buch, das er noch auf dem Schoose behält, hinweg. über, David, welcher immer auf den Knien furchtsam nach ihm hinauf blickt, hin und heftet seinen Blick unwillkürlich auf den hinteren Werktisch). Blumen und Bänder seh' ich dort:— schaut hold und jugendlich aus!
Wie kamen die mir in's Haus?

DAVID: (verwundert über Sachsen's Freundlichkeit). Ei, Meister! 's ist heut hoch festlicher Tag; da putzt sich jeder, so schön er mag.

SACHS: Wär' Hochzeitsfest?

DAVID: Ja, käm's so weit, dass David erst die Lene Freit!

DAVID: (starts, hides the food and turns round). Here, Master! yes!—
The shoes were taken duly
To clerk Beckmesser's address.—
I thought you summoned me truly?
(Aside.)
He seems to notice me not!
When he is dumb his anger's hot.
(Gradually approaching humbly.)
Ah, Master! won't you forgive?
Can a Prentice quite faultless live?
If with my eyes Lena you'd see You'd pardon me, assuredly.
She is so good, so kind to me,
And eyes me at times so tenderly!
When I've been thrashed, soothing is she.
And smiles upon me so prettily!
When on short commons, she feeds me,
And acts in all things right lovingly.
Last night, though, when that knight was discarded,
There was no basket awarded to me.
That worried me, and when I found
At night how some one lurked around
And sang to her and cried like mad.
I gave him all the stick I had.
What dreadful consequence befell!
But yet for our love it turned out well:
Now Lena's explained the matter to me
And sent all these ribbons and flowers you see.
(He bursts out in still greater anxiety).
Oh Master! Speak one word, I pray!
(Aside.)
Would I'd put the cake and sausage away!—

SACHS: (who has read on undisturbed, claps his book. At the loud noise David is so startled that he stumbles and falls unintentionally on his knees before Sachs. The latter gazes far away beyond the book which he still holds, beyond David who, from his kneeling posture looks up at him in terror, and his eyes fall on the farther table). Yonder are flowers and ribbons gay,
In youthful beauty and bloom:
How came they into my room?

DAVID: (astonished at Sachs' friendliness). Why, Master! Today's a feast, you know;
And all must smarten, to grace the show.

SACHS: Is it a marriage-feast?

DAVID: Yes, so it would be
If only Lena might marry me.

SACHS: 's war Polterabend, dünkt mich doch?

DAVID: (für sich). Polterabend?—Da krieg ich's wohl noch!—
(Laut.)
Verzeiht das, Mesiter! Ich bitt', vergesst!
Wir feiern ja heut' Johannisfest.

SACHS: Johannisfest?

DAVID: (bei Seite). Hört er heut' schwer?

SACHS: Kannst du dein Sprüchlein? Sag' es her!

DAVID: Mein Sprüchlein? Denk', ich kann es gut.
(Bei Seite.)
'Setzt nichts! der Meister ist wohlgemuth!—
(Laut.)
"Am Jordan Sankt Johannes stand"—
(Er hat in der Zerstreuung die Worte mit der Melodie von Beckmesser's Werbelied aus dem vorhergehenden Aufzuge gesungen; Sachs macht eine verwunderte Bewegung, worauf David sich unterbricht.) Verzeiht, Meister; ich kann in's Gewirr:
der Polterabend machte mich irr.
(Er fährt in der richtigen Melodie fort:)
"Am Jordan Sankt Johannes stand, all Volk der Welt zu taufen:
kam auch ein Weib aus fremdem Land,
von Nürnberg gar gelaufen;
sein Söhnlein trug's zum Uferrand, empfing da Tauf' und Namen;
doch als sie dann sich heimgewandt, nach Nürnberg wieder kamen, im deutschen Land gar bald sich fand's, dass wer am Ufer des Jordans Johannes war genannt, an der Pegnitz hiess der Hans."
(Feurig.)
Herr! Meister! 's ist eu'r Namenstag!
Nein! Wie man so 'was vergessen mag!
Hier; hier, die Blumen sind für euch, die Bänder,—und was nur Alles noch gleich!
Ja hier! schaut, Meister! Herrlicher Kuchen?
Möchtet ihr nicht auch die Wurst versuchen?

SACHS: (immer ruhig, ohne seine Stellung zu verändern). Schön Dank, mein Jung'! behalt's für dich!
Doch heut' auf die Wiese begleitest du mich:
mit den Bändern und Blumen putz dich dich fein;
sollst mein stattlicher Herold sein.

DAVID: Sollt' ich nicht lieber Brautführer sein?—
Meister! lieb' Meister! ihr müsst wieder frei'n!

SACHS: Your Folly-evening was last night?

DAVID: (aside). Folly evening?—
I'm all in a fright!
(Aloud.)
Forgive me, Master! Forget it, pray!
The Feast of St. John we keep today.

SACHS: St. John's day?

DAVID: (aside). He must be deaf!

SACHS: Know you your verses? Repeat them to me.

DAVID: My verses? Yes, they're in my brain.—
(Aside.)
All right! the master is kind again!
(Aloud.)
"St. John stood on the Jordan strand"—
(In his agitation he sings his lines to the melody of Beckmesser's serenade; he is pulled up by Sachs' movement of astonishment).
Forgive me, master, and pardon the slip!
That Folly-evening caused me to trip.
(He recommences to the proper tune.)
"St. John stood on the Jordan strand,
Where all the world he christened:
A woman came from distant land,
From Nuremberg she'd hastened:
Her little son she led in hand,
Baptized him with a name there,
And then toward home she took her flight;
But when at last she came there
It soon turned out, in German lands,
That he who on the Jordan's sands
Johannes had been hight,
On the Pegnitz was called Hans."
(Impetuously.)
Sir! Master! It is your name-day, sure!
There! Well, my memory must be poor!
Here! all the flowers are for you.
The ribbons—there was something else, too?
Yes, here! Look, master! Here's a fine pastry!
Try too this sausage, you'll find it tasty.

SACHS: (still dreamily, without moving). Best thanks, my lad! You keep it, though!
Eventually to the meadow with me you shall go;
With ribbons and flowers make yourself gay;
As my herald you are to act today.

DAVID: Would I not be your groomsman more fair?
Master, dear master, you must wed again!

SACHS: Hätt'st wohl gern eine Meist'rin im Haus?

DAVID: Ich mein', es säh' doch viel stattlicher aus.

SACHS: Wer weiss! Kommt Zeit, kommt Rath.

DAVID: 's ist Zeit.

SACHS: Da wär' der Rath wohl auch nicht weit?

DAVID: Gewiss! geh'n Reden schon hin und wieder.
Den Beckmesser, denk' ich, säng't ihr doch nieder?
Ich mein', dass der heut' sich nicht wichtig macht.

SACHS: Wohl möglich! Hab's mir auch schon bedacht.—
Jetzt geh'; doch stör' mir den Junker nicht!
Komm' wieder, wenn du schön gerlicht'.

DAVID: (küsst ihm gerührt die Hand, packt Alles zusammen und geht in die Kammer). So war es noch nie, wenn sonst auch gut!
Kann mir gar nicht mehr denken, wie der Knieriemen thut!
(Ab.)

SACHS: (immer noch den Folianten auf dem Schoosse, lehnt sich, mit untergestütztem Arme, sinnend darauf und beginnt dann nach einem Schweigen): Wahn! Wahn!
Ueberall Wahn!
Wohin ich forschend blick'
in Stadt- und Welt-Chronik, den Grund mir aufzufinden, warum gar bis auf's Blut die Leut sich quälen and schinden in unnütz toller Wuth!
Hat keiner Lohn
noch Dank davon:
in Flucht geschlagen
meint er zu jagen.
Hört nicht sein eigen Schmerz-Gekreisch, wenn er sich wühlt in's eigene Fleisch, wähnt Lust sich zu erzeigen.
Wer giebt den Namen au?
's bleibt halt der alte Wahn,
ohn' den nichts mag geschehen,
's mag gehen oder stehen!
Steht's wo im Lauf,
er schläft nur neue Kraft sich an;
gleich wacht er auf,
dann schaut, wer ihn hemeistern kann!
Wie friedsam treuer Sitten, getrost in That und Werk, liegt nicht in Deutschland's Mitten mein liebes Nürenberg!
Doch eines Abends spät, ein Unglück zu verhüten, bein jugendheissen Gemüthen, ein Mann weiss sich nicht Rath;
ein Schuster in seinem Laden, zieht an des Wahnes Faden;
wie bald auf Gassen und Strassen
fängt der da an zu rasen;
Mann, Weib, Gesell' und Kind, fällt sich an wie toll und blind,

SACHS: Do you wish for a mistress then here?

DAVID: I think it would appear more dignified.

SACHS: Who knows? But time will show.

DAVID: Time's come.

SACHS: Has it brought knowledge then to some?

DAVID: Yes, sure! I know things have been repeated;
And Beckmesser's singing you have defeated.
I think he will scarce make a stir today.

SACHS: It's likely! That I'll not gainsay.—
Now go; disturb not Sir Walter's rest!
Come back when you are finely dressed.

DAVID: (moved, kisses Sachs's hand, collects his things and goes into chamber). He never was like this, though sometimes kind!
Why, the taste of his strap has gone out of my mind!
(Exit.)

SACHS: (still with the book on his knees leans back deep in thought, resting his head on his hand and after a pause begins): Mad! Mad!
All the world's mad!
Where ever inquiry dives
In town or world's archives
And seeks to learn the reason Why people strive and fight,
Both in and out of season,
In fruitless rage and spite.
What do they gain
For all their pain?
Repulsed in fight,
They feign joy in flight;
Their pain-cries not minding,
They joy pretend
When their own flesh their fingers rend
And pleasure deem they're finding.
What tongue the cause can phrase?
It is just the same old craze!
Nothing happens without it ever,
In spite of all endeavor;
It makes pause
In sleep but acquires new force;
Soon it will wake,
Then lo! who can control its course?—
Old ways and customs keeping,
How peacefully I see
My dear old Nuremberg sleeping
In midst of Germany!
But on one evening late,
To hinder in some fashion
The follies of youthful passion
A man worries his head;
A shoemaker, all unknowing,
Sets the old madness going:
How soon from highways and alleys
A raging rabble sallies!
Man, woman, youth and child,
Blindly fall to, as if gone wild;
And before the craze lose power
The cudgel blows must shower;

und will's der Wahn gesegnen, nun muss es Prügel regnen, mit Hieben, Stöss' und Dreschen den Wuthesbrand zu löschen.— Gott weiss, wie das geschah?—
Ein Kobold half wohl da!
Ein Glühwurm fand sein Weibchen nicht;
der hat den Schaden angericht'.—
Der Flieder war's:—Johannis-Nacht.— Nun aber kam Johannis-Tag:—
jetzt schau'n wir, wie Hans Sachs es macht, dass er den Wahn fein lenken mag,
ein edler Werk zu thun;
denn lässt er uns nicht ruh'n, selbst hier in Nürenberg,
so sei's um solche Werk', die selten vor gemeinen Dingen, und nie ohn' ein'gen Wahn gelingen.—
(Walther tritt unter der Kammerthüre ein. Er bleibt einen Augenblick dort stehen und blickt auf Sachs. Dieser wendet sich und lässt den Folianten auf den Boden gleiten.)

SACHS: Grüss Gott, mein Junker! Ruhtet ihr noch?
Ihr wachtet lang'; nun schlieft ihr doch?

WALTHER: (sehr ruhig). Ein wenig, aber fest und gut.

SACHS: So ist euch nun wohl bass zu Muth?

WALTHER: Ich hett' einen wunderschönen Traum.

SACHS: Das dentet gut's! Erzählt mir den.

WALTHER: Ihn selbst zu denken wag' ich kaum:
ich fürcht' ihn mir vergeh'n zu seh'n.

SACHS: Mein Freund, das grad' ist Dichter's Werk, dass er sein Träumen deut' und merk'.
Glaubt mir, des Menschen wahrster Wahn wird ihm im Traume aufgethan:
all' Dichtkunst und Poeterei ist nichts als Wahrtraum-Deuterei Was gilt's, es gab der Traum euch ein, wie heut' ihr sollet Sieger sein?

WALTHER: Nein! von der Zunft und ihren Meistern wollt' sich mein Traumbild nicht begeistern.

SACHS: O, lasst dem Ruh'; und folgt meinem Rathe, kurz und gut, fasst zu einem Meisterliede Muth.

WALTHER: Ein schönes Lied, ein Meisterlied:
wie fass' ich da den Unterschied?

SACHS: Mein Freund! in holder Jugendzeit wenn uns von mächt'gen Trieben zum sel'gen ersten Lieben die Brust sich schwellet hoch und weit,

They seek with fuss and bother
The fires of wrath to smother.—
God knows how this befell!—
It was like some impish spell!
Some glow-worm could not find his mate;
It was he aroused this wrath and hate.—
The elder's charm:—Midsummer-eve:—
But now has dawned Midsummer day.—
Let's see then what Hans Sachs can weave
To turn the madness his own way.
To serve for noble works;
For it still here it lurks,
In Nuremberg the same,
We'll use it to such aim
As seldom by the mob's projected,
And never without trick effected.—
(Walter enters from the chamber. He pauses a moment at the door looking at Sachs. The latter turns and allows his book to slip to the ground.)

SACHS: Good day, Sir Walter! My guest is late.
You sat up long; you've had some rest?

WALTER: (very quietly). A little, but that rest was sound.

SACHS: So then your courage you have found?

WALTER: I had a wondrous lovely dream.

SACHS: That bodes well! Relate it, pray.

WALTER: In words I scarce dare touch its theme,
For fear it should all fade away.

SACHS: My friend, that is the poet's art,
His dreams to cherish and impart.
Trust me, the best ideas of men
In dreams are opened to their ken:
All book-craft and all poetry
Are nothing but dreams made true.
But did your dream at all advise
How you might win the Master-prize?

WALTER: No, from your Guild no inspiration Arose to my imagination.
But let that go.

SACHS: And listen to my counsel short and strong.
Bend your mind to a Master-Song.

WALTER: A Master-Song and one that's fine:
How shall I make the two combine?

SACHS: My friend, in youth's delightful days
When first in the direction
Of blissful, true affection
The heart some power turns and sways,

ein schönes Lied zu singen
mocht' vielen da gelingen:
der Lenz, der sang für sie.
Kam Sommer, Herbst und Winterzeit, viel Noth und Sorg' im Leben, manch ehlich Glück daneben, Kindtauf', Geschäfte, Zwist und Streit:
denen 's dann noch will gelingen
ein schönes Lied zu singen, seht, Meister nennt man die.—

WALTHER: Ich lieb' ein Weib und will es frei'n, mein dauernd Ehgemahl zu sein.

SACHS: Die Meisterregeln lernt bei Zeiten, dass sie getreulich euch geleiten, und helfen wohl bewahren, was in der Jugend Jahren in holdem Triebe Lenz und Liebe
euch unbewusst in's Herz gelegt, dass ihr das unverloren hegt.

WALTHER: Steh'n sie non in so hohem Ruf wer war es, der die Regeln schuf?

SACHS: Das waren hochbedürft'ge Meister, von Lebensmüh' bedrängte Geister, in ihrer Nöthen Wildniss sie schufen sich ein Bildniss, das ihnen bliebe
der Jugendliebe ein Angedenken klar und fest, dran sich der Lenz erkennen lässt.

WALTHER: Doch, wem der Lenz schon lang entronnen, wie wird er dem aus dem Bild gewonnen?
Wie fang' ich nach der Regel an?

SACHS: Ihr stellt sie selbst, und folgt ihr dann.
Gedenkt des schönen Traum's am Morgen;
für's Andre lasst Hans Sachs nur sorgen.

WALTHER: (setzt sich zu Sachs und beginnt nach kurzer Sammlung, sehr leise). "Morgenlich leuchtend in rosigem Schein, von Blüth' und Duft
geschwellt die Luft, von aller Wonnen
nie ersonnen,
ein Garten lud mich ein Gast ihm zu sein."
(Er hält etwas an.)

SACHS: Das war ein Stollen: nun achtet wohl, dass ganz ein gleicher ihm folgen soll.

WALTHER: Warum ganz gleich?

SACHS: Damit man seh', ihr wähltet euch gleich ein Weib zur Eh'.

All can, or else, it were pity.
Compose a loving ditty:
For spring cries out in you.
But Summer, Autumn, Winter days
Bring care and sorrow often,
With wedded bliss to soften,
Children and business—frets and frays.
One who, despite care and duty,
Yet sings a song of beauty,
A Master he must be.—

WALTER: I love a maiden and I pine
In wedlock true to make her mine.

SACHS: The Master-rules then learn and ponder,
To guide your footsteps when they wander.
To help you keep with rigor
What in your youthful vigor
In hasty fashion,
Spring and passion
Place secretly within your heart,
That it may never more depart.

WALTER: If then so much your rules are prized,
By what man were they first devised?

SACHS: By certain sorely troubled Masters,
Their hearts oppressed by life's disasters;
By suffering overweighted,
A model they created,
That they might take it
And ever make it
A memory of youthful love,
In which the soul of Spring should move.

WALTER: But how can aught of Spring awaken
In those whom it has long forsaken?
What rule will my commencement fit?

SACHS: First make your rule, then follow it.
Your dream alone let occupy you;
With all the rest Hans Sachs will ply you.

WALTER: (places himself near Sachs and after a moment's thought begins in a very low voice:) "Morning was gleaming with roseate light,
The air was filled
With scent distilled,
Where, beauty beaming
Past all dreaming,
A garden did invite
My raptured sight."
(He pauses awhile.)

SACHS: That was a stanza: now then, take heed
That one just similar may succeed.

WALTER: Why similar?

SACHS: That folks may know
That coupled you intend to go.

WALTHER: (führt fort). "Wonnig entragend dem seligen Raum bot gold'ner Frucht heilsaft'ge Wucht mit holdem Prangen dem Verlangen an duft'ger Zweige Saum herrlich ein Baum."
(Er hält inne.)

SACHS: Ihr schlosset nicht im gleichen Ton:
das macht den Meistern Pein;
doch nimmt Hans Sachs die Lehr' davon im Lenz wohl müss' es so sein.—
Nun stellt mir einen Abgesang.

WALTHER: Was soll nun der?

SACHS: Ob euch gelang ein rechtes Paar zu finden, das zeigt sich jetzt an den Kinden.
Den Stollen ähnlich, doch nicht gleich, an eig'nen Raim' und Tönen reich;
dass man es recht schlank und selbstig find', das freut die Aeltern an dem Kind:
und euren Stollen giebt's den Schluss, dass nichts davon abfallen muss.

WALTHER: (fortfahrend). "Sei euch vertraut, welch' hehres Wunder mir gescheh'n:
an meiner Seite stand ein Weib,
So schön und hold ich nie gesh'n;
gleich einer Braut umfasste sie sanft meinen Leib;
mit Augen winkend,
die Hand wies blinkend, was ich verlangend begehrt, die Frucht so hold und werth vom Lebensbaum."

SACHS: (seine Rührung verbergend). Das nenn' ich mir einen Abgesang:
seht, wie der ganze Bar gelang!
nur mit der Melodei
seid ihr ein wenig frei;
doch sag' ich nicht, dass es ein Fehler sei;
nur ist's nicht leicht zu behalten, und das ärgert uns're Alten!
Jetzt richtet mir noch einen zweiten Bar, damit man mark', welch' der erste war.
Auch weiss ich noch nicht, so gut ihr's gereimt, was ihr gedichtet, was ihr geträumt.

WALTHER: (wie vorher). "Abendlich glühend in himmlischer Pract verschied der Tag
wie dort ich lag;
aus ihren Augen Wonne zu saugen, Verlangen einz'ger Macht in mir nur wacht'— Nächtlich undämmert der Blick sich mir bricht;
wie weit so nah beschienen da

WALTER: (continuing). "Over the glorious garden, behold!
With leafy crown
A tree looked down,
Majestic bending,
And extending
Its weight of fruit untold,
Like burnished gold."
(He pauses.)

SACHS: You close not in the starting key:
The Masters hate this thing;
Hans Sachs, though, can with you agree;
It must be so in the Spring.—
Now proceed to an After song.

WALTER: What is that for?

SACHS: If here indeed
A pair you've coupled truly
The offspring shows us duly.
It is like the Stanzas, but yet new,
With fitting rhymes and music too;
If fair and shapely the results
The sire of such a child exults:
And to your Stanzas it is the close,
That nothing lack or fall from those.

WALTER: (in continuation). "Let me confide
What lovely miracle ensued:
A maiden stood before my face,
So sweet and fair I never had viewed;
Like to a bride
She took me to her embrace;
With bright eyes glowing,
Her hand was showing.
What stirred my longing profound;
The wondrous fruit that crowned
The tree of life."

SACHS: (concealing his emotion). That is an After-song, I allow!
See the whole verse is perfect now!
But in the melody
You were a little free;
I do not say that that displeases me:
To catch it right, though, is perplexing.
A thing to our Masters vexing—
A second verse will you please dictate,
To set the first in a clearer light?
I cannot yet tell—your art's so supreme—
How much was poetry, how much dream.

WALTER: (as before). "Evening was tinting the glorious skies:
Departed day
As there I lay;
With but one yearning
I was burning.
To drink the bliss that lies
In her sweet eyes.
Dusk from my vision all things did erase;
Afar, yet near.
Then did appear
Two stars down-sparkling zwei lichte Sterne

aus der Ferne
durch schlanker Zweige Licht
hehr mein Gesicht.—
Lieblich ein Quell
aus stiller Höhe dort mir rauscht;
jetzt schwellt er an sein hold Getön' so süss und stark ich's nie erlauscht:
leuchtend und hell
wie strahlten die Sterne da schön;
zu Tanz und Reigen in Laub und Zweigen der gold'nen sammeln sich mehr, statt Frucht ein Sternenheer im Lorbeerbaum."

SACHS: (sehr gerührt, sanft). Freund, eu'r Traumbild wies euch wahr gelungen ist auch der zweite Bar.
Wolltet ihr noch einen dritten dichten, des Traumes Deutung würd' er berichten.

WALTHER: Wie fänd ich die? Genug der Wort'!

SACHS: (aufstehend). Dann Wort und That am rechten Ort!—
Drum bitt ich, merkt mir gut die Weise;
gar lieblich drin sich's dichten lässt;
und singt ihr sie in weit'rem Kreise, dann haltet mir auch das Traumbild fest.

WALTHER: Was habt ihr vor?

SACHS: Eu'r treu'r Knecht fand sich mit Sack und Tasch' zurecht; die Kleider, drin am Hochzeitsfest daheim bei euch ihr wolltet prangen, die liess er her zu mir gelangen;—
ein Täubchen zeight' ihm wohl das Nest darin sein Junker träumt':
darum folgt mir jetzt in's Kämmerlein!
Mit Kleidern, wohlgesäumt, sollen Beide wir gezieret sein.
wann's Stattliches zu wagen gilt:— drum kommt, seid ihr gleich mir gewillt!
(Er öffnet Walther die Thür und geht mit ihm hinein.)

BECKMESSER: (Beckmesser lugt zum Laden herein; da er die Werkstatt leer findet, tritt er näher. Er ist reich aufgeputzt, aber in sehr leidenden Zustande. Er hinkt, streichelt und reckt sich; zuckt wieder zusammen; er sucht einen Schemel, setzt sich; springt aber sogleich wieder auf, und streichelt sich die Glieder von Neuem. Verzweiflungsvoll sinnend geht er dann umher. Dann bleibt er stehen, lugt durch das Fenster nach dem Hause hinüber; macht Gebärden der Wuth: schlägt sich wieder vor den Kopf.—Endlich fällt sein Blick auf das von Sachs zuvor beschriebene Papier auf dem Werktische: er nimmt es neugierig auf, überfliegt es mit immer grösserer Aufregung und bricht endlich wüthend aus:) Ein Werbelied! von Sachs?—ist's wahr.
Ah!—Nun wird mir Alles klar!
(Da er die Kammerthüre gehen hört, fährt er zusammen, und versteckt das Blatt eilig in seiner Tasche.)

SACHS: (im Festgewande, tritt ein und hält an). Sieh da! Herr Schreiber? Auch am Morgen?
Euch machen die Schuh doch nicht mehr Sorgen?
Lasst sehen! mich dünkt, sie sitzen gut?

BECKMESSER: Den Teufel! So dünn war ich noch nie beschuht:
fühl' durch die Sohle den Kleinsten Kies!

SACHS: Mein Merkersprüchlein wirkte dies:
trieb sie mit Merkerzeichen so weich.

BECKMESSER: Schon gut der Witz'! Und genug der Streicht'!
Glaubt mir, Freund Sachs, jetzt kenn ich euch, der Spass von dieser Nacht, der wird euch noch gedacht:
dass ich euch nur nicht im Wege sei, schuft ihr gar Aufruhr und Meuterei!

SACHS: 's war Polteralend, lasst euch bedeuten:
eure Hochzeit spuckte unter den Leuten;
je toller es da hergeh', je besser bekommt's der Eh'.

BECKMESSER: (ausbrechend). O Schuster, voll von Ränken und pöbelhaften Schwänken, du warst mein Feind von je:
nun hör' ob hell ich seh', Die ich mir auserkoren, die ganz für mich geboren, zu aller Wittwer Schmach, der Jungfer stellst du nach.
Dass sich Herr Sachs erwerbe des Goldschmied's reiches Erbe, im Meister-Rath zur Hand
auf Klauseln er bestand, ein Mägdlein zu bethören, das nur auf ihn sollt' hören,
und And'ren abgewandt,
zu ihm allein sich fand.
Darum! darum—
wär' ich so dumm:—
mit Schreien und mit Klopfen wollt er mein Lied zustopfen, dass nicht dem Kind werd' kund wie auch ein And'rer bestund!
Ja ja!—Ha Ha!
Hab' ich dich da?
Aus seiner Schuster-Stuben hetzt endlich er den Buben mit Knüppeln auf mich her, dass meiner los er wär'!
Au au! Au au!

In the darkling.
Between the branches' space,
Upon my face.
There on the height
A babbling stream the silence stirred;
Its murmuring tones now louder swelled,
So sweet and strong I never heard;
Sparkling and bright Distinctly the stars I beheld;
In twinkling dances
Among the branches
A golden host did collect:
Not fruit but stars bedecked
The tree of Fame."—

SACHS: (deeply moved, softly). Friend, your dream was well conceived:
The second verse you have achieved.
Now might you fashion a third verse meetly,
To show the vision's meaning completely.

WALTER: How can I now? Enough of rhyme!

SACHS: (rising). Then we will rhyme some fitter time!—
Lose not the tune, though, I entreat it;
'Tis fit and fair for poetry:
You shall before the world repeat it.
Hold fast the dream you've told to me.

WALTER: What's your intent?

SACHS: Your servant true,
Bearing your packs, has sought for you.
The garments in the which I guessed
You meant at home to have been married,
Unto my house in doubt he carried.
Some bird, sure, must have shown the nest
Wherein his master lay
Then follow to the chamber here!
In costume rich and gay
It is fitting that we both appear.
When striving for a victory
So come, if you agree with me.
(He opens the door for Walter and goes in with him.)

BECKMESSER: (peeps into the shop: finding it empty he comes in. He is richly dressed, but in a very deplorable state. He limps, rubs and stretches himself: then contorts himself: he tries to sit down on a stool, but jumps quickly up and again rubs his bruised limbs. In despair he wanders up and down. Then pausing, he looks through the window at the house opposite: makes gestures of wrath: strikes his hand on his forehead.—At last his eyes fall on the paper which Sachs has written and left on the workbench; he takes it up inquisitively, runs his eye over it in great agitation and finally bursts out wrathfully.) A Trial-song! by Sachs? is it so?
Ha!—Now then everything I know!
(Hearing the chamber door open he starts and conceals the paper hurriedly in his pocket.)

SACHS: (in holiday dress, enters and stops short) You sir? So early?
Why this visit?
No, fault of the shoes I sent you, is it?
Let's feel! They fit you well, I'm sure?

BECKMESSER: Confound you! The shoes were never so thin before:
Through them I feel the smallest stone.

SACHS: My Marker's motto there is shown:
My Marker's hammer beat it so flat.

BECKMESSER: A merry jest!
Enough of that!
Friend Sachs, I know what you are at.
Have you forgotten quite
What happened last night?
Did you not raise all that uproar, pray,
Merely to get me out of your way?

SACHS: It was Folly-evening; be not alarmed;
And your wedding made the people excited.
The madder that evening's glee,
The more blessed the marriage will be.

BECKMESSER: (bursting out in a rage). Oh cobbler full of cunning,
With vulgar tricks over-running!
You always were my foe:
Your base designs I'll show.
You hoary headed reprobate!
Attempting to appropriate
The maiden who alone
Is destined for my own!
Allured by Pogner's capital
Hans Sachs would like to snap it all.
So, when the Guild discussed,
He cavilled and he fussed
To give the maid selection, Assured of her affection,
That others she'd refuse
And him alone would choose.
And hence! and hence!—
Was I so dense?—
He tried with hammer clamorous
To drown my ditty amorous.
And from the maid to hide
That others wooed beside!
So, so!—Ho, ho!
Your game I know!
That you, to spoil my labor, should Have roused up all the neighborhood,
With cudgel and with sticks,
To put me in a fix!

Wohl grün und blau, zum Spott der allerliebsten Frau, zerschlagen und zerprügelt,
dass kein Schneider mich aufbügelt!
Gar auf mein Leben
war's angegeben!
Doch kam ich noch so davon, dass ich die That euch lohn'!
zieht heut' nur aus zum Singen, merkt auf, wie's mag gelingen;
bin ich gezwackt
auch und zerhackt,
euch bring' ich doch sicher aus dem Takt!

SACHS: Gut' Freund ihr seid in argem Wahn!
Glaubt was ihr wollt, dass ich's gethan, gebt eure Eifersucht nur hin!
zu werben kommt mit nicht in Sinn.

BECKMESSER: Lug und Trug! Ich weis es besser.

SACHS: Was fällt euch nur ein, Meister Beckmesser?
Was ich sonst im Sinn, geht euch nichts an:
doch glaubt, ob der Werbung seid ihr im Wahn.

BECKMESSER: Ihr säng't heut' nicht?

SACHS: Nicht zur Wette.

BECKMESSER: Kein Werbelied?

SACHS: Gewisslich, nein!

BECKMESSER: Wenn ich aber drob ein Zeugniss hätte?

SACHS: (blickt auf den Werktisch). Das Gedicht? Hier liess ich's:—stecket ihr's ein?

BECKMESSER: (zieht das Blatt herror). Ist das eure Hand?

SACHS: Ja,—war es das?

BECKMESSER: Ganz frisch noch die Schrift?

SACHS: Und die Tinte noch nass?

BECKMESSER: 's wär wohl gar ein biblisches Lied?

SACHS: Der fehlte wohl, wer darauf rieth.

BECKMESSER: Nun denn?

SACHS: Wie doch?

BECKMESSER: Ihr fragt?

SACHS: Was noch?

BECKMESSER: Dass ihr mit aller Biederkeit der ärgste aller Spitzbuben seid!

SACHS: Mag sein! Doch hab' ich doch noch nie entwandt, was ich auf fremden Tischen fand:—
und dass man von euch auch nicht übles denkt, behaltet das Blatt, es sei euch geschenkt.

Boohoo! Boohoo!
I'm black and blue.
Disgraced before the damsel, too.
They did so bruise and rend me,
No tailor ever can mend me!
With aches they filled me
And nearly killed me;
But you see I got away,
And your ill turn I'll pay.
Attend the singing-trial,
And see if you outvie all!
If I'm attacked
And badly thwacked,
I'll soon expose your wicked art!

SACHS: Good friend, your anger makes you mad!
Think all you will of me that's bad:
But calm this jealous ire;
For courtship I have no desire.

BECKMESSER: Pack of lies! I know you're double!

SACHS: Why, Master Town-clerk, what's your trouble?
My intended plans concern not you:
But, you're deceived if you think I'd woo.

BECKMESSER: You mean to sing?

SACHS: Not in competing.

BECKMESSER: No Wooing-song?

SACHS: Dismiss the fear!

BECKMESSER: But I've a proof there's no defeating.

SACHS: (looking at the work-bench). Did you take the poem?—I left it here.

BECKMESSER: (producing the paper). Is this not your hand?

SACHS: Well—and what then?

BECKMESSER: The writing is fresh?

SACHS: Still wet from the pen.

BECKMESSER: Perhaps then it's a biblical song?

SACHS: To call it so indeed were wrong.

BECKMESSER: Well then?

SACHS: What more?

BECKMESSER: You ask?

SACHS: For sure!

BECKMESSER: Why, that in all sincerity,
A most consummate rogue you must be!

SACHS: May be! but I was never known
To pocket papers not my own:—
But that you should not be called a thief,
You're welcome to it—I give you the leaf.

BECKMESSER: (in freudigem Schreck aufspringend). Herr Gott! . . . Ein Gedicht! . . . Ein Gedicht von Sachs? . . .
Doch halt', dass kein neuer Schad' mir erwachs'!
Ihr habt's wohl schon recht gut memorirt?

SACHS: Seid meinethalben doch nur unbeirrt!

BECKMESSER: Ihr lasst mir das Blatt?

SACHS: Damit ihr kein Dieb.

BECKMESSER: Und mach' ich Gebrauch?

SACHS: Wie's euch belieb'.

BECKMESSER: Doch, sing' ich das Lied?

SACHS: Wenn's nicht zu schwer.

BECKMESSER: Und wenn ich gefiel'?

SACHS: Das wunderte mich sehr!

BECKMESSER: (ganz zutraulich). Da seid ihr nun wieder zu bescheiden; ein Lied von Sachs, das will was bedeuten!
Vergessen und begraben sie Zwist, Hader und Streit, und was uns je entzweit.
(Er blickt seitwärts in das Blatt: plötzlich runzelt sich seine Stirn).
Und doch! Wenn's nur eine Falle wär!—
Noch gestern war't ihr mein Feind:
wie käm's, dass nach so grosser Beschwer'
ihr's freundlich heut' mit mir meint?

SACHS: Ich machte euch Schuh' in später Nacht:
hat man so je einen Feind bedacht?

BECKMESSER: Ja, ja! recht gut!—
doch eines schwört:
wo und wie ihr das Lied auch hört, dass nie ihr euch beikommen lass't,
zu sagen, es sei von euch verfasst.

SACHS: Das schwör' ich und gelob' euch hier, nie mich zu rühmen, das Lied sei von mir.

BECKMESSER: (sehr glücklich). Was will ich mehr, ich bin geborgen!
Jetzt hat sich Beckmesser nicht mehr zu sorgen!
(Er reibt sich froh die Hände.)

SACHS: Doch, Freund, ich führ's euch zu Gemüthe, und rathe euch in aller Güte:
studirt mir recht das Lied!
sein Vortrag ist nicht leicht:
ob euch die Weise gerieth', und ihr den Ton erreicht!

BECKMESSER: (springing up in a joyous surprise). You do? What, a song?—A song by Sachs!
Yet stay!—Can he plan more evil attacks?—
I guess that you learned it by heart?

SACHS: No, let your mistrust of me depart!

BECKMESSER: You give me the song?

SACHS: To ease your conscience.

BECKMESSER: To use as my own!

SACHS: That's just as you please.

BECKMESSER: And may it be sung?

SACHS: Yes, if you can read.

BECKMESSER: And should I get praise?

SACHS: That would be strange indeed!

BECKMESSER: (affectionately). Ah! now in truth your talk is more pleasant.
A song by Sachs: that is a fine present!
If it's really for me meant
Our recent disagreement
Is over; quarrel and strife
We will dismiss for life.
(He peers sideways at the paper; suddenly he frowns.)
And yet! If this were some villainy!—
But yesterday you were my foe:
How, after your behavior to me
Such friendship can you show?—

SACHS: I sat up late to make your shoes:
It is not thus our foes we use.

BECKMESSER: Aye, aye! that's true!—But swear one thing;
That when you hear this, no matter where,
To nobody shall be disclosed
The fact that it was by you composed.

SACHS: I swear it, and I guarantee
That none shall know the song's by me.

BECKMESSER: (very joyous). What more remains? I'm joyful-hearted!
Beckmesser's troubles have departed!
(He rubs his hands with elation.)

SACHS: Stay, friend! Do not think that I despise you,
But let me earnestly advise you
To study well this song.
The labor is not light:
Don't get the melody wrong,
And mind your Tones are right!

BECKMESSER: Freund Sachs, ihr seid ein guter Poet;
doch was Ton und Weise betrifft, gesteht, da thut's mir Keiner vor!
Drum spitzt nur fein das Ohr, und: "Beckmesser, Keiner besser!"
Darauf macht euch gefasst, wenn ihr ruhig mich singen lasst.—
Doch nun memoriren, schnell nach Haus!
Ohne Zeit verlieren
richt' ich das aus.—
Ade! ich muss fort!
An and'rem Ort
dank' ich euch inniglich, weil ihr so minniglich;
für euch nun stimme ich,
kauf' eure Werke gleich,
mache zum Merker euch:
doch fein mit Kreide weich,
nicht mit dem Hammerstreich!
Merker! Merker! Merker Hans Sachs!
dass Nürnberg schusterlich blüh' und wachs'!
(Er hinkt, pollert und taumelt wie besessen fort.)

SACHS: So ganz boshaft doch keinen ich fand, er hält's auf die Länge nicht aus:
vergeudet mancher oft viel Verstand, doch hält er auch damit Haus:
die schwache Stunde kommt für Jeden;
da wird er dumm und lässt mit sich reden.—
Dass hier Herr Beckmesser ward zum Dieb, ist mir für meinen Plan sehr lieb.—
(Er sicht durch das Fenster Eva kommen.) Sieh, Evchen! Dacht' ich doch wo sie blieb'!
(Eva, reich geschmückt und in glänzender weisser Kleidung, tritt zum Laden herein.)

SACHS: Grüss Gott! mein Evchen!
Ei, wie herrlich,
wie stolz du's heute meinst!
Du machst wohl Jung und Alt begehrlich, wenn du so schön erscheinst.

EVA: Meister! 's ist nicht so gefährlich, und ist's dem Schneider geglückt, wer sieht dann an wo's mir beschwerlich, wo still der Schuh mich drückt?

SACHS: Der böse Schuh! 's war deine Laun', dass du ihn gestern nicht probirt.

EVA: Merk' wohl, ich hatt' zu viel Vertrau'n:
im Meister hab' ich mich geirrt.

SACHS: Ei, 's thut mir leid! Zeig' her, mein Kind, dass ich dir helfe, gleich geschwind.

BECKMESSER: Friend Sachs, you are a poet of wit!
But as for Tones and Modes, admit There's none can touch me here!
So open wide your ear
To "Beckmesser,
Your professor":
And all your doubts will cease
If you'll let me sing in peace.—
But now to run through it.
Quick, away!
If in time I would do it
I must not stay.
Farewell! I'm away!
Some other day,
When in this latitude,
I'll pay my gratitude
For your kind attitude;
Buy all your works, you know;
You shall as Marker show,— Chalk you must mark with, though,
Not with the hammer's blow!
Marker! Marker! Marker Hans Sachs!
May he and Nuremberg bloom and wax!
(As if intoxicated he limps, stumbling and blundering away.)

SACHS: I never met with so evil a man:
He'll come to grief one of these days.
Their reason most men squander who can,
Yet keep some little relays:
But some weak moments discover:
Then they are fools and we talk them over.—
That Master Beckmesser wasn't square, Finely will further my affair.—
(Through his window he see Eva approaching).
Ha! Eva! Here she is, I declare!
(Eva, richly decked out and in a gleaming white dress, enters the shop.)

SACHS: My child, good morning!
Ah, how pretty
And smart you are today!
Both old and young—why, all the city
You'll win in such array.

EVA: Master, surely now you flatter!
And if my dress is all right,
Will no one notice what's the matter?
My shoe is much too tight.

SACHS: The naughty shoe! But it was your haste;
You would not try it on, you see.

EVA: Not so; too great a trust I placed:
The Master's disappointed me.

SACHS: I'm really grieved! Come here, my pet,
And I will help you even yet.

EVA: Sobald ich stehe, will es geh'n:
doch will ich geh'n, zwingt's mich zu steh'n.

SACHS: Hier auf den Schemel streck' den Fuss:
der üblen Noth ich wehren muss.
(Sie streckt den Fuss auf den Schemel beim Werktisch.) Was ist's mit dem?

EVA: Ihr seht, zu weit!

SACHS: Kind, das ist pure Eitelkeit:
der Schuh ist knapp.

EVA: Das sag' ich ja:
Drum drückt er mir die Zehen da.

SACHS: Hier links?

EVA: Nein, rechts.

SACHS: Wohl mehr am Spann?

EVA: Mehr hier am Hacken.

SACHS: Kommt der auch dran?

EVA: Ach, Meister! Wüsstet ihr besser als ich, wo der Schuh mich drückt?

SACHS: Ei 's wundert mich
dass er zu weit, und doch drückt überall?
(Walther, in glänzender Rittertracht, tritt unter die Thüre der Kammer, und bleibt beim Anblick Eva's wie festgebannt stehen. Eva stösst einen leisen Schrei aus und bleibt ebenfalls unverwandt in ihrer Stellung mit dem Fusse auf dem Schemel. Sachs, der vor ihr sich gebückt hat, ist mit dem Rücken der Thüre zugekehrt.) Aha! hier sitzt's! Nun begreif' ich den Fall!
Kind! du hast recht: 's stak in der Nath:—
Nun warte, dem Übel schaff' ich Rath.
Bleib' nur so stehen; ich nehm' dir den Schuh eine Weil' auf den Leisten: dann lässt er dir Ruh'.
(Er hat ihr sanft den Schuh vom Fusse gezogen; während sie in ihrer Stellung verbleibt, macht er sich mit dem Schuh zu schaffen und thut, als breachtete er nichts andres.) Säng' mir nur wenigstens Einer dazu!
Hörte heut' gar ein schönes Lied:—
wem dazu ein dritter Vers gerieth'?

WALTHER: (immer Eva gegenüber in der vorigen Stellung).
"Weilten die Sterne im lieblichen Tanz?
So licht und klar im Lockenhaar, vor allen Frauen
hehr zu schauen, lag ihr mit zartem Glanz ein Sternenkranz.—
Wunder ob Wunder nun bieten sich dar:
Zwiefachen Tag
ich grüssen mag;
denn gleich zwei'n Sonnen

EVA: If I would stand it will away;
Would I be gone it makes me stay.

SACHS: Upon the stool here place your foot.—
A shocking fault? I'll look into it.
(She puts her foot up on a stool by the work-bench.)
What is amiss?

EVA: Too wide, you see.

SACHS: Child, that is purely vanity;
The shoe is tight.

EVA: I told you so,
And that is why it hurts my toe.

SACHS: Here—left?

EVA: No, right.

SACHS: What! on the sole?

EVA: Here, at the ankle.

SACHS: Well! that's droll!

EVA: Nay, Master! do you know better than I
Where the shoe pinches?

SACHS: I wonder why,
If it's too wide, it pinches you so?
(Walter, in glittering knightly apparel appears at the chamber door, and stands there spellbound at the sight of Eva. She utters a slight cry, but remains in her position with one foot on the stool. Sachs is kneeling before her with his back towards the door.)
Aha! it is here! Now the reason I know!
Child, you are right: it is in the sole!
One moment, and I'll make it whole.
Stand so awhile. I'll fasten your shoe
On the last a moment, then it will do.
(He has gently drawn off her shoe; while she remains in the same position he pretends to busy himself with it and to be oblivious of all else.)
(as he works). Will some one give us a song to amuse?
I heard today a lovely one:
Let's see if the third verse can be done!

WALTER: (still in the same position opposite Eva). "Lingered the stars in their dance of delight?
They rested there Upon her hair,
That wondrous maiden
So beauty-laden,
And formed a circlet bright
All star-bedecked.
Wonder on wonder now waked my surprise:
The light of day
Had twofold ray:
For two transcendent Suns resplendent

reinster Wonnen, der hehrsten Augen Paar nahm ich nun wahr.—
Huldreiches Bild,
dem ich zu nahen mich erkühnt:
den Kranz, vor zweier Sonne Strahl zugleich verblichen und ergrünt, minnig und mild,
sie flocht ihn um's Haupt dem Gemahl.
Dort Huld-geboren, nun Ruhm-erkoren, giesst paradiesische Lust sie in des Dichters Brust—im Liebestraum"—

SACHS: (Sachs hat, immer mit seiner Arbeit beschäftigt, den Schuh zurückgebracht, und ist jetzt während der Schlussverse von Walther's Gesang darüber her, ihn Eva wieder anzuziehen.) Lausch', Kind! das ist ein Meisterlied:
derlei hörst du jetzt bei mir singen.
Nun schau', ob dabei mein Schuh gerieth?
Mein' endlich doch
es thät' mir gelingen?
Versuch's! tritt auf!—Sag', drückt er dich noch?
(Eva, die wie bezaubert bewegungslos gestanden, gesehen und gehört hat, bricht jetzt in heftiges Weinen aus, sinkt Sachs an die Brust und drückt ihn schluchzend an sich.—Walthier ist zu ihnen getreten und drückt Sachs begeistert die Hand.—Sachs thut sich endlich Gewalt an, reisst sich wie unmuthig los, und lässt dadurch Eva unwillkürlich an Walther's Schulter sich anlehnen.)

EVA: O Sachs! Mein Freund! Du theurer Mann!
Wie ich dir Edlem lohnen kann!
Was ohne deine Liebe, was wär' ich ohne dich
ob je auch Kind ich bliebe, erwecktest du nicht mich?
Durch dich gewann ich was man preist, durch dich ersann ich was ein Geist!
Durch dich erwacht, durch dich nur dacht'
ich edel, frei und kühn:
du liessest mich erblüh'n!—
O lieber Meister! schilt mich nur!
Ich war doch auf der rechten Spur:
denn, hatte ich die Wahl,
nur dich erwählt' ich mir:
du wärest mein Gemahl, den Preis nur reicht' ich dir!—
Doch nun hat's mich gewählt zu nie gekannter Qual:
und werd' ich heut vermählt,
so wär's ohn' alle Wahl!
Das war ein Müssen, war ein Zwang!
Dir selbst, mein Meister, wurde bang.

Within her heavenly eyes
I saw arise
Image so rare,
Which boldly I approached and viewed!
By all this light the crown above
At once was faded and renewed.
Tender and fair
She wove it round the head of her love,
Thus, grace-directed,
To fame elected,
She poured the joys of the blest
Into the poet's breast.—
In Love's sweet dream."—

SACHS: (busily at work, brings back the shoe during the last verse of Walter's song and fits it on Eva's foot again). Hark, child! that is a Master-Song:
You hear such music where I dwell now.
So try if still my shoe is wrong.
Was I not right?
And fits it well now?
Let's see! stand down!—Is it still tight?
(Eva, who has stood as if enchanted, gazing and listening, bursts into a sudden fit of weeping and sinks on Sachs's breast, sobbing and clinging to him. Walter advances towards them and wrings Sachs's hand in silent ecstacy.—Sachs at last composes himself, tears himself gloomily away and causes Eva to rest involuntarily on Walter's shoulder.)

EVA: O Sachs! best friend and dearest! Say
How can I ever repay my debt?
Bereft of your great kindness
How helpless should I be!
Still wrapped in childish blindness
Had it not been for you.
Through the life's treasure
I control,
Through you I measure
First my soul.
Through you I wake;
My feelings take
A higher, nobler tone:
I bloom through you alone!—
Yes, dearest Master, scold you may!
But I was in the rightful way:
For were my choice but free,
It is you would please my eyes;
My husband you should be,
None else should win the prize.—
But now I am a prey
To never-dreamed-of ill.
And if I'm wed today
It will be against my will!
That were compulsion—nothing but force!
You would, my Master, dread this course.

SACHS: Mein Kind:
von Tristan und Isolde kenn' ich ein traurig Stück:
Hans Sachs war klug, und wollte nichts von Herrn Marke's Glück.—
's war Zeit, dass ich den Rechten erkannt:
wär' sonst am End' doch hineingerannt!—
Aha! da streicht schon die Lene um's Haus!
Nur herein!—He, David! Kommst nicht heraus?
(Magdalene, in festlichen Staate, tritt durch die Ladenthür herein; aus der Kammer kommt zugleich David, ebenfalls im Festkleid, mit Blumen und Bändern sehr reich und zierlich ausgeputzt.) Die Zeugen sind da, Gevatter zur Hand;
jetzt schnell zur Taufe; nehmt euren Stand!
(Alle blicken ihn verwundert an.) Ein Kind ward hier geboren; jetzt sei ihm ein Nam' erkoren!
So ist's nach Meister-Weis' und Art, wenn eine Meisterweise geschaffen ward,
dass die einen guten Namen trag',
dran Jeder sie erkennen mag.— Vernehmt, respectable Gesellschaft, was euch hierher zur Stell' schafft!—
Eine Meisterweise ist gelungen, von Junker Walther gedichiet und gesungen;
der jungen Weise lebender Vater lud mich und die Pognerin zu Gevatter:
weil wir die Weise wohl vernommen, sind wir zur Taufe hierher gekommen.
Auch dass wir zur Handlung Zeugen haben, ruf' ich Jungfer Lene, und meinen Knaben:
doch da's zum Zeugen kein Lehrbube thut, und heut' auch den Spruch er gesungen gut,
so mach' ich den Burschen gleich zum Gesell';
knie' nieder, David, und nimm diese Schell'!
(David is niedergekniet. Sachs gibt ihm eine starke Ohrfeige.) Steh' auf, Gesell! und denk' an den Streich; du merkst dir dabei die Taufe zu gleich!—
Fehlst sonst noch 'was, uns Keiner drum schilt:
wer weiss, ob's nicht gar eine Nothtaufe gilt, Dass die Weise Kraft behalte zum Leben, will ich nur gleich den Namen ihr geben:—
"die selige Morgentraumdeut-Weise" sei sie genannt zu des Meisters Preise.—

SACHS: My child:
Sir Tristan I have read of—Isolde's story dark:
Hans Sachs had prudent dread of
The fate of poor king Mark.—
It was time the right man did appear,
Or I should have been caught, I fear!—
Aha! There's Magdalena's found us out.
Come in! Ho David! What's he about?
(Magdalena in holiday attire enters from the street and David at the same time comes out of the chamber, also gaily dressed and very splendid with ribbons and flowers.)
The witnesses wait, the sponsors are found:
So now for a christening gather around!
(All look at him with surprise.)
A child here was created;
Let its name be stated by you.
Such is the Masters' constant use,
When they produce a Master-song.
They give it a fitly chosen name
That men may know it by the same.
So let me tell all you here
What is it we have to do here!
A Master-song has been completed,
By young Sir Walter made and repeated;
The newborn poem's father, delighted,
For sponsors has Eva and me invited:
As to the song we have been list'ning
We now come here to its christening.
To see that we act with solemn fitness
Shall David and Lena be called to witness:
But as no Prentice a witness can be,
And as he's repeated his task to me,
A Journeyman I will make him here.
Kneel, David, and take this box on the ear!
(David kneels and Sachs gives him a smart box on the ear.)
Arise, my man: remember that blow:
I will mark this baptism for you, you know,
Lacks aught beside, what blame indeed?
Who knows if private baptism we need?
That the melody lack not anything vital
I now proceed to give it its title.
"The glorious morning-dream's true story."—
So be it named, to the Master's glory,
And may it increase in size and strength.—
And bid the young god-mother at length.

Nun wachse sie gross, ohn' Schad' und Bruch:
die jüngste Gevatterin spricht des Spruch.

EVA: Selig, wie die Sonne meines Glückes lacht, Morgen voller Wonne,
selig mir erwacht!
Traum der höchsten Huld himmlisch Morgenblüh'n!
Deutung euch zu schulde selig süss Bemüh'n!
Einer Weise mild und hehr, sollt' es hold gelingen,
meines Herzens süss Beschwer'
deutend zu bezwingen.
Ob es nur ein Morgentraum?
Selig deut' ich mir es kaum.
Doch die Weise,
was sie leise
mir vertraut
im stillen Raum,
hell und laut,
in der Meister vollem Kreis,
deute sie den höchsten Preis!

WALTHER: Deine Liebe, rein und hehr, liess es mir gelingen,
meines Herzens süss Beschwer
deutend zu bezwingen.
Ob es noch der Morgentraum?
Selig deut' ich mir es kaum.
Doch die Weise,
was sie leise
dir vertraut
im stillen Raum,
hell und laut,
in der Meister vollem Kreis,
werbe sie um höchsten Preis!

SACHS: Vor dem Kinde lieblich hehr, mocht' ich gern wohl singen;
doch des Herzens süss Beschwer galt es zu bezwingen.
's war ein schöner Abendtraum:
dran zu deuten wag' ich kaum.
Diese Weise,
was sie leise
mir vertraut
im stillen Raum,
sagt mir laut:
auch der Jugend ew'ges Reis grünt nur durch des Dichters Preis.

DAVID: Wach' oder träum' ich schon so früh?
Das zu erklären macht mir Müh'.
's ist wohl nur ein Morgentraum;
was ich seh', begreif' ich kaum.
Ward zur Stelle
gleich Geselle?
Lene Braut?
Im Kirchenraum
wir getraut?
's geht der Kopf mir, wie im Kreis, dass ich bald gar Meister heiss'!

MAGDELENE: Wach' oder träum' ich schon so früh?
Das zu erklären macht mir Müh'!
's ist wohl nur ein Morgentraum?
Was ich seh', begreif' ich kaum!
Er zur Stelle
gleich Geselle?
Ich die Braut?

EVA: Dazzling as the dawn
That smiles upon my glee, Rapture-laden morn
To bliss awakens me.
Dream of balmy beauty,
Brilliant morning-glow!
Hard but sweet's the duty
Your intent to know.
That divine and tender strain
With its tones of gladness
Has revealed my heart's sweet pain
And subdued its sadness.
Is it but a morning-dream?
Scarcely real it seems.
What the ditty,
Soft and pretty,
Told of me.
A quiet theme,
Loud and free
In the Master's conclave wise
Shall achieve the highest prize.

WALTER: It was your love, the highest gain—
Allured me by its gladness.
To reveal my heart's sweet pain
And subdue its sadness.
Is it still my morning-dream?
Scarcely real it seems
What the ditty,
Soft and pretty,
Told of thee,
A quiet theme,
Loud and free
In the Master's conclave wise
Shall achieve the highest prize.

SACHS: With the maiden I would openly Sing for very gladness;
But my heart I must restrain,
Quell my passion's madness.
It was a tender evening-dream:
Undiscovered let it beam.
What the ditty,
Soft and pretty,
Told of me
In quiet theme,
Here I see:
Youth and love that never dies
Flourish through the Poets prize.

DAVID: Am I awake or dreaming still?
I scarcely have skill to explain it.
Sure it is but a morning-dream!
All these things seen unreal.
Can it be, man,
You're a freeman?
And that she—
Oh joy supreme!—
My spouse shall be?
Round and round my head-piece flies
That a Master I now rise!

MAGDALENA: Am I awake or dreaming still Scarce to explain it have I skill.
Sure it is but a morning-dream!
All these things seem unreal.
Can it be, man,
You're a freeman?
And that we—

Im Kirchenraum
wir getraut?
Ja, wahrhaftig! 's geht: wer weiss?
Bald ich wohl Frau Meist'rin heiss!
(Das Orchester geht sehr leise in cinc marschmässige, heitere Weise über.—Sachs ordnet den Aufbruch an.)

SACHS: Jetzt All' am Fleck! Den Vater grüss'!
Auf, nach der Wies' schnell auf die Füss!
(Eva trennt sich vom Sachs und Walther und verlässt mit Magdalene die Werkstatt.)
Nun, Junker! Kommt! Habt frohen Muth!—
David, Gesell'! Schliess' den Laden gut!
(Als Sachs und Walther ebenfalls auf die Strasse gehen, und David sich über das Schliessen der Ladenthüre hermacht, wird im Proscenium ein Vorhang von beiden Seiten zusammengezogen, so dass er die Scene gänzlich schliesst.—Als die Musik allmählich zu grösserer Stärke angewachsen ist, wird der Vorhang nach der Höhe zu aufgezogen. Die Bühne is verwandelt.)
(Die Scene stellt einen freien Wiesenplan dar, im ferneren Hintergrunde die Stadt Nürnberg. Die Pegnitz schlängelt sich durch den Plan: der schmale Fluss ist an den nächsten Punkten praktikabel gehalten. Buntbeflaggte Kähne setzen unablässig die ankommenden, festlich geschmückten Bürger der Zünfte, mit Frauen und Kindern, an das Ufer der Festwiese über. Eine erhöhte Bühne mit Bänken darauf ist rechts zur Seite aufgeschlagen; bereits ist sie mit den Fahnen der angekommenen Zünfte ausgeschmückt: im Verlaufe stecken die Fahnenträger der noch ankommenden Zünfte ihre Fahnen ebenfalls um die Sängerbühne auf, so dass diese schliesslich nach drei Seiten hin ganz davon eingefasst ist.—Zelte mit Getränken und Erfrischungen aller Art begrenzen im Uebrigen die Seiten des vorderen Hauptraumes.
Vor den Zelten geht es bereits lustig her; Bürger mit Frauen und Kindern sitzen und lagern daselbst.—Die Lehrbuben der Meistersinger, festlich gekleidet, mit Blumen und Bändern reich und anmuthig geschmückt, üben mit schlanken Stäben, die ebenfalls mit Blumen und Bändern geziert sind, in lustiger Weise das Amt von Herolden und Marschällen aus. Sie empfangen die am Ufer Aussteigenden, ordnen die Züge der Zünfte, und geleiten diese nach der Singerbühne, von wo aus, nachdem der Bannerträger die Fahne aufgepflanzt, die Zunftbürger und Gesellen nach Belie-

Oh joy supreme!—
Shall be wedded?
Yes, what honor lies near me!
Soon I shall as Madam rise!
(The orchestra goes into a broad march-like theme.—Sachs makes the group break up.)

SACHS: Now let's be off!—Your father stays!
Quick, to the fields all go your ways!
(Eva tears herself away from Sachs and Walter and leaves the house with Magdalena.)
So come, sir knight! take heart of grace!—
David, my man, lock up the place!—
(As Sachs and Walter also go into the street and David is left shutting up the shop, curtains descend from each side of the proscenium so as to conceal the stage.—When the music has gradually swelled to the loudest pitch the curtains are drawn up again and the scene is changed.)
(The stage now represents an open meadow; in the distance at back the town of Nuremberg. The Pegnitz winds across the plain; the narrow river is practicable in the foreground. Boats gaily decorated with flags continually discharge fresh parties of Burghers of the different Guilds with their wives and families, who land on the banks. A raised stand with benches on it is erected R. already adorned with flags of those as yet arrived; as the scene opens, the standard-bearers of freshly arriving Guilds also place their banners against the Singers' stage, so that it is at last quite closed in on three sides by them.—Tents with all kinds of refreshments border the sides of the open space in front.
Before the tents is much merry-making: Burghers and their families sit and group round them.—The Prentices of the Mastersingers, in holiday attire, finely decked out with ribbons and flowers, and bearing slender wands, also ornamented, fulfil frolicsomely the office of heralds and stewards. They receive the new comers on the bank, arrange them in procession and conduct them to the stand, whence, after the standard-bearer has deposited his banner, the Burghers and Journeymen disperse under the tents.
Among the arriving Guilds the following are prominent:)

ben sich unter den Zelten zerstreuen.
Unter den noch anlangenden Zünften werden die folgenden besonders bemerkt.)

DIE SCHUSTER: (indem sie aufziehen). Sankt Crispin, lobet ihn!
War gar ein heilig Mann, zeigt was ein Schuster kann.
Die Armen hatten gute Zeit, macht' Ihnen warme Schuh', und wenn ihm Keiner Leder leiht,
so stahl er sich's dazu.
Der Schuster hat ein weit Gewissen, macht Schuhe selbst mit Hindernissen;
und ist vom Gerber das Fell erst weg,
dann streck'! streck'! streck'!
Leder taugt nur am rechten Fleck.
(Die Stadtpfeifer, Lauten- und Kinder-Instrumentenmacher ziehen, auf ihren, Instrumenten spielend, auf. Ihnen folgen:)

DIE SCHNEIDER: Als Nürenberg belagert war, und Hungersnoth sich fand, wär' Stadt und Volk verdorben gar, war nicht ein Schneider zur Hand, der viel Muth hat und Verstand; hat sich in ein Bockfell eingenäht auf dem Standtwall da spazieren geht, und macht wohl seine Sprünge gar lustig guter Dinge.
Der Feind, der sieht's und zieht von Fleck:
der Teufel hol' die Stadt sich weg,
hat's drin noch so lustige Meck-meck-meck!
Meck! Meck! Meck!
Wer glaubt's, dass ein Schneider im Bocke steck'!

DIE BÄCKER: (ziehen dicht hinter den Schneidern auf, so dass ihr Lied in das der Schneider hineinklingt). Hungersnoth: Hungersnoth!
Das ist ein gräulich Leiden!
Gäb' euch der Bäcker, kein täglich Brod, müsst alle Welt verschneiden, Beck! Beck! Beck!
Täglich auf dem Fleck!
Nimm uns den Hunger weg!

DIE LEHRBUBEN: Herr Je! Herr Je!
Mädel von Fürth!
Stadtpfeifer, spielt! dass 's lustig wird!
(Ein bunter Kahn, mit jungen Mädchen in reicher bäuerischer Tracht, ist angekommen. Die Lehrbuben heben die Mädchen heraus, und tanzen mit ihnen, während die Stadtpfeifer spielen, nach dem Vordergrunde.—Das Charakterische des Tanzes besteht darin, dass die Lehrbuben die Mädchen scheinbar nur an den Platz bringen wollen; sowie die Gesellen zugreifen wollen, ziehen die Buben die Mädchen aber immer wieder zurück, als ob sie sie anderswo unterbringen wollten, wobei sie meistens den ganzen Kreis, wie wählend, ausmessen, und somit die scheinbare Absicht auszuführen anmuthig und lustig verzögern.)

DAVID: (kommt vom Landungsplatz vor). Ihr tanzt? Was werden die Meister sagen?
(Die Buben drehen ihm Nasen.)
Hört nicht?—Lass' ich mir's auch behagen!
(Er nimmt sich ein junges, schönes Mädchen, und geräth im Tanze mit ihr bald in grosses Feuer. Die Zuschauer freuen sich und lachen.)

EIN PARR LEHRBUBEN: David! die Lene! die Lene sieht zu.

DAVID: (erschrickt, lässt das Mädchen schnell fahren, fasst sich aber Muth, da er nichts sieht, und tanzt nun noch feuriger weiter).
Ach! lasst mich mit euren Possen in Ruh'!

DIE GESELLEN: (am Landungsplatz). Die Meistersinger! die Meistersinger!

DAVID: Herr Gott!—Ade, ihr hübschen Dinger!
(Er gibt dem Mädchen einen feurigen Kuss und reisst sich los. Die Lehrbuben unterbrechen alle schnell den Tanz, eilen zum Ufer und reihen sich dort zum Empfang der Meistersinger. Alles macht auf das Geheiss der Lehrbuben Platz.—Die Meistersinger ordnen sich am Landungsplatze und ziehen dann festlich auf, um auf der erhöhten Bühne ihre Plätze einzunehemen. Voran Kothner als Fahnenträger: dann Pogner, Eva an der Hand führend; diese ist von festlich geschmückten und reich gekleideten jungen Mädchen begleitet, denen sich Magdalene anschliesst. Dann folgen die übrigen Meistersinger. Sie werden mit Hutschwenken und Freudenrufen begrüsst. Als alle auf der Bühne angelangt sind. Eva von den Mädchen umgeben, denn Ehrenplatz eingenommen, und Kothner die Fahne gerade in der Mitte der übrigen Fahnen, und sie alle überragend, aufgepflantzt hat, treten die Lehrbuben, dem Volke zugewendet, feierlich vor der Bühne in Reih und Glied.)

DIE LEHRBUBEN: Silentium! Silentium!
Lasst all' Reden und Gesumm'!
(Sachs erhebt sich und tritt vor. Bei seinem Anblick stösst sich Alles an und bricht sofort unter Hut- und Tücher schwenken in grossen Jubel aus.)

ALLES VOLK: Ha! Sachs! 's ist Sachs!
Seht! Meister Sachs!
Stimmt an! Stimmt an! Stimmt an!

THE SHOEMAKERS: (as they march past). Saint Crispin! Honor him!
He was both wise and good,
Did all a cobbler could.
That was a fine time for the poor
He made them all warm shoes;
When none would lend him leather more,
To steal he'd not refuse.
The cobbler has a conscience easy,
No obstacles to labor sees he;
When from the tanner it is sent away
Then hey! hey! hey!
Leather becomes his rightful prey.
(The Town-Pipers, Lute- and Toy-Instrument-Makers playing on their instruments, follow. These are succeeded by:)

THE TAILORS: When Nuremberg besieged did stand
And famine wrought despair,
Undone had been both folk and land
Had not a tailor been there,
Of craft and courage rare:
Within a goat-skin he did hide
And shewd upon the wall outside.
There took to gaily tripping
And gambolling and skipping.
The foe beheld it with dismay:
The devil fetch that town away,
Where goats yet merrily play, play, play.
Me-ey! me-ey! me-ey!
(Imitating the bleating of a goat.)
Who'd think that a tailor within there lay?

THE BAKERS: (coming close behind the Tailors so that the two songs join together). Want of bread! Want of bread!
That is a hardship true, sirs!
If you were not by the baker fed
Old Death would feed on you, sirs.
Pray! pray! pray!
Baker every day,
Hunger take away!

PRENTICES: Heyday! heyday!
Maidens from Fürth!
Play up, town-piper! One merry spurt!
(A gaily painted boat, filled with young Girls in fine peasant-costumes, arrives. The Prentices help the Girls out and dance with them, while the town-pipers play, towards the front.—The character of this dance consists in the Prentices appearing only to wish to bring the Girls to the open place; the Journeymen endeavor to capture them and the Prentices move on as if seeking another place, thus making the tour of the stage and continually delaying their original purpose in fun and frolic.)

DAVID: (advancing from the landing-place). You dance? The Masters will rate such folly.
(The boys make faces at him.)
Don't care?—Why, then let me too be jolly!
(He seizes a young and pretty girl and mingles in the dance with great ardor. The spectators notice him and laugh.)

SOME OF THE PRENTICES: David! There's Lena! Lena sees you!

DAVID: (alarmed, hastily releases the maiden, but seeing nothing, quickly regains his courage and resumes his dancing).
Have done with your silly jokes, my boys, do!

JOURNEYMEN: (at the landing-place). The Master Singers; The Master Singers!

DAVID: Oh lord!—Farewell, pretty clingers!
(He gives the maidens an ardent kiss and tears himself away. The Prentices quickly discontinue their dance, hasten to the bank and arrange themselves to receive the Master Singers. All stand back by command of the Prentices.—The Master Singers arrange their procession on the bank and then march forwards to take their places on the stand. First Kothner, as standardbearer, then Pogner leading Eva by the hand; she is attended by richly dressed Maidens, among whom is Magdalena. Then follow the other Master Singers. They are greeted with cheers and waving of hats. When all have reached the platform, Eva has taken the place of honor, with her Maidens round her, and Kothner has placed his banner in the middle of the others, which it overlaps. The Prentices solemnly advance in rank and file before the stand, turning to the people.)

PRENTICES: Silentium! Silentium!
Make no sound, even the merest hum!
(Sachs rises and steps forward. At sight of him, all burst out into fresh acclamations and wavings of hats and kerchiefs.)

ALL THE PEOPLE: Ha! Sachs! Sachs!
See! Master Sachs!
Sing all! Sing all! Sing all!

(Mit feierlicher Haltung.)
"Wach' auf, es nahet gen den Tag ich hör' singen im grünen Hag ein' wonnigliche Nachtigal, ihr Stimm' durchklinget Berg und Thal die Nacht neigt sich zum Occident, der Tag geht auf von Orient, die rothbrünstige Morgenröth' her durch die trüben Wolken geht."— Heil Sachs! Hans Sachs!
Heil Nürnberg's theurem Sachs!
(Längeres Schweigen grosser Ergriffenheit. Sachs, der unbeweglich, wie geistesabwesend, über die Volksmenge hinweg geblickt hatte, richtet endlich seine Blicke vertrauter auf sie, verneigt sich freundlich, und beginnt mit ergriffener, schnell aber sich festigender Stimme.)

SACHS: Euch wird es leicht, mir macht ihr's schwer, gebt ihr mir Armen zu viel Ehr':
such' vor der Ehr' zu besteh'n, sei's, mich von euch geliebt zu sehn!
Schon grosse Ehr' ward mir erkannt, ward heut' ich zum Spruchsprecher ernannt:
und was mein Spruch euch künden soll, glaubt, das ist hoher Ehre voll!
(Grosse Bewegung unter Allen.—Sachs geht auf Pogner zu, der ihm gerührt die Hand drückt.)

POGNER: O Sachs! Mein Freund!
Wie dankenswerth!
Wie wisst ihr, was mein Herz beschwert!

SACHS: 's war viel gewagt! Jetzt habt nur werth! Muth!
(Er wendet sich zu Beckmesser, der schon während des Einzuges und dann fortwährend immer das Blatt mit dem Gedicht heimlich herausgezogen, memorirt, genau zu lesen versucht, und oft verzweiflungsvoll den Schweiss sich von der Strin gewischt hat.)

SACHS: Nun denn, wenn's Meistern und Volk beliebt, Zum Wettgesang den Anfang giebt.

KOTHNER: (tritt vor). Ihr ledig' Mesiter, macht euch bereit!
Der Aeltest' sich zuerst anlässt:—
Herr Beckmesser, ihr fangt, an, 's ist Zeit!

BECKMESSER: (verlässt die Singerbühne, die Lehrbuben führen ihn zu dem Blumenbügel: er strauchelt darauf, tritt unsicher und schwankt). Zum Teufel! Wie wackelig! Macht das hübsch fest!
(Die Buben lachen unter sich und stopfen lustig an dem Rasen.)

(With solemn delivery.)
"Awake! The break of day draws near,
I hear upon the hawthorn spray
A bonny little nightingale;
His voice resounds over hill and dale.
The night descends the western sky
And from the east the morn draws near,
With ardor red the flush of day Breaks through the cloud-bank dull and grey."— Hail Sachs! Hans Sachs!
Hail, Nuremberg's darling Sachs!
(Long silence of deep feeling. Sachs, who, as if rapt, has stood motionless, gazing far away beyond the multitude, at last turns a gental glance on them, bows courteously and begins in a voice at first trembling with emotion but soon gaining firmness.)

SACHS: Your hearts you ease—mine you oppress:
I feel my own unworthiness.
What I most prize, all else above,
Is your esteem and honest love!
Already I have gained honor.
Today I'm ordained as spokesman;
And in the matter of my speech
You will be honored, all and each.
(Great stir among all present.—Sachs goes up to Pogner, who presses his hand, deeply moved.)

POGNER: O Sachs! my friend! what thanks I owe!
How well my heart's distress you know!

SACHS: There's much at stake! But dispel care!
(He turns to Beckmesser, who during the procession and ever since has been continually taking the paper out of his pocket to endeavor to commit it to memory and ever and anon wiping the perspiration from his brow in despair.)

SACHS: Now then, my Masters, if you're agreed,
We will to our Trial-songs proceed.

KOTHNER: (advancing). Unmarried Masters, forward to win!
Let him commence who's most mature.—
Friend Beckmesser, it is time! Begin!

BECKMESSER: (quits the stand; the Prentices conduct him to the mound; he stumbles up it, treads uncertainly and totters.)
The devil! How rickety! Make that secure!
(The boys snigger and beat the turf lustily.)

DAS VOLK: (unterschiedlich, während Beckmesser sich zurecht macht.) Wie, der? Der wirbt?
Scheint mir nicht der Rechte!
An der Tochter Stell' ich den nicht möchte.—
Er kann nicht 'mal stehn:
Wie wird's dem gehn?—
Seid still! 's gar ein tücht'ger Meister!
Stadtschreiber ist er: Beckmesser heisst er.
Gott! ist der dumm!
Er fällt fast um!—
Still! macht keinen Witz;
der hat im Rathe Stimm' und Sitz.

DIE LEHRBUBEN: (in Aufstellung). Silentium! Silentium!
Lasst all das Reden und Gesumm'!
(Beckmesser macht, ängstlich in ihren Blicken forsehend, eine gezierte Verbeugung gegen Eva.)

KOTHNER: Fanget an!

BECKMESSER: (singt mit seiner Melodie, verkehrter Prosodie, und mit süsslich verzierten Absatzen, öfters durch mangelhaftes Memoriren gänzlich behindert, und mit immer wachsender äugstlicher Verwirrung). "Morgen ich leuchte in rosigem Schein, voll Blut und Duft geht schnell die Luft!—
wohl bald gewonnen.
wie zeronnen,— im Garten lud ich ein—garstig und fein."

DIE MEISTER: (leise unter sich).
Mein! was ist das! Ist er von Sinnen!
Woher mocht' er solche Gedanken gewinnen?

VOLK: (ebenso). Sonderbar! Hört ihr's? Wen lud er ein?
Verstand man recht? Wie kann das sein?

BECKMESSER: (nachdem er sich mit den Füssen wieder gerictbet und im Manuscript heimlich nachgelesen). "Wohn ich erträglich im selbigen Raum, hol' Geld und Frucht—Bleisaft und Wucht: mich holt am Pranger—der Verlanger,— auf luft'ger Stelge kaum—häng' ich am Baum."
(Er sucht sich wieder zurecht zu stellen und im Manuscript zurecht zu finden.)

DIE MEISTER: Was soll das heissen? Ist er nun toll?
Sein Lied ist ganz von Unsinn voll!

DAS VOLK: (immer lauter).
Schöner Werber! Der find't seinen Lohn—bald hängt er am Galgen; man sieht ihn schon.

THE PEOPLE: (severally, while Beckmesser is settling himself).
What he? To woo? Isn't he a fat one?
In the lady's place I'd not have that one.—
He cannot keep his feet:
How will the man compete?—
Be still! He's quite a great professor:
That is the Town-clerk, Master Beckmesser.— He'll tumble soon,
Old pantaloon!—
Hush! leave off your jokes and prattle
He is a learned magistrate.

THE PRENTICES: (drawn up in order). Silentium! Silentium!
Make no sound—even the merest hum!
(Beckmesser anxiously scanning all faces, makes a grand bow to Eva.)

KOTHNER: Now begin!

BECKMESSER: (sings to his old melody, a vain attempt at Walter's song; his ornamental phrases being spoiled by continual failure of memory and increasing confusion). "Yawning and steaming with roseate light
My hair was filled
With scent distilled.—
My boots were beaming
With no meaning,—
The guard I did invite
To strap me tight."—

THE MASTERS: (softly to one another). Eh! What is that? Is he demented?
Wherever was this nonsense invented?

THE PEOPLE: (the same). Singular! Heard you? Who strapped him tight?
What guard was that? Can this be right?

BECKMESSER: (after having settled his feet more securely and taken a peep at the manuscript).
"Oh for the claws of the guard for my hold!—
A flea looked down—
Upon my crown—
My chest intending—
I, suspending—
My weight from roots unrolled—
That furnished hold."—
(He again tries to steady himself and to correct himself by the manuscript.)

THE MASTERS: What is the matter? Is he insane?
His song's sheer nonsense, that is plain!

THE PEOPLE: (louder). Charming wooer! He'll soon get his due;
Suspend on the gallows; that's what he'll do!

BECKMESSER: (immer verwirrter). "Heimlich mir braut—weil hier es munter will hergeh'n:— an meiner Leiter stand ein Weib,— sie schämt' und wollt' mich nicht beseh'n Bleich wie ein Kraut—umfasert mir Hanf meinen Leib;— die Augen zwinkend—der Hund blies winkend—was ich vor langem verzehrt,— wie Frucht, so Holz und Pferd—vom Leberbaum."—
(Hier bricht Alles in lautes schallendes Gelächter aus.)

BECKMESSER: (verlässt wüthend den Hügel und eilt auf Sachs zu). Verdammter Schuster! Das dank' ich dir!
Das Lied, es ist gar nicht von mir:
von Sachs, der hier so hoch verehrt,
von eu'rem Sachs ward mir's bescheert:
Mich hat der Schändliche bedrängt, sein schlechtes Lied mir aufgehängt.
(Er stürzt wüthend fort und verliert sich unter dem Volke. Grosser Aufstand.)

VOLK: Mein! Was soll das? Jetzt wird's immer bunter!
Von Sachs das Lied! Das nähm' uns doch Wunder!

DIE MEISTERSINGER: Erklärt doch, Sachs! Welch ein Skandal!
Von euch das Lied? Welch eig'ner Fall:

SACHS: (der ruhig das Blatt, welches ihm Beckmesser hingeworfen, aufgehoben hat). Das Lied, fürwahr ist nicht von mir:
Herr Beckmesser irrt, wie dort so hier!
Ich bin verklagt, und muss besteh'n:
drum lasst meinen Zeugen mich auserseh'n!
Ist Jemand hier, der Recht mir weiss, der tret' als Zeug' in diesen Kreis!
(Walther tritt aus dem Volke hervor.) (Allgemeine Bewegung.)
So zeuget, das Lied sei nicht von mir;
und zeuget auch, dass, was ich hier hab' von dem Lied gesagt, zuviel nicht sei gewagt.

DIE MEISTER: Ei, Sachs! Gesteht, ihr seid gar fein!—
So mag's denn heut' geschehen sein.

SACHS: Der Regel Güte daraus man erwägt, dass sie auch 'mal 'ne Ausnahm' verträgt.

DAS VOLK: Ein guter Zeuge, schön und kühn!
Mich dünkt, dem kann 'was Gut's erblüh'n.

BECKMESSER: (more and more confused). "Get me a bride!—
A lovely merry girl I sued—Afraid, she could not score my face—
As sweet and fair as she was rude.—
Like to have died—
She shook me from her embrace;—
With white eyes glowing—
Her hound was going—
To stir my long legs as I found.—
Such thunderous brutes surround—
The tree of tripe!"
(Here all burst into a peal of laughter.)

BECKMESSER: (descends the mound and hastens to Sachs). Accursed cobbler! This is through you!—
That song is not my own, it is true:
It was Sachs, the idol of your throng,
Hans Sachs himself gave me the song!
The wretch, on purpose to abash,
He palmed on me this sorry trash.
(He rushes away furiously and disappears in the crowd. Great confusion.)

PEOPLE: Why! How can that be! It is still more surprising!
That song by Sachs! Our wonder is rising!

MASTER SINGERS: Explain this, Sachs! What a disgrace!
Is that song yours? Most novel case!

SACHS: (who has quietly picked up the paper which Beckmesser threw away). The song, indeed, is not by me;
Friend Beckmesser's wrong as he can be.
I am accused and must defend:
A witness let me bid attend!
Is there one here who know's I'm right,
Let him appear before our sight!
(Walter advances from out the crowd.)
(General stir.)
Bear witness the song is not by me,
And prove to all that, in the plea
I have advanced for it,
I said but what was fit.

THE MASTERS: Ah, Sachs! Understand us: you're very sly indeed!—
But you may for this once proceed.

SACHS: It shows our rules are of rare excellence,
If now and then they'll bear exceptions.

PEOPLE: A noble witness, proud and bold!
I think he should some good unfold.

SACHS: Meister und Volk sind gewillt zu vernehmen, was mein Zeuge gilt.
Herr Walther von Stolzing, singt das Lied!
Ihr Meister, les't, ob's ihm gerieth.
(Er gibt den Meistern das Blatt zum Nachlesen.)

DIE LEHRBUBEN: Alles gespannt, 's giebt kein Gesumm, Da rufen wir auch nicht Silentium!

WALTHER: (der kühn und fest auf den Blumenhügel getreten). "Morgenlich leuchtend in rosigem Schein, von Blüth' und Duft
geschwellt die Luft, voll aller Wonnen
nie ersonnen,
ein Garten lud mich ein,— (Die Meister lassen hier ergriffen das Blatt fallen; Walther scheint es—unmerklich gewahrt zu haben, und fährt nun in freier Fassung fort:) Dort unter einem Wunderbaum, von Früchten reich behangen, zu schau'n im sel'gen Liebestraum, was höchstem Lustverlangen Erfüllung kühn verhiess—das schönste Weib, Eva im Paradies."

DAS VOLK: (leise unter sich). Das ist 'was And'res! Wer hätt's gedacht!
Was doch recht Wort und Vortrag macht!

DIE MEISTERSINGER: (leise für sich). Ja wohl! Ich merk'! 's ist ein ander Ding, ob falsch man oder richtig sing.

WALTHER: (mit grösster Begeisterung). "Huldreichster Tag, dem ich aus Dichter's Traum erwacht!
Das ist geträumt, das Paradies, in himmlisch neu verklärter Pracht hell vor mir lag
dahin der Quell lachend mich weis;
die, dort geboren, mein Herz erkoren,
der Erde lieblichstes Bild, zu Muse mir geweiht,
so heilig hehr als mild,
ward kühn von mir gefreit, am lichten Tag der Sonnen durch Sanges Sieg gewonnen Parnass und Paradies!"

VOLK: (sehr leise den Schluss begleitend). Gewiegt wie in den schönsten Traum, hör' ich es wohl, doch fass es kaum!
Reich' ihm das Reis!
Sein der Preis!
Keiner wie er zu werben weiss!

DIE MEISTER: Ja, holder Sänger!
Nimm das Rais!
Dein Sang erwarb dir Meisterpreis!

SACHS: Masters and people all agree
To give my witness liberty.
Sir Walter von Stolzing, sing the song!
You, Masters, see if he goes wrong.
(He gives the Masters the paper to follow with.)

PRENTICES: All are intent, hushed is the hum;
So we need not call out Silentium!

WALTER: (who has mounted the mound with proud and firm steps). "Morning was gleaming with roseate light,
The air was filled
With scent distilled
Where, beauty-beaming,
Past all dreaming,
A garden did invite.—
(The Masters here, absorbed, let fall the leaf; Walter notices it without seeming to do so, and now proceeds in a freer style:)
Wherein, beneath a wondrous tree
With fruit superbly laden,
In blissful love-dream I could see
The rare and tender maiden,
Whose charms, beyond all price,
Entranced by heart—
Eva, in Paradise.—"

THE PEOPLE: (softly to another.) That is quite different! Who would surprise That so much in performance lies?

THE MASTER SINGERS: (softly aside). Ah yes! I see! It is another thing
A song the proper way to sing.

WALTER: (with great exaltation). "Thrice happy day,
To which my poet's trance gave place!
That Paradise of which I dreamed,
In radiance new before my face Glorified lay.
To point the path the brooklet streamed:
She stood beside me,
Who shall my bride be,
The fairest sight earth ever gave,
My Muse, to whom I bow,
So angel-sweet and grave.
I wooed her boldly now,
Before the world remaining,
By might of music gaining Parnassus and Paradise!"

PEOPLE: (accompanying the end of the verse, very softly) I feel as in a lovely dream, Hearing, but grasping not the theme!
Give him the prize!
Maiden, rise!
No one would woo in nobler wise!

MASTERS: Yes, glorious singer!
Victor, rise!
Your song has won the Master-prize!

POGNER: O Sachs! Dir dank ich Glück und Ehr', Vorüber nun all' Herzbeschwer!
(Eva, die vom Anfang des Auftrittes her in sicherer, ruhiger Haltung verblieben, und bei allen Vorgängen wie in seliger Geistesentrücktheit sich erhalten, hat Walther unverwandt zugehört; jetzt, während am Schlusse des Gesanges Volk und Meister, gerührt und ergriffen, unwillkürlich ihre Zustimmung ausdrücken, erhebt sie sich, schreitet an den Rand der Singerbühn und drückt auf die Stirn Walther's, welcher zu den Stufen herangetreten ist und vor ihr sich niedergelassen hat, einen aus Lorbeer und Myrthen geflochtenen Kranz, worauf dieser sich erhebt und von ihr zu ihrem Vater geleitet wird, vor welchem Beide niederknien; Pogner streckt segnend seine Hände über sie aus.)

SACHS: (deutend dem Volke mit der Hand auf die Gruppe). Der Zeugen, denk' es, wählt ich gut:
tragt ihr Hans Sachs drum üblen Muth?

VOLK: (jubelnd). Hans Sachs!
Nein! Das war schön erdacht!
Das habt ihr einmal wieder gut gemacht!

MEHRERE MEISTERSINGER: Auf, Meister Pogner! Euch zum Ruhm, meldet dem Junker sein Meisterthum.

POGNER: (eine goldene Kette mit drei Denkmünzen tragend). Geschmückt mit König David's Bild, nehm' ich euch auf in der Meister Gild'.

WALTHER: (zuckt unwillkürlich zurück). Nicht Meister! Nein!
Will ohne Meister selig sein!
(Die Meister blicken in grosser Betretenheit auf Sachs.)

SACHS: (Walther fest bei der Hand fassend). Verachtet mir die Meister nicht, und ehrt mir ihre Kunst!
Was ihnen hoch zum Lobe spricht, fiel reichlich euch zur Gunst, Nicht euren Ahnen, noch so werth, nicht euren Wappen, Speer, noch Schwert, dass ihr ein Dichter seid,
ein Meister euch gefreit, dem dankt ihr heut' eu'r höchstes Glück.

POGNER: O Sachs! All this I owe to you:
My happiness revives anew.
(Eva, who from the commencement of the scene has preserved a calm composure, and has seemed wrapt from all that passed around, has listened to Walter immovably; but now, when at the conclusion both Masters and people express their involuntary admiration, she rises, advances to the edge of the platform, and places on the brow of Walter, who kneels on the steps, a wreath of myrtle and laurel, whereupon he rises and she leads him to her father, before whom they both kneel. Pogner extends his hands in benediction over them.)

SACHS: (pointing to the group).
My witness answered not amiss!
Do you find fault with me for this!

PEOPLE: (jubilantly). Hans Sachs!
No! It was well devised!
Your tact you've once more exercised!

SEVERAL MASTER SINGERS:
Now, Master Pogner! As you should,
Give him the honor of Masterhood!

POGNER: (bringing forward a gold chain with three medallions). Receive King David's likeness true:
The Masters' Guild is free to you.

WALTER: (shrinking back involuntarily). Master! No!
I'll find reward some other way!
(The Masters look disconcertedly towards Sachs.)

SACHS: (grasping Walter by the hand). Disparage not the Masters' ways,
But show respect to art!
All they can give of highest praise
To you they would impart.
Not through your ancestors and birth,
Not by your weapons' strength and worth.
But by a poet's brain
Which Mastership did gain,
You have attained your present

Drum, denkt mit Dank ihr dran zurück, wie kann die Kunst wohl unwerth sein, die solche Preise schliesst ein?— Dass uns're Meister sie gepflegt, grad' recht nach ihrer Art, nach ihrem Sinne treu gehegt,
das hat sie ächt bewahrt:
blieb sie nicht ad'lig, wie zur Zeit,
wo Höf' und Fürsten sie geweiht, im Drang der Schlimmen Jahr' blieb sie doch deutsch und wahr;
und wär' sie anders nicht geglückt, als wie wo Alles drängt' und drückt', ihr seht, wie hoch sie blieb in Ehr'!
Was wollt ihr von den Meistern mehr?
Habt Acht! Uns drohen üble Streich':— zerfällt erst deutsches Volk und Reich, in falscher wälscher Majestät kein Fürst dann mehr sein Volk versteht; und wälschen Dunst mit wälschem Tand sie pflanzen uns in's deutsche Land.
Was deutsch und ächt wüsst' keiner mehr, lebt's nicht in deutscher Meister Ehr'.
Drum sag' ich Euch:
ehrt eure deutschen Meister,
dann bannt ihr gute Geister!
Und gebt ihr ihrem Wirken Gunst, zerging' in Dunst
das heil'ge röm'sche Reich, uns bleibe gleich die heil'ge deutsche Kunst!
(Alle fallen begeistert in den Schlussvers ein.—Eva nimmt den Kranz von Walther's Stirn und drückt ihn Sachs auf: dieser nimmt die Kette aus Pogner's Hand, und hängt sie Walther um.—Walther und Eva lehnen sich zu beiden. Seiten au Sachsen's Schullern: Pogner lässt sich, wie huldigend, auf ein Knie vor Sachs nieder. Die Meistersinger deuten mit erhobenen Händen auf Sachs, als auf ihr Haupt: Während die Lehrbuben jauchzend in die Hände schlagen und tanzen, schwenkt das Volk begeistert Hüte und Tücher.)

VOLK: Heil Sachs! Hans Sachs!
Heil Nürnberg's theurem Sachs!
(Der Vorhang fällt.)

ENDE.

bliss:
Then think you thankfully on this:
Now can you ever despise the Art
Which can bestow so rare a prize,
That by our Masters she was kept
And cherished as their own,
With anxious care that never slept
This Art herself has shown.
If not so honored as of yore,
When courts and princes prized her more
In troublous years all through She's German been and true;
And if she has not won renown
Beyond this bustling busy town,
You see she has our full respect:
What more from us can you expect?
Beware! Bad times are near at hand
And when fall German folk and land
In spurious foreign pomp before long
No prince will know his people's tongue
And foreign thoughts and foreign ways
Upon our German soil they'll raise.
Our native Art will fade from here
If it is not held in reverence.
So heed my words:—
Honor your German Masters
If you would stay disasters!
For while they dwell in every heart
Though should depart
The pride of holy Rome,
Still thrives at home
Our sacred German Art!
(All join enthusiastically in the last verse.—Eva takes the crown from Walter's head and places it on Sachs's; he takes the chain from Pogner's hand and puts it round Walter's neck.—Walter and Eva lean against Sachs, one on each side; Pogner sinks on his knee before him as if in homage. The Master Singers point to Sachs, with outstretched hand, as to their chief. While the Prentices clap hands and shout and dance, the people wave hats and kerchiefs in enthusiasm.)

ALL: Hail Sachs! Hans Sachs!
Hail Nuremberg's darling Sachs!
(The curtain falls.)

THE END.

Das Rheingold (1869)

The Rhinegold

MUSIC & LIBRETTO BY RICHAD WAGNER

Das Rheingold was first performed at the Hoftheater in Munich on September 22, 1869. Three Rhine maidens guard the Rhinegold at the bottom of the river. Alberich, a Nibelung (dwarf), appears and the maidens make fun of him, but a sudden beam of sunlight shining on the Rhinegold spurs the Rhine maidens to reveal its magic powers. He who possesses the gold and renounces love forever can forge a ring that will give him power over everything in the world. Alberich curses love (and his initial attraction to the Rhine maidens), grabs the Rhinegold and escapes. Night comes to the Rhine.

As dawn rises over the mountains, Wotan and Fricka, father and mother of the gods, awaken to the sight of Valhalla, the new castle of the gods, built by the giants Fasolt and Fafner in exchange for Freia, goddess of Youth. But Wotan never actually intended to give Freia to them—without her apples of youth to eat every day the gods would become old. He offers something else in her stead. The giants are enraged until Loge, god of Fire, offers them Alberich's gold, which they accept while keeping Freia hostage until they have it in their possession. In her absence, the gods begin to age. Wotan goes with Loge to the Nibelheim caves (where the dwarves reside) to steal the gold. Deep in the Earth, Alberich has used his magic ring to gain power over the Nibelungs. He intends to conquer the giants and the gods as well. His brother, Mime, has forged a helmet for him that makes the wearer invisible or changes him into whatever form he chooses. Alberich shows off his Tarnhelm to Wotan and Loge by changing himself into a serpent and then a toad. Wotan traps him with his foot. Alberich turns over the gold, the Tarnhelm, and the ring, which Wotan immediately puts on his own finger. The dwarf curses the ring, promising destruction to its bearer. The giants demand enough gold to cover Freia's entire body. Wotan gives the giants the Tarnhelm as well as the gold, but refuses to give them the ring. Erda, goddess of the Earth, warns him that the ring will bring disaster to the gods. Wotan gives the giants the ring at last, and the curse comes to pass: Fafner kills Fasolt in an argument over the booty. Freia is released, and the gods regain their youth. After a storm, a rainbow arcs across the Rhine valley, leading to Valhalla. The gods walk in procession to their new home; only Loge hears the Rhine maidens crying for their lost Rhinegold.

Auf dem Grunde des Rheines.	At the bottom of the Rhine.
Grünliche Dämmerung, nach oben au lichter, nach unten zu dunkler. Die Höhe ist von wogendem Gewässer erfüllt, das rastlos von rechts nach links zu strömt. Nach der Tiefe zu lösen sich die Fluthen in einen immer feineren feuchten Nebel auf, so dass der Raum der Manneshöhe vom Boden auf gänzlich frei vom Wasser zu sein scheint, welches wie in Wolkenzügen über den nächlichen Grund dahinfliesst. Überall ragen schroffe Felsenriffe aus der Tiefe auf, und grenzen den Raum der Bühne ab: der ganze Boden ist in ein wildes Zackengewirr zerspalten, so dass er nirgends vollkommen eben ist und nach allen Seiten hin in dichtester Finsterniss tiefere Schlüffte annehmen lässt. Um ein Riff in der Mitte der Bühne, welches mit seiner schlanken Spitze bis in die dichtere, heller dämmernde Wasserfluth hinaufragt kreis't in anmuthig schwimmender Bewegung eine der Rheinföchter.	Greenish twilight, lighter above, darker below. The upper part of the scene is filled with moving water which restlessly streams from R to L. Towards the ground the waters resolve themselves into a fine mist, so that the space to a man's height from the stage seems free from water, which flows like a train of clouds over the gloomy depths. Everywhere are steep points of rock jutting up from the depths and enclosing the whole stage; all the ground is broken up into a wild confusion of jagged pieces, so that there is no level place, while on all sides darkness indicates other deeper fissures. Round a rock, in the center of the stage, whose peak rises high into the lighter water, one of the Rhine nymphs is seen merrily swimming.
WOGLINDE: Weia! Waga! Woge, du Welle, walle zur Wiege! Wagalaweia! Wallala weiala weia!	WOGLINDE: Weia! Waga! Wander you waters, waver and waft me! Wagalaweia! Wallala weiala weia!
WELLGUNDE: (Stimme, von oben). Woglinde, wach'st du allein?	WELLGUNDE: (voice from above). Woglinde, are you watching alone?
WOGLINDE: Mit Wellgunde wär' ich zu zwei.	WOGLINDE: Till Wellgunde wends her way to my side.
WELLGUNDE: (taucht aus der Fluth zum Riff herab). Lass' seh'n, wie du wach'st. (Sie sucht Woglinde zu erhaschen.)	WELLGUNDE: (diving down to the rock). How fares your watch? (She tries to seize Woglinde.)
WOGLINDE: (entweicht ihr schwimmend). Sicher vor dir. (Sie necken sich und suchen sich spielend zu fangen.)	WOGLINDE: (avoiding her by swimming). Far from your reach! (They tease, and seek playfully to catch one another.)
FLOSSHILDE: (Stimme, von oben). Heiala weia! Wildes Geschwister!	FLOSSHILDE: (voice from above). Heiala weia! Whimsical sisters!

WELLGUNDE: Flosshilde, schwimm'!
Woglinde flieht:
hilf mir die Fliessende fangen!

FLOSSHILDE: (taucht herab und fährt zwischen die Spielenden).
Des Goldes Schlaf
hütet ihr schlecht;
besser bewacht
des schlummernden Bett, sonst büss't ihr beide das Spiel!
(Mit munt'rem Gekreisch fahren die beiden auseinander; Flosshilde sucht bald die eine, bald die andere zu erhaschen; sie entschlüpfen ihr und vereinigen sich endlich, umgemeinschaftlich auf Flosshilde Jagd zu machen: so schnellen sie gleich Fischen von Riff zu Riff, scherzend und lachend.)
(Aus einer finstern Schlufft ist während dem Alberich, an einem Riffe klimmend, dem Abgrunde entstiegen. Er hält, noch vom Dunkel umgeben an, und schaut dem Spiele der Wassermädchen mit steigendem Wohlgefallen zu.) ALBERICH: He, he! Ihr Nicker!

Wie seid ihr niedlich, neidliches Volk!
Aus Nibelheim's Nacht
naht' ich euch gern, neiget ihr euch zu mir.
(Die Mädchen halten, als sie Alberich's Stimme hören, mit ihrem Spiele ein.)

WOGLINDE: Hei! wer ist dort?

WELLGUNDE: Es dämmert und ruft.

FLOSSHILDE: Luget, wer uns belauscht!
(Sie tauchen tiefer herab und erkennen den Nibelung.)

WOGLINDE UND WELLGUNDE: Pfui! der Garstige!

FLOSSHILDE: (schnell auftauchend). Hütet das Gold!
Vater warnte
vor solchem Feind.
(Die beiden andern folgen ihr, und alle drei versammeln sich schnell um das mittlere Riff.)

ALBERICH: Ihr da oben!

DIE DREI: Was willst du da unten?

ALBERICH: Stör' ich e'ur Spiel, wenn staunend ich still hier steh'?
Tauchtet ihr nieder, mit euch tollte
und neckte der Niblung sich gern!

WOGLINDE: Mit uns will er spielen?

WELLGUNDE: Ist ihm das Spott?

ALBERICH: Wie scheint im Schimmer ihr hell und schön?
Wie gern umschlänge der Schlanken eine mein Arm, schlüpfte hold sie herab!

WELLGUNDE: Flosshilde, swim!
Woglinde flies;
help me to foil her in fleetness.

FLOSSHILDE: (dives down and comes between the playmates).
The sleeping gold
You guard badly;
better surround
the gleaming one's bed;
such banter you both may regret.
(With merry cries the two separate: Flosshilde chases first one and then the other; they evade her and then unite to pursue her in turn. Thus they dart about like fish from rock to rock, laughing and sporting.)
(From a dark chasm Alberich clambers up to one of the rocks. He halts in the shadow and watches the gambols of the nymphs with growing delight.)

ALBERICH: Ho, ho! you nixies!
Are you not nimble,
nice to behold!
From Nibelheim's night now I would willingly come near you, if you are kind.
(The girls, when hearing Alberich's voice, leave off playing.)

WOGLINDE: Hey! who is there!

WELLGUNDE: A thing with a voice.

FLOSSHILDE: Look, who is below!
(They dive deeper and perceive the Nibelung.)

WOGLINDE AND WELLGUNDE: Faugh! The gruesome one.

FLOSSHILDE: (swiftly diving upwards). Look to the gold!
Father warned us
of such a foe.
(The others follow her, and all three collect quickly around the central rock.)

ALBERICH: You, up there!

THE THREE NYMPHS: What do you want, below there!

ALBERICH: Would your sport be spoiled, if I still stand here, astonished?
Dive near to me then;
a poor Niblung
longs dearly to dally with you!

WOGLINDE: He offers to join us?

WELLGUNDE: Is it his joke?

ALBERICH: How sweet and soft you seem in this light!
Gladly I'd seek to encircle one of your waists, should you kindly descend.

FLOSSHILDE: Nun lach 'ich der Furcht:
der Feind ist verliebt.
(Sie lachen.)

WELLGUNDE: Der lüsterne Kauz!

WOGLINDE: Lasst ihn uns kennen!
(Sie lässt sich auf die Spitze des Riffes herab, an dessen Fusse Alberich angelangt ist.)

ALBERICH: Die neigt sich herab.

WOGLINDE: Nun nahe dich mir!

ALBERICH: (klettert mit koboldartiger Behendigkeit doch wiederholt aufgehalten, der Spitze des Riffes zu).
Garstig glatter glitschriger Glimmer!
Wie gleit' ich aus!
Mit Händen und Füssen nicht fasse noch halt' ich das schlecke Geschlüpfer!
(Er prubstet.)
Feuchtes Nass
füllt mir die Nase:
verfluchtes Niesen!
(Er ist in der Nähe Woglinde's angelangt.)

WOGLINDE: (lachend). Pruhstend naht meines Freiers Pracht!

ALBERICH: Mein Friedel sei, du fräuliches Kind!
(Er sucht sie zu umfassen.)

WOGLINDE: (sich ihm entwindend). Willst du mich frei'n, so freie mich hier!
(Sie ist auf einem andern Riffe angelangt. Die Schwestern lachen.)

ALBERICH: (kratzt sich den Kopf). O weh: du entweich'st?
Komm' doch wieder!
Schwert ward mir,
was so leicht du erschwing'st.

WOGLINDE: (schwingt sich auf ein drittes Riff in grösserer Tiefe).
Steig' nur zu Grund:
da greifst du mich sicher!

ALBERICH: (klettert hastig hinab). Wohl besser da unten!

WOGLINDE: (schnellt sich rasch aufwärts nach einem hohen Seitenriffe). Nun aber nach oben!
(Alle Mädchen lachen.)

ALBERICH: Wie fang' ich im Sprung' den spröden Fisch?
Warte, du Falsche!
(Er will ihr eilig nachklettern.)

WELLGUNDE: (hat sich auf ein tieferes Riff auf der andern Seite gesenkt). Heia! Du Holder!
hör'st du mich nicht?

ALBERICH: (sich umwendend).
Ruf'st du nach mir?

WELLGUNDE: Ich rathe dir gut:
zu mir wende dich,
Woglinde meide!

FLOSSHILDE: I laugh at our fears;
the foe is in love!
(They laugh.)

WELLGUNDE: The languishing calf!

WOGLINDE: Let us accost him.
(She descends to the point of the rock at the base of which Alberich is.)

ALBERICH: She's coming below!

WOGLINDE: Climb closer to me.

ALBERICH: (clambers with gnome-like rapidity, but with difficulty, to the summit of the rock).
Smooth with slime the slippery stone is!
How my steps slide!
My hands and my feet cannot fasten or hold on the steepness unsteady!
(Sneezes.) Clamminess
creeps up my nostrils:
accursed sneezing!
(He has approached Woglinde.)

WOGLINDE: (laughing). See how nicely my beau can sneeze!

ALBERICH: O be mine,
my beautiful child!
(He seeks to embrace her.)

WOGLINDE: (eluding him).
Would you make court,
then follow me here!
(She flies up to another rock. The others laugh.)

ALBERICH: (scratching his head). Alas! you are lost!
Come lower!
Far too hard is it for me to fly.

WOGLINDE: (swinging down to a third rock in the depths). Clamber down here;
your hand may then clasp me.

ALBERICH: (hastily scrambling down). Much better down lower!

WOGLINDE: (darting quickly upwards to a high peak at the side).
But look, I uplift myself!
(The Nymphs all laugh.)

ALBERICH: How follow and take this timid fish?
Wait a bit, false one!
(Tries hastily to climb up.)

WELLGUNDE: (has descended to a lower rock on the other side).
Heia! my hero!
hear what I say!

ALBERICH: (turning round). Call you to me?

WELLGUNDE: I caution you well;
to me wend your way:
mind not Woglinde!

ALBERICH: (klettern hastig über den Bodengrund zu Wellgunde). Viel schöner bist du als jene Scheue, die minder gleissend und gar zu glatt.— Nur tiefer tauche, willst du mir taugen!	ALBERICH: (hastily clambering over the rocks towards her). You are more fair than she who flies me; for she's less sparkling, too sleek and sly. But dive yet deeper if you would dally!
WELLGUNDE: (noch etwas mehr zu ihm sich herabsenkend). Bin nun ich dir nah'?	WELLGUNDE: (descending a little nearer to him). So now am I near?
ALBERICH: Noch nicht genug! Die schlanken Arme schlinge um mich, dass ich den Nacken dir neckend betaste, mit schmeichelnder Brunst an die schwellende Brust mich dir schmiege!	ALBERICH: No, not enough! With tender arms entwine me around, that I may fondle that form so bewitching: in passionate bliss let me press you to my panting embrace!
WELLGUNDE: Bist du verliebt und lüstern nach Minne? Lass' she'n, du Schöner, wie du bist zu schau'n?— Pfui, du haariger, höck'riger Geck! Schwarzes, schwieliges Schwefelgezwerg! Such' dir ein Friedel, dem du gefällst!	WELLGUNDE: Are you in love and longing for favors? Let's see what semblance my beauty can show.— Faugh! you hairy and horrible imp! Swarthy, stunted, and shrivelled up dwarf! Seek as a fellow one of like form!
ALBERICH: (sucht sie mit Gewalt zu halten). Gefall' ich dir nicht, dich fass' ich doch fest!	ALBERICH: (trying to detain her by force). Though I am not fair, I'll fetter you fast!
WELLGUNDE: (schnell zum mittleren Riffe auftauchend). Nur fest, sonst fliess' ich dir fort! (Alle Drei lachen.)	WELLGUNDE: (quickly darting up to the central rock). Quite fast, for fear I should flow! (All three laugh.)
ALBERICH: (erbos't ihr nachzankend). Falsches Kind! Kalter, grätiger Fisch! Schein' ich nicht schön dir, niedlich und neckisch, glatt und glau— hei! so buhle mit Aalen, ist dir eklig mein Balg!	ALBERICH: (calling angrily after her). Fickle child! Chilly, slippery fish! Seem I not shapely, tender, enticing, glib and gay— Go! let eels be your lovers, If I am so loathsome!
FLOSSHILDE: Was zank'st du, Alp? Schon so verzagt? Du frei'test um zwei! früg'st du die dritte, süssen Trost schüfe die Traute dir!	FLOSSHILDE: Why scold us, imp? Does your heart sink? Only two have been sought; try now the third one: soft reward surely awaits you there!
ALBERICH: Holder Sange singt zu mir her.— Wie gut, dass ihr eine nicht seid! Von vielen gefell' ich wohl einter: von einer kies'te mich keine!— Soll ich dir glauben, so gleite herab!	ALBERICH: Music sweet you sing to me:— what joy that all are not alike! Among many I must delight one, though all be wary to choose me. Before I believe you still lower descend.
FLOSSHILDE: (taucht zu Alberich hinab). Wie thörig seid ihr, dumme Schwestern, dünkt euch dieser nicht schön!	FLOSSHILDE: (diving down to Alberich). How foolish are my sisters' hearts to see no symmetry here!
ALBERICH: (hastig ihr nahend). Für dumm und hässlich darf ich sie halten, seit ich dich Holdeste seh'.	ALBERICH: (approaching her hastily). Both dull and hideous do I now hold them, since I've looked upon you, my sweet.
FLOSSHILDE: (schmeichelnd). O singe fort so süss und fein; wie hehr verführt es mein Ohr!	FLOSSHILDE: (cajolingly). O warble still your wondrous song; it fills sweetly my ears!
ALBERICH: (zutraulich sie berührend). Mir zagt, zuckt und zehrt sich das Herz, lacht mir so zierliches Lob.	ALBERICH: (caressing her). I flush, flame and flutter at heart, homage so flattering to hear.
FLOSSHILDE: (ihn sauft abwehrend). Wie deine Anmuth mein Aug' erfreut, deines Lächelns Milde den Muth mir labt! (Sie zieht ihn zärtlich an sich.) Seligster Mann!	FLOSSHILDE: (gently repulsing him). Your beauty's glory makes my eyes glad: and your loving smile assuages my alarms! (Draws him tenderly to her.) Sweetest of men!
ALBERICH: Süssest Maid!	ALBERICH: Softest of maids!
FLOSSHILDE: Wär'st du mir hold!	FLOSSHILDE: O, Were you mine!
ALBERICH: Hielt' ich dich immer!	ALBERICH: Might I ever hold you!
FLOSSHILDE: (ihn ganz in ihren Armen haltend). Deinen stechenden Blick, deinen struppigen Bart, o säh' ich ihn, fasst' ich ihn stets' Deines stachlichen Haares strammes Gelock, umflöss' es Flosshilde ewig! Deine Krötengestalt, deiner Stimme Gekrächz, o dürft' ich staunend und stumm, sie nur hören und seh'n! (Woglinde und Wellgunde sind nah herabgetaucht und schlagen jetzt ein helles Gelächter auf.)	FLOSSHILDE: (holding him in her arms). O! Your staring-eyed brow, your straggle-haired beard, to see them and handle them still! That your stubbly gray hair, in streaming elf locks, might float round Flosshilde forever! And your toad-allied stature, your stridulous tones, O might I astonish and still, satiate with these every sense! (Woglinde and Wellgunde have dived down to them and now raise a peal of laughter.)
ALBERICH: (erschreckt aus Flosshilde's Armen auffahrend). Lacht ihr Bösen mich aus?	ALBERICH: (starting timidly from Flosshilde's arms). Are you laughing at me?
FLOSSHILDE: (sich plötzlich ihm entreissend). Wie billig am Ende vom Lied. (Sie taucht mit den Schwestern schnell in die Höhe und stimmt in ihr Gelächter ein.)	FLOSSHILDE: (suddenly darting from him). Your love song merrily ends. (She darts quickly up to her sisters and joins in their laughter.)
ALBERICH: (mit kreischender Stimme). Wehe! ach wehe! O Schmerz! O Schmerz! Die dritte, so traut, betrog sie mich auch?— Ihr schmählich schlaues, lüderlich schlechtes Gelichter! Nährt ihr nur Trug, ihr treuloses Nickergezücht?	ALBERICH: (with a screaming voice). Woe is me! Ah, woe is me! Alas! Alas! The third of my trust betraying me! Most shocking, shifty, wicked and shameless of wantons! Know you no truth, you treacherous, nondescript brood?
DIE DREI RHEINTÖCHTER: Walala! Lalaleia! Lalei! Heia! Heia! Haha! Schäme dich, Albe! Schilt nicht dort unten! Höre, was wir dich heissen! Warum, du, Banger, bandest du nicht das Mädchen, das du minnst? Treu sind wir und ohne Trug dem Freier, der uns fängt.— Greife nur zu und grause dich nicht! In der Fluth entflieh'n wir nicht leicht. (Sie schwimmen aus einander, hierher und dorthin, bald tiefer, bald höher, um Alberich zur Jagd auf sie zu reizen.)	THE THREE RHINE NYMPHS: Walala! Lalaleia! Lalei! Heia! Heia! Haha! Fie on you, gnome, gnashing in fury! Take the counsel that we offer. How was it, calf, you could not have kept the lady of your love? We are true, firm is our pledge toward him who bravely holds. Seize on us then, and cease to reproach: we can fly not fast in the wave. (They swim about, hither and thither, high and low, to incite Alberich to chase them.)
ALBERICH: Wie in den Gliedern brünstige Gluth mir brennt und glüht! Wuth und Minne	ALBERICH: How through my frame there rages a fire with radiance fierce!

wild und mächig
wühlt mir den Muth auf!—
Wie ihr auch lacht und lugt, lüstern lechz' ich nach euch, und eine muss mir erliegen!
(Er macht sich mit verzweifelter Anstrengung zur Jagd auf: mit grauenhafter Behendigkeit erklimmt er Riff für Riff, springt von einem zum andern, sucht bald dieses bald jenes der Mädchen zu erhaschen, die mit höhnischem Gelachter stets ihm entweichen; er strauchelt, stürzt in den Abgrund hinab, klettert dann hastig wieder zur Höhe,—bis ihm endlich die Geduld entführt: vor Wuth schaumend hält er athemlos an und streckt die geballte Faust nach den Mädchen hinauf.)

ALBERICH: (kaum seiner mächtig). Fing' eine diese Faust! . . .
(Er verbleibt in sprachloser Wuth, den Blick aufwärts gerichtet, wo er dann plötzlich von folgendem Schauspiele angezogen und gefesselt wird.)
(Durch die Fluth ist von oben her ein immer lichterer Schein gedrungen, der sich nun an einer hohen Stelle des mittleren Riffes zu einem blendend hell strahlenden Goldglanze entzündet; ein zauberisch goldenes Licht bricht von hier durch das Wasser.)

WOGLINDE: Lugt, Schwestern!
Die Weckerin lacht in den Grund.

WELLGUNDE: Durch den grünen Schwall den wonnigen Schläfer sie grüsst.

FLOSSHILDE: Jetzt küsst sie sein Auge dass er es öff'ne;
schaut, es lächelt
in lichtem Schein;
durch die Fluthen hin fliesst sein strahlender Stern.

DIE DREI: (zusammen das Riff anmuthig umschwimmend).
Heiahaheia!
Heiajaheia!
Wallala lalala leia jahei!
Rheingold!
Rheingold!
Leuchtende Lust,
wie lach'st du so hell und hehr!
Glühender Glanz
entgleisst dir weihlich im Wag!
Heiajahei
Heiajaheia!
Wache, Freund, wache froh,
Wonnige Spiele
spenden wir dir:
flimmert der Fluss,
flammet die Fluth, Umfliessen wir tauchend, tanzend und singend,
im seligen Bade dein Bett.
Rheingold!
Rheingold!
Heiajaheia!
Wallalaleia jahei!

Wrath and passion,
rude and powerful,
rouse up my pulses.
Though you may laugh and lie,
lusting I long for one;
I'll win here, too, for my sweetheart!
(He chases them with desperate exertions; with frightful activity he clambers from rock to rock, springing from one to the other and striving to reach first one nymph and then another; they always avoid him with mocking laughter. He staggers and falls below, then clambers up again—till at last his patience is exhausted: foaming with rage, he pauses breathless and shakes his clenched fist at the nymphs.)

ALBERICH: (nearly beside himself). Were I to catch one!
(He remains in speechless rage, gazing upwards, when suddenly he is rivetted to the spot by the following sight.)
(Through the water above breaks an ever-increasing glow, which on the summit of the central rock kindles gradually to a blinding yellow gleam; a magical golden light then streams from there through the water.)

WOGLINDE: Look, sisters! The wakener laughs in the deep.

WELLGUNDE: Through the dark green surge it woos the sleeper adored.

FLOSSHILDE: Now kissing its eyelids striving to open them.
Look, it is smiling in silvery light!
Through the flood around flows as a stream of stars.

ALL THREE: (swimming joyously around the rock). Heiajaheia!
Heiajaheia!
Wallala lalala leia jahei!
Rhinegold!
Rhinegold!
Lustrous delight;
you laugh in radiance rare!
Glistening gleams glow from you over the waves.
Heiajahei!
Heiajaheia!
Waken friend,
waken, joyful!
Cheerful the games
we'll gambol with you:
flashes the foam,
flames all the flood;
we float around dancing,
diving and singing,
as sweetly we bathe in your bed.
Rhinegold!
Rhinegold!
Heiajaheia!
Walalaleia jahei!

ALBERICH: (dessen Auge, mächtig vom Glanze angezogen, starr an dem Golde haftet). Was ist's, ihr Glatten, das dort so gleisst und glänzt?

DIE DREI MÄDCHEN: (abwechselnd). Wo bist du Rauher denn heim, dass von Rheingold nie du gehört?— Nichts weiss der Alp von des Goldes Auge, das wechselnd wacht und schläft?
von der Wassertiefe wonnigem Stern, der hehr die Wogen durchhellt?—

ZWEITE SCENE.

Allmählig gehen die Wogen in Gewölke über, das sich nach und nach abklärt, und als es sich endlich, wie in feinem Nebel, gänzlich verliert, wird eine freie Gegend auf Bergeshöhen sichtbar, anfänglich noch in nächtlicher Beleuchtung.—Der hervorbrechende Tag beleuchtet mit wachsendem Glanze eine Burg mit blinkenden Zinnen, die auf einem Felsgipfel im Hintergrunde steht; zwischen diesem burggekrönten Felsgipfel und dem Vordergrunde der Scene ist ein tiefes Thal, durch welches der Rhein fliesst, anzunehmen,—Zur Seite auf blumigem Grunde liegt Wotan, neben ihm Fricka, beide schlafend.

FRICKA: (erwacht: ihr Blick fällt auf die Burg; sie staunt und erschrickt). Wotan! Gemahl! erwache!

WOTAN: (im Traume leise). Der Wonne seligen Saal bewachen mir Thür' und Thor:
Mannes Ehre,
ewige Macht,
ragen zu endlosem Ruhm!

FRICKA: (rüttelt ihn). Auf, aus der Träume wonnigen Trug!
Erwache, Mann, und erwäge!

WOTAN: (erwacht und erhebt sich ein wenig: sein Auge wird sogleich vom Anblick der Burg gefesselt). Vollendet das ewige Werk:
auf Berges Gipfel die Götter-Burg, prunkvoll prahlt
der prangende Bau!
Wie im Traum ich ihn trug, wie mein Wille ihn wies, stark und schön
steht er zur Schau;
hehrer, herrlicher Bau!

ALBERICH: (whose eyes, fascinated by the light, are fixed on the gold). What is it, you gliders, that there gleams and glows?

THE THREE NYMPHS: (severally). From where do you, rugged one, hail,
of the Rhinegold never to have heard?
You want not, imp,
of the gold's bright eyes then,
which now wake, now sleep?
Of the wondrous star of waters profound whose light illuminates the wave?—

SCENE II

Gradually the waves give place to clouds which clear off in fine mist, showing an open space on a mountain top, first by the faint light of night.—The dawning day lights up with increasing luster a castle with glittering pinnacles, which stands on a cliff at the back: between this and the foreground is a deep valley through which the Rhine is supposed to flow.—At one side Wotan and Fricka are lying asleep in a flowery meadow.

FRICKA: (wakes, and her eyes fall on the castle; she starts in surprise). Wotan! my lord! awaken!

WOTAN: (still dreaming). The wondrous heavenly hall is warded with gate and guild.
Mortal honor, infinite might,
fly to the acme of fame!

FRICKA: (shaking him). Wake from your visions rosy and vain!
Awake now, spouse, and rouse yourself!

WOTAN: (wakes and raises himself slightly. His eyes are at once attracted and riveted by the sight of the castle). It's ended—the infinite work!
A Heavenly mansion on mountain heights;
proudly peer my prosperous halls
as in visions I viewed, as I ordered it;
strong and sound
It stands in sight:
grand and glorious pile.

FRICKA: Nur Wonne schafft dir was mich erschreckt?
Dich freut die Burg, mir bangt es um Freia.
Achtloser, lass dich erinnern des ausbedungenen Lohn's!
Die Burg is fertig, verfallen das Pfand:
vergiss'st du, was du vergab'st?

WOTAN: Wohl dünkt mich's, was sie bedangen, die dort die Burg mir gebaut;
durch Vertrag zähmt' ich ihr trotzig Gezücht, dass sie die hehre
Halle mir schlüfen;
die steht nun—Dank den Starken:—
um den Sold sorge dich nicht.

FRICKA: O lachend frevelnder Leichtsinn!
Liebelosester Frohmuth!
Wusst' ich um eu'ren Vertrag, dem Truge hätt' ich gewehrt;
doch muthig entferntet ihr Männer die Frauen,
um taub und ruhig vor uns allein mit den Riesen zu tagen.
So ohne Scham
verschenktet ihr Frechen Freia, mein holdes Geschwister, froh des Schächergewerb's.—
Was ist euch Harten doch heilig und werth, giert ihr Männer nach Macht!

WOTAN: Gleiche Gier war Fricka wohl fremd, als selbst um den Bau sie bat?

FRICKA: Um des Gatten Treue besorgt muss traurig ich wohl sinnen,
wie an mich er zu fesseln, zieht's in die Ferne ihn fort:
herrliche Wohnung, wonniger Hausrath, sollten mit sanftem Band dich binden zu säumender Rast.
Doch du bei dem Wohnbau sannst auft Wehr und Wall allein: Herrschaft und Macht
soll er dir mehren;
nur rastlosern Sturm zu erregen erstand die ragende Burg.

WOTAN: (lächelnd). Wolltest du Frau
in der feste mich fangen, mir Gotte musst du schon gönnen, dass, in der Burg
gebunden, ich mir
von aussen gewinne die Welt.
Wandel und Wechsel
liebt wer lebt:
das Spiel drum kann ich nicht sparen.

FRICKA: Liebeloser, leidigster Mann!
Um der Macht und Herrschaft müssigen Tand
verspielst du in lästerndem Spott Liebe und Weibes Werth?

FRICKA: So you welcome that which I dread?
Though your tower is fair
I tremble for Freia.
Mindless one, pause and remember the mentioned price to be paid!
the castle finished,
now the bond falls.
Did you forget then what you must give?

WOTAN: I mind well all they demanded, my men who built me this burg;
their grim race I by agreement overawed, whereby this hallowed home they should build.
It prospers—thanks to their prowess!
For the price pray have no heed.

FRICKA: Alas! Your fatuous lightness!
lacking love is your folly.
Had I but known of this bond the baseness might have been helped:
but pleased were you wise ones to part from the women;
no jot confiding in us,
you conferred as one with the giants.
So, without shame,
you shrink not to forfeit Freia, my glorious sister, for this scandalous cause.
May your hard hearts know nothing of holiness, when you pant for power.

WOTAN: Like longings did Fricka not feel,
when she herself bade me to build?

FRICKA: Of my husband's truth ill assured, in trouble I considered how to hold him beside me when he was seeking to stray:
halls bright and gleaming,
glorious homestead,
such might surely allure you to linger and seek in them rest.
But you in this fortress thought of fence and force alone:
power and might
it was to augment you:
this ravishing castle rises to cause yet more riotous strife.

WOTAN: (smiling). If with these walls
You, O wife, should wrap me, yet grant but this to my godhood;
while in the castle's confines I yet may win the world outside.
Wandering at will all love who live:
my sport I cannot dispense with.

FRICKA: Light, unloving, low-natured man!
For such mere conceits as might and control would trample in lawless contempt love and a woman's worth?

WOTAN: (ernst). Um dich zum Weib zu gewinnen, mein eines Auge
setzt' ich werbend daran:
wie thörig tadelst du jetzt!
Ehr' ich die Frauen
doch mehr als dich freut!
Und Freia, die gute, geb' ich nicht auf:
nie sann dies ernstlich mein Sinn.

FRICKA: So schirme sie jetzt: in schutzloser Angst läuft sie nach Hülf' dort her!

FREIA: (hastig auftretend). Hilf mir, Schwester!
Schütze mich, Schwäher!
Vom Felsen drüben drohte mir Fasolt, mich Hold käm' er zu holen.

WOTAN: Lass' ihn droh'n!—
Sah'st du nicht Loge?

FRICKA: Dass am liebsten du immer dem Listigen trau'st!
Manch Schlimmes schuf er uns schon,
doch stets bestrickt er dich wieder.

WOTAN: Wo freier Muth frommt allein, frag' ich nach keinem;
doch des Feindes Neid zum Nutz' sich fügen, lehrt nur Schlauheit und List,
wie Loge verschlagen sie übt.
Der zum Vertrage mir rieth, versprach Freia zu lösen:
auf ihn verlass' ich mich nun.

FRICKA: Und er lässt dich allein.—
Dort schreiten rasch die Riesen heran:
wo harrt dein schlauer Gehülf?

FREIA: Wo harren meine Brüder, dass Hülfe sie brächten, da mein Schwäher die Schwache verschenkt?
Zu Hülfe, Donner!
Hieher! hieher! Rette Freia, mein Froh!

FRICKA: Die in bösem Bund dich verriethem,
sie alle bergen sich nun.
(Fasolt und Fafner, beide in riesiger Gestalt, mit starken Pfählen bewaffnet, treten auf.)

FASOLT: Sanft schloss Schlaf dein Aug':
wir beide bauten
Schlummers bar die Burg.
Mächt'ger Müh' müde nie, stau'ten starke
Stein' wir auf;
steiler Thurm, Thür' und Thor,
deckt und schliesst
im schlanken Schloss den Saal.
Dort steht's, was wir stemmten;
schimmernd hell

WOTAN: (earnestly). When I sought to win you for my wife, I risked my other eye
in a wager;
you blame blindly, I think!
Women I lean to Even more than you like.
I'll let not our fairest Freia be taken:
my thoughts never turned to such a thing.

FRICKA: Then save her at once:— in sorest alarm
she hastens here for help.

FREIA: (entering hastily). Help me, Fricka!
fail me not, father!
From mountain fastness Fasolt gives menace:
he comes too surely to catch me.

WOTAN: Let him rage!—
Did you not see Loge?

FRICKA: You should still accord that belief to that liar!
Much wrong already he's wrought, yet sets new snares for you.

WOTAN: Where simple might serve let none seek to assist me;
but to shape the fraud
of foes to serve me,
I can learn by such arts
as only Loge employs.
He advised this agreement,
and vowed to extricate Freia:
I rely firmly on him.

FRICKA: And he fails in his faith.—
The giants are hastening here, look:
where lurks your juggling ally?

FREIA: Why hasten not my brothers, with help they should bring me,
now my father refuses defense?
O help me, Donner!
Come! Come!
Rescue Freia, my Froh!

FRICKA: Those who basely bargained to wrong you have all abandoned you now.
(Fasolt and Fafner, men of gigantic stature, armed with strong staves, enter.)

FASOLT: Soft sleep
sealed your eyes:
while we wove your walls in wakeful labor.
Tedious toil did not tire us;
We heaped huge and heavy stones.
High with dome,
donjon, door,
we have formed a fortress fair and fast.
There bides
our building,

bescheint's der Tag:
zieh' nun ein,
uns zahl' den Lohn!

WOTAN: Nennt, Leute, den Lohn: was dünkt euch zu bedingen?

FASOLT: Bedungen ist's, was tauglich uns dünkt:
gemahnt es dich so matt?
Freia, die holde, Holda, die freie—vertragen ist's—sie tragen wir heim.

WOTAN: Sied ihr bei Trost
mit eurem Vertrag?
Denkt auf andern Dank:
Freia ist mir nicht feil.

FASOLT: (vor wüthendem Erstaunen einen Augenblick sprachlos). was sagst du, ha!
Sinnst du Verrath?
Verrath am Vertrag?
Die dein Speer birgt, sind sie dir Spiel,
des berath'nen Bundes Runen?

FAFNER: (höhnisch). Getreu'ster Bruder!
Merkst du Tropf nun Betrug?

FASOLT: Lichtsohn du, leicht gefügter,
hör' und hüte dich:
Verträgen halte Treu'!
Was du bist,
bist du nur durch Verträge:
bedungen ist,
wohl bedacht deine Macht.
Bist weiser du als witzig wir sind, bandest uns Freie zum Frieden du:
all deinem Wissen fluch' ich, fliehe weit deinen Frieden, weisst du nicht offen,
ehrlich und frei,
Verträgen zu wahren die Treu'!—
Ein dummer Riese
räth' dir das:
du Weiser, wiss' es von ihm!

WOTAN: Wie schlau für Ernst du achtest, was wir zum Scherz nur beschlossen!
Die liebliche Göttin, licht und leicht,
was taugt euch Tölpeln ihr Reiz?

FASOLT: Höhn'st du uns?
Ha! wie unrecht!—
Die ihr durch Schönheit herrscht, schimmernd hehres Geschlecht, wie thörig strebt ihr nach Thürmen von Stein setzt um Burg und Saal Weibes Wonne zum Pfand!
Wir Plumpen plagen uns schwitzend mit schwieliger Hand, ein Weib zu gewinnen,
das wonnig und mild bei uns Armen wohne:—
und verkehrt nennt ihr den Kauf?

brightening in the beams of day.
Pass within,
but pay our wage.

WOTAN: Name, workmen, your wage.
What forfeit have you fixed on?

FASOLT: It was fixed beforehand,
what we deemed fit:
Your memory is remiss!
Freia the holy—Holda the free one—agreed it is,
she goes home with us.

WOTAN: Are you engrossed on what was agreed?
Ask other reward:
Freia I must refuse.

FASOLT: (remaining a while speechless with wrathful surprise). What did you say—Ha!
You seek to betray—betray a contract?
On your spear it is written, serve but for sport
those compelling runes of power?

FAFNER: (ironically). My faithful brother!
Deem you, fool, he is false?

FASOLT: Son of light.
swayed so lightly,
hear and heed yourself?
Your treaties hold in truth!
What you are,
are you only by treaties; Conformable,
well defined was your might.
You are more wise than we are wary, binding us free ones
in friendly peace:
cursed by your futile wisdom,
peace shall wane before you,
when no more open,
honest and free,
You have broken your warrant and bond!—
A simple giant judges so:
Be warned by him, you wise one!

WOTAN: How sly to take for truth what only in sport we had settled!
The beauteous goddess,
light and bright,
what use to you are her charms?

FASOLT: Do you mock us?
Fie! how evil!—
You who sway in radiance.
regal, sorrowless race, like fools you strive for a fortress of stone;
setting against it
a wondrous woman in pledge.
We, blockheads, damn us, toiling with toughness of hand to win us a woman, who, winning and sweet,
should go gladly with us.—
find now you will back out of the bond?

FAFNER: Schweig' dein faules Schwatzen,
Gewinn werben wir night:
Freia's Haft
hilft wenig:
doch viel gilt's
den Göttern sie zu entführen.
Gold'ne Aepfel
wachsen in ihrem Garten;
sie allein
weiss die Aepfel zu pflegen:
der Frucht Genuss frommt ihren Sippen zu ewig nie alternder Jugend;
siech und bleich
doch sinkt ihre Blüthe, alt und schwach
schwinden sie hin,
müssen Freia sie missen:
ihrer Mitte drum sei sie entführt!

WOTAN: (für sich). Loge säumt zu lang!

FASOLT: Schlicht gieb nun Bescheid!

WOTAN: Sinnt auf andern Sold!

FASOLT: Kein andrer: Freia allein!

FAFNER: Du da, folg' uns fort!
(Sie dringen auf Freia zu.)

FREIA: (fliehend). Helft! helft vor den Harten!
(Donner und Froh kommen eilig.)

FROH: (Freia in seine Arme fassend). Zu mir, Freia!— Meide sie, Frecher!
Froh schützt die Schöne.

DONNER: (sich vor die beiden Riesen stellend).
Fasolt und Fafner,
fühltet ihr schon meines Hammers harten Schlag?

FAFNER: Was soll das Droh'n?

FASOLT: Was dringst du her?
Kampf kies'ten wir nicht, verlangen nur unsern Lohn.

DONNER: (den Hammer schwingend). Schon oft zahlt'ich Riesen den Zoll; schuldig blieb' ich Schächern nie: kommt her! des Lohnes Last wäg' ich mit gutem Gewicht!

WOTAN: (seinen Speer zwischen den Streitenden ausstreckend).
Halt, du Wilder!
Nichts durch Gewalt!
Verträge schürzt meines Speeres Schaft: spar' deines Hammers Heft!

FREIA: Wehe! Wehe!
Wotan verlässt mich!

FRICKA: Begreif' ich dich noch, grausamer Mann?

FAFNER: Check your foolish chatter;
we look to gain no luck.
Freia's self serves little;
but it would be good to get her away from the AEsir:
golden apples
grow in her orchard garden;
none else can grasp the art of their culture:
this grateful fruit grants to her kindred eternal youth time cannot ravage;
weak and blighted
fades their beauty, old and worn
will they pass,
If Freia is ever far from them:
let her be torn from them all.

WOTAN: (aside). Loge takes too long!

FASOLT: Tell us outright your resolve.

WOTAN: Fix on other spoil.

FASOLT: No other: Freia alone!

FAFNER: You there! follow us!
(They press towards Freia.)

FREIA: (seeking to fly). Help!
Help from these harsh ones!
(Donner and Froh enter hastily.)

FROH: (clasping Freia in his arms). To me, Freia!—
Miscreant, fall back!
Froh guards the goddess!

DONNER: (planting himself before the two giants). Fasolt and Fafner—
Have you felt the blow of my hammer's head before?

FAFNER: What do you mean with this threat?

FASOLT: Why thrust in here?
We do not want to fight, we expect nothing else but our pay.

DONNER: (swinging his hammer). I've paid many giants their meed;
rascals ever
I'm ready to pay.
Come here! I'll deal your due, helped with a generous hand.

WOTAN: (stretching out his spear between the disputants). Hold, you fierce one!
Nothing demands force.
This bond the shaft
of my spear shields:
spare then your hammer's handle.

FREIA: Woe is me! Woe is me!
Wotan forsakes me!

FRICKA: You mean it then, merciless man?

WOTAN: (wendet sich ab und sieht Loge kommen). Endlich Loge!
Eiltest du so,
den du geschlossen,
den schlimmen Handel zu schlichten?

LOGE: (ist im Hintergrunde aus dem Thale aufgetreten). Wie? welchen Handel hätt' ich geschlossen?
Wohl was mit den Riesen dort im Rathe du dangst?—
In Tiefen und Höh'n treibt mich mein Hang; Haus und Herd
behagt mir nicht:
Donner und Froh, die denken an Dach und Fach;
wollen sei frei'n,
ein Haus muss sie erfreu'n:
ein stolzer Saal,
ein starkes Schloss, danach stand Wotan's Wunsch.—
Haus und Hof, Saal und Schloss, die selige Burg,
sie steht nun stark gebaut;
das Prachtgemäuer prüfte ich selbst;
ob alles fest,
forscht' ich genau:
Fasolt und Fafner
fand ich bewährt;
kein Stein wankt im Gestemm'.
Nicht müssig war ich,
wie mancher hier:
der lügt, wer lässig mich schilt!

WOTAN: Arglistig
weichst du mir aus:
mich zu betrügen
hüte in Treuen dich wohl!
Von allen Göttern
dein einz'ger Freund, nahm ich dich auf in der übel trauenden Tross.—
Nun red' und rathe klug!
Da einst die Bauer der Burg zum Dank Freia bedangen, du weisst, nicht anders willigt' ich ein, als weil auf Pflicht du gelobtest zu lösen das hehre Pfand.

LOGE: Mit höchster Sorge drauf zu sinnen.
wie es zu lösen,
das—hab' ich gelobt:
doch dass ich fände,
was nie sich fügt,
was nie gelingt,
wie liess sich das wohl geloben?

FRICKA: (zu Wotan). Sieh, welch' trugvollem Schelm du getraut!

FROH: Loge heisst du,
doch nenn' ich dich Lüge!

DONNER: Verfluchte Lohe, dich lösch' ich aus!

WOTAN: (turns away and perceives Loge coming). Here is Loge!
You hurry so when you should straighten the sorry bargain you struck?

LOGE: (who has climbed up from the valley at back). Why! what bad bargain have I struck you?
Was it what you worked conjointly with the giants?
To depths and to heights
I drive at my heed.
House and hearth cannot hold me; Donner and Froh
dote on a dwelling fair:
gladly would they woo,
a house then they must find:
a bright abode,
a bulwark brave,
to this bends Wotan's wish;
roof and room,— house and hall,— the heavenly pile,— behold it in its pride.
The towering walls
I tried myself, examined all
if it were firm.
Fasolt and Fafner
failed not in faith:
each stone fits where it stands.
I was not idle
like all the rest:
he who styles me sluggard, lies.

WOTAN: Artfully
you slipped out:
look to you, traitor,
if you betray me now!
Of all the immortals
your only friend,
I took you up to our over-credulous crew:— now speak, and speak well.
When they who built us the burg
For meed Freia demanded,
You were that aware would I consent solely when you pledged at last to deliver the glorious pledge.

LOGE: With greatest pains the affair to ponder how we might save her that—did I swear.
But to discover what never occurred—what never took place—
how could I possibly promise?

FRICKA: (to Wotan). See what traitorous scamp you trusted!

FROH: You, are Loge, but better called 'liar.' [The pun in the original, between 'Loge' and 'Luge,' cannot be preserved in translation.]

DONNER: Cursed glistener, your gleam I'll quench.

LOGE: Ihre Schmach zu decken schmähen mich Dumme.
(Donner und Froh wollem ihm zu Leibe.)

WOTAN: (wehrt ihnen). In Frieden lasst mir den Freund!
Nicht kennt ihr Loge's Kunst:
reichert wiegt
seines Rathes Werth, zahlt er zögernd ihn aus.

FAFNER: Nichts gezögert:
rasch gezahlt!

FASOLT: Lang währt's mit dem Lohn.

WOTAN: (zu Loge). Jetzt hör', Störrischer!
halte mir Stich!
Wo schweiftest du hin und her?

LOGE: Immer ist Undank
Log'es Lohn!
Um dich nur besorgt sah ich mich um, durchstöbert' im Sturm alle Winkel der Welt, Ersatz für Freia zu suchen, wie er den Riesen wohl recht: Umsonst sucht' ich und sehe nun wohl, in der Welten Ring
nichts ist so reich, als Ersatz zu muthen dem Mann für Weibes Wonne und Werth.
(Alle gerathen in Erstaunen und Betroffenheit.)
So weit Leben und Weben, in Wasser, Erd' und Luft, viel frug ich,
forschte bei allen,
wo Kraft nur sich rührt und Keime sich regen: was wohl dem Manne
mächtiger dünk'.
als Weibes Wonne und Werth?
Doch so weit Leben und Weben, verlacht nur ward
meine fragende List:
in Wasser, Erd' und Luft
lassen will nichts von Lieb' und Weib.— Nur einen sah ich,
der sagte der Liebe ab:
um rothes Gold
entrieth er des Weibes Gunst.
Des Rheines klare Kinder klagten mir ihre Noth:
der Nibelung, Nacht'Alberich, buhlte vergebens
um der Badenden Gunst; das Rheingold da
raubte sich rächend der Dieb:
das dünkt ihm nun
das theuerste Gut, hehrer als Weibes Huld.
Um den gleissenden Tand, der Tiefe entwandt, erklang mir der Töchter Klage:
an dich, Wotan,
wenden sie sich,
dass zu Recht du zögest den Räuber, das Gold dem Wasser wieder gebest, und ewig es bliebe ihr Eigen.—

LOGE: But to screen your blunder you scold me, blockheads.
(Donner and Froh are about to set on him.)

WOTAN: (restraining them). I pray you leave him in peace!
You know not Loge's kraft:
his advice ever has Value high when we wait for it long.

FAFNER: No more waiting:
quick!—the wage!

FASOLT: Pay fails to appear.

WOTAN: (to Loge). Now listen, strategist!
Hold still.
Why did you stray here and there?

LOGE: Evil is ever Loge's lot.
Alone for your sake
I ventured out, and stormily strode
to the ends of the earth to seek for Freia a substitute, which for the giants were just.
Success slipped me:
I see now full well in the world around nothing is so rare to replace in mind of a man a woman's wonderful worth.
(All exhibit surprise and emotion.)
Where life ebbs and flows in flood, and earth, and air,
all I asked,
ever inquiring
where sinew reigns,
and seedlings are rooted,
what a man could deem mightier than woman's wonderful worth.
But where life ebbs and flows,
I only found myself laughed at by all.
In flood and earth and air everything has for aim only love.
Yet I met one who had made his oath against love;
for ruddy gold
bereft him of woman's grace.
The Rhine's indignant daughters dismal tidings announced:
The Nibelung, Night-Alberich, failed from the girls
to gain amorous favors;
he robbed the Rhinegold in his raging revenge:
and values now its worth over all—greater than woman's grace.
For their glittering toy, torn from the deep,
the maidens are mourning with tears.
To you, Wotan,
they turn wailing,
that your wrath may fall on the robber:
the gold be given once more to the waves,

Dir's zu melden
gelobt' ich den Mädchen:
nun lös'te Loge sein Wort.

WOTAN: Thörig bist du,
wenn nicht gar tückisch!
Mich selbst siehst du in Noth;
wie hülf' ich andren zum Heil?

FASOLT: (der aufmerksam zugehört, zu Fafner). Nicht gönn' ich das Gold dem Alben, viel Noth schuf uns der Niblung, doch schlau entschlüpfte immer unsrem Zwange der Zwerg.

FAFNER: Neue Neidthat
sinnt uns der Niblung, giebt das Gold ihm Macht.—
Du da, Loge!
Sag' ohne Lüg: was Grosses gilt denn das Gold, dass es dem Niblung genügt?

LOGE: Ein Tand ist's
In des Wassers Tiefe, lachenden Kindern zur Lust:
doch, ward es zum runden Reife geschmiedet, hilft es zu höchster Macht, Gewinnt dem Manne die Welt.

WOTAN: Von des Rheines Gold hort' ich raunen:
Beute-Runen
berge sein rother Glanz, Macht und Schätze
schüf' ohne Mass ein Reif.

FRICKA: Taugte wohl auch des gold'nen Tandes gleissend Geschmeid Frauen zu schönem Schmuck?

LOGE: Des Gatten Treu' ertrotzte die Frau, trüge sie hold den hellen Schumck?
den schimmernd Zwerge schmieden;
rührig im Zwange des Reif's.

FRICKA: Gewänne mein Gatte wohl sich das Gold!

WOTAN: Des Reifes zu walten, räthlich will es mich dünken.—
Doch, wie, Loge, lernt' ich die Kunst?
wie schüf' ich mir das Geschmeid?

LOGE: Ein Runenzauber
zwingt das Gold zum Reif:
keiner kennt ihn;
doch einer übt ihn leicht,
der sel'ger Lieb' entsagt.
(Wotan wendet sich unmuthig ab.)
Das spar'st du wohl;
zu spät auch käm'st du:
Alberich zögerte nicht;
zaglos gewanne er
des Zaubers Macht: gerathen ist ihm der Ring.

DONNER: Zwang uns allen
schüfe der Zwerg, würd' ihm der Reif nicht entrissen.

their own to continue forever.—
This to mention
I swore to the maidens:
now staunch I stand to my word.

WOTAN: You are senseless
if not designing!
Myself suffering remorse
what help have I for others?

FASOLT: (who has been listening attentively—to Fafner). This gold
I begrudge the Niblung.
Much wrong he's hatched us already:
but slily slipped the dwarf unhindered out of our hold.

FAFNER: Now the gnome will shape new annoyance, mighty made by gold.
You there, Loge; say without lies what greatness gives this gold, that the dwarf holds it dear?

LOGE: It was a toy taken from waters, serving as sport for gay maidens but when to a Ring it is rounded and fashioned it grants marvellous might,
and wins its grasper the world.

WOTAN: Many rumors tell of the Rhinegold:
runes of riches
run in its ruddy light;
might and wealth
it would win were it made a ring.

FRICKA: Profits as well the golden bauble's glittering dross for women to deck and adorn?

LOGE: A wife could fix
the faith of her spouse, found she the rare and radiant mass
whose metal pygmies molded, ruled by the power of the ring.

FRICKA: O might but my husband gain me the hoard!

WOTAN: To win me that little ring seems wise to my thinking.—
But how, Loge, do I learn the means?
how make the dwarf's treasure mine?

LOGE: A rune of magic makes the gold a ring;
none may know it;
but he has learned its hold,
who forswears sweets of love.
(Wotan turns away discouraged.)
That likes you not;
too late you are too:
Alberich paused not in doubt!
promptly he conquered
the potent spell,
and rightly fashioned the ring.

DONNER: We were all placed in his power,
were not the ring from him ravished.

WOTAN: Den Ring muss ich haben!

FROH: Leicht erringt ohne Liebesfluch er sich jetzt.

LOGE: Spott-leicht, ohne Kunst wie im Kinder-Spiel!

WOTAN: So rathe, wie?

LOGE: Durch raub!
Was ein Dieb stahl,
das stiehlst du dem Dieb:
ward leichter ein Eigen erlangt?—
Doch mit arger Wehr wahrt sich Alberich:
klug und fein
musst du verfahren, ziehst du den Räuber zu Recht, um des Rheines Töchtern den rothen Tand, das Gold, wieder zu geben:
denn darum bitten sie dich.

WOTAN: Des Rheines Töchter?
Was taugt mir der Rath?

FRICKA: Von dem Wassergezücht mag ich nichts wissen:
schon manchen Mann
—mir zum Leid—verlocktem sie buhlend im Bad.
(Wotan steht stumm mit sich kamptend; die ubrigen, Götter heften in schweigender Spannung die Blicke auf ihn.—Während dem hat Fafner bei Seite mit Fasolt berathen.)

FAFNER: Glaub' mir, mehr als
Freia
frommt das gleissende Gold:
auch we'ge Jugend erjagt, wer durch Goldes Zauber sie zwingt.
(Sie treten wieder heran.) Hör', Wotan,
der Harrenden Wort: Freia bleib' euch in Frieden;
leichter'n Lohn
fand ich zur Lösung:
uns rauhen Riesen genügt des Niblungen rothes Gold.

WOTAN: Seid ihr bei Sinn?
was nicht ich besitze, soll ich euch Schamlosen schenken?

FAFNER: Schwer baute dort sich die Burg:
leicht wird's dir
mit list'ger Gewalt (was im Neidspiel nie uns gelang) den Niblungen fest zu fah'n.

WOTAN: Für euch müht' ich mich um den Alben?
für euch fing' ich den Feind?
Unverschämt
und überbegehrlich macht euch Dumme mein Dank!

FASOLT: (ergreift plötzlich Freia und führt sie mit Fafner zur Seite). Hieher, Maid!
in uns're Macht!
Als Pfand folgst du jetzt,

WOTAN: That ring I must seize.

FROH: Lightly now, without forswearing love,
If were gained.

LOGE: Quite lightly;
you require scant knowledge.

WOTAN: Advise us, how?

LOGE: By theft!
What a thief stole,
that steal from the thief:
were anything done with more ease?
But with artful foils fights Alberich;
shrewd and wileful be your workings that the robber be surpassed:
to the river sisters their ruddy toy,
the gold, once more be given;
for therefore they cry to you.

WOTAN: The river sisters!
What does your story serve?

FRICKA: I do not wish to hear reaction of that watery race, for many men
—more's my pain—have perished, allured by their love.
(Wotan stands silently struggling with himself, while the other gods all look expectantly at him. Meanwhile, Fafner has consulted aside with Fasolt.)

FAFNER: Trust me, more than Freia fits us treasure so true, nor need we long yearn for youth with the gold's all-mastering might.
(They again advance.)
Hear, Wotan,
our hasty last words!
Free from our hands be Freia:
You must release
a lesser forfeit;
the ungentle giants will need just Nibelheim's gems and gold.

WOTAN: Where are your wits?
How can I award you what is not mine yet, you miscreants?

FAFNER: It was work to raise yonder towers;
you can, though, do with more thoughtful craft (what never our needs could bring through):
the Nibelung fetter fast.

WOTAN: For you shall I show myself yielding?
For you fetter a foe? I call such conduct Shame-devoid and shockingly covetous!

FASOLT: (suddenly seizing Freia and drawing her with Fafner aside). Come here, maid!
Remain with us.
You are now placed in pledge bis wir Lösung empfahn.

(Freia schreit laut auf: alle Götter sind in höchster Bestürzung.)

FAFNER: Fort von hier sei sie entführt!
Bis Abend, achtet's wohl, pflegen wir sie als Pfand:
wir kehren wieder;
doch kommen wir,
und bereit liegt nicht als Lösung das Rheingold roth und licht—

FASOLT: Zu End' ist die Frist dann, Freia verfallen:
für immer folge sie uns!

FREIA: Schwester! Brüder!
Rettet! helft!
(Sie wird von den hastig enteilenden Riesen fortgetragen; in der Ferne hören die bestürzten Götten ihren Wehruf verhallen.)

FROH: Auf, ihnen nach!

DONNER: Breche denn alles!
(Sie blicken Wotan fragend an.)

LOGE: (den Riesen nachsehend).
Über Stock und Stein zu Thal stapfen sie hin;
durch des Rheines Wasserfurth waten die Riesen:
fröhlich nicht
hängt Freia den Rauhen über den Rücken!—
Heia! hei!
Wie taumeln die Tölpel dahin!
Durch das Thal talpen sie schon:
wohl an Riesenheim's Mark
erst halten sie Rast!
(Er wendet sich zu den Göttern.)
Was sinnt nun Wotan so wild?—
Den seligen Göttern wie geht's?
(Ein fahler Nebel erfüllt mit wachsender Dichtheit die Bühne, in ihm erhalten die Götter ein zunehmend bleiches und ältliches Aussehen: alle stehen bang und erwartungsvoll auf Wotan blickend, der sinnend die Augen an den Boden heftet.)

LOGE: Trügt mich ein Nebel?
neckt mich ein Traum?
Wie bang und bleich verblüht ihr so bald!
Euch erlischt der Wangen Licht, der Blick eures Auges verblitz!— Frisch, mein Froh, noch ist's ja früh!—
Deiner Hand, Donner, entfüllt ja der Hammer!—
Was ist's mit Fricka?
freut sie sich wenig
ob Wotan's grämlichem Grau, das schier zum Greisen ihn schafft?

FRICKA: Wehe! Wehe!
Was ist geschehen?

DONNER: Mir sinkt die Hand.

FROH: Mir stockt das Herz.

LOGE: Jetzt fand ich's: hört was euch fehlt!
Von Freia's Frucht
genosset ihr heute noch nicht:

till our forfeit be paid.
(Freia cries aloud: all the gods are in the greatest perturbation.)

FAFNER: Far from here shall she be forced:
till nightfall—note me well—placed is she as a pledge;
then once more we come and when we call should we not find as the forfeit the Rhinegold fair and red—

FASOLT: At end is the friendship, Freia is forfeit;
forever fallen to us.

FREIA: Sisters! Brothers!
Save me! Help!
(She is borne off by the hastily retreating giants; the troubled gods hear her cries of distress dying away in the distance.)

FROH: Up! on their track!

DONNER: Perish now all things!
(They look inquiringly towards Wotan.)

LOGE: (looking after the giants).
Over stock and stone they tramp straight down the vale;
through the Rhine's befriending ford flounder the ruffians:
Frightened,
now Freia must ride the back of the rascals.—
Heia! hei!
How the stupids stumble along!
Past the steep stride they speed;
but in Riesenheim's bounds
they first will take rest.
(He turns to the gods.)
Why dream Wotan so wild?
What dread has gotten the gods?
(A pale mist, increasing in density, fills the stage; in it the gods seem to take an aged and haggard appearance: all stand in alarm looking towards Wotan, who thoughtfully casts his eyes on the ground.)

LOGE: Am I foold by a vapor?
Veils me a dream?
How fast fairness has fled your features!
The bloom is chased from your cheeks;
the spark of your eyes has expired!—
Flag not, Froh; day has not fled!
Does your hand, Donner, relax from the hammer?
What ails Fricka?
Does she find her spouse's grayness and gloom displeasing, which gathers over him like age?

FRICKA: Woe is me! Woe is me!
What is it all?

DONNER: My hand sinks!

FROH: My heart stops!

LOGE: I've found it—hear what's happened!
Of Freia's fruit
no atom today did you eat.

die gold'nen Aepfel
in ihrem Garten, sie machten euch tüchig und jung
ass't ihr sie jeden Tag.
Des Gartens Pflegerin
ist nun verpfändet;
an den Aesten darbt und dorrt das Obst:
bald fällt faul es herab.—
Mich kümmert's minder;
an mir kargte Freia von je knausernd die köstliche Frucht:
denn halb so ächt nur bin ich wie, Herrliche, ihr!
Doch ihr setztet alles aug das jüngende Obst:
das wussten die Riesen wohl;
auf euer Leben legten sie's an:
nun sorgt, wie ihr das wahrt!
Ohne die Aepfel
alt und grau,
greis und grämlich,
welkend zum Spott aller Welt, erstirbt der Götter Stamm.

FRICKA: Wotan, Gemahl unsel'ger Mann!
Sieh wie dein Leichtsinn lachend uns allen Schimpf und Schmach erschuf!

WOTAN: (mit plötzlichem Entschluss auffahrend). Auf, Loge!
hinab mit mir,
Nach Nibelheim fahren wir nieder:
gewinnen will ich das Gold.

LOGE: Die Rheintöchter riefen dich an:
so dürfen Erhörung sie hoffen?

WOTAN: (heftig). Schweige, Schwätzer!
Freia, die gute,
Freia gilt es zu lösen.

LOGE: Wie du befiehlst führ' ich dich gern:
steil hinab
steigen wir denn durch den Rhein?

WOTAN: Nicht durch den Rhein!

LOGE: So schwingen wir uns durch die Schwefelkluft:
dort schlüpfe mit mir hinein!
(Er geht voran und verschwindet seitwärts in einer Kluft, aus der sogleich ein schwefliger Dampf hervorquillt.)

WOTAN: Ihr andren harrt bis Abend hier:
verlor'ner Jugend
erjag' ich erlösendes Gold!
(Er steigt Loge nach in die Kluft hinab: der aus ihr dringende Schwefeldampf verbreitet sich über die ganze Rühne und erfüllt diese schnell mit dickem Gewölk. Bereits sind die Zurück-bleibenden unsichtbar.)

DONNER: Fahre wohl, Wotan!

FROH: Glück auf! Glück auf!

The golden apples from her garden preserved you from dwindling with age, eating them every day.
The garden's keeper
now held a captive;
rests among the foliage
and rots the fruit:
it will fall soon, full spoiled.
My case is milder;
for me, unkindly, Freia has ever kept from the coveted fruit;
in me but half the power you immortal ones have.
But all leaned on the apples' youth-giving aid:
this knew the giants well;
against your lives
a league is begun,
And how do you find your defense?
If without apples,
old and grim,
gray and gruesome,
waning to sport of the world,
the stock of gods would cease.

FRICKA: Wotan! My lord!
Luckless and lost!
Look how your heedless hastiness now
our shunless shame has shaped!

WOTAN: (starting up with sudden resolution). Up! Loge, and off with me!
Beneath, to the home of the Nibelungs.
I'll surely seize this gold.

LOGE: The Rhine maidens raised their complaint:
so may they then hope for a hearing?

WOTAN: (violently). Peace! You prattler!
Freia the noble—
Freia needs our assistance.

LOGE: Swiftly I'll guide, go where you will:
steeply down
shall we descend through the Rhine?

WOTAN: Not through the Rhine.

LOGE: We'll swing ourselves then through the sulfur cleft:
so slip with me down it!
(He goes first and disappears at the side down a crevice from which immediately a sulfurous vapor rises.)

WOTAN: You others halt Until evening here:
our youth departed
I'll purchase me with the gold yet.
(He clambers after Loge into the sulfur cleft: the vapor stealing out of which spreads over the whole stage with a thick cloud, concealing the rest of the characters.)

DONNER: Farewell, Wotan!

FROH: Good luck! Good luck!

FRICKA: O kehre bald zur bangenden Frau!
(Der Schwefeldampf verdüstert sich bis zu ganz schwarzem Gewölk, welches von unten nach oben steigt; dann verwandelt sich dieses in festes, finstres Steingeklüft, das sich immer aufwärts bewegt, so dass es den Anschein hat, als sänke die Scene immer tiefer in die Erde hinab.)

DRITTE SCENE.

Endlich dämmert von verschiedenen Seiten aus der Ferne her, dunkelrother Schein auf: eine unabsehbar weit sich dahinziehendel unterirdische Kluft wird erkennbar die nach allen Seiten hin in enge Schachte auszumünden scheint.

Alberich zerrt den kreischenden Mime an den Ohren aus einer Seitenschlufft herbei.

ALBERICH: Hehe! hehe!
hieher! hieher!
Tückischer Zwerg!
tapfer gezwickt sollst du mir sein, schaffst du nicht fertig,
wie ich's bestellt, zur Stund' das feine Geschmeid!

MIME: (heulend). Ohe! Ohe!
Au! Au!
Lass' mich nur los!
Fertig ist es,
wie du befahlst;
mit Fleiss und Schweiss ist es gefügt:
nimm nur die Nägel vom Ohr!

ALBERICH: (loslassend). Was zögerst du dann
und zeigst es nicht?

MIME: Ich Armer zagte, dass noch was fehle.

ALBERICH: Was wär' noch nicht fertig?

MIME: (verlegen).
Hier . . . und da . . .

ALBERICH: Was hier und da?
Her das Gewirk!
(Er will ihm wieder an das Ohr fahren: vor Schreck lässt Mime, ein metallenes Gewirke, das er krampfhaft in den Händen hielt sich entfallen. Alberich hebt es hastig auf und prüft es genau.)
Schau' du Schelm!
Alles geschmiedet
und fertig gefügt,
wie ich's befahl!
So wollte der Tropf
schlau mich betrügen?
für sich behalten
das hehre Geschmeid, das meine List
ihn zu schmieden gelehrt?
kenn; ich dich dummen Dieb?
(Er setzt das Gewirk als "Tarnhelm" auf den Kopf.)

FRICKA: O, return soon to soothe my trouble!
(The sulfurous vapor thickens to a quite black cloud which rises upwards; this then changes to a firm, gloomy, rocky chasm which also continually rises, giving the stage the appearance of sinking deeper and deeper into the earth.)

SCENE III

Presently from various quarters ruddy light gleams out; and there extends farther than eye can reach a subterranean cavern which on all sides seems to lead to other and narrower passages.

Alberich enters, dragging the shrieking Mime by the ear from a cleft at one side.

ALBERICH: Hello! Hello!
Come here! Come here!
Rascally imp!
Rarely, now I will nip your ear, should you not weld me straight on the spot
the special work I have shown.

MIME: (howling). Oho! Oho!
Oh! Oh!
Let me alone!
It is made
at your command, with moil and toil
molded by me.
Nick not your nails at me so!

ALBERICH: (letting him go). Why hesitate then to hand it out?

MIME: I apprehended in case anything was failing—

ALBERICH: Where was it unfinished?

MIME: (hesitating). Here—and there—

ALBERICH: How 'here and there'?
hand me the work!
(He threatens to seize again the ear of Mime who, in terror, lets fall a piece of metal work that he has held concealed in his hand. Alberich hastily picks it up and examines it.)
See, you scamp!
All has been smithed and welded, I expect,
after my word.
You, idiot, would seek to deceive me,
and save the wonderful work for yourself?
when by my lore
you could shape it alone!
Have I read your thoughts, my thief?
(He sets the metal work on his head as a 'Tarnhelm'.)

Dem Haupt fügt sich der Helm ob sich der Zauber auch zeigt?
—"Nacht und Nebel, Niemand gleich!"—
(Seine Gestalt verschwindet; statt ihrer gewahrt man eine Nebelsäule.)
Siehst du mich, Bruder?

MIME: (blickt sich verwundert um). Wo bist du? ich sehe dich nicht.

ALBERICH: (Stimme). So fühle mich doch, du fauler Schuft!
Nimm' das für dein Diebsgelüst!
(Mime schreit und windet sich unter empfangenen Geisselhieben, deren Fall man vernimmt ohne die Geissel selbst zu sehen.)
(Stimme, lachend.) Dank, du Dummer!
Dein Werk bewährt sich gut.—
Hoho! Hoho!
Niblungen all,
neigt euch Alberich!
Überall weilt er nun,
euch zu bewachen;
Ruh' und Rast
ist euch zerronnen;
ihm müsst ihr schaffen,
wo nicht ihr ihn schaut;
wo ihr nicht ihn gewahrt,
seid seiner gewärtig:
unterthan seid ihr ihm immer!
Hoho! Hoho!
hört ihn: er naht,
der Niblungen-Herr!

LOGE: Nibelheim hier:
durch bleiche Nebel wie blitzen dort feurige Funken?

WOTAN: Hier stöhnt es laut:
was liegt im Gestein?

LOGE: (neigt sich zu Mime). Was Wunder wimmerst du hier?

MIME: Ohe! Ohe!
Au! Au!

LOGE: Hie, Mime! Muntrer Zwerg! was zwingt und zwackt dich denn
so?

MIME: Lass' mich in Frieden!

LOGE: Das will ich freilich, und mehr noch, hör':
helfen will ich dir, Mime!

MIME: (sich etwas aufrichtend).
Wer hälfe mir?
Gehorchen muss ich dem leiblichen Bruder, der mich in Bande gelegt.

The helmet fits to the head;
now will it act as it ought?
—'Night annul me.
Nothing be seen!'—
(He vanishes, and a column of smoke takes his place.)
Brother, do you see me?

MIME: (gazing about in astonishment). Where do you stand? I do not see you!

ALBERICH: (voice). Then feel me instead,
you faithless scamp;
take this for your thievish tricks!
(Mime writhes and cries under the blows which are heard to fall on him from an invisible scourge.) (voice, laughing.) I thank you, thickhead:
the work is well performed.
Hoho! Hoho!
Nibelung elves,
kneel all to Alberich!
Everywhere he wanders watching over you;
reign of rest
is riven from you;
you mush serve him
who lurks unseen:
when you least of all note him
he's near you!
You are slaves to him forever
Hoho! Hoho!
hear him; he nears,
the Nibelung's head!
(The column of vapor disappears towards the back; Alberich's scoldings are heard retreating in the distance; howls and cries respond from lower passages, finally the sounds are lost in the distance. Mime has cowered down in pain. His groans and whimperings are heard by Wotan and Loge who descend from above by a side cleft.)

LOGE: Nibelheim's here.
What glare I notice that glows from those varying vapors?

WOTAN: Who groans so loud:
what lies on the ground?

LOGE: (bending down to Mime).
What whining whimperer's here?

MIME: Oho! Oho!
Oh! Oh!

LOGE: Hey, Mime, merry gnome!
what nips and knocks you like this?

MIME: Leave me in quiet!

LOGE: Yes without question; and more yet, listen—
help I'll give to you, Mime.

MIME: (partially rising). What help for me?
I have for master
a hard-hearted brother who makes me bondsman to him!

LOGE: Dich, Mime, zu binden was gab ihm die Macht?

MIME: Mit arger List schuf sich Alberich
aus Rheines Gold einen gelben Reif:
seinem starken Zauber zittern wir staunend;
mit ihm zwingt er uns alle, der Niblungen nächtiges Heer.— Sorglose Schmiede, schufen wir sonst wohl Schmuck unsren Weibern, wonnig Geschmeid, niedlichen Niblungentand:
wir lachten lustig der Müh'.
Nun zwingt uns der Schlimme in Klüfte zu schlüpfen, für ihn allein
uns immer zu müh'n.
Durch des Ringes Gold
erräth seine Gier, wo neuer Schimmer
in Schachten sich birgt:
da müssen wir spähen,
spüren und graben,
die Beute schmelzen und schmieden den Guss, ohne Ruh' und Rast
den Hort zu häufen dem Herrn.

LOGE: Den Trägen so eben traf wohl sein Zorn?

MIME: Mich Armen, ach!
mich zwang er zum ärgsten:
ein Helmgeschmeid
hiess er mich schweissen;
genau befahl er
wie es zu fügen.
Wohl merkt' ich klug
welch' mächt'ge Kraft zu eigen dem Werk, das aus Erz ich wirkte:
für mich drum hüten
wollt' ich den Helm, durch seinen Zauber Alberich's Zwang mich entzieh'n—vielleicht, ja vielleicht den Lästigen selbst überlisten, in meine Gewalt ihn zu werfen.
den Ring ihm zu entreissen, dass, wie ich Knecht jetzt dem Kühnen, mir Freien er selber dann fröhn'!

LOGE: Warum, du Kluger, glückte dir's nicht?

MIME: Ach, der das Werk ich wirkte, den Zauber, der ihm entzuckt, den Zauber errieth ich nicht recht!
Der das Werk mir rieth, und mir's entriss,
der lehrte mich nun
—doch leider zu spät!—
welche List läg' in dem Helm:
meinem Blick entschwandt er, doch Schwielen dem Blinden schulg unschaubar sein Arm.
Das schuf ich mir Dummen

LOGE: But, Mime, what brought him
the power to command?

MIME: With evil craft lately Alberich hath wrought from Rhinegold a ruddy ring and its spell of magic masters our spirits;
with this he moves to serve him,
the night-loving Niblung race.
Once at our anvils ornaments all made,
only our wives to deck;
worked from the ore
nice little Nibelung toys:
we lightly laughed as we toiled.
This wretch now compels us to pierce to deep caverns, to heavily toil
for him alone.
Through the ring of gold he advises in his greed where unknown splendor is spread in the earth.
Then must we all trace it, track it and dig it;
extract the metal
and melt it into bars.
With no peace or pause,
to heap up the hoard for him.

LOGE: His lash has chastised your laziness then?

MIME: I am most ill-starred!
My slavery is endless,
I had forged a helmet to fashion:
exact commands
he gave for its making.
My wit surmised the wondrous might possessed by the work that from steel I wove:
the helm I sorely wanted myself, that its enchantment Alberich's chiding might check;
maybe—yes, maybe the bully himself it would bamboozle.
That he might be placed in my power—
the ring be ravished from him:
then I who bend as his bondsman, should henceforth command as master.

LOGE: And why, my trickster, did you not triumph?

MIME: Ah! though the work I welded, the magic to which it was made,
that magic I read not right.
He who robbed from me
the work I wrought,
I learned of him now,
—too late though, alas!—
what good luck lay in the helmet.
He faded from my eyes but finely his arm
my fool's back furrowed with stripes.

schön zu Dank!
(Er streicht sich heulend den Rücken. Die Götter lachen.)

LOGE: (zu Wotan). Gesteh', nicht leicht gelingt der Fang.

WOTAN: Doch erliegt der Feind, hilft deine List.

MIME: (vom dem Lachen der Götter betroffen, betrachtet diese aufmerksamer). Mit eurem Gefrage wer seid denn ihr Fremde?

LOGE: Freunde dir;
von ihrer Noth befrei'n wir der Niblungen Volk.
(Alberich's Zanken und Züchtigen nähert sich wieder.)

MIME: Nehmt euch in Acht!
Alberich naht.

WOTAN: Sein harren wir hier.
(Er setzt sich ruhig auf einen Stein; Loge lehnt ihm zur Seite.—Alberich, der den Tarnhelm vom Haupte genommen und in den Gürtel gehängt hat, treibt mit geschwungener Geissel aus der unteren, tiefer gelegenen Schlucht, aufwärts eine Schaar Nibelungen vor sich her; diese sind mit goldenem und silbernem Geschmeide beladen, das sie, unter Alberich's stetem Schimpfen und Schelten, all auf einen Haufen speichern und so zu einem Horte häufen.)

ALBERICH: Hieher! Dorthin!
Hehe! Hoho!
Träges Heer, dort zu Hauf
schichtet den Hort!
Du da, hinauf!
Willst du voran?
Schmähliches Volk,
ab das Geschmeide!
Soll ich euch helfen?
Alles hieher!
(Er gewahrt plötzich Wotan und Loge.)
He! wer ist dort?
Wer drang hier ein?—
Mime! Zu mir, schäbiger Schuft!
Schwatztest du gar
mit dem schweifenden Paar?
Fort! du Fauler!
Willst du gleich schmieden und schaffen?
(Er treibt Mime mit Geisselhieben unter den Haufen der Nibelungen hinein.) Hie! an die Arbeit!
Alle von hinnen!
Hurtig hinab!
Aus den neuen Schachten schafft mir das Gold!
Euch grüsst die Geissel, grabt ihr nicht rasch!
Dass keiner mir müssig
bürge mir Mime, sonst birgt er sich schwer
meines Armes Schwunge:

Through foolishness thus
I found my thanks.
(He rubs his back, howling. The gods laugh.)

LOGE: (to Wotan). Admit, not easy is our task.

WOTAN: Until our end's attained
Your cunning must aid us.

MIME: (struck by the laughter of the gods, observes them more attentively). Who are you before me that question so freely?

LOGE: Friends to you:
we'd free all the Nibelung folk from their vexations.
(Alberich's threats and scourgings again approach.)

MIME: Keep a look out!
Alberich comes.

WOTAN: For him we wait here.
(He quietly seats himself on a stone. Loge leans by his side.—Alberich, who has now removed the Tarnhelm and wears it in his girdle, drives with brandished whip from the caves below a crowd of Nibelungs before him. They are laden with gold and silver jewelry which under Alberich's continual scolding and urging, they pile up in one heap.)

ALBERICH: Here! There!
Hallo! Hallo!
Lazy hounds!
There in heaps pile up the hoard!
You there, get up!
Will you move on?
Indolent pack,
down with the ingots.
Shall I then help you?
Drag it all here.
(He suddenly perceives Wotan and Loge.) Hey! who are these who thus intrude?
Mime, to me,
pestilent patch!
You prattle here with this promising pair?
Off, you idler!
Back to your pickaxe and pincers!
(With uplifted scourge he drives Mime into the crowd of Nibelungs.)
Hey! to your labor!
Look that you hurry!
Hurry below!
From the new-found shafts
now shovel the gold!
Who grubs not gaily gets the whip!
If any be idle
Mime shall answer, or make his escape from the sting of my scourge!
That I everywhere wander

dass ich überall weile, wo Niemand es wähnt, das weiss er, dünkt mich, genau.—
Zögert ihr noch?
Zaudert wohl gar?
(Er zieht seinen Ring vom Finger, küsst ihn und streckt ihn drohend aus.)
Zittre und zage, gezähmtes Heer:
rasch gehorcht
des Ringes Herrn!
(Unter Geheul und Gekreisch stieben die Nibelungen (unter ihnen Mime) auseinander, und schlüpfen nach allen Seiten in die Schachte hinab.)

ALBERICH: (grimmig auf Wotan und Loge zutretend). Was sucht ihr hier?

WOTAN: Von Nibelhein's nächt'gem Land
vernahmen wir neue Mähr':
mächt'ge Wunder
wirke hier Alberich;
daran uns zu weiden trieb uns Gäste die Gier.

ALBERICH: Nach Nibelheim
fürht euch wohl Neid:
so kühne Gaste,
glaubt, kenn' ich gar gut.

LOGE: Kennst du mich gut, kindischer Alp?
Nun sag': wer bin ich,
dass du so bell'st?
Im kalten Loch, da kauernd du lag'st wer gab dir Licht
und wärmende Lohe, wenn Loge nie dir gelacht?
Was hülf' dir dein Schmieden, heizt' ich die Schmiede dir nicht?
Dir bin ich Vetter,
und war dir Freund:
nicht fein drum dünkt mich dein Dank!

ALBERICH: Den Lichtalben
lacht jetzt Loge, der listige Schelm:
bist du Falscher ihr Freund, wie mir Freund du einst warst haha! mich freut's!
von ihnen fürcht' ich dann nichts.

LOGE: So denk' ich, kannst du mir trau'n?

ALBERICH: Deiner Untreu' trau' ich, nicht deiner Treu'!—
Doch getrost trotz' ich euch allen.

LOGE: Hohen Muth
verleiht deine Macht:
grimmig gross wuchs dir die Kraft.

ALBERICH: Siehst du den Hort, den mein Heer
dort mir gehäuft?

LOGE: So neidlichen sah' ich noch nie.

where no one believes who knows better than he?
Tarrying still?
Take you no heed?
(Draws the ring from his finger, kisses it and stretches it commandingly out.)
Tremble in terror,
Down trodden race:
heed his rule
who holds the Ring!
(With howls and shrieks the Nibelungs—Mime among them—separate and slip into crevices on all sides down to their shafts again.)

ALBERICH: (advancing wrathfully to Wotan and Loge). What do you want here?

WOTAN: From Nibelheim's night-bound land strange news rang, to our notice of rarest wonders worked here by Alberich:
to witness these marvels makes us guests at your gate.

ALBERICH: Nothing gnaws you but envy, I know:
and why you greet me,
guests, well I guess.

LOGE: Do you know me, miserable dwarf?
Who is it? now say,
at whom would you snarl?
In frigid hole where you lay freezing, where would your light and warming illuminate if you had not looked on Loge?
What aid would your hammer be if I never heated the forge?
Cousin you may be,
once friend of mine;—
Your thanks are no more than these?

ALBERICH: To light elves Loge belongs now,
deluding rogue!
Are you as fairly their friend as my friend you were once?
Haha! that's fine!—
I need fear nothing from their hands.

LOGE: I'm surely worthy of your trust.

ALBERICH: In your untruth I trust not in your truth!
But entrenched I triumph over all.

LOGE: Power has brought you spirit brave:
grimly great waxes your force.

ALBERICH: Do you see the hoard that my host heaps for me there?

LOGE: So noble a sight I never knew.

ALBERICH: Das ist für heut', ein kärglich Häufchen:
kühn und mächtig
soll es künftig sich mehren.

WOTAN: Zu was doch frommt dir der Hort, da freundlos Nibelheim, und nichts um Schätze hier feil?

ALBERICH: Schätze zu schaffen und Schätze zu bergen, nützt mir Nibelheim's Nacht;
doch mit dem Hort,
in der Höhle gehäuft, denk' ich dann Wunder zu wirken: die ganze Welt
gewinn' ich mit ihm mir zu eigen.

WOTAN: Wie beginnst du,
Gütiger, das?

ALBERICH: Die in linder Lüfte Weh'n da oben ihr lebt, lacht und liebt:
mit gold'ner Faust
euch Göttliche fan' ich mir alle!
Wie ich der Liebe abgesagt, Alles was lebt
soll ihr entsagen:
mit Golde gegirrt,
nach Gold nur sollt ihr noch gieren.
Auf wonnigen Höh'n in seligem Weben wiegt ihr euch,
den Schwarz-Alben verachtet ihr ewigen Schwelger:—
habt Acht!
habt Acht!—
denn dient ihr Männer erst meiner Macht, eure schmucken Frau'n—die mein Frei'n verschmäht—sie zwingt zur Lust sich der Zwerg, lacht Liebe ihm nicht.—
Hahahaha!
hört ihr mich recht?
Habt Acht!
Habt Acht vor dem nächtlichen Heer, ensteigt des Niblungen Hort aus stummer Tiefe zu Tag!

WOTAN: (auffahrend). Vergeh', frevelnder Gauch!

ALBERICH: Was sagt der?

LOGE: (ist dazwischen getreten). Sei doch bei Sinnen!
(Zu Alberich.)
Wen doch fasste nicht Wunder, erfährt er Alberich'sWerk?
Gelingt deiner herrlichen List,
Was mit dem Hort du heischest, Den Mächtigsten muss ich dich rühmen:
denn Mond und Stern'
und die strahlende Sonne, sie auch dürfen nicht anders, dienen müssen sie dir.—
Doch wichtig acht'ich vor allem, dass des Hortes Häufer,
der Nibulungen Heer, neidlos dir geneigt.
Einen Ring rührtest du kühn, dem zagte sitternd dein Volk:
doch wenn im Schlaf

ALBERICH: That's for today, the merest dribble much more metal shall augment it tomorrow.

WOTAN: But what can it profit you the hoard here in baleful Nibelheim, where nothing is bought by riches!

ALBERICH: Riches to raise me, and riches to furnish,
I need Nibelheim's night,
But with the hoard
that I heap in hollows, wonders I count to accomplish:
the world my cunning can master by its might.

WOTAN: How, my worthy, will you do that?

ALBERICH: You up there, who lapped in airs
ambrosial, live,
laugh and love,
with gilded fist
I'll grasp you and fetter all to me!
As I have loving forsworn, all they that live shall forswear it:
allured by my gold,
for gold alone shall they languish.
On radiant heights, in visions of rapture rocked are you:
the black dwarfs
You look down upon, deathless debauchees.
Beware!
Beware!—
For first you men shall work to my might, then your sprightly women,
who my wooing despise,
the gnome shall lure to his needs;
lacking love, nevertheless.
Ha, ha, ha, ha!
Have you now heard?
Beware!
Beware of the night begotten host,
when the Niblung hoard shall upheave from night and darkness to day!

WOTAN: (starting). Away! miserable wretch!

ALBERICH: What says he?

LOGE: (stepping between them:—to Wotan). Subdue your spirit!
(To Alberich.)
What can hinder our wonder, beholding Alberich's work?
If safely your tricks can assure what you attract with the treasure,
I must then hail you the mightiest for moon and stars and the sun in its splendor surely must regard you:
they, too, must be your slaves.
But it was of primal importance that the host who heap up the Nibelung hoard nurse nothing of hatred.
You have well wielded a ring which puts your people in awe:— think if in sleep

ein Deib dich beschlich, den Ring schlau dir entriss', wie wahrtest du Weiser dich dann?

ALBERICH: Der Listigste dünkt sich Loge;
andre denkt er
immer sich dumm:
dass sein' ich bedürfte zu Rath und Dienst um harten Dank, das hörte der Dieb jetzt gern!— Den hehlenden Helm
ersann ich mir selbst;
der sorglichste Schmied, Mime, musst' ihn mir schmieden:
schnell mich zu wandeln nach meinem Wunsch, die Gestalt mir zu tauschen, taught mir der Helm;
niemand sieht mich,
wenn er mich sucht;
doch überall bin ich,
geborgen dem Blick
So ohne Sorge bin ich selbst sicher vor dir, du fromm sorgender Freund!

LOGE: Vieles sah' ich, Seltsames fand ich:
doch solches Wunder gewahrt' ich nie.
Dem Werk ohne Gleichen
kann ich nicht glauben;
wäre diess einz'ge möglich, deine Macht währte dann ewig.

ALBERICH: Meinst du, ich lüg', und prahle wie Loge?

LOGE: Bis ich's geprüft, bezweifl' ich, Zwerg, dein Wort.

ALBERICH: Vor Klugheit bläht sich zum platzen der Blöde:
num plage dich Neid!
Bestimm', in welcher Gestalt soll ich jach vor dir stehn?

LOGE: In welcher du willst:
nur mach' vor Staunen mich
stumm!

ALBERICH: (hat den Helm aufgesetzt). "Riesen-Wurm winde dich ringelnd!"
(Sogleich verschwindet er: eine ungerheure Riesenschlange windet sich statt seiner am Boden; sie bäumt sich und streckt den aufgesperren Rachen nach Wotan und Loge hin.)

LOGE: (stellt sich von Furcht ergriffen). Ohe! Ohe! schreckliche Schlange!
verschling' mich nicht!
Schone Logen das Leben!

WOTAN: (lacht). Gut, Alberich!
gut, du Arger!
Wie wuchs so Wie wuchs so rasch zum riesigen Wurme der Zwerg!
(Die Schlange verschwindet, und statt ihrer erscheint sogleich Alberich wieder in seiner wirklichen Gestalt.) a thief slipped to you,

the ring slyly to steal!
What, wise one, would warrant you then?

ALBERICH: Delightfully deep is Loge: ever he deems
all others are dull.
That I am indebted to him, indeed, for service deft would seem to the dog right good.—
I designed the helmet that hides myself:
the most skillful smith,
Mime, I made shape it:
swiftly to transport me,
or, at my will,
to assume other semblance serves the helmet.
None may see me,
much as he seek;
but I am everywhere hidden from all men
So, undisturbed,
I stand safe even from you,
you fond, sedulous friend!

LOGE: Much I've looked at—lighted on marvels;
but lacked to witness such wonders yet.
I have no faith in This work without peer,
If this were possible,
your power would be unending.

ALBERICH: Pray do I lie and prattle like Loge?

LOGE: Till it is proved,
good dwarf, I doubt your word.

ALBERICH: With cunning, blockhead, you'll finish by bursting.
Confusion I'll cause!
Now say, before you what shape shall my figure assume?

LOGE: Whatever you will;
but make me mute with amazement!

ALBERICH: (putting on the Tarnhelm). 'Draw here, hugest of dragons.'
(He instantly disappears and in his place there writhes a huge monster serpent which bends and opens its outstretched jaws at Wotan and Loge.)

LOGE: (affecting extreme fear).
Oho! Oho!
Sinister serpent,
I beg you, do not swallow me! Spare life to poor Loge!

WOTAN: (laughing). Good, Alberich!
Good—and artful!
So soon can you turn your form to a terrible serpent?
(The dragon disappears and instead Alberich is seen in his own figure.)

ALBERICH: Hehe! Ihr Klugen, glaubt ihr mir nun?

LOGE: Mein Zittern mag dir's bezeugen.
Zur grossen Schlange schuf'st du dich schnell:
weil ich's gewahrt,
willigt glaub' ich das Wunder.
Doch, wie du wuchsest, kannst du auch winzig
und klein dich schaffen?
Das Klügste schiene mir das, Gefahren schlau zu entflieh'n:
das aber dünkt mich zu schwer!

ALBERICH: Zu schwer dir, weil du zu dumm!
Wie klein soll ich sein?

LOGE: Dass die engste Klinze dich fasse,
wo bang die Kröte sich birgt.

ALBERICH: Pah! nichts leichter!
Luge du her!
(Er setzt den Tarnhelm wieder auf.)
"Krumm und grau krieche Kröte!"
(Er verschwindet; die Götter gewahren im Gestein eine Kröte auf sich zukriechen.)

LOGE: (zu Wotan). Dort die Kröte, griefe sie rasch!
(Wotan setzt seinen Fuss auf die Kröte: Loge fährt ihr nach dem Kopfe und hält den Tarnhelm in der Hand.)

ALBERICH: (wird plötzlich in seiner wirklichen Gestalt sichtbar, wie er sich unter Wotan's Fusse windet). Ohe! Verflucht!
ich bin gefangen!

LOGE: Halt' ihn fest, bis ich ihn band.
(Er hat ein Bastseile hervorgeholt, und bindet Alberich damit Arme und Beine; den Geknebelten, der sich wühend zu wehren sucht, fassen dann Beide, und schleppen ihn mit sich nach der Kluft, aus der sie herabkamen.) Schnell hinauf!
dort ist er unser.
(Sie verschwinden, aufwärts steigend.)

VIERTE SCENE.

Die Scene verwandelt sich, nur in umgekehrter Weise, wie zuvor; schliesslich erscheint wieder die freie Gegend auf Bergeshöhen, wie in der zweiten Scene; nur ist sie jetzt noch in einem fahlen Nebelschleier verhüllt, wie vor der zweiten Verwandlung nach Freia's Abführung.

Wotan und Loge, den gebundenen Alberich mit sich führend, steigen aus der Kluft herauf.

ALBERICH: Haha! you deep ones, do you believe?

LOGE: My trembling surely attests
it.
From you the serpent was swiftly shaped:
When I have witnessed,
I credit the wonder well.
But as you waxed great can you not wane too, becoming smaller?
More cunning seems to me from dangers so to withdraw:
that, truly, I think too difficult

ALBERICH: Too difficult? yes, for such as you!
How small shall I seem?

LOGE: That a tiny slit may contain
you,
as timidly slinks a toad.

ALBERICH: Pah! There's nothing simpler!
Watch me now.
(He puts on the helmet again.)
"Crooked toad, creep from cranny."
(He disappears. The gods perceive a toad crawling on the rocks.)

LOGE: (to Wotan). There! that creature, grasp it in haste.
(Wotan sets his foot on the toad and Loge, putting his hand to its head, seizes the Tarnhelm.)

ALBERICH: (who is then seen in his own form writhing under Wotan's foot). Oho! Damned!
I am a captive.

LOGE: Hold him close,
till he is tied.
(He brings forward a bast rope and binds Alberich hand and foot with it; the two then seize their prisoner, who furiously struggles to escape, and drag him with them to the shaft from which they descended.)
With speed above;
there he's our bondsman!
(They disappear, mounting upwards.)

SCENE IV

The scene changes in the same manner as before, but the reverse way, till there appears again the open space on a mountain top as in the second scene; it is, however, still veiled in a pale mist, as after Freia's abduction.

Wotan and Loge, dragging the pinioned Alberich with them, mount from the cleft.

LOGE: Hier, Vetter, sitze du fest!
Luge, Liebster,
dort liegt die Welt,
die du Lung'rer gewinnen dir willst:
welch Stellchen, sag', bestimmst du mir drin zum Stall?

ALBERICH: Schändlicher Schächer! du Schalk! du Schelm!
Löse den Bast, binde mich los,
den Frevel sonst büssest du Frecher!

WOTAN: Gefangen bist du, fest mir gefesselt,
wie du die Welt,
was lebt und webt,
in deiner Gewalt schon wähntest.
In Banden liegst du vor mir, du Banger kannst es nicht läugnen.
Zu ledigen dich
bedarf's nun der Lösung.

ALBERICH: O, ich Tropf!
ich träumender Thor!
Wie dumm traut' ich dem diebischen Trug!
Furchtbare Rache
räche den Fehl!

LOGE: Soll Rache dir frommen, vor allem rathe dich frei:
dem gebund'nen Manne büsst kein Freier den Frevel.
Drum sinn'st du auf Rache, rasch ohne Säumen
sorg' um die Lösung zunächst!

ALBERICH: (barsch). So heisst, was ihr begehrt!

WOTAN: Den Hort und dein helles Gold.

ALBERICH: Gieriges Gaunergezücht!
(Für sich.)
Behalt' ich mir nur den Ring, des Hortes entrath' ich dann leicht:
denn von neuem gewonnen und wonnig genährt ist er bald durch des Ringes Gebot.
Eine Witzigung wär's, die weise mich macht:
zu theuer nicht zahl' ich die Zucht, lass' ich für die Lehre den Tand.—

WOTAN: Erlegst du den Hort?

ALBERICH: Lös't mir die Hand, so ruf' ich ihn her.
(Loge löst ihm die rechte Hand.)

ALBERICH: (rührt den Ring mit den Lippen und murmelt den Befehl). —Wohlan, die Niblungen rief ich mir nah:
dem Herrn gehorchend hör' ich den Hort
aus der Tiefe sie führen zu Tag.—
Nun lös't mich vom lästigen Band!

LOGE: Be seated, friend, I beg!
Look, beloved,
there lies the world that you long so to win to your will:
What station, say,
assign you there for myself?

ALBERICH: Scandalous scoundrel!
You scamp! you scum!
Loosen these bonds!
Do not bind my limbs,
else, rogue, you shall bitterly regret it.

WOTAN: I've caught you now, my cords bind you closely.
While you did believe the living world already your will had won you,
in bonds you lie at my feet:
now flinching must you allow it.
Before letting you run
we look for a ransom.

ALBERICH: What a block—a booby I've been!
To trust blindly to traitors so black!
Fearful revenge
I'll vent for my fault.

LOGE: If it's vengeance you foster you'd better view yourself free:
to a fettered man
no freeman answers for evil,
So, you pant for vengeance, truly do not pause
in paying the tax we demand.

ALBERICH: (harshly). Then state what I must give.

WOTAN: The store, and your sparkling gold.

ALBERICH: Griping and gluttonous thieves!
(Aside.)
So I hold for myself the Ring, the hoard I can readily yield:
for I know that to make and augment it anew for the spell of the Ring were a sport.
And a warning it were to remind my wits
the lesson I deem is not dear, if this is all I must lose.—

WOTAN: Do you offer the hoard?

ALBERICH: Untie my hand;
I'll summon it here.

ALBERICH: (touches the ring with his lips and murmurs a command).—Now then, I've called up the Nibelung crew.
Mindful of their master, mark how they mount to the light with the hoard from below!—
Unbind now these burdensome cords.

WOTAN: Nicht eh'r, bis alles gezahlt.
(Die Nibelungen steigen aus der Kluft herauf, mit den Geschmeiden des Hortes beladen.)

ALBERICH: O schändliche Schmach, dass die scheuen Knechte geknebelt selbst mich erschau'n!— Dorthin geführt,
wie ich's befehl'!
All zu Hauf
schichtet den Hort!
Helf' ich euch Lahmen?—
Hieher nicht gelugt!—
Rasch da! rasch!
dann rührt euch von hinnen:
dass ihr mir schafft,
fort in den Schachten!
Weh' euch, find' ich euch faul!
Auf den Fersen folg' ich euch nach.
(Die Nibelungen nachdem sie den Hort aufgeschichtet, schlüpfen ängstlich wieder in die Kluft hinab.) Gezahlt hab' ich:
lasst mich nun ziehn!
Und das Helmgeschmeid, das Loge dort hält,
das gebt mir nun gütlich zurück!

LOGE: (den Tarnhelm zum Horte werfend). Zur Busse gehört auch die Beute.

ALBERICH: Verfluchter Dieb!— Doch nur Geduld!
Der den alten mir schuf, schafft einen andern,
noch halt' ich die Macht,
der Mime gehorcht.
Schlimm zwar ist's, dem schlauen Feind zu lassen die listige Wehr!—
Nun denn! Alberich
liess euch alles:
jetzt löst ihr Bösen, das Band!

LOGE: (zu Wotan). Bist du befriedigt?
bind' ich ihn frei?

WOTAN: Ein gold'ner Ring
ragt dir am Finger:
hörst du, Alp?
der, acht' ich, gehört mit zum Hort.

ALBERICH: (entsetzt). Der Ring?

WOTAN: Zu deiner Lösung musst du ihn lassen.

ALBERICH: Das Leben—doch nicht den Ring!

WOTAN: Den Reif verlang' ich:
mit dem Leben mach' was du willst!

ALBERICH: Lös' ich mir Leib und Leben, den Ring auch muss ich mir lösen:
Hand und Haupt, Aug' und Ohr, ist nicht mehr mein Eigen als hier dieser rothe Ring!

WOTAN: Dein Eigen nennst du den Ring?
Rasest du, schamloser Albe?
Nüchtern sag',

WOTAN: Not till we have been paid.
(The Nibelungs climb up from the crevice laden with the treasure of the hoard.)

ALBERICH: O sharpest of shame, that my shrinking vassals should view me shackled and shorn!—
There let it rest as I direct;
in a heap
pile up the hoard!
Help must I offer?—
Don't look here!
Quick there—quick!
then quit for your hollows.
Off to your tasks!
Back to the tunnels!
Woe, if idlers there be!
I'm at your backs in an instant.
(The Nibelungs, having piled up the hoard, slip back timidly into the cleft.) ALBERICH: I've paid fully?
let me depart!
And the helmet there that Loge holds your goodness will give it back to me?

LOGE: (throwing the Tarnhelm on the heap). We place it as part of the plunder.

ALBERICH: Damned wolf!
wait but a while?
He who forged it for me makes a fresh one:
still abides the might that Mime obeys.
Hard, indeed,
that hated foes
should seize on my subtle defense!
Now then, Alberich's spoiled of all things:
you'll surely release him at length?

LOGE: (to Wotan). Are you contented? shall I untie?

WOTAN: A golden ring rests on your finger—heard you, imp?—
that also must heighten the hoard.

ALBERICH: (horrified). The ring.

WOTAN: Before we release you that must be left to us.

ALBERICH: Take my life—but not the ring!

WOTAN: I look for the ring:
with your life then do what you will.

ALBERICH: If life and limbs you leave me,
the ring, too, must be allowed me.
Eye and ear,— hand and head, are not mine more wholly than is this ruddy ring.

WOTAN: Your own you call the ring!
You're raving, impudent earth-gnome?

wem entnahmst du das Gold, daraus du den schimmernden schuf'st?
War's dein Eigen, was du Arger
der Wassertiefe entwandt?
Bei des Rheines Töchtern hole dir Rath, ob sie ihr Gold
dir zu eigen gaben, das du zum Ring dir geraubt.

ALBERICH: Schmähliche Tücke!
schändlicher Trug!
Wirfst du Schächer die Schuld mir vor, die dir so wonnig erwünscht?
Wie gern raubtest du selbst dem Rheine das Gold, war nur so leicht die List, es zu schmieden, erlangt?
Wie glückt' es nun
dir Gleissner zum Heil, dass der Niblung ich aus schmählicher Noth, in des Zornes Zwange, den schrecklichen Zauber gewann, dess' Werk nun lustig dir lacht?
Des Unseligsten, Angstversehrten fluchfertige, furchtbare That,
zu fürstlichem Tand
soll sie fröhlich dir taugen?
zur Freude dir frommen mein Fluch?— Hüte dich, herrischer Gott!
Frevelte ich,
so frevelt' ich frei an mir?
doch an allem, was war,
ist und wird,
frevelst, Ewiger, du, entreissest du frech mir den Ring!

WOTAN: Her den Ring!
Kein Recht an ihm schwört dein Schwatzen dir zu.
(Er entzieht Alberich's Finger mit heftiger Gewalt den Ring.)

ALBERICH: (grässlich aufschreiend). Weh! Zertrümmert!
Zerknickt!
Der Traurigen traurigster Knecht!

WOTAN: (hat den Ring an seinen Finger gesteckt und betrachtet ihn wohlgefällig). Nun halt' ich, was mich erhebt, der Mächtigen mächtigsten Herrn!

LOGE: Ist er gelöst?

WOTAN: Bind' ihn los!

LOGE: (löst Alberich die Bande). Schlüpfe denn heim!
Keine Schlinge hält' dich:
frei fahre dahin!

ALBERICH: (sich vom Boden erhebend, mit wüthendem Lachen).
Bin ich nun frei?
wirklich frei?—
So grüss' euch denn meiner Freiheit erster Gruss!—
Wie durch Fluch er mir gerieth,

Tell me now,
From where was the gold taken from which you hammered the hoop?
Was it your own then,
which your arm
tore away from the water's depth?
By the river maidens be arraigned if their gold for your own they have given, which you have robbed for your ring.

ALBERICH: Shameful contrivance!
Scandalous trick!
Rogue, cast
in my teeth the crime that you were dying to do?
Had you robbed
the gold yourself from the Rhine, you could have won the act of its forging.
So, hypocrite, how happy you are
that the Niblung, here, in torturing need,
in a maddened moment,
the terrible magic did win;
whose work now gladdens your glance.
The unhallowed one's anguish-harried, bliss-banishing, bitterest deed shall boot but for dazzle and your brilliant adornment?
Shall bliss then be brought by my ban?—
Mighty god mind what you do!
Say I have sinned;
the sin falls on myself:
but on all things that were,
are, and will be,
strikes this evil of yours,
if you rashly seize my ring.

WOTAN: Yield the ring!
I think you have proven no right to that, by babbling.
(He tears the ring from Alberich's finger by force.)

ALBERICH: (screaming horribly). Ha! I'm vanquished!—destroyed!
A vassal to the vilest of slaves!

WOTAN: (donning the ring and contemplating it with the satisfaction). It is my own, making me the mightiest monarch of all.

LOGE: Is he released?

WOTAN: Set him loose.

LOGE: (undoing Alberich's bonds). Slip away home:
no more shackles hold you:
fare freely from here!

ALBERICH: (raising himself from the ground in raging laughter).
Am I now free?—
really free?
Then listen, friends,
to my freedom's first salute!—
As at first by my curse it was verflucht sei dieser Ring!

Gab sein Gold
mir—Macht ohne Mass, nun zeug' sein Zauber
Tod dem—der ihn trägt!
Kein Froher soll
seiner sich freu'n:
keinem Glücklichen lache sein lichter Glanz;
wer ihn besitzt,
den zehre Sorge,
und wer ihn nicht hat,
nage der Neid!
Jeder giere nach seinem Gut, doch keiner geniesse
mit Nutzen sein';
ohne Wucher hüt' ihn sein Herr,
doch den Würger zieh' er ihm zu!
Dem Tode verfallen, fessle den Feigen die Furcht;
so lang' er lebt,
sterb' er lechzend dahin, des Ringes Herr als des Ringes Knecht:
bis in meiner Hand den geraubten wieder ich halte!—
So—segnet
in höchster Noth
der Nibelung seinen Hort!— Behalt' ihn nun,
hüte ihn wohl:
meinem Fluch fliehest du nicht!
(Er verschwindet schnell in der Kluft.)

LOGE: Lauschtest du seinem Liebesgruss?

WOTAN: (in die Betrachtung des Ringes verloren). Gönn' ihm die geifernde Lust!
(Der Nebelduft des Vordergrundes klärt sich allmählig auf.)

LOGE: (nach rechts blickend). Fasolt und Fafner nahen von fern;
Freia führen sie her.
(Von der andern Seite treten Fricka, Donner und Froh auf.)

FROH: Sie kehrten zurück.

DONNER: Willkommen, Bruder!
(Besorgt auf Wotan zueilend.)

FRICKA: Bringst du mir gute Kunde?

LOGE: (auf den Hort deutend).
Mit List und Gewalt gelang das Werk:
dort liegt, was Freia lös't.

DONNER: Aus der Riesen Haft naht dort die Holde.

FROH: Wie liebliche Luft wieder uns weht,
wonnig Gefühl die Sinne füllt!
Traurig ging' es uns allen, getrennt für immer von ihr, die leidlos ewiger Jugend jubelnde Lust uns verleiht.
(Der Vordergrund ist wieder hell geworden: das Aussehen der Götter gewinnt durch das Licht

reached,
henceforward cursed be this ring!
Gold which gave me measureless might,
now may its magic deal each owner death!
No man shall ever own it in mirth, and to gladden no life shall its luster gleam.
May care consume
each possessor, and envy gnaw him
who does not wear it.
All shall lust
after its delights, but none shall employ them to profit him.
To its master giving no gain,
the murderer's brand it shall bring.
To death he is fated,
its fear on his fancy shall feed;
though long he live shall he languish each day, the treasure's lord
and the treasure's slave:
till within my hand
I in triumph once more behold
it!—
So—stirred by the hardest need, the Niblung blesses his ring!—
I give to you,
guard it with care—
but my curse you cannot flee!
(He vanishes swiftly in the crevice.)

LOGE: Did you hear his adieu of love?

WOTAN: (absorbed in contemplation of the ring). Let him give loose to his dole.
(The vapor in the foreground now gradually clears.)

LOGE: (looking off, R.). Fasolt and Fafner fare this way.
Freia follows their steps.
(From the other side enter Fricka, Donner and Froh.)

FROH: The gods have returned!

DONNER: We greet you, brother!
(anxiously advancing to Wotan).

FRICKA: Do you bring news to gladden us?

LOGE: (pointing to the board).
With power of wit
the prize was won:
on pile is Freia's price.

DONNER: From the giants' hold now she hastens.

FROH: What exquisite air
wafts this way!
wondrous the feeling that steals over each frame!
Hard it would go with the AEsir, withheld for always from their own, who lends them ecstatic youth's unyielding and lasting delights.
(The foreground is now quite clear again, the renewed light re- wieder die erste Frische: über dem Hintergrunde haftet jedoch noch der Nebelschleier, so dass die ferne Burg unsichtbar bleibt. Fasolt und Fafner treten auf, Freia zwischen sich führend.)

FRICKA: (eilt freudig auf die Schwester zu, um sie zu umarmen). Lieblichste Schwester, süsseste Lust!
Bist du mir wieder gewonnen?

FASOLT: (ihr wehrend). Halt!
Nicht sie berührt!
Noch gehört sie uns.—
Auf Riesenheim's ragender Mark rasteten wir:
mit treuem Muth
des Vertrages Pfand pflegten wir;
so sehr mich's reut,
zurück doch bring' ich's erlegt uns Brüdern die Lösung ihr.

WOTAN: Bereit liegt die Lösung:
des Goldes Mass
sei nun gütlich gemessen.

FASOLT: Das Weib zu missen, wisse, gemuthet mich weh:
soll aus dem Sinn sie mir schwinden, des Geschmeides Hort häufe denn so, dass meinem Blick die Blühende ganz er verdeck'!

WOTAN: So stellt das Mass nach Freia's Gestalt.
(Fafner und Fasolt stossen ihre Pfähle vor Freia hin so in den Boden, dass sie gleiche Höhe und Breite mit ihrer Gestalt messen.)

FAFNER: Gepflanzt sind die Pfähle nach Pfandes Mass:
gehäugt füll' es der Hort.

WOTAN: Eilt mit dem Werk:
widerlich ist mir's!

LOGE: Hilf mir, Froh!

FROH: Freia's Schmach
eil' ich zu enden.
(Loge und Froh häufen hastig zwischen den Pfählen die Geschmeide.)

FAFNER: Nicht so leicht und locker gefügt:
fest und dicht
füll' er das Mass!
(Mit roher Kraft drückt er die Geschmeide dicht zusammen; er beugt sich, um nach Lücken zu spähen.) Hier lug' ich noch durch:
verstopft mir die Lücken!

LOGE: Zurück, du Grober!
greif' mir nichts an!

FAFNER: Hieher! die Klinze verklemmt!

storing to the gods their first aspect: the background, however, is still shrouded in mists, so that the distant castle is invisible. Fasolt and Fafner enter leading Freia between them.)

FRICKA: (hastening joyfully towards her sister, to embrace her). Loveliest sister, sweetest delight!
Look we again on our goddess?

FASOLT: (stopping her). Halt!
stand from her side!
Still we hold her ours.—
On Riesenheim's rugged confines
We took rest:
the contract's forfeit with careful truth
we treated.
So, sorely loathe,
I lead her here.
I pray you hand us
the price agreed.

WOTAN: At hand rests the ransom:
the golden mass
must be guardedly measured.

FASOLT: It will make me forlorn to lose the maiden:
so, from my soul to unseat her,
be the sparkling hoard heaped in a stack, so as to hide
the heavenly maid!

WOTAN: Then fix a gauge like Freia in form.
(Fafner and Fasolt place Freia in the middle of the stage and stick their staves into the ground on each side, so as to give her height and breadth.)

FAFNER: Our poles we have planted in proper form:
to hide them pile up the hoard.

WOTAN: Quickly with the task;
It is hateful to me.

LOGE: Help me, Froh!

FROH: I'll make an end of Freia's shame.
(Loge and Froh quickly heap up the treasure between the poles.)

FAFNER: Not so light and loose in the form;
fill up the gauge firm and close.
(He roughly presses the ornaments close together and stoops to peer about for crevices.)
I see day through here.
All chinks must be hidden.

LOGE: Away, you lubber!
Let it alone!

FAFNER: Look here, this cleft must be closed!

WOTAN: (unmuthig sich absendend). Tief in der Brust brennt mich die Schmach.
(Den Blick auf Freia geheftet.)

FRICKA: Sieh, wie in Scham schmählich die Edle steht:
um Erlösung fleht
stumm der leidende Blick.
O böser Mann!
Der Minnigen botest du das!

FAFNER: Noch mehr hierher!

DONNER: Kaum halt' ich mich:
schäumende Wuth
weckt mir der schamlose Wicht!— Hierher, du Hund!
willst du messen,
so miss dich selber mit mir!

FAFNER: Ruhig, Donner!
Rolle wo's taugt:
hier nützt dein Rasseln dir nichts!

DONNER: (holt aus). Nicht dich Schmählichen zu zerschmettern?

WOTAN: Friede doch!
Schon dünkt mich Freia verdeckt.

LOGE: Der Hort ging auf.

FAFNER: (mit dem Blicke messend). Noch schimmert mir Holda's Haar:
dort das Gewirk
wirf auf den Hort!

LOGE: Wie, auch den Helm?

FAFNER: Hurtig her mit ihm!

WOTAN: Lass ihn denn fahren!

LOGE: (wirft den Helm auf den Haufen). So sind wir fertig.—
Seid ihr zufrieden?

FASOLT: Freia, die schöne, schau' ich nicht mehr:
ist sie gelös't?
muss ich sie lassen?
(Er tritt nahe hinzu und späht durch den Hort.) Weh! noch blitzt ihr Blick zu mir her;
des Auges Stern
strahlt mich noch an, durch eine Spalte
muss ich's erspäh'n!—
Seh' ich dies wonnige Aug', von dem Weibe lass ich nicht ab.

FAFNER: He! euch rath' ich, verstopft mir die Ritze!

LOGE: Nimmer-Satte!
seht ihr denn nicht,
ganz schwand uns das Gold?

FAFNER: Mit nichten, Freund!
An Wotan's Finger
glänzt von Gold noch ein Ring, den gebt, die Ritze zu füllen!

WOTAN: Wie! diesen Ring?

LOGE: Lasst euch rathen!
Den Rheintöchtern
gehört dies Gold:
ihnen giebt Wotan es wieder.

WOTAN: (turning away moodily). Deep in my breast burns this shame.
(His eyes are fixed on Freia.)

FRICKA: See how distressed the fair one stands sadly:
for release the mute sufferer looks a prayer.
Perjured man!
Our maid you have placed in this strait.

FAFNER: Still more must be piled!

DONNER: This passes all!
hot is my rage roused by so hardened a rogue!— Come here you hound!
would you measure,
then match yourself against me!

FAFNER: Rest, thunder,
Do not rumble;
we do not need your rolling here.

DONNER: (menacing him). I will first crush you to fragments!

WOTAN: Friend, withhold.
Surely, wholly Freia is hid?

LOGE: The hoard gives out.

FAFNER: (measuring with his eye). Still Holda's hair shines on me:
throw me that wove-work on the heap.

LOGE: What! even the helmet?

FAFNER: Hurry here with it.

WOTAN: Let it go freely.

LOGE: (throwing the Tarnhelm on the heap). So surely, it is finished;
Do you seek anything further?

FASOLT: Freia the glorious pleases me no more,
O is she released?
Must I then lose her?
(Goes nearer and peeps through the hoard.) Ah! her glance
yet gleams on me here;
her eyes like stars,
stream to my own;
yes, I can spy them
still through this space:
so while I gaze on her features from the goddess can I not go.

FAFNER: Ha! you hear me?
that chink must be hidden.

LOGE: Never satisfied!
See then not,
is the hoard quite spent?

FAFNER: By no means, friend.
On Wotan's finger
gleams a glittering ring:
that came to rest in the fissure.

WOTAN: What! give the ring?

LOGE: Let me tell you—to Rhine maidens
this gold belongs.
Wotan looks still to restore it.

WOTAN: Was schwatzest du da?
Was schwer ich mir erbeutet, ohne Bangen wahr' ich's für mich.

LOGE: Schlimm dann steht's un mein Versprechen, das ich den Klagenden gab.

WOTAN: Dein Versprechen bindet mich nicht:
als Beute bleibt mir der Reif.

FAFNER: Doch hier zur Lösung musst du ihn legen.

WOTAN: Fordert frech was ihr wollt:
alles gewähr' ich,
um alle Welt
nicht fahren doch lass' ich den Ring!

FASOLT: (zieht wüthend Freia hinter dem Horte hervor). Aus denn ist's,
beim Alten bleibt's:
nun folgt uns Freia für immer!

FREIA: Hülfe! Hülfe!

FRICKA: Harter Gott, gieb ihnen nach!

FROH: Spare das Gold nicht!

DONNER: Spende den Ring doch!

WOTAN: Lasst mich in Ruh'!
Den Reif geb' ich nicht.
(Fafner hält den fortdrängenden Fasolt noch auf; Alle stehen bestürzt; Wotan wendet sich zürnend von ihnen zur Seite. Die Bühne hat sich von Neuem verfinstert; aus der Felskluft zur Seite bricht ein bläulicher Schein hervor; in ihm wird Wotan plötzlich Erda sichtbar, die bis, zu halber Leibeshöhe aus der Tiefe aufsteigt: sie ist von edler Gestalt, welthin von schwarzem Haare umwallt.)

ERDA: (die Hand mahnend gegen Wotan ausstreckend). Weiche, Wotan, weiche!
flieh' des Ringes Fluch!
Rettungslos
dunklem Verderben weiht dich sein Gewinn.

WOTAN: Wer bist du, mahnendes
Weib?

ERDA: Wie alles war, weiss ich;
wie alles wird,
wie alles sein wird,
seh' ich auch:
der ew'gen Welt
Ur—Wala,
Erda mahnt deinen Muth.
Drei der Töchter, ur-erschaff'ne,
gebar mein Schoss:
was ich sehe,
sagen dir nächtlich die Nornen.
Doch höchste Gefahr führt mich heut' selbst zu dir her:
höre! höre! höre!
Alles, was ist, endet.
Ein düsterer Tag

WOTAN: What are you talking about there?
The prize come by with such difficulty
I shall keep, unawed, for myself.

LOGE: Then, the promise
I gave the nymphs is poorly paid.

WOTAN: But your promise binds me not:
The ring remains my booty.

FAFNER: But it must be rendered here for ransom.

WOTAN: Make demands as you will:
I'll award you all;
but all the world shall not move this ring from my hand.

FASOLT: (wrathfully pulling Freia from behind the board). All is off!
as it stands,
and Freia's forfeit forever.

FREIA: Help me! Help me!

FRICKA: Haughty god!
give them their way.

FROH: Do not hold the gold back.

DONNER: Hand them the ring too.

WOTAN: Leave me at rest;
the ring I retain.
(Fafner holds back the departing Fasolt, all stand perplexed, while Wotan turns away in wrath. The stage has again become dark; from the rocky cleft at the side shines out a bluish glow in which Wotan suddenly perceives Erda, who rises from below to half her height. She is of noble presence and enveloped in a mass of black hair.)

ERDA: (stretching out her hand warningly towards Wotan). Waver, Wotan, waver!
quit the accursed ring.
Ruin and dismal downfall await you in its wealth.

WOTAN: Who speaks such menacing words?

ERDA: Whatever was, I know; what is, as well—what ages shall work—
all I show:
the endless world's
All-wise one,
Erda—opens your eyes.
Three the daughters
born to me before the world was made;
all I notice
nightly you know from the Nornir.
But I hastened here in dire danger to your help.
Hear me! hear me! hear me!
All that exists, end!
A dismal day

dämmert den Göttern:
dir rath' ich, meide den Ring!
(Sie versinkt langsam bis an die Brust, während der bläuliche Schein zu dunkeln beginnt.)

WOTAN: Geheimniss-hehr hallt mir dein Wort:
weile, dass mehr ich wisse!

ERDA: (im Verschwinden). Ich warnte dich—
du weisst genug:
sinne in Sorg' und Furcht!
(Sie verschwindet gänzlich.)

WOTAN: Soll ich sorgen und fürchten—
dich muss ich fassen, alles erfahren!
(Er will in die Kluft, um Erda zu halten: Donner, Froh und Fricka werfen sich ihm entgegen, und halten ihn auf.)

FRICKA: Was willst du, Wüthender?

FROH: Halt' ein, Wotan!
Scheue die Edle, achte ihr Wort!

DONNER: (zu den Riesen). Hört, ihr Riesen!
zurück, und harret:
das Gold wird euch gegeben.

FREIA: Darf ich es hoffen?
dünkt euch Holda wirklich der Lösung werth?
(Alle blicken gespannt auf Wotan.)

WOTAN: (war in tiefes Sinnen versunken und fasst sich jetzt mit Gewalt zur Entschluss). Zu uns, Freia!
du bist befreit:
wieder gekauft kehr' uns die Jugend zurück!—
Ihr Riesen, nehmt euren Ring!
(Er wirft den Ring auf den Hort.)
(Die Riesen lassen Freia los: sie eilt freudig auf die Götter zu, die sie abwechselnd längere Zeit in höchster Freude liebkosen.)
(Fafner breitet sogleich einen ungeheuren Sack aus und macht sich über des Hort her, um ihn da hinein zu schichten.)

FASOLT: (dem Bruder sich entgegenwerfend). Halt, du Gieriger!
gönne mir auch 'was!
Redliche Theilung
taugt uns beiden.

FAFNER: Mehr an der Maid als am Gold lag dir verliebtem Geck:
mit Müh' zum Tausch vermocht' ich dich Thoren.
Ohne zu theilen hättest du Freia gefreit:
theil' ich den Hort, billig behalt' ich die grösste Hälfte für mich.

FASOLTE: Achändlicher du!
Mir diesen Schimpf?—
(Zu den Göttern.)
Euch ruf' ich zu Richtern:

dawns for the AEsir:
O render wisely the ring!
(She sinks slowly to the breast and the bluish glow begins to fade.)

WOTAN: A secret spell speaks in your words:
wait, and impart more wisdom.

ERDA: (disappearing). I've warned you now,
you know enough;
pause and ponder truth.
(She completely disappears.)

WOTAN: Pain and peril attending—
I must detain you
All you must tell me!
(He tries to go to the crevasse in order to detain Erda. Donner, Froh, and Fricka throw themselves in his way and hold him back.)

FRICKA: What would you wildly do?

FROH: Take heed, Wotan;
Do not seek to hold her:
listen to her words!

DONNER: (to the giants). Here—you monsters, remain and listen!
Wotan will give you the gold.

FREIA: I but dared hope it?
You deem Holda is worth such a ransom?
(All look anxiously at Wotan.)

WOTAN: (who has been absorbed in deep thought, now musters his strength to a decision). Return, Freia!
I set you free.
Purchased again gladly we rejoice in youth!
Giants, there is your gem.
(He throws the Ring on the heap.)
(The giants release Freia: she runs joyfully to the gods who embrace her in turn during some time, with greatest delight.)
(Fafner meanwhile spreads out a huge sack and goes to the board preparing to pack it all up.)

FASOLT: (opposing his brother).
Stop, you greedy one,
give me some also!
Equally, surely,
should we share it.

FAFNER: More on the maid than the gold,
amorous ape, you gloat:
My might could scarcely make you resign her;
as, without sharing,
Holda you would have wooed:
justly I'll hold back the greater half of the hoard for myself.

FASOLT: Swindler and thief!
Thus am I served?
(To the gods.)
You shall judge us jointly:

theilet nach Recht uns redlich den Hort!
(Wotan wendet sich verächtlich ab.)

LOGE: Lass' den Hort ihn raffen: halte du nur auf den Ring!

FASOLT: (stürzt sich auf Fafner, der während dem mächtig eingesackt hat). Zurück, du Frecher!
mein ist der Ring:
mir blieb er für Freia's Blick.
(Er greift hastig nach dem Ring.)

FAFNER: Fort mit der Faust!
der Ring ist mein.
(Sie ringen mit einander; Fasolt entreisst Fafner den Ring.)

FASOLT: Ich halt' ihn, mir gehört er!

FAFNER: Halt' fest, dass er nicht fall'!
(Er holt wüthend mit seinem Pfahle nach Fasolt aus, und streckt ihn mit einen Schlage zu Boden, dem Sterbenden entreisst er dann hastig den Ring.)
Nun blinzle nach Freia's Blick:
an den Reif rühr'st du nicht mehr!
(Er steckt den Ring in den Sack, und rafft dann gemächlich vollends den Hort ein. Alle Götter stehen entsetzt. Langes, feierliches Schweigen.)

WOTAN: Furchtbar nun erfind' ich des Fluches Kraft!

LOGE: Was gleicht, Wotan, wohl deinem Glücke?
Viel erwarb dir
des Ringes Gewinn;
dass er nun dir genommen,
nützt dir noch mehr:
deine Feinde, sieh, fällen sich selbst
um das Gold, das du vergabst.

WOTAN: (tief erschüttert). Wie doch Bangen mich bindet!
Sorg' und Furcht fesseln den Sinn;
wie sie zu enden
lehre mich Erda:
zu ihr muss ich hinab!

FRICKA: (schmeichelnd sich an ihn schmiegend). Wo weilst du, Wotan?
Winkt dir nicht hold die hehre Burg, die des Gebieters gastlich bergend nun harrt?

WOTAN: Mit bösem Zoll zahlt' ich den Bau!

DONNER: (auf den Hintergrund deutend, der noch in Nebelschleier gehüllt ist). Schwüles Gedünst schwebt in der Luft, lästig ist mir
der trübe Druck:
das bleiche Gewölk samml' ich zu blitzendem Wetter;
das fegt den Himmel mir hell.
(Er hat einen hohen Felsstein am Thalabhange bestiegen, und schwingt jetzt seinen Hammer.)
He da! He da!

should not the jewels justly be halved?
(Wotan turns contemptuously away.)

LOGE: Let him take the jewels:
You hold the ring, and rejoice!

FASOLT: (throws himself on Fafner who is packing up busily).
Leave, fraud!
the ring is mine:
it veiled me from Freia's view.
(He snatches hastily at the ring.)

FAFNER: Do not fold your fist;
the ring is mine.
(They struggle: Fasolt wrests the ring from Fafner.)

FASOLT: I have it—I shall hold it!

FAFNER: Hold it fast, or it may fall!
(Furious, he hits out at Fasolt with his staff and with one blow fells him to the ground; then he wrests the ring from his dying hand.)
Now feast upon Freia's face!
for the ring's rent from your grasp!
(He puts the ring in the sack and proceeds coolly to collect the rest of the gold. All the gods stand horrified. Long, solemn silence.)

WOTAN: Fearful power
I find in the fatal curse!

LOGE: What luck, Wotan, were likened to you?
Much it was when you won the ring;
but it still better serves you since it was lost:
for your foemen—see:
felling themselves
for you have lost the gold.

WOTAN: (deeply shocked). How horror overhangs me!
Sickly fear fetters my soul;
only to heal it
Erda can help me:
I will go to her now.

FRICKA: (approaching him cajolingly). Why do you wait, Wotan?
The fortress shines wondrously; it surely affords friendly shelter?

WOTAN: A shameful price is paid for this shrine.

DONNER: (pointing to the back which is still hidden in clouds).
Vaporous mist
veils the scene;
I am sick
of the mournful mask!
I'll liven these thin clouds with some lightning and thunder, and clear the air for us all.
(He mounts an overhanging rock and swings his hammer during the swing.)

Zu mir, du Gedüft!
ihr Dünste, zu mir!
Donner, der Herr,
ruft euch zu Heer.
Auf des Hammers Schwung schwebet herbei:
he da! he da!
duftig Gedünst'
Donner ruft euch zu Heer!
(Die Nebel haben sich um ihn zusammen gezogen; er verschwindet völlig in einer immer finsterer sich ballenden Gewitter-wolke. Dans hört man seinen Hammerschlag schwer auf den Felsstein fallen: ein starker Blitz entführt der Wolke; ein heftiger Donnerschlag folgt.) Bruder, zu mir!
weise der Brücke den Weg!
(Froh ist mit Gewölk verschwunden. Plötzlich verzieht sich die Wolke; Donner und Froh werden sichtbar: von ihren Füssen aus zieht sich, mit blendendem Leuchten, eine Regenbogenbrücke über das Thal hinüber bis zur Burg, die jetzt, von der Abendsonne beschienes, im hellsten Glanze erstrahlt.)
(Fafner, der neben der Leiche seines Bruders endlich den ganzen Hort eingerafft, hat den ungeheuren Sack auf dem Rücken, während Donner's Gewitterzauber die Bühne verlassen.)

FROH: Zur Burg führt die Brücke, leicht, doch fest eurem Fuss:
beschreitet kühn
ihren schrecklosen Pfad!

WOTAN: (in den Anblick der Burg versunken). Abendlich strahlt der Sonne Auge;
in prächt'ger Gluth prangt glänzend die Burg:
in des Morgens Scheine muthig erschimmernd, lag sie herrenlos
hehr verlockend vor mir.
Von Morgen bis Abend in Müh' und Angst nicht wonnig ward sie gweonnen!
Es naht die Nacht:
vor ihrem Neid
biete sie Bergung nun.
So—grüss' ich die Burg, sicher vor Bang und Grau'n.—
(Zu Fricka.) Folge mir, Frau:
in Walhall wohne mit mir!
(Er fasst ihre Hand.)

FRICKA: Was deutet der Name?
Nie, dünkt mich, hört' ich ihn nennen.

WOTAN: Was, mächtig der Furcht, mein Muth mir erfand, wenn siegend es lebt—leg' es den Sinn dir dar!
(Wotan und Fricka schreiten der Brücke zu: Froh und Freia folgen zunächst, dann Donner.)

Hallo! hallo!
To me all dews!
come down to me, mists!
Donner is here,
calling his hosts.
At his hammer's swing swoop to his side!
Hallo! hallo!
Drizzle and damp,
Donner calls his hosts!
(The mist has collected around him; he disappears in an ever thickening and darkening thundercloud. Then his hammerstroke is heard falling heavily on the rocks: a vivid flash of lightning breaks through the clouds, followed by a violent clap of thunder.) Brother, come here!
show what a bridge we can shape!
(Froh has also disappeared in the clouds. Suddenly these separate; Donner and Froh are visible; from their feet stretches, in blinding radiance, a rainbow-bridge over the valley to the castle, which now gleams with utmost brilliance, illuminated by the evening sun.)
(Fafner, who, beside the body of his brother, has collected the whole hoard during Donner's magic thunderstorm, puts the huge sack on his back and quits the stage.)

FROH: This bridge will bring you home; light but hardy support.
So tread undaunted its terrorless height!

WOTAN: (absorbed in contemplation of the castle). See how at evening the eye of sunlight with glorious touch gilds turret and tower!
In the morning glamor, resolute and glad,
it bided masterless,
mildly beckoning to me.
From morning till evening through mighty ills
I won no way to its wonders!
The night is near;
from all annoyances
it shows us shelter now.
So—hailed be the fort;
sorrow and fear it heals.—
(To Fricka.)
Wend with me, wife,
in "Valhall" vast we will dwell.
(He takes her by the hand.)

FRICKA: Why name it so?
Never such a title was known of.

WOTAN: What might against our fears my mind may have found if proved a success soon shall explain the name.
(Wotan and Fricka go towards the bridge; Froh and Freia follow immediately, then Donner.)

LOGE: (im Vordergrunde verharrend und den Göttern nachblickend). Ihrem Ende eilen sie zu, die so stark im Bestehen sich wähnen.
Fast schäm' ich mich
mit ihnen zu schaffen;
zur leckenden Lohe mich wieder zu wandeln spür' ich lockende Lust.
Sie aufzuzehren,
die einst mich gezähmt, statt mit den Blinden blöd zu vergeh'n—und wären's göttlichste Götter—nicht dumm dünkte mich das!
Bedenken will ich's:
wer weiss was ich thu'!
(Er geht, um sich den Göttern in nachlässiger Haltung anzuschliessen.)
(Aus der Tiefe hört man den Gesang der Rheintöchter herauf schallen.)

DIE DREI RHEINTÖCHTER:
Rheingold!
Reines Gold,
wie lauter und hell
leuchtest hold du uns!
Um dich, du klares,
nun wir klagen!
Gebt uns das Gold,
o gebt uns das reine zurück!

LOGE: (pausing in the foreground and looking after the gods). To their end they even now quicken, while esteeming their strength overwhelming.
I am ashamed
to share in their acts.
A feverish fancy woos me to wander forth in flickering fire:
to burn and waste them who bound me, rather than be thus blindly engulfed—even were they of gods the most godlike—
there seems sense in the scheme!
I'll study on it!
Who asks what I do?
(He follows the gods as if unconcerned.)
(From the valley the song of the Rhinenymphs is heard to peal.)

THE THREE RHINE NYMPHS:
Rhinegold!
Rarest gold!
How wondrously bright
one you did shine on us!
For you, our plaything
now we implore!
Give us our gold!
O give us our glory again!

WOTAN: (im Begriff, den Fuss auf die Brücke zu setzen, hält an und wendet sich um). Welch Klagen klingt zu mir her?

LOGE: Des Rheines Kinder beklagen des Goldes Raub.

WOTAN: Verwünschte Nicker!— Wehre ihrem Geneck!

LOGE: (in das Thal hinabrufend).
Ihr da im Wasser!
was weint ihr herauf?
Hört, was Wotan euch wünscht.
Glänzt nicht mehr euch Mädchen das Gold, in der Götter neuem Glanze sonnt euch selig fortan!
(Die Götter lachen laut und beschreiten nun die Brücke.)

DIE RHEINTÖCHTER: (aus der Tiefe).
Rheingold!
Reines Gold!
O leuchtete noch in der Tiefe dein laut'rer Tand!
Traulich und True
ist's nur in der Tiefe:
falsch und feig ist was dort oben sich freut!
(Als alle Götter auf der Brücke der Burg zuschraiten, fällt der Vorhang.)

WOTAN: (In the act of setting his foot on the bridge pauses and returns). What mournful sounds do I hear?

LOGE: The river maidens who mourn, of their gold bereaved.

WOTAN: Cursed Nixies!—
Quiet their clamorous noise.

LOGE: (calling down the valley).
You in the water!
why worry us yet?
Hear what Wotan wishes!
Gleams no more
on you maidens the gold, in the gods' augmented grandeur henceforth happily bask.
(The gods laugh loudly and once more turn towards the bridge.)

THE RHINE NYMPHS:
(from below).
Rhinegold!
Rarest gold!
O might but again
in the wave your pure magic awake!
What is of worth,
dwells in the waters!
base and bad
those who are throned above.
(As the gods slowly cross the bridge to the castle, the curtain falls.)

Die Walküre (1870)

The Walkyr

MUSIC & LIBRETTO BY RICHARD WAGNER

Die Walküre premiered at the Hoftheater in Munich of June 26, 1870. Wotan, the father of the gods, gives an eye to Erda, goddess of the Earth, in exchange for some of her wisdom. She is the mother of his daughters, the nine Valkyries. Wotan is also the father of twins, Siegmund and Sieglinde, known as the Wälsungs, by a mortal mother. Wotan decides that his son Siegmund must obtain the ring from Fafner. Siegmund and Sieglinde were separated when their mother was killed, and Sieglinde was forced to marry Hunding. Siegmund, fleeing from his enemies, seeks shelter in Hunding's hut, where he encounters Sieglinde. He feels a kinship with her though he does not yet know who she is. Hunding realizes that Siegmund is the man he has been hunting and allows him to stay the night on the condition that he be prepared to fight to the death the following day. Siegmund remembers that his father once promised him a sword that would grant him victory in every battle. The fire shines brightly for a moment, lighting up a sword plunged into the ash tree by the hut. Sieglinde pours a potion into her husband's drink and he falls into a deep sleep. She tells Siegmund about her unhappy wedding and about a mystery man, blinded in one of his eyes, who foretold of a hero who would pull the sword from the ash tree. Siegmund realizes that the woman is his sister, and both she and the sword are his. He pulls out the sword, names it Notung (daughter of necessity), and ecstatically leads Sieglinde into the night. Wotan orders Brünnhilde, his favorite Valkyrie, to protect Siegmund from Hunding. Fricka, the goddess of marriage, demands that Siegmund die because of the twins' incestuous relationship. Wotan argues that Siegmund, as a mortal, is not bound as the gods are, and that he is needed to protect the ring from Alberich. Wotan loses the argument and orders Brünnhilde not to forget about Siegmund. Brünnhilde tells Siegmund that he will die and then travel to Valhalla. Siegmund refuses to be separated from Sieglinde and threatens to kill himself—and her if necessary. Brünnhilde pledges to help them, but as Hunding and Siegmund fight, Wotan intercedes and breaks Siegmund's sword. Siegmund is killed by Hunding, who is then killed by Wotan, who chases after Brünnhilde and Sieglinde. Brünnhilde begs her sisters to help Sieglinde, who must hide from Wotan until she has given birth to Siegmund's son, who will reforge the broken sword. Sieglinde is banished to a faraway forest; Wotan, enraged, strips Brünnhilde of her divinity and orders her into a deep sleep from which she cannot be awakened except by the man whom she will wed. He asks Loge to surround the rock on which she sleeps with fire so that only a hero can cross to claim her.

■ ERSTER AUFZUG

Das Innere eines Wohnraumes.

In der Mitte steht der Stamm einer mächtigen Esche, dessen stark erhabene Wurzeln sich weithin in den Erdboden verlieren; von seinem Wipfel ist der Baum durch ein gezimmertes Dach geschieden, welches so durchschnitten ist, dass der Stamm und die nach allen Seiten hin sich ausstreckenden Aeste durch genau entsprechende Oeffnungen hindurch gehen; von dem belaubten Wipfel wird angenommen, dass er sich über dieses Dach ausbreite. Um den Eschenstamm, als Mittelpunkt, ist nun ein Saal gezimmert; die Wände sind aus roh behauenem Holzwerk, hie und da mit geflochtenen und gewebten Decken behangen. Rechts im Vordergrunde steht der Herd, dessen Rauchfang seitwärts zum Dache hinausführt; hinter dem Herde befindet sich ein innerer Raum, gleich einem Vorrathsspeicher, zu dem man auf einigen hölzernen Stufen hinaufsteigt; davor hängt, halb zurückgeschlagen, eine geflochtene Decke. Im Hintergrunde eine Eingangsthüre mit schlichtem Holzriegel. Links die Thüre zu einem inneren Gemache, zu dem gleichfalls Stufen hinaufführen; weiter vornen auf derselben Seite ein Tisch mit einer breiten, an der Wand angezimmerten Bank dahinter, und hölzernen Schemeln davor.

Ein kurzes Orchestervorspiel von heftiger, stürmischer Bewegung leitet ein. Wenn der Vorhang aufgeht, öffnet Siegmund von aussen hastig die Eingangsthür und tritt ein; es ist gegen Abend; starkes Gewitter, im Begriff, sich zu legen.—Siegmund hält einen Augenblick den Riegel in der Hand und überblickt den Wohnraum: er scheint von übermässiger Anstrengung erschöpft; sein Gewand und Aussehen zeigen, dass er sich auf der Flucht befinde. Da er Nie-

■ ACT I

The Interior of a Dwelling.

In the center we behold the trunk of a might ash-tree, the far-spreading roots of which are gradually lost in the ground. The tree is separated from its crown by a timber-roof which is pierced, so that the trunk and all its branches pass through closely-fitting apertures; the thick-leafed crown is supposed to spread over this roof. A spacious hall is erected round this tree, which forms the center; the walls consist of rough-hewn boards, hung here and there with plaited and woven covers. To the right, in the foreground, is the fire-place, the chimney of which passes out sideways through the roof. Behind the fire-place there is an inner space, resembling a storeroom, which is reached by a few wooden steps, and separated from the fore-part of the hall by a plaited curtain half drawn back. In the background we perceive a door with a plain wooden bar. Another door to the left leads to an interior chamber which is also reached by steps. Further in the front, but on the same side, there is a table, and behind it a broad wooden bench fastened to the wall; a few wooden stools stand before the table.

The orchestra strikes up a brief prelude of a vehement character. As the curtain rises, Siegmund, approaching from without, opens the door hastily and enters. It is nearly evening; there has been a violent thunder storm, which is gradually passing away. Siegmund stops for a moment, and surveys the dwelling. He appears, exhausted and worn out with exertion. His looks and his disordered garments show him to be a fugitive. Finding no one in the room, he closes the door behind him, approaches the fire-place, and throws himself upon a bearskin rug.

mand gewahrt, schliesst er die Thür hinter sich, schreitet auf den Herd zu und wirft sich dort ermattet auf eine Decke von Bärenfell.

SIEGMUND: Wess' Herd dies auch sei, hier muss ich rasten.
(Er sinkt zurück und bleibt einige Zeit regungslos ausgestreckt, Sieglinde tritt aus der Thür des inneren Gemaches. Dem vernommenen Geräusche nach glaubte sie ihren Mann heimgekehrt: ihre ernste Miene zeigt sich dann verwundert, als sie einen Fremden am Herde ausgestreckt findet.)

SIEGLINDE: (Noch im Hintergrunde). Ein fremder Mann!
Ihn muss ich fragen.
(Sie tritt ruhig einige Schritte näher.)
Wer kam in's Haus und liegt dort am Herd?
(Da Siegmund sich nicht regt, tritt sie noch etwas näher und betrachtet ihn.)
Müde liegt er
von Weges Müh'n:
schwanden die Sinne ihm?
wäre er siech?
(Sie neigt sich näher zu ihm.)
Noch schwillt ihm der Athem;
das Auge nur schloss er;—
muthig dünkt mich der Mann, sank er müd' auch hin.

SIEGMUND: (jäh das Haupt erhebend). Ein Quell! ein Quell!

SIEGLINDE: Erquickung schaff' ich.
(Sie nimmt schnell ein Trinkhorn, geht aus dem Haus und kommt mit dem gefüllten zurück, das sie Siegmund reicht.) Labung biet' ich dem lechzenden Gaumen:
Wasser, wie du gewollt!
(Siegmund trinkt und reicht ihr das Horn zurück. Nachdem er ihr mit dem Kopfe Dank zugewinkt haftet sein Blick länger mit steigender Theilnahme an ihren Mienen.)

SIEGMUND: Kühlende Labung gab mir der Quell, des Müden Last
machte er leicht;
erfrischt ist der Muth, das Aug' erfreut des Sehens selige Lust:—
wer ist's, der so mir es labt?

SIEGLINDE: Dies Haus und dies Weib sind Hundings Eigen; gastlich gönn' er dir Rast:
harre bis heim er kehrt!

SIEGMUND: Waffenlos bin ich:
dem wunden Gast
wird dein Gatte nicht wehren.

SIEGLINDE: (besorgt). Die Wunden weise mir schnell!

SIEGMUND: Whoever be my host,
I will slumber here.
(He sinks back and remains stretched out motionless for some time. Sieglinde enters through the door of the inner chamber. She has heard a noise which she believes to have been caused by the return of her husband, and she is not a little astonished at finding a stranger stretched out before the fireplace.)

SIEGLINDE: (Still in the background.) A stranger! See!
I must question him.
(Advancing a few steps.)
Who came in here?
Who lies by hearth?
(As Siegmund does not stir, she approaches still nearer and looks at him attentively.)
Weary lies he,
Worn with wandering.
Senseless, perchance, is he?
Can he be sick?
(Bending over him.)
Still breath in his body—
Though his eye-lids are closed
Fearless he seems to me,
Though he fell fainting.

SIEGMUND:
(Suddenly lifting his head.)
A drink! A drink!

SIEGLINDE:
I'll bring you relief
(She gets a drinking-horn quickly, leaves the house but comes back soon after filling the vessel with water, which she hands to Siegmund.)
Drink and moisten
Your lips that now languish.
Water, as you have wished!
(Siegmund drinks and returns the horn. After nodding his thanks to her, he regards her with increasing attention.)

SIEGMUND: Cooling and comfort
Came from the well;
It made my weight of woe lighter.
My heart is refreshed,
Again my eyes
Gaze with gladness on the world.
Who was it that brought me relief?

SIEGLINDE: This house and myself Belong to Hunding;
He'd never deny shelter.
Wait until he comes home.

SIEGMUND: Weaponless, wounded—
A guest so weak
Will be safe with your husband.

SIEGLINDE: (Alarmed.) You're wounded? Show me your wounds!

SIEGMUND: (schüttelt sich und springt lebhaft vom Lager zum Sitz auf). Gering sind sie, der Rede nicht werth;
noch fügen des Leibes Glieder sich fest.
Hätten halb so stark wie mein Arm Schild und Speer mir gehalten, nimmer floh' ich dem Feind;—
doch zerschellten mir Speer und Schild.
Der Feinde Meute
hetzte mich müd', Gewitter-Brunst
brach meinen Leib:
doch schneller als ich der Meute, schwand die Müdigkeit mir:
sank auf die Lider mir Nacht, die Sonne lacht mir nun neu.

SIEGLINDE: (hat ein Horn mit Meth gefüllt und reicht es ihm).
Des seimigen Methes süssen Trank mög'st du mir nicht verschmäh'n.

SIEGMUND: Schmecktest du mir ihn zu?
(Sieglinde nippt am Horne und reicht es ihm wieder; Siegmund thut einen langen Zug; dann setzt er schnell ab und reicht das Horn zurück. Beide blicken sich, mit wachsender Ergriffenheit, eine Zeit lang stumm an.)

SIEGMUND: (mit bebender Stimme). Einen Unseligen labtest du:— Unheil wende
der Wunsch von dir!
(Er bricht schnell auf, um fortzugehen.) Gerastet hab' ich und süss geruh't:
weiter wend' ich den Schritt.

SIEGLINDE: (lebhaft sich umwendend). Wer verfolgt dich, dass du schon flieh'st?

SIEGMUND: (von ihrem Rufe gefesselt, wendet sich wieder: langsam und düster). Misswende folgt mir, wohin ich fliehe;
Misswende naht mir,
wo ich mich neige:
dir Frau doch bleibe sie fern!
Fort wend' ich Fuss und Blick.
(Er schreitet schnell zur Thür und hebt den Riegel.)

SIEGLINDE: (in heftigem Selbstvergessen ihm nachrufend). So bleibe hier!
Nicht bringst du Unheil dahin, Wo Unheil im Hause wohnt!

SIEGMUND: (bleibt tief erschüttert stehen und forscht in Sieglinde's Mienen; diese schlägt endlich verschämt und traurig die Augen nieder. Langes Schweigen. Siegmund kehrt zurück und lässt sich, an den Herd gelehnt, nieder). Wehwalt hiess ich mich selbst:—

SIEGMUND: (Shaking himself, springing up quickly, and sitting down.) They're trifles, all;
They call not for care.
The limbs of my body
Are still whole.
Had my shield and spear been as strong,
Half as strong as my arm was,
I'd never have fled the foe.
But now spear and shield are broken.
My foes were many—
Pressed me too hard;
The furious storm
Wore out my strength.
But fast did I flee the hunters;
Faster still I grew strong.
Night at last darkened my eyes;
The sun now cheers me anew.

SIEGLINDE: (Filling a horn with mead and handing it to him.) You will not deny me—
Here is mead.
Sweet is the cloying drink.

SIEGMUND: Will you not taste it first?
(Sieglinde sips a little, and hands him the horn again. Siegmund takes a long draught; then stopping suddenly, he returns the horn. For a long time the two remain silent, looking at each other with growing interest.)

SIEGMUND: (With trembling voice.) You have cheered one to misfortune doomed.
May no evil
Reward your care!
(He rises hastily, as if about to leave.)
I've rested—fully
I feel restored.
Now I'll go on my way.

SIEGLINDE: (Turning round quickly.) Who pursues you? Why must you go?

SIEGMUND: (Stopping at her call; slowly and gloomily.) Mischief pursues me, Wherever I wander; Mischief attends me—
Never can I flee it.
But Fate surely shall spare you.
Far from your path I'll fly!
(Approaching the door, he lifts the bar.)

SIEGLINDE: (Calling him back in utter self-abnegation.) Ah, do stay!
What curse can you bring to one Who dwells in a house already cursed?

SIEGMUND: (Lingers deeply moved, trying to read the eyes of Sieglinde, who stands abashed and embarrassed. A long silence follows. Siegmund returns, and resumes his seat by the hearth.)
I named myself woeful:
I will await Hunding here.
(Sieglinde remains silent and em-

Hunding will ich erwarten.
(Sieglinde verharrt in betretenem Schweigen; dann fährt sie auf, lauscht und hört Hunding, der sein Ross aussen zu Stall führt; sie geht hastig zur Thüre und öffnet.)
(Hunding, gewaffnet mit Schild und Speer, tritt ein, und hält unter der Thür, als er Siegmund gewahrt.)

SIEGLINDE: (dem ernst fragenden Blicke, den Hunding auf sie richtet, entgegnend). Müd' am Herd Fand ich den Mann:
Noth führt' ihn in's Haus.

HUNDING: Du labtest ihn?

SIEGLINDE: Den Gaumen letzt' ich ihm, Gastlich sorgt' ich sein'.

SIEGMUND: (der Hunding fest und ruhig beobachtet) Dach und Trank Dank ich ihr:
Willst du dein Weib drum schelten?

HUNDING: Heilig ist mein Herd:—
Heilig sei dir mein Haus!
(Zu Sieglinde, indem er die Waffen ablegt und ihr übergibt).
Rüst' uns Männern das Mahl!
(Sieglinde hängt die Waffen am Eschenstamme auf, holt Speise und Trank aus dem Speicher und rüstet auf dem Tische das Nachtmahl.)

HUNDING: (misst scharf und verwundert Siegmund's Züge, die er mit denen seiner Frau vergleicht; für sich): Wie gleicht er dem Weibe!
Der gleisende Wurm glänzt auch ihm aus dem Auge.
(Er birgt sein Befremden und wendet sich unbefangen an Siegmund).
Weit her, traun!
kamst du des Weg's;
ein Ross nicht ritt,
der Rast hier fand:
welch' schlimme Pfade schufen dir Pein?

SIEGMUND: Durch Wald und Wiese, Haide und Hain, jagte mich Sturm
und starke Noth:
nicht kenn' ich den weg, den ich kam.
Wohin ich irrte,
weiss ich noch minder:
Kunde gewänn' ich dess' gern.

HUNDING: (am Tische und Siegmund den Sitz bietend). Dess' Dach dich deckt, Dess' Haus dich hegt, Hunding heisst der Wirth; wendest von hier du nach West den Schritt, In Höfen reich
hausen dort Sippen, die Hunding's Ehre behüten.

barrassed. Suddenly she starts up, listens, and hears Hunding, who leads his steed to the stable. She hastens to open the door.)
(Enter Hunding, armed with shield and spear. In the doorway he stops on beholding Siegmund.)

SIEGLINDE: (Meeting the questioning look of Hunding.)
I found this man weak and worn:
Need drove him our way.

HUNDING: You've tended him?

SIEGLINDE: His thirsting lips I cooled;
Gave our guest good cheer.

SIEGMUND: (Viewing Hunding firmly and calmly.) Rest and drink, Did she give.
Would you rebuke her bounty?

HUNDING: Sacred is my hearth—
Safe are you in my house!
(To Sieglinde, giving her his weapons.)
Bring us men-folk our meal!
(Sieglinde hangs the weapons on the trunk of the tree, fetches meat and drink from the larder and prepares the meal on the table.)

HUNDING: (Scanning Siegmund's features sharply and comparing them with his wife's. Aside:) How like her he seems!
The same wicked gleam
Comes and goes in his glances.
(Concealing his surprise and turning to Siegmund.)
You must have come from afar,
He had no horse
But here found rest.
What dreadful doings
Brought you this pain?

SIEGMUND: Through wood and meadow,
Forest and heath,
Trouble and storm
Beset my course.
I know nothing of where I came from,
I know nothing of how I wandered here
Fain would I learn who's my host!

HUNDING: (Seating himself at the table and beckoning Siegmund to a seat.) This sheltering roof,
This friendly house,
Both are Hunding's own.
Should you bend your steps westward from here,
In manors rich
Kinsmen will greet you,

Gönnt mir Ehre mein Gast, wird sein Name nun mir genannt.
(Siegmund, der sich am Tisch niedergesetzt, blickt nachdenklich vor sich hin. Sieglinde hat sich neben Hunding, Siegmund gegenüber, gesetzt und heftet mit auffallender Theilnahme und Spannung ihr Auge auf diesen.)

HUNDING: (der beide beobachtet). Trägst du Sorge, mir zu vertrau'n,
der Frau hier gieb doch Kunde sieh', wie gierig sie dich frägt!

SIEGLINDE: (unbefangen und theilnahmvoll). Gast, wer du bist, wüsst' ich gern.

SIEGMUND: (blickt auf, sieht ihr in das Auge und beginnt ernst).
Friedmund darf ich nicht heissen;
Frohwalt möcht' ich wohl sein:
doch Wehwalt muss ich mich nennen.
Wolfe, der war mein Vater;
zu zwei kam ich zur Welt, eine Zwillingsschwester und ich.
Früh schwanden mir Mutter und Maid;
die mich gebar,
und die mit mir sie barg, kaum hab' ich sie je gekannt.—
Wehrlich und stark war Wolfe;
Der Feinde wuchsen ihm viel.
Zum Jagen zog
mit dem Jungen der Alte;
von Hetze und Harst
einst kehrten wir heim:
da lag das Wolfsnest leer;
zu Schutt gebrannt
der prangende Saal, zum Stumpf der Eiche blühender Stamm;
erschlagen der Mutter muthiger Leib, verschwunden in Gluthen
der Schwester Spur:
uns schuf die herbe Noth der Neidinge harte Schaar.
Geächtet floh
der Alte mit mir;
lange Jahre
lebte der Junge
mit Wolfe im wilden Wald:
manche Jagd
ward auf sie gemacht;
doch muthig wehrte
das Wolfspaar sich.
(Zu Hunding gewendet.)
Ein Wölfing kündet dir das, den als Wölfing mancher wohl kennt.

HUNDING: Wunder und wilde Märe kündest du, kühner Gast, Wehwalt—der Wölfing!
Mich dünkt, von dem wehrlichen Paar vernahm ich dunkle Sage, Kannt' ich auch Wolfe und Wölfing nicht.

SIEGLINDE: Doch weiter künde, Fremder, wo weilt dein Vater jetzt?

Who guard the honor of Hunding.
I would be glad if my guest
Would tell me his name.
(Siegmund, sitting at the table, remains silent. Sieglinde, seated by the side of Hunding, and opposite Siegmund, observes the latter with undisguised sympathy and attention.)

HUNDING: (Watching them both.) Should you shrink from Trusting your host,
Your hostess here will listen;
See, she hangs upon your words!

SIEGLINDE: (With artless curiosity.) Fain would I know, Friend, your name.

SIEGMUND: (Looking up, catches her eager glances, and answers seriously:) 'Peaceful' no one may name me;
'Joyful' fain I would be.
But 'Woeful,' that were more fitting.
Wolfè, he was my father;
And one am I of twins—
With a sister saw I the light.
Soon went from me
Mother and maid;
She who was born,
And she who gave us birth.
Hardly my dear ones I'd known.
Stalwart and strong was Wolfè;
But foes a-many had he.
The father fared
To a hunt with me;
With baiting worn out,
We regained our home.
We found lair laid waste!
The stately hall now lay
In ruins
The once mighty oak Dwarfed to a stump.
And stark lay the mother,
Wantonly slain—
All trace of the sister
Devoured by flame.
Weighted down by bitter want,
By envious hosts hemmed round,
An outcast now,
I fled with my sire.
Years and years then I wandered
With Wolfè amid the woods.
Many packs
Pressed hard on their trail,
But bravely ever
The wolves stood fast.
(Turning to Hunding.)
A wolf-cub tells you this tale,
Who a wolf to many has seemed.

HUNDING: You tell wonders and wild, weird stories hardy guest.
'Woeful'—the wolf-cub!
Methinks I had heard the grim tale
That round you two is woven.
Neither's known to me
This wolf nor cub.

SIEGLINDE: But tell me more, O stranger,
Where dwells your father now?

SIEGMUND: Ein starkes Jagen auf uns stellten die Neidinge an:
der Jäger viele
fielen den Wölfen, in Flucht durch den Wald trieb sie das Wild:
wie Spreu zerstob' uns der Feind.
Doch ward ich vom Vater versprengt:
seine Spur verlor ich,
je länger ich forschte;
nur traf ich im Forst:
leer lag das vor mir,
den Vater fand ich nicht.—
Aus dem Wald trieb es mich fort; mich drängt' es zu Männern und Frauen
wie viel ich traf, wo ich sie fand,
eines Wolfes Fell ob ich um Freund, um Frauen warb,— immer doch war ich geächtet, Unheil lag auf mir,
Was rechtes je ich rieth, andern dünkte es arg;
was schlimm immer mir schien, andre gaben ihm Gunst.
In Fehde fiel ich,
wo ich mich fand;
Zorn traf mich,
wohin ich zog;
gehrt' ich nach Wonne, weckt' ich nur Weh':—
drum musst' ich mich Wehwalt nennen, des Wehes waltet' ich nur.

HUNDING: Die so leidig Loos dir beschied, nicht liebte dich die Norn:
froh nicht grüsst dich der Mann,
dem fremd als Gast du nah'st.

SIEGLINDE: Feige nur fürchten den, der waffenlos einsam fährt!—
Künde noch, Gast, wo du im Kampf zuletzt die Waffe verlor'st!

SIEGMUND: (immer lebhafter).
Ein trauriges Kind
rief mich zum Trutz:
vermählen wollte
der Magen Sippe dem Mann ohne Minne die Maid.
Wider den Zwang
zog ich zum Schutz;
der Dränger Tross
traf ich im Kampf:
dem Sieger sank der Feind.
Erschlagen lagen die Brüder:
die Leichen umschlang da die Maid;
den Grimm verjagt' ihr der Gram.
mit wilder Thränen Fluth betroff sie weinend die Wal:
um des Mordes der eig'nen Brüder klagte die unsel'ge Braut.—
Der Erschlag'nen Sippen stürmten daher;
übermächtig
ächzten nach Rache sie, rings um die Stätte

SIEGMUND: Our foes pressed hard on our heels, Hunted us hotly and fast.
And many hunters
Fell, as the quarry,
In flight through the woods,
Swept them away.
Like chaff we scattered the foe.
At last, though, I lost my father
Every trace had vanished,
Though steadfast I sought him.
But I found a wolf-skin Deep in a glade.
Void now was the world—
My father gone for always!
Then the woods had no more joy:
I hungered for men-folk and women.
And I met men,
And found women,
But whether friend
Or love I sought,
Still I was held as an outcast;
Evil dogged my path.
Though right might be my story,
Others held it as ill.
What seemed ill in my eyes
Others took to be good.
In feuds entangled,
On every side;
Wrath met me Go where I would.
Thirsting for pleasure,
Sorrow I found;
So now they could 'Woeful' name me,
For woe had marked all my way.

HUNDING: Since your lot has been made so hard,
By Fate you've not been spoiled;
No man warmly greets you Whose guest you happened to be.

SIEGLINDE: Dastards may dread him
Who weaponless goes his way.
Tell us. O guest,
Where—in what fight—
Your sword was wrung from your hand.

SIEGMUND: (More animated.) A maiden forlorn Called for my aid:
Perforce her kinsmen
Had wished her wedded—
The maid to a lover unloved.
Hasting to help.
I swung my sword;
The tyrant's train
Met but to rout—
A victor trod the field.
All stark in death lay the brothers;
The maid still clung to their corpses,
In horror deeper than hate.
With floods of rushing tears
She mourned and moaned for her dead—
For the loss of her slaughtered brothers,
Wept the most wretched of brides.
Then the dead ones' kinsmen Burst on the scene, Overwhelming,

ragten mir Feinde.
Doch von der Wal
wich nicht die Maid:
mit Speer und Schild schirmt' ich sie lang', bis Speer und Schild im Harst mir zerhau'n.
Wund und waffenlos stand ich—sterben sah ich die Maid:
mich hetzte das wüthende Heer—auf den Leichen lag sie todt.
(Mit einem Blicke voll schmerzlichen Feuers auf Sieglinde.)
Nun weisst du, fragende Frau, Warum ich—Friedmund nicht heisse!
(Er steht auf und schreitet auf den Herd zu. Sieglinde blickt erbleichend und tief erschüttert zu Boden.)

HUNDING: (sehr finster). Ich weiss ein wildes Geschlecht, nicht heilig ist ihm,
was Andern hehr:
verhasst ist es Allen und mir.
Zur Rache ward ich gerufen,
Sühne zu nehmen
Für Sippen-Blut:
zu spät kam ich
und kehrte nun heim, des flücht'gen Frevlers Spur im eig'nen Haus zu erspäh'n.—
Mein Haus hütet, Wölfing, dich heut':
für die Nacht nahm ich dich auf:
mit starker Waffe
doch wehre dich morgen;
zum Kampfe kies' ich den Tag:
für Todte zahlst du mir Zoll.
(Zu Sieglinde, die sich mit besorgter Geberde zwischen die beiden Männer stellt.) Fort aus dem Saal!
Säume hier nicht!
Den Nachttrunk rüste mir d'rin, und harre mein' zur Ruh'.
(Sieglinde nimmt sinnend ein Trinkhorn vom Tisch, geht zu einem Schrein, aus dem sie Würze nimmt, und wendet sich nach dem Seitengemache: auf der obersten Stufe bei der Thür angelangt, wendet sie sich noch einmal um und richtet auf Siegmund—der mit verhaltenem Grimme ruhig am Herde steht und einzig sie im Auge behält—einen langen, sehnsüchtigen Blick, mit welchem sie ihn endlich auf eine Stelle im Eschenstamme bedeutungsvoll auffordernd hinweist. Hunding, der ihr Zögern bemerkt, treibt sie dann mit einem gebietenden Winke fort, worauf sie mit dem Trinkhorn und der Leuchte durch die Thüre verschwindet.)

HUNDING: (nimmt seine Waffen vom Baume). Mit Waffen wehrt sich der Mann.— Dich Wölfing, treffe ich morgen: mein Wort hörtest du—

Thirsting for vengeance dire;
Foemen ringed round me,
Pressing me harder.
Still to her dead
Close clung the maid.
With shield and spear
Stood I, her screen,
Till spear and shield
Were hewn from my hand.
Wounded—weaponless stood I—Saw the maid as she fell.
I fled from the merciless host—
On the courses . . . she lay dead.
(Looking sorrowfully at Sieglinde.)
You've heard now what you would know,
Why no one may name me 'Peaceful'!
(He rises and walks to the hearth. Sieglinde, much moved, looks down.)

HUNDING: (Gloomily.) A brood I know that's cursed, holds nothing holy
Where others bow:
It is hated of all and of me.
I was chosen to right a wrong,
to render Vengeance
For kinsmen slain.
I came too late,
But now I return
The fleeing murderer's trace
To find at last in my home.
My roof shields you,
Wolf-cub, tonight.
Until morn, be my guest.
But beware tomorrow,
And look to your weapons.
Full soon I'll meet you in arms—
For blood shed, blood you shall pay!
(To Sieglinde, who has anxiously moved between the two men.)
Away from the hall!
Do not, stay here!
My night-draught brew in yon room:
Await me there, within!
(Sieglinde takes pensively a drinking-horn from the table, walks to a cupboard from which she takes spices, and goes to the chamber. On reaching the uppermost step near the door, she turns her head toward Siegmund, who stands calmly and sullenly by the fire-place, never losing sight of her. She casts a long and significant glance at him, by which she endeavors to direct his attention to a certain spot in the ash-tree. Hunding notices her strange hesitation, and warns her away with a commanding look, whereupon she disappears through the door with the torch and drinking-horn.)

HUNDING: (Takes his weapons off the tree.) With weapons should men keep ward.
Tomorrow, Wolf-cub, I'll meet you!

hüte dich wohl!
(Er geht mit den Waffen in das Gemach ab.)

SIEGMUND: (allein). (Es ist vollständig Nacht geworden; der Saal ist nur noch von einem matten Feuer im Herde erhellt Siegmund lässt sich, nah beim Feuer, auf dem Lager nieder, und brütet in grosser Aufregung eine Zeit lang schweigend vor sich hin.) Ein Schwert verhiess mir der Vater, ich fänd' es in höchster Noth.— Waffenlos fiel ich in Feindes Haus: seiner Rache Pfand
raste ich hier:—
ein Weib sah' ich, wonnig und hehr;
entzückend Bangen
zehrt mein Herz:—
zu der mich nun Sehnsucht zieht, die mit süssem Zauber mich sehrt—im Zwange hält sie der Mann, der mich—Wehrlosen höhnt.—
Wälse! Wälse!
Wo ist dein Schwert?
Das starke Schwert,
das im Sturm ich schwänge, Bricht mir hervor aus der Brust, was wüthend das Herz noch hegt?
(Das Feuer bricht zusammen; es fällt aus der aufsprühenden Gluth ein greller Schein auf die Stelle des Eschenstammes, welche Sieglinde's Blick bezeichnet hatte und an der man jetzt deutlicher einen Schwertgriff haften sieht.)
Was gleiszt dort hell im Glimmerschein?
Welch' ein Strahl bricht
aus der Esche Stamm?—
Des Blinden Auge
leuchtet ein Blitz:
lustig lacht da der Blick.—
Wie der Schein so hehr das Herz mir sengt!
Ist es der Blick
der blühenden Frau, den dort haftend
sie hinter sich liess, als aus dem Saal sie schied?
(Von hier an verglimmt das Herdfeuer allmälig.) Nächtiges Dunkel
deckte mein Aug',
ihres Blickes Strahl streifte mich da:
Wärme gewann ich und Tag.
Selig schien mir
der Sonne Licht, den Scheitel umgliss mir
ihr wonniger Glanz—bis hinter Bergen sie sank.
Noch einmal, da sie schied, traf mich abends ihr Schein;
selbst der alten Esche Stamm erglänzte in gold'ner Gluth:
da bleicht die Blüthe—das Licht verlischt—nächt'ges Dunkel deckt mir das Auge:
tief in des Busens Berge

You have heard—my words—
Guard yourself well!
(He goes into the adjoining room, taking his weapons with him.)

SIEGMUND: (Alone.) (Night has now fallen. The hall is dimly lighted by the dying fire. Siegmund lies down on the couch by the hearth, and remains brooding and silent for some time, much agitated.) A sword—so promised my father—I'd find in my hour of need.
Weaponless am I,
My host a foe.
By his wrath fore-doomed,
Here I now lie.
A woman came,
Witching and pure;
And ravishing anguish
Burns my heart;
But she for whom I now long,
Who has cast about me her spell,
Is held in servitude by the man
Who scorns—me, all unarmed.—
Wälse! Wälse!
Where is your sword?
The strong, good sword
That went flashing in fight!
Burst from my sorrowful breast.
The frenzy had hid my heart!
(The smoldering cinders on the hearth fall to pieces; a clear light from the resulting glow shines on the tree, illuminating the spot which Sieglinde's glance had designated, and reveals the handle of a sword.)
What glistens there?
What flames and gleams
See—a light streams
From the ashen stem:
So bright it dazzles
Eyes that were blind—
Laughs with light at my look!
In the glorious glow
My heart takes fire!
Is it the glance
That woman so fair Left behind her
To burn in the tree,
When from the hall she stole?
(From now on the fire on the hearth begins to die out.)
Night and its darkness
Hung on my lids:
But her beaming eyes
Gladdened my gloom,
Warmed me and won back the light.
Sweet the sunshine
Now seems to me.
Its ravishing radiance
Enwrapped me around—
Till amid the mountains it died.
And once more, before it went,
Came tonight the glad gleam,
And the old, old ashen stem,
Grew brighter and gleamed as gold.
The flush has faded—
The light grows dim—Night and darkness
Weigh on my eyelids.
Deep in my bosom only
A flame gleams in secret (The fire is now quite out. It is glimmt nur noch lichtlose Gluth!

(Das Feuer ist gänzlich verloschen; volle Nacht.—Das Seitengemach öffnet sich leise: Sieglinde, in weissem Gewande, tritt heraus und schreitet auf Siegmund zu.)

SIEGLINDE: Schläfst du, Gast?

SIEGMUND: (freudig überrascht aufspringend). Wer schleicht daher?

SIEGLINDE: (mit geheimnissvoller Hast). Ich bin's, höre mich an!—
In tiefem Schlaf liegt Hunding; ich würzt' ihm betäubenden Trank.
Nütze die Nacht dir zum Heil!

SIEGMUND: (hitzig unterbrechend). Heil macht mich dein Nah'n!

SIEGLINDE: Eine Waffe lass' mich dir weisen—
O merke wohl, was ich dir melde!—
Den hehrsten Helden dürft' ich dich heissen;
dem Stärksten allein
ward sie bestimmt.
O merke wohl, was ich dir melde!—
Der Männer Sippe
sass hier im Saal,
von Hunding zur Hochzeit geladen:
er freite ein Weib, das ungefragt
Schächer ihm schenkten zur Frau.
Traurig sass ich,
während sie tranken:
ein Fremder trat da herein—ein Greis in grauem Gewand;
tief hing ihm der Hut,
der deckt' ihm der Augen eines;
doch des andren Strahl, Angst schuf er allen, traf die Männer sein mächt'ges Dräu'n:
mir allein weckte das Auge
süss sehnenden Harm,
Thränen und Trost zugleich.
Auf mich blickt' er
und blitzte auf Jene, als ein Schwert in Händen er schwang das stiess er nun in der Esche Stamm, bis zum Heft haftet' es drin:—
dem sollte der Stahl geziemen, der aus dem Stamm' es zög'.
Der Männer Alle,
so kühn sie sich müh'ten, die Wehr sich keiner gewann: Gäste kamen,
und Gäste gingen,
die stärksten zogen am Stahl—keinen Zoll entwich er dem Stamm:
dort haftet schweigend das Schwert.—
Da wusst' ich, wer der war, der mich Gramvolle gegrüsst:
ich weiss auch,
wem allein
im Stamm das Schwert er bestimmt.
O fänd' ich ihn heut' deep night. The chamber door opens softly. Sieglinde, clad in white, enters and draws near to Siegmund.)

SIEGLINDE: Do you sleep, guest?

SIEGMUND: (Springing up in joyful surprise.) Who steals this way?

SIEGLINDE: (Mysteriously and in haste.) Hear me, friend; it is I!
Oppressed with sleep lies Hunding;
I seasoned his drink with a drug.
Use the night for your weal!

SIEGMUND: (Interrupting her eagerly.) Bliss comes now you're near!

SIEGLINDE: But a weapon first I would show you
I wish that you could win it!
The highest hero
Then could I call you.
The mightiest alone
Owns it as lord!
O pay good heed now to my story!
The host of kinsmen
Sat in the hall,
By Hunding bid here to a wedding.
A woman he wooed
Whom all by force,
Robbers had brought him for a bride.
Sadly sat I
While they were drinking:
A stranger slowly strode in—
An aged man, all in grey.
His hat, pressed low on his head,
had kept one eye hidden.
But the other flamed,
Awful and boding,
All it threatened
On whom it gazed.
I alone did not shrink in terror,
Felt sad and yet glad,
Tearful and hopeful both!
He looked on me,
And flared at the others;
Then a sword uplifted he swung,
And drove it deep
In the ashen stem—
To the hilt hewed it a way.
He who from the tree could draw it Should some day own the steel.
The men sought vainly,
They strove and they struggled,
The wondrous weapon to win:—
Guests a-coming,
And guests a-going,
The strongest tugged at the steel—
Not an inch it budged from the stem.
There buried still lies the sword.
Well knew I who was he
That had greeted me who grieved.
I know, too,
Who alone
The sword is destined to win.
O would he were here,
And now, that friend!
Come from a far land
To give me aid.

und hier, den Freund;
käm' er aus Fremden zur ärmsten Frau:
was je ich gelitten
in grimmigemn Leid, was je mich geschmerzt in Schande und Schmach,— süsseste Rache sühnte dann Alles!
Erjagt hätt' ich,
was je ich verlor;
was je ich beweint,
wär' mir gewonnen—
fänd 'ich den heiligen Freund, umfing' den Helden mein Arm!

SIEGMUND: (umfasst sie mit feuriger Gluth). Dich, selige Frau, hält nun der Freund dem Waffe und Weib bestimmt: Heiss in der Brust brennt mir der Eid, der mich dir Edlen vermahlt.
Was je ich ersehnt,
ersah ich in dir;
in dir fand ich,
was je mir gefehlt!
Littest du Schmach, und schmerzte mich Leid;
war ich geächtet,
und warst du entehrt;
freudige Rache
lacht nun den Frohen!
Auf lach' ich in heiliger Lust, halt' ich dich Hehre umfangen.
fühl' ich dein schlagendes Herz!

SIEGLINDE: (fährt erschrocken zusammen und reisst sich los).
Ha, wer ging? wer kam herein?
(Die hintere Thüre ist aufgesprungen und bleibt weit geöffnet: aussen herrliche Frühlingsnacht; der Vollmond leuchtet herein und wirft sein helles Licht auf das Paar, das so sich plötzlich in voller Deutlichkeit wahrnehmen kann.)

SIEGMUND: (in leiser Entzückung). Keiner ging—doch Einer kam:
siehe, der Lenz lacht in den Saal!
(Er zieht sie mit sanftem Ungestüm zu sich auf das Lager.) Winterstürme wichen dem Wonnemond, in mildem Lichte leuchtet der Lenz;
auf linden Lüften,
leicht und lieblich, Wunder webend
er sich wiegt;
über Wald und Auen
weht sein Athem, weit geöffnet
lacht sein Aug'.
Aus sel'ger Vöglein Sange
süss er tönt, holde Düfte haucht er aus;
seinem warmen Blut entblühen wonnige Blumen,
Keim und Spross

Whatever I have suffered
Of bitterest pain—
Whatever was my load
Of scorn and of shame,
Sweetest of vengeance
Comfort should bring me.
Regained were all
That I ever had lost;
Whatever I had mourned
Would be recovered;
Could I but find him, that friend—
And press my lord to my breast!

SIEGMUND: (Embracing her ardently.) Then here in his arms
That friend holds you.
Who should win weapon and wife
Hot from my heart
Take now the oath
That weds me, dearest, to you.
Whatever I had dreamt
In you I divined;
In you found all
That ever I had craved!
Shame you have known,
And pain have I borne;
Outcast I've wandered, Dishonored you've been.
Now at last vengeance
Comes to delight us!
I laugh loudly
In holiest joy—
Pressing you, sweet, to my bosom—
Feeling your heart as it beats!

SIEGLINDE: (Starts in alarm and tears herself from his embrace.) Ha! Who went? Who was it came?
(The outer door has opened wide. It remains open. Outside the night is beautiful. The full moon shines upon the two lovers, and all about them suddenly becomes plainly visible.)

SIEGMUND: (In gentle ecstacy.)
No one went—
Yet someone came.
See how the Spring
Smiles in the hall.
(He draws her gently but firmly to him on the couch.)
Winter's storming's stilled
By the love-lit May;
In tender beauty
Beams the Spring.
On balmy breezes,
Light and lovely,
Weaving wonders,
See, he sways;
Over wood and meadow
Softly breathing,
Wide he opens
His laughing eyes:
And happy birds are singing
Songs he taught,
Sweetest perfumes
Scent his train.
As he warms them, lo, the branches
Break into blossom;
Bud and bough

entspriesst seiner Kraft.
Mit zarter Waffen Zier bezwingt er die Welt.
Winter und Sturm wichen der starken Wehr:—
wohl musste den tapfern Streichen die strenge Thüre auch weichen, die trotzig und starr uns—trennte von ihm.—
Zu seiner Schwester schwang er sich her;
die Liebe lockte den Lenz;
in uns'rem Busen
barg sie sich tief:
nun lacht sie selig dem Licht.
Die bräutliche Schwester
befreite der Bruder:
zertrümmert liegt,
was je sie getrennt;
jauchzend grüsst sich das junge Paar:
vereint sind Liebe und Lenz!

SIEGLINDE: Du bist der Lenz, nach dem ich verlangte in frostigen Winter's Frist:
dich grüsste mein Herz
mit heiligem Grau'n, als dein Blick zuerst mir erblühte.— Fremdes nur sah ich von je, freundlos war mir das Nahe;
als hätt' ich nie es gekannt war was immer mir kam.
Doch dich kannt' ich deutlich und klar:
Als mein Auge dich sah, warst du mein Eigen:
was im Busen ich barg,
was ich bin, hell wie der Tag
taucht' es mir auf, wie tönender Schall schlug's an mein Ohr, als in frostig öder Fremde zuerst ich den Freund ersah.
(Sie hängt sich entzückt an seinen Hals und blick ihm nahe in's Gesicht.)

SIEGMUND: O süsseste Wonne!
Seligstes Weib!

SIEGLINDE: (dicht an seinen Augen). O lass in Nähe zu dir mich neigen, dass hell ich schaue der dir aus Aug'
und Antlitz bricht, und so süss die Sinne mir zwingt!

SIEGMUND: Im Lenzesmond leuchtest du hell;
hehr umwebt dich
das Wellenhaar; was mich berückt,
errath' ich nun leicht—
denn wonnig weidet mein Blick.

SIEGLINDE: (schlägt ihm die Locken von der Stirn zurück und betrachtet ihn staunend). Wiew dir die Stirn
so offen steht,
der Adern Geäst

Submit to his sway.
In beauty's armor dight,
He witches the world.
Winter and storm vainly
Had said no to him
And even the surly portals
Obey his will, with the mortals
They fain would have barred From—rapture and day.
Fast he has fared—
To greet his sister,
It was Love that longed for the Spring.
In both our bosoms Buried, lay Love:
But now she laughs in the light.
The bride who was sister
Is freed by the brother;
And shattered now
Lie barriers and chains.
Joyous greeting
Their lips exchange:
For Love has wed with the Spring!

SIEGLINDE: You are the Spring
For whom I lay longing
And fasting through winter's frost;
It was you my heart hailed
With holiest awe,
As your look with love on me lighted.
Strange the world ever had seemed,
Friends had never come to cheer me,
And all I counted as nothing
That I met on my way.
But I knew you
Surely and soon;
When my glances met yours
Mine you were only:
All my heart had once hid,
All I am,
Clear as the day
Now I could see:
The truth sounded at last in my ear
As in chill and dreary sorrow I made a friend in you.
A friend.
(She hangs upon his neck in rapture and looks searchingly into his face.)

SIEGMUND: O sweetest of raptures!
Woman divine!

SIEGLINDE: (Gazing into his eyes.) O let me nearer
To you, dear, nestle,
For fain I'd gaze on The holy light
That shines on your eyes
And face
And so sweetly draws me to you.

SIEGMUND: The love-lit moon
Glows in your face;
Soft enfolding
your waving hair.
How I know well that I am your slave.
For rapture rivets my look.

SIEGLINDE: (Brushes the hair back from his brow and looks at him in amazement.)
Your brow is broad,
And frank and fair,
Your veins all entwined in den Schläfen sich schlingt!

Mir zagt es vor der Wonne, die mich entzückt—ein Wunder will mich
gemahnen:—
den heut' zuerst ich erschaut, mein Auge sah dich schon!

SIEGMUND: Ein Minnetraum
gemahnt auch mich:
in heissem Sehnen
sah ich dich schon!

SIEGLINDE: Im Bach erblickt' ich mein eigen Bild—
und jetzt gewahr' ich es wieder:
wie einst dem Teich es enttaucht, bietest mein Bild mir nun du!

SIEGMUND: Du bist das Bild—das ich in mir barg

SIEGLINDE: (den Blick schnell abwendend). O still! lass mich der Stimme lauschen:—
mich dünkt, ihren Klang
hört' ich als Kind—— doch nein! ich hörte sie neulich, als meiner Stimme Schall mir wiederhallte der Wald.

SIEGMUND: O lieblichste Laute, denen ich lausche!

SIEGLINDE: (schnell ihm wieder in's Auge spähend). Deines Auges Gluth erglänzte mir schon:—
so blickte der Greis grüssend auf mich,
als der Traurigen Trost er gab.
An dem Blick erkannt' ihn sein Kind—schon wollt ich bei'm Namen ihn nennen (Sie hält inne und fährt dann leise fort.) Wehwalt heiss'st du fürwahr?

SIEGMUND: Nicht heiss' mich so,
seit du mich liebst:
nun walt 'ich der hehrsten Wonnen!

SIEGLINDE: Und Friedmund darfst du froh dich nicht nennen?

SIEGMUND: Nenne mich du,
wie du liebst, dass ich heisse:
den Namen nehm' ich von dir!

SIEGLINDE: Doch nanntest du Wolfe den Vater?

SIEGMUND: Ein Wolf war er feigen Füchsen!
Doch dem so stolz
strahlte das Auge, wie, Herrliche, hehr dir es strahlt, der war—Wälse gennant.

SIEGLINDE: (ausser sich). War
Wälse dein Vater, Und bist du ein Wälsung, stiess er für dich
sein Schwert in den Stamm—so lass' mich dich heissen, wie ich dich liebe:
Siegmund—
so nenn' ich dich.

I trace in your temples
I tremble, as my passion
Holds me enchained—
Some wonder thrills me with terror:—
Before I found you tonight
Your face had seen my eyes!

SIEGMUND: A dream of love,
I, too, recall.
I surely sought you,
Wooed you even now!

SIEGLINDE: A brooklet mirrored
My face one morn—
And now again I behold it.
What once the water revealed
Now I can see in your face!

SIEGMUND: Thine is the face
That my heart had hid.

SIEGLINDE: (Quickly averting her gaze.) Ah, still! Let me recall your voice, love!
I thought
I heard it once as a child—
Yet no! It was lately I heard it,
When, echoing through the woods,
There came to me my own voice.

SIEGMUND: How lovely the echoes Sound as I listen!

SIEGLINDE: (Again gazing into his eyes.) Ah, those eyes of yours
I have seen before now.
So beamed on me once,
Cheering my grief,
The strange eyes of that aged man.
By that glance
I found my father.
I nearly had named him by name.
(She pauses, and then goes on in a low voice):
'Woeful,' surely I see?

SIEGMUND: Not so I'm named
For you my love.
My world is all bliss and rapture.

SIEGLINDE: And 'Peaceful' none may Call you forever?

SIEGMUND: Give me the name
That your love would award me;
That name alone I will bear.

SIEGLINDE: Was your father called Wolfè?

SIEGMUND: Ay, Wolfè to dastard foxes!
Yet he whose eye
Shone with the lustre
That shines, O beloved, in yours
He was—Wälse, I believe.

SIEGLINDE: (Beside herself.)
Your father was Wälse?
Then you are a Wälsung!
Fast in the tree
His sword waits for you
So let me re-name you
As I do love you:
Siegmund—
I proclaim you!

SIEGMUND: (springt auf den Stamm zu und fasst den Schwerzgriff). Siegmund heiss' ich und Siegmund bin ich:
bezeug' es dies Schwert,
das zaglos ich halte!
Wälse verhiess mir,
in höchster Noth
fänd' ich es einst:
ich fass' es nun!
Heiligster Minne
höchste Noth, sehnender Liebe
sehrende Noth, brennt mir hell in der Brust, drängt zu That und Tod:
Nothung! Nothung!—
so nenn' ich dich, Schwert—Nothung! Nothung!
neidlicher Stahl!
Zeig' deiner Schärfe schneidenden Zahn:
heraus aus der Scheide zu mir!
(*Er zieht mit einem gewaltigen
Zuck das Schwerz aus dem Stamme und zeigt es der von Staunen und Entzücken erfassten
Sieglinde.*)
Siegmund den Wälsung Siehst du, Weib!
Als Brautgabe
Bringt er dies Schwert:
so freit er sich die seligste Frau:
dem Feindeshaus entführt er dich so.
Fern von hier
folge ihm nun, folge mir nun,
lachendes Haus:
dort schützt dich Nothung das
Schwert
wenn Siegmund dir liebend erlag!
(Er umfasst sie, um sie mit sich fortzuziehen.)

SIEGLINDE: (in höchster Trunkenheit). Bist du Siegmund, den ich hier sehe—Sieglinde bin ich,
die dich ersehnt:
die eig'ne Schwester
gewann'st du zueins mit dem
Schwert!

SIEGMUND: Braut und Schwester bist du dem Bruder—
so blühe denn Wälsungen-blut!
(*Er zieclit sie mit wüthender
Gluth an sich; sie sinkt mit einem Schrei an seine Brust.—Der Vorhang fällt schnell.*)

ZWEITER AUFZUG

Wildes Felsengebirg

Im Hintergrunde zieht sich von unten her eine Schlucht herauf, die auf ein erhöhtes Felsjoch mündet; von diesem senkt sich der Boden dem Vordergrunde zu

SIEGMUND: Siegmund, Victor, Henceforth proclaim me.
Bear witness the sword
I grasp without shrinking.
Wälse foretold that,
In direst need,
It should bring help—
I hold it now!
Love the most holy,
Direst need,
Loving and longing,
Sorest of need,
Burn and flame in my breast,
Drive to deeds and death.
Nothung! Needful!
You, sword, shall be named—Nothung! Nothung!
Blade of the brave!
Show me your sharp
And shattering steel:
And—out of your scabbard now leap (With a mighty tug he draws the sword from the trunk and shows it to the astonished and delighted Sieglinde.)
Siegmund the Wälsung,
Look, wife!
Now brings to you,
Bride, a true blade!
It is thus he woos
His dearest and best;
It is thus he frees
His love from her foe.
Far from here
Go where he goes,
Into the smiling
Sunshine of Spring,
Where Nothung shall keep guard always When Siegmund is disarmed by love!
(He puts his arm round her, to take her away with him.)

SIEGLINDE: (Ecstatically.) Are
you Siegmund,
Here by my side?
Sieglinde am I,
For you I sigh:
Your own true sister You've won with the rape of the sword!

SIEGMUND: Bride and sister
Be to your brother—
Be blessed, Wälsungen blood!
(*He draws her to him rapturously.
She falls on his breast with a cry of ecstacy. Quick curtain.*)

ACT II

A wild, Rocky Height.

(*In the background a wild ravine rises, leading to a lofty and rocky height. The ground slopes downward towards the foreground.
Wotan is discovered in full armor*

wieder abwärts.
Wotan, kriegerisch gewaffnet und mit dem Speer: vor ihm Bruennhilde, als Walkuere, ebenfalls in voller Waffenrüstung.

WOTAN: Nun zäume dein Ross, reisige Maid!
Bald entbrennt brünstiger Streit: Brünnhilde stürme zum Streit, dem Wälsung kiese sie Sieg!
Hunding wähle sich wem er gehört:
nach Walhall taugt er mir nicht.
Drum rüstig und rasch reite zur Wal!

BRUNNHILDE: (Anchzend von Fels zu Fels die Höhe rechts hinauf springend). Hojotoho! Hojotoho!
Heiaha! Heiaha!
Hojotoho! Hojotoho!
Heiaha! Heiaha!
Hojotoho! Hojotoho!
Hojotoho! Hojotoho!
Heiahaha!
Hojotoho!
(Auf einer hohen Felsspitze hält sie an, blickt in die hintere Schlucht hinab und ruft zu Wotan zurück.) Dir rath' ich, Vater, rüste dich selbst;
harten Sturm
sollst du besteh'n:
Fricka naht, deine Frau,
im Wagen mit dem Widdergespann.
Hei! wie die gold'ne Geissel sie schwingt;
die armen Thiere ächzen vor Angst;
wild rasseln die Räder:
zornig fährt sie zum Zank!
In solchem Strausse streit' ich nicht gern, lieb' ich auch muthiger Männer Schlacht:
drum sieh', wie den Sturm du bestehst;
ich Lustige lass' dich im Stich!—
Hojotoho! Hojotoho!
Heiaha! Heiaha!
Hojotoho! Hojotoho!
Heiaha! Heiaha!
Hojotoho! Hojotoho!
Hojotoho! Hojotoho!
Heiahaha!
(Sie ist hinter der Gebirgshöhe zur Seite verschwunden, während aus der Schlucht herauf Fricka, in einem mit zwei Widdern bespannten Wagen, auf dem Joch anlangt: dort steigt sie schnell ab und schreitet dann heftig in den Vordergrund auf Wotan zu.)

WOTAN: (indem er sie kommen sieht). Der alte Sturm!
Die alte Müh!
Doch Stand muss ich hier halten.

and bearing his spear. Before him stands Brünnhilde, in the full armor of a Walkyr.)

WOTAN: Now bridle your steed, Warfaring maid!
Soon shall come Storming and strife.
Brünnhilde, haste to the fray,
The Wälsung surely must win.
Hunding's haven be Here or be there—
He shall see never Walhalla.
So up and away,
Haste to the field!

BRÜNNHILDE: (Exulting, as she ascends the height on the right, leaping from rock to rock.) Ho-yo-to-ho! Ho-yo-to-ho!
Hi-ya-ha! Hi-ya-ha!
Ho-yo-to-ho! Ho-yo-to-ho!
Hi-ya-ha! Hi-ya-ha!
Ho-yo-to-ho! Ho-yo-to-ho!
Ho-yo-to-ho! Ho-yo-to-ho!
Hi-ya-ha-ha!
Ho-yo-to-ho!
(On reaching a high peak she halts, looks down into the ravine beyond, and calls to Wotan.)
I warn you father,
You'll need armor.
Fierce the storm
Soon you shall meet.
Fricka comes, your wife,
She rides in her car with the rams.
Ha! How she cracks her golden Whip!
Her team in terror
Trembles and moans!
Loud, loud the wheels rattle,
Wrath and war they forbode!
For such wild battles
Love, have I none,
Joy though I may
In the strife of men!
So weather the storm as you can
I laugh and I leave you to fate!
Ho-yo-to-ho! Ho-yo-to-ho!
Hi-ya-ha! Hi-ya-ha!
Ho-yo-to-ho! Ho-yo-to-ho!
Hi-ya-ha! Hi-ya-ha!
Ho-yo-to-ho! Ho-yo-to-ho!
Ho-yo-to-ho! Ho-yo-to-ho!
Hi-ya-ha-ha!
(She vanishes behind the rocks, as Fricka enters from the heights, after ascending from the ravine, in a chariot drawn by two rams, alights quickly, and strides angrily towards Wotan in the foreground.)

WOTAN: (As he sees her coming.)
The old, old storm!
The old, old strife!
And yet here I must face her!

FRICKA: Wo in Bergen du dich birgst der Gattin Blick zu entgeh'n, einsam hier
such' ich dich auf, dass Hilfe du mir verhiessest.

WOTAN: Was Fricka kümmert, künde sie frei.

FRICKA: Ich vernahm Hunding's Noth, um Rache rief er mich an:
der Ehe Hüterin
hörte ihn, verhiess streng zu strafen die That des frech frevelnden Paar's, das kühn den Gatten gekränkt.

WOTAN: Was so Schlimmes schuf das Paar,
das liebend einte der Lenz?
Der Minne Zauber
entzückte sie:
wer büsst mir der Minne Macht?

FRICKA: Wie thörig und taub du dich stellst als wüsstest fürwahr du nicht, dass um der Ehe heiligen Eid
den hart gekränkten, ich klage!

WOTAN: Unheilig
acht' ich den Eid, der Unliebende eint;
und mir wahrlich
muthe nicht zu,
dass mit Zwang ich halte,
was dir nicht haftet:
denn wo kühn Kräfte sich regen, da rath' ich offen zum Krieg.

FRICKA: Achtest du rühmlich der Ehe Bruch, so prahle nun weiter
und preis' es heilig, dass Blutschande entblüht dem Bund eines Zwillingpaar's.
Mir schaudert das Herz, es schwindelt mein Hirn:
bräutlich umfing die Schwester der Bruder.
Wann—ward es erlebt, dass leiblich Geschwister sich liebten?

WOTAN: Heut'—hast du's erlebt:
erfahre so,
was von selbst sich fügt,
sei zuvor auch noch nie es gescheh'n.
Dass jene sich lieben, leuchtet dir hell:
drum höre redlichen Rath!
soll süsse Lust
deinen Segen dir lohnen, so seg'ne, lachend der Liebe, Siegmund's und Sieglinde's Bund!

FRICKA: (in höchste Entrüstung ausbrechend). So ist es denn aus mit den ewigen Göttern, seit du die wilden Wälsungen zeugtest?
Heraus sagt' ich's—traf ich den Sinn?
Nichts gilt dir der Hehren

FRICKA: On the hill-side you hide,
My wifely eyes to evade.
Here I come,
Riding alone,
To seek the help you promised.

WOTAN: Your troubles, Fricka, Freely unfold!

FRICKA: Now I know Hunding's need:
For vengeance rightly he prayed.
And I, who watch over Married love,
Stand pledged
Now to punish the wrong
A bold, brazen-faced pair
Have wrought against one who's wed.

WOTAN: Was the evil
Done so dire
By those the Spring had made one?
The magic meshes
Of love accuse:
Nor count it a crime to love.

FRICKA: How dull and how deaf you would seem,
As though it were truly strange
That in defense
Of holiest bonds,
I take up arms for the wronged one!

WOTAN: Unholy Deem I the oath
That unloving is sworn:
And would you, then,
Have me hold chained
Those whom you have striven
In vain to fetter?
For where such fires fiercely are raging
My thought is—stay not the flames.

FRICKA: Since you do honor
The crime I hate,
Go further in folly, Proclaim it holy,
Where incest is the fruit
Of love between two born twins.
My heart is aghast
A-whirl is my brain:
Wedded, these two
The sister and brother!
Whenever was it known
That brother and sister were mated?

WOTAN: Now—here it is known:
And so be sure
That it had to be,
Though till now it had never yet been.
They love one another,
Surely it is plain:
So yield to reason and good advice.
Let bliss be born
Of the love that you seal,
And laugh to know you are blessing
Siegmund and Sieglinde's bond.

FRICKA: (In a storm of indignation.) To this has it come
With the gods everlasting,
Since you begot the lawless Wälsungs?
My shaft went home—
Straight to the mark?
You hold nothing holy,

heilige Sippe;
hin wirfst du Alles,
was einst du geachtet;
zerreissest die Bande,
die selbst du gebunden;
losest lachend
des Himmels Haft—
dass nach Lust und Laune nur walte dies frevelnde Zwillingspaar, deiner Untreue zuchtlose Frucht!— O, was klag' ich um Ehe und Eid,
du zuerst du selbst sie versehrt!
Die treue Gattin trogest du stets:
wo eine Tiefe,
wo eine Höhe, dahin lugte
lüstern dein Blick, wie des Wechsels Lust du gewännest, und höhnend kränktest mein Herz!
Trauernden Sinnes
musst' ich's ertragen, zog'st du zur Schlacht mit den schlimmen Mädchen, die wilder Minne Bund dir gebar;
denn dein Weib noch scheutest du so, dass der Walküren Schaar, und Brünnhilde selbst,
deines Wunsches Braut,
in Gehorsam der Herrin du gab'st.
Doch jetzt, da dir neue Namen gefielen, als 'Wälse' wölfisch
im Walde du schweiftest;
jetzt, da zu niedrigster Schmach du dich neigtest, gemeiner Menschen ein Paar zu erzeugen:
jetzt dem Wurfe der Wölfin wirfst du zu Füssen dein Weib!—
So führ' es denn aus, fülle das Mass:
die Betrog'ne lass auch zertreten!

WOTAN: (ruhig). Nichts lerntest du, wollt' ich dich lehren,
was nie du erkennen kannst, eh' nicht ertagte die That.
Stets Gewohntes
nur magst du versteh'n:
doch was noch nie sich traf, darnach trachtet mein Sinn!
Eines höre!
Noth thut ein Held,
der, ledig göttlichen Schutzes, sich löse vom Göttergesetz:
so nur taugt er
zu wirken die That,
die, wie noth sie den Göttern, dem Gott doch zu wirken verwehrt

FRICKA: Mit tiefem Sinne
willst du mich täuschen!
Was Hehres sollten Helden je wirken, das ihren Göttern wäre verwehrt deren Gunst in ihnen nur wirkt?

Kinship nor Godhead:
You fling away
The laws you honored, Destroyed the fetters
That came of your forging;
You make a mockery of Heaven's behest.
That the sinful sister and brother
May love in their own wild way.
And your faithlessness bore the bad fruit!
But why fret over Weddings and vows
That you yourself did first laugh to scorn?
You often wronged your wife so faithful
Is there a valley,
Is there a mountain,
Your eye, lusting,
Has not profaned?
As your love of change became stronger,
More harrowed ever was my heart!
What did my mourning
Mean to your pleasure?
Forth you would fare
With the wicked maidens,
Of love untrammelled
Born for your bane.
Yet your wife at least you did dread.
For Brünnhild' herself, Best loved of them all,
With your Walkyr band,
You did order my will to obey
But now, since disguises
New did delight you:
Since wolfish 'Wälse'
In woods went a-roaming;
Now that you have fathomed the nethermost Depth
Begetting, shameless,
A brace of mere mortals;
Now you would offer your wife
Up to the whelps of your dam?
Well, go your own way,
Halt at no shame,
Let them crush me, too, in their triumph!

WOTAN: (Calmly.) You would learn nothing,
Though I should teach you What your mind could never grasp Till what must happen shall be.
What is common Alone you can read:
But what never yet was known
I foresee in my mind.
Mark this only!
One there must come,
A hero, slighted of heaven,
To defy the laws of the Gods.
That would fit him
To do the great deed
Not a God in Walhalla
Would dare, though the need should be dire.

FRICKA: Thy words and wisdom
Would but deceive me.
What deed could heroes
Work that were worthy,
Where we, the gods almighty, had failed?
By our grace alone do they work.

WOTAN: Ihres eignen Muthes achtest du nicht?

FRICKA: Wer hauchte Menschen ihn ein?
Wer hellte den Blöden den Blick?
In deinem Schutz
scheinen sie stark, durch deinen Stachel streben sie auf:
du—reizest sie einzig die so mir Ew'gen du rühmst.
Mit neuer List
willst du mich belügen, durch neue Ränke
jetzt mir entrinnen;
doch diesen Wälsung gewinnst du dir nicht:
in ihm treff' ich nur dich, denn durch dich trotzt er allein.

WOTAN: In wilden Leiden erwuchs er sich selbst:
mein Schutz schirmte ihn nie.

FRICKA: So schütz' auch heut' ihn nicht;
nimm ihm das Schwert,
das du ihm geschenkt!

WOTAN: Das Schwert?

FRICKA: Ja—das Schwert, das zauberstark
zuckende Schwert, das du Gott dem Sohne gab'st.

WOTAN: Siegmund gewann es sich selbst in der Noth.

FRICKA: Du schuf'st ihm die Noth; wie das neidliche Schwert:
willst du mich täuschen,
die Tag und Nacht
auf den Fersen dir folgt?
Für ihn stiessest du das Schwert in den Stamm; du verhiessest ihm
die hehre Wehr:
willst du es leugnen, dass nur deine List
ihn lockte, wo er es fänd'?
(Wotan macht eine Geberde des Grimmes.)
Mit Unfreien
streitet kein Edler, Frevler straft nur der Freie: wider deine Kraft führt' ich wohl Krieg:
doch Siegmund verfiel mir als Knecht.
(Wotan wendet sich unmuthig ab.)
Der dir als Herren hörig und eigen gehorchen soll ihm dein ewig Gemahl?
Soll mich in Schmach der Niedrigste schmähen, dem Frechen zum Sporn, dem Freien zum Spott?
Das kann mein Gatte nicht wollen,
die Göttin entweiht er nicht so!

WOTAN: (finster). Was verlangst du?

FRICKA: Lass' von dem Wälsung!

WOTAN: Do you count their courage
Truly for nothing?

FRICKA: Who gave that courage to men?
Who opened their eyes to the light?
They may seem strong with you for a shield.
With you to spur them,
They may strive well.
You—only you goaded them,
These men whose praise you, sing.
With new deceit
Would you beguile me;
With new devices
Would you evade me;
But this one Wälsung
No cunning shall save.
In him I strike yourself
It was your might made him so brave.

WOTAN: In pain and sorrow Alone was he reared:
My shield never gave shelter.

FRICKA: Then shieldless let him stand;
Take back the sword,
That he owes to you.

WOTAN: The sword?

FRICKA: Yes—the sword,
The magical,
Masterful sword,
You, a god, gave your son.

WOTAN: Siegmund has conquered it, Won it in need.

FRICKA: You made the need,
When he needed the sword;
Would you deceive me
Who, night and day,
In your traces have trod?
For him did you thrust
The sword in the tree;
Ay, the noble blade
Was meant for him,
Will you deny
That your cunning alone
Allured him where it was found?
(Wotan knits his brows wrathfully.)
Can gods join
In battle with bondsmen?
The guilty should they but punish.
Braving you so strong,
War I might wage;
But Siegmund is only my slave (Wotan turns away impatiently.)
Shall he who owes you Duty and homage
Be master now
To the wife you have wed?
Shall he, a clod,
Put shame on your goddess—
The base-born be lord—
The mighty be scorned?
Ah, no! My lord cannot wish it—
He would not degrade his goddess!

WOTAN: (Gloomily.) What, then, would you?

FRICKA: Cast off the Wälsung!

WOTAN: (mit gedämpfter Stimme). Er geh' seines Weg's.

FRICKA: Doch du—schütze ihn nicht, wenn zur Schlacht der Rächer ihn ruft

WOTAN: Ich—schütze ihn nicht.

FRICKA: Sieh' mir in's Auge, sinne nicht Trug!
Die Walküre wend' auch von ihm!

WOTAN: Die Walküre walte frei!

FRICKA: Nicht doch! Deinen Willen vollbringt sie allein: verbiete ihr Siegmund's Sieg!

WOTAN: (mit heftigem innerem Kampfe). Ich kann ihn nicht fällen:
er fand mein Schwert!

FRICKA: Entzieh' dem den Zauber, zerknick' es dem Knecht:
schutzlos find' ihn der Feind!

BRUENNHILDE'S VOICE: Heiaha!
Heiaha!
Hojotoho!
(Sie vernimmt von der Höhe her den jauchzenden Walkürenruf Bruennhilde's: diese erscheint dann dann selbst mit ihrem Ross auf dem Felspfade rechts.)

FRICKA: Dort kommt deine Kühne Maid: jauchzend jagt sie daher.

BRUENNHILDE'S VOICE: Heiaha!
Heiaha!
Hojohotojohotojoha!

WOTAN: (dumpf für sich). Ich rief sie für Siegmund zu Ross

FRICKA: Deiner ew'gen Gattin heilige Ehre beschirme heut' ihr Schild!
Von Menschen verlacht, verlustig der Macht, gingen wir Götter zu Grund, würde heut' nicht hehr und herrlich mein Recht gerächt von der muthigen Maid.—
Der Wälsung fällt meiner Ehre:— empfah' ich von Wotan den Eid?

WOTAN: (in furchtbarem Unmuth und innerem Grimm auf einen Felsensitz sich werfend).
Nimm den Eid!
(Als Brünnhilde von der Höhe aus Fricka gewahrte, brach sie schnell ihren Gesang ab, und hat nun still und langsam ihr Ross am Zügel den Felsweg herabgeleitet; sie birgt dieses jetzt in einer Höhle, als Fricka, zu ihrem Wagen sich zurückwendend, an ihr vorbeischreitet.)

FRICKA: (zu Bruennhilde). Heervater harret dein:
lass' ihn dir künden,
wie das Loos er gekies't!
(Sie besteigt den Wagen und fährt schnell nach hinten davon.)

WOTAN: (Lowering his voice.) He shall dread his fate

FRICKA: But you—shelter him not,
When the foeman his vengeance seeks!

WOTAN: I'll—not be his shield.

FRICKA: Face me more frankly—Think not of fraud.
The Walkyr must lend him no aid!

WOTAN: The Walkyrie fares freely.

FRICKA: Not so! As you will
She comes and she goes.
Forbid her to let him win!

WOTAN: (Fighting against his emotion.) I cannot undo him:
He wields my sword!

FRICKA: Then kill its magic:
It will break in his hand—
Helpless finds him his foe!

BRÜNNHILDE'S VOICE: Hi-ya-ha!
Hi-ya-ha!
Ho-yo-to-ho!
(From the heights she hears the jubilant Walkyr cry of Brünnhilde, who appears soon after with her steed on the rocky path, to the right.)

FRICKA: Here hastens your daring maid—
Joyfully she hies!

BRÜNNHILDE'S VOICE: Hi-ya-ha!
Hi-ya-ha!
Ho-yo-ho-to-yo-ho-to-yo-ha!

WOTAN: (Aside.) For Siegmund she saddled her steed!

FRICKA: To protect the spotless Fame of your goddess
See her shield shine!
To mortals a mock,
And stripped of our might,
Though we be gods, we were doomed,
Should the warrior maid Today betray
My rightful and holiest cause.
The Wälsung dies for my honor:
Does Wotan so pledge me his oath?

WOTAN: (Raging and inwardly wrathful, as he throws himself on a rocky seat.) Take my oath!
(Brünnhilde, perceiving Fricka, has suddenly interrupted her song and has led her steed slowly and silently down the rocky path. She hides the steed in a cave just as Fricka passes her on her way back to her chariot.)

FRICKA: (To Brünnhilde.) War-lord, he Waits for you:
He will inform you
How he has cast his lost
(She flew into her chariot and is driven off quickly in the background.)

BRUENNHILDE: (tritt mit verwunderter und besorgter Miene vor Wotan, der, auf dem Felssitz zurückgelehnt das auf die Hand gestützt, in finsteres Brüten versunken ist). Schlimm, fürcht' ich, schloss der Streit, lachte Fricka dem Loose!— Vater, was soll
dein Kind erfahren?
Trübe scheinst du und traurig!

WOTAN: (lässt den Arm machtlos sinken und den Kopf in den Nacken fallen). In eig'ner Fessel fing ich mich:—
ich unfreiester Aller!

BRUENNHILDE: So sah ich dich nie!
Was nagt dir das Herz?

WOTAN: (in wildem Ausbruche den Arm erhebend). O heilige Schmach!
O schmählicher Harm!
Götternoth!
Götternoth!
Endloser Grimm!
Ewiger Gram!
Der Traurigste bin ich von Allen!

BRUENNHILDE: (wirft erschrocken Schild, Speer und Helm von sich, und lässt sich mit besorgter Zutraulichkeit zu Wotan's Füssen nieder). Vater! Vater!
Sage, was ist dir?
Was erschreck'st du mit Sorge dein Kind!
Vertraue mir:
ich bin dir treu;
sieh', Brünnhilde bittet!
(Sie legt traulich und ängstlich Haupt und Hände ihm auf Knie und Schooss.)

WOTAN: (blickt ihr lange in's Auge und streichelt ihr dann die Locken: wie aus tiefem Sinnen zu sich kommend beginnt er endlich mit sehr leiser Stimme). Lass' ich's verlauten, lös' ich dann nicht meines Willens haltenden Haft?

BRUENNHILDE: (ihm eben so leise erwidernd). Zu Wotan's Willen sprichst du, sagst du mir, was du willst:
wer—bin ich,
wär' ich dein Wille nicht?

WOTAN: Was Keinem in Worten ich künde, unausgesprochen
bleib' es denn ewig:
mit mir nur rath' ich,
red' ich zu dir.— — —
(Mit noch gedämpfterer, schauerlicher Stimme, während er Bruennhilden unverwandt in das Auge blickt.)
Als junger Liebe
Lust mir verblich, verlangte nach Macht mein Muth:
von jäher Wünsche Wüthen gejagt, gewann ich mir die Welt.
Unwissend trugvoll

BRÜNNHILDE: (Moves toward Wotan, looking anxious and amazed. Wotan reclines on his rocky seat, resting his head on his hand. He is brooding gloomily.) Ill, surely,
Ends the strife—
Fricka laughed as she left us!
Father, what shall
Your child discover?
Sad you seem, and solemn!

WOTAN: (Lets his arm drop limply and bows his head.)
I forged the fetters.
I stand chained
I, most bound of all bondsmen!

BRÜNNHILDE: Thus never you did look.
What gnaws at your heart?

WOTAN: (Raising his arm in violent excitement.) How awful the shame!
How shameful this woe!
We're cursed!
Gods! Accurst!
Endless the grief!
Endless the groans!
Ah, saddest of all, I lie mourning!

BRÜNNHILDE: (In alarm, throwing away her shield, spear and helmet, and kneeling affectionately at Wotan's feet) Father! Father!
Tell me, what ails you?
See what terror bewilders your child!
Have trust in me—
I'm true to you
See, Brünnhilde begs you!
(She lays her head and hands trustingly but distressfully on his knee.)

WOTAN: (Gazes long into her face and strokes her hair. Then, as if coming to himself again, he at last begins in a very low voice.)
Did I reveal it, Should I not lose
What is left of might in my will?

BRÜNNHILDE: (Answering in an equally low voice.) To Wotan's will you speak:
Tell me now what you will What—were I, Could I your will not be?

WOTAN: What never in words had been fashioned, Unuttered still Shall be, and for ever.
Myself I speak to,
Speaking to you— — —
(In a more subdued and awestruck voice, looking fixedly at Brünnhilde.)
As Love's young fancy Faded and died,
I longed for the pride of power:
A-flame with olden Wishes, I went
To win the whole wide world.
Untried, yet artful,
Falsehood I fostered,

Untreue übt' ich,
band durch Verträge, was Unheil barg:
listig verlockte mich Loge,
der schweifend nun verschwand.
Von der Liebe doch
mocht' ich nicht lassen;
in der Macht verlangt' ich nach Minne
den Nacht gebar,
der bange Nibelung, Alberich brach ihren Bund,
er fluchte der Liebe, und gewann durch den Fluch des Rheines glänzendes Gold und mit ihm masslose Macht.
Den Ring, den er schuf, entriss ich ihm listig:
doch nicht dem Rhein gab ich ihn zurück;
mit ihm bezahlt' ich Walhall's Zinnen,
der Burg, die Riesen mir bauten, aus der ich der Welt nun gebot.
Die Alles weiss, was einstens war,
Erda, die weihlich weiseste Wala, rieth mir ab von dem Ring,
warnte vor ewigem Ende.
Von dem Ende wollt' ich mehr noch wissen;
doch schweigend entschwand mir das Weib.
Da verlor ich den leichten Muth;
zu wissen begehrt es den Gott:
in den Schoos der Welt schwang ich mich hinab, mit Liebes-Zauber
zwang ich die Wala, stört' ihres Wissens Stolz, dass sie Rede nun mir stand.
Kunde empfing ich von ihr:
von mir doch barg sie ein Pfand:
der Welt weisestes Weib gebar mir, Brünnhilde, dich.
Mit acht Schwestern
zog ich dich auf:
durch euch Walküren
wollt' ich wenden, was mir die Wala
zu fürchten schuf—
ein schmähliches Ende der Ew'gen.
Dass stark zum Streit uns fände der Feind, hiess ich euch Helden mir schaffen:
die herrisch wir sonst
in Gesetzen hielten, die Männer, denen
den Muth wir gewehrt, die durch trüber Verträge trügende Bande zu blindem Gehorsam wir uns gebunden—die solltet zu Sturm und Streit ihr nun stacheln, ihre Kraft reizen
zu rauhem Krieg, dass kühner Kämpfer Schaaren ich sammle in Walhall's Saal.

BRUENNHILDE: Deinen Saal
füllten wir weidlich:
viele schon führt' ich dir zu.
Was macht dir nun Sorge, da nie wir gesäumt?

Bargained and ordered
What ill should bring.
Luring me lower came Loge,
No sooner come than gone.
But my lust for delight
Was unsated;
In my power, for passion I panted
It was Night that bore
The fearsome Nibelung, Alberich; mocking my plans,
And cursing all love,
With his curses he won
The glittering gold of the Rhine,
And with it, measureless might.
The ring which he wrought
I ravished by cunning:
But still bereft
Did the Rhine remain:
The gold I gave for Walhall's ramparts,
The stronghold reared by the giants,
From which the whole world I should rule.
She who knows all
That ever has been,
Erda, most wise
And womanly Wala,
Warned me off from the ring,
Bade me beware of disaster.
I begged her to tell me more of the end
But silent she faded from sight.
Then my courage at last I lost;
For knowledge a god was thirsty.
In the womb of Earth
I sought now for light;
With magic love, I Mastered the Wala,
Wrung from her wisdom's pride
What I longed so sore to know.
What had been dark, she made clear,
Yet hid a pledge from my eyes:
The world's Wala, most wise,
Did bear me, Brünnhilde, you.
With eight sisters
I reared you
With ye Walkyrs, I Sought escape
From what the Wala
Had bid me to dread—
The end of the gods everlasting.
To make us strong
In strife with the foe,
I sent you searching for heroes:
The men whom we once
With our laws held tightly,
The men whose courage
And strength we had stolen,
Whom with compacts our cunning
Surely had fettered,
And bound to obey us
For good or evil—
It was these you should spur
To storm and to striving,
Their hearts steeling
To dare and do,
Till hosts of mighty warriors
Should stand in Walhalla's hall.

BRÜNNHILDE:
And your hall fast we are filling;
Many I've borne to your aid.
Then why do you sorrow,
When we are so true?

WOTAN: Ein Andres ist's:
achte es wohl,
wess' mich die Wala gewarnt!—
Durch Alberich's Heer
droht uns das Ende:
mit neidischem Grimm grollt mir der Niblung;
doch scheu' ich nun nicht seine nächtigen Schaaren—meine Helden schüfen mir Sieg.
Nur wenn je den Ring zurück er gewänne—dann wäre Walhall verloren:
der der Liebe fluchte, er allein nützte neidisch
des Ringes Runen zu aller Edlen endlosen Schmach;
der Helden Muth
entwendet er mir;
die Kühnen selber
zwäng' er zum Kampf, mit ihrer Kraft bekriegte er mich.
Sorgend sann ich nun selbst, den Ring dem Feind zu entreissen:
der Riesen einer,
denen ich einst
mit verfluchtem Gold den Fleiss vergalt, Fafner hütet den Hort,
um den er den Bruder gefällt.
Ihm müsst' ich den Reif entringen den selbst als Zoll ich ihm zahlte:
doch mit dem ich vertrug
ihn darf ich nicht treffen; machtlos vor ihm
erläge mein Muth.
Das sind die Bande,
die mich binden:
der durch Verträge ich Herr,
den Verträgen bin ich nun Knecht.
Nur Einer könnte, was ich nicht darf:
ein Held, dem helfend
nie ich mich neigte;
der fremd dem Gotte,
frei seiner Gunst, unbewusst,
ohne Geheiss,
aus eig'ner Noth
mit der eig'nen Wehr schüfe die That,
die ich scheuen muss,
die nie mein Rath ihm rieth, wünscht sie auch einzig mein Wunsch!
Der entgegen dem Gott für mich föchte, den freundlichen Feind,
wie fände ich ihn?
Wie schüf' ich den Freien, den nie ich schirmte, der in eig'nem Trotze der Trauteste mir?
Wie macht' ich den Andren, der nicht mehr ich,
und aus sich wirkte, was ich nur will?—
O göttliche Noth!
Grässliche Schmach!
Zum Ekel find' ich ewig nur mich
in Allem, was ich erwirke!

WOTAN: There's more behind—Hear me and heed—
Whereof the Wala has warned!—
It is Alberich's host Comes to undo us:
The Nibelung's hate
Rankles and threatens.
Yet have I no fear
Of his dark and grim forces—
With my heroes, I'd be the victor
But should he the ring recover
I ravished—
Then were Walhall lost forever.
He who cursed all loving,
He alone,
Dreams of using
Its runes to compass
The shameful ruin
Set for the gods.
He seeks to steal
My heroes away:
My boldest warriors
Fain he would win.
And with their might He'd master even me.
Soon a scheme I devised
To wrest the ring from his clutches.
The giant Fafner,
Once I had paid to raise Walhall
With accursed gold
Now the treasure he guards
For which he had slain his brother.
The ring must be wrested from him
That he'd earned with his valor.
But with him I am leagued,
Nor could I attack him;
Strike though I would,
My stroke were in vain.
These are the fetters
That enchain me:
I who had fashioned the snare,
Now am caught and held in the toils.
Yet one might venture
Where I am weak:
A hero whom I Never had aided;
Whom never with favors
Gods had enchained,
All unurged,
Bound by no bond,
Himself to save,
With his own strong sword
Surely could dare
What I dare not do,
What never by word I'd willed, Warm though my wish might have been
Who, opposing the god,
Should yet help him,
A friend, though a foe—
Ah, where does he hide?
How fashion the freeman Whom I never shielded,
Who, a seeming rebel,
Were dearest to me?
How could I create him
Who'd not be I,
And yet were willing
To work my will?
O shame on the gods!
Sorrow and shame!
To mock me always,
Only I find Myself in all I am planning!

Das And're, das ich ersehne, das And're erseh' ich nie;
denn selbst muss der Freie sich schaffen—Knechte erknet' ich mir nur!

BRUENNHILDE: Doch der Wälsung, Siegmund?
wirkt er nicht selbst?

WOTAN: Wild durchschweift' ich mit ihm die Wälder;
gegen der Götter Rath reizte kühn ich ihn auf—gegen der Götter Rache schützt ihn nun einzig das Schwert, das eines Gottes
Gunst ihm beschied—Wie wollt' ich listig selbst mich belügen?
So leicht ja entfrug mir
Fricka den Trug!
Zu tiefster Scham durchschaute sie mich:
ihrem Willen muss ich gewähren!

BRUENNHILDE: So nimmst du von Siegmund den Sieg?

WOTAN: (in wildem Schmerz der Verzweiflung ausbrechend). Ich berührte Alberich's Ring—gierig hielt ich das Gold!
Der Fluch, den ich floh, nicht flieht er nun mich:—
was ich liebe, muss ich verlassen, morden, wen je ich minne,
trügend verrathen,
wer mir vertraut!—
Fahre denn hin, herrische Pracht, göttlichen Prunkes prahlende Schmach!
Zusammen breche,
was ich gebaut!
Auf geb' ich mein Werk, Nur eines will ich noch, das Ende — —
das Ende! —
(Er hält sinnend ein.) Und für das Ende sorgt Alberich!— jetzt versteh' ich den stummen Sinn des wilden Wortes der Wala:—
"Wenn der Liebe finstrer Feind zürnend zeugt einen Sohn, der Seligen Ende
säumt dann nicht!"— Vom Niblung jüngst vernahm ich die Mähr', dass ein Weib der Zwerg bewältigt, dess' Gunst Gold ihm erzwang.
Des Hasses Frucht
hegt eine Frau;
des Neides Kraft kreiss't ihr im Schoosse:
das Wunder gelang dem Liebelosen:
doch der in Lieb' ich frei'te, den Freien erlang' ich mir nicht!—
(Grimmig.)
So nimm meinen Segen, Niblungen-Sohn!

The man for whom I am longing,
That hero I never shall see;
For freemen themselves must give life to—
All my creatures would be slaves!

BRÜNNHILDE: But the Wälsung, Siegmund?
Is he not free?

WOTAN: Once, together
We roamed the forest;
Ever against the gods
He strove as was my advice.
Now from the wrathful goddess
Nothing shelters him but the sword—
And that my favor
Sent in his need.
For all my cunning
Could not conceal it—So easily
Fricka
Found out the lie.
She read me through
And filled me with shame:
Though I would, I could not resist her!

BRÜNNHILDE: So Siegmund is doomed to defeat?

WOTAN: (In a frenzy of despair.)
I have handled Alberich's ring—
Grasped with greed at the gold!
The curse that I fled
Now clings to me:—
What I love, perforce I abandon,
Slay, when I'd fain be saving:
Traitor I turn
To him who trusts!—
Farewell,
Lordship and pride,
Godhead and glory
Buried in shame!
So now must perish
All I had wrought!
Farewell to my work
Soon will my pomp and I
Be ended— —
Be ended!—
(Pauses in meditation.)
And it will be ended
By Alberich!—
Now I fathom
What once had hid
The whirling words of the Wala:—
'When the grimmest foe of love,
Fiercely fathers a son,
The gods immortal
Near their end!'
A wondrous tale
I've heard of the Dwarf
Who had won a greedy woman,
With gold blinding her eyes.
The fruit of hate
Soon shall be seen;
The envious germ
Bursts into life:
The wonder was wrought
By loveless lovers:
But I, who loved so fondly,
The freeman I never can see!—
(Grimly.)
Then take my blessing,
Nibelung-born!
My shame and sorrow

Was tief mich ekelt, dir geb' ich's zum Erbe, der Gottheit nichtigen Glanz;
zernage ihn gierig dein Neid!

BRUENNHILDE: (erschrocken).
O sag', künde!
Was soll nun dein Kind?

WOTAN: (bitter). Fromm streite für Fricka, hüte ihr Eh' und Eid'!
Was sie erkor,
das kiese auch ich.
Was frommte mir eig'ner Wille?
Einen Freien kann ich nicht wollen—
für Fricka's Knechte kämpfe nun du!

BRUENNHILDE: Weh! nimm reuig zurück das Wort!
Du liebst Siegmund:
dir zu Lieb'— ich weiss es—schütz' ich den
Wälsung

WOTAN: Fällen sollst du Siegmund, für Hunding erfechten den Sieg!
Hüte dich wohl!
und halte dich stark;
all deiner Kühnheit entbiete im Kampf:
ein Sieg-Schwert
schwingt Siegmund—schwerlich fällt er dir feig.

BRUENNHILDE: Den du zu lieben stets mich gelehrt, der in hehrer Tugend dem Herzen dir theuer—gegen ihn zwingt mich nimmer dein zwiespältig Wort.

WOTAN: Ha, Freche, du!
frevelst du mir?
Wer bist du, als meines Willens blind wählende Kür?—
da mit dir ich tagte, sank ich so tief, dass zum Schimpf der eig'nen Geschöpfe ich ward?
Kennst du Kind, meinen Zorn?
Verzage dein Muth,
wenn je zermalmend
auf dich stürzte sein Strahl!
In meinem Busen berg' ich den Grimm, der in Grau'n und Wust wirft eine Welt, die einst zur Lust mir gelacht:—
wehe dem, den er trifft!
Trauer schüf' ihm sein Trotz!—
Drum rath' ich dir, reize mich nicht;
besorge was ich befahl:—
Siegmund falle!—
Dies sei der Walküre Werk.
(Er stürmt fort, und verschwindet schnell links im Gebirge.)

BRUENNHILDE: (Steht lange betäubt und erschrocken.) So—sah ich Siegvater nie, erzürnt' ihn sonst wohl auch ein

I gladly will give you.
My godship's meaningless might Your malice may have when it will!

BRÜNNHILDE: (In terror.) O speak quickly—
What must I then do?

WOTAN: (Bitterly.) Go! Fight for Fricka,
See to her wedding vows!
As she has chosen,
I, also, must choose.
What good were now all my willing?
With my will I never made a freeman—
For Fricka's bondsmen Battle now do!

BRÜNNHILDE: Woe! My father,
Call back your words!
Do you love Siegmund?
Then for you—
For your sake—I shield the Wälsung!

WOTAN:
You shall slaughter Siegmund;
It is Hunding must win in the fray!
Watch yourself well—
Do not waste your strength;
All of your prowess
You'll need in the fight:
Siegmund swings a strong sword—
Surely he will be brave.

BRÜNNHILDE: You have taught me
Always to love him,
Whom in holy honor
Your heart has long cherished—Foe to him makes me never
Your double-edg'd sword.

WOTAN: Ha! Brazen maid,
Do you dare brave me?
What are you, if not the willing,
Blind tool of my power?
When I gave you being
I sank so low
That my own creation
Can mock me to scorn?
Do you dread not, daughter, my wrath?
Less hardy you were
If ever its flashes
Should seek to destroy you!
Within my bosom
Rages such wrath
As would wreck and lay Waste a whole world,
That once my heart did delight!
Woe to him whom it strikes!
Long his rashness he'd rue!—
So take heed
Rouse not my wrath;
But do what Wotan bids—
Slay Siegmund!—
That be the Walkyrie's work.
(He hurries away and vanishes in the mountains to the left.)

BRÜNNHILDE: (Stands for some time as if stunned and terrified.)
So—Wotan
Never did I see,
Though swiftly his wrongs he'd re-

Zank!
(Sie neigt sich betrübt und nimmt ihre Waffen auf, mit denen sie sich wieder rüstet.) Schwer wiegt mir
der Waffen Wucht:— wenn nach Lust ich focht, wie waren sie leicht!—
Zu böser Schlacht
schleich' ich heut' so bang!—
(Sie sinnt, und seufzt dann auf.)
Weh', mein Wälsung!
Im höchsten Leid
muss dich treulos die Treue verlassen!
(Sie wendet sich nach hinten, und gewahrt Siegmund und Sieglinde, wie sie aus der Schlucht heraufsteigen: sie betrachtet die Nahenden einen Augenblick und wendet sich dann in die Höhle zu ihrem Ross, so dass sie dem Zuschauer gänzlich verschwindet.) (Siegmund und Sieglinde treten auf. Sie schreitet hastig voraus; er sucht sie aufzuhalten.)

SIEGMUND: Raste nun hier: gönne dir Ruh'!

SIEGLINDE: Weiter! weiter!

SIEGMUND: (umfasst sie mit sanfter Gewalt). Nicht weiter nun!
Verweile, süssestes Weib!—
Aus Wonne-Entzücken zucktest du auf, mit jäher Hast jagtest du fort;
kaum folgt' ich der wilden Flucht:
durch Wald und Flur, über Fels und Stein, sprachlos schweigend
sprangst du dahin;
kein Ruf hielt dich zur Rast.
(Sie starrt wild vor sich hin.) Ruhe nun aus:
rede zu mir!
Ende des Schweigens Angst!
Sieh, dein Bruder
hält seine Braut:
Siegmund ist dir Gesell'!
(Er hat sie unvermerkt nach dem Steinsitze geleitet.)

SIEGLINDE: (blickt Siegmund mit wachsendem Entzücken in die Augen; dann umschlingt sie leidenschaftlich seinen Hals. Endlich fährt sie mit jähem Schreck auf während Siegmund sie heftig fasst). Hinweg! Hinweg!
flieh' die Entweihte!
Unheilig
umfängt dich ihr Arm;
entehrt, geschändet schwand dieser Leib:
flieh' die Leiche,
lasse sie los!
der Wind mag sie verweh'n, die ehrlos dem Edlen sich gab!—— Da er sie liebend umfing, da seligste Lust sie fand, da ganz sie minnte der Mann, der ganz ihr Minne geweckt—sent!

(She stoops mournfully and picks up her weapons, with which she again arms herself.)
Down weighs me
My weapons' weight:—
Yet how light they seemed When willingly borne!—
With heavy heart
Shall I fight today!
(She ponders and sighs.)
Woe! My Wälsung!
In sorest need
Must I falsely abandon the faithful!
(She moves towards the background and sees Siegmund and Sieglinde as they ascend from the ravine. She watches them for a moment and then re-enters the cave in which she has left her steed, so that she is quite hidden from the spectators.) (Siegmund and Sieglinde enter. She advances hastily. He tries to stop her.)

SIEGMUND: Rest awhile:
Here there is peace!

SIEGLINDE: Onward! Onward!

SIEGMUND: (Putting his arm round her, firmly but tenderly.)
No further now!
Ah, stay, sweetest of wives!—
You run from our rapture,
Run from our joy,
With rushing haste,
Torn yourself free;
Scarce could I keep pace with you Through wood and plain,
Over rock and hill,
Speechless, silent,
You fled away;
My call checked not your flight
(She stares wildly into vacancy.)
Rest now, sweet:
Speak just one word,
Ending this dumb dismay!
See, your brother
Clings to his bride:
Siegmund now is your mate!
(Meanwhile he has quietly led her to a rocky seat.)

SIEGLINDE: (Looks at Siegmund with growing rapture and throws her arms passionately round his neck. Then she suddenly starts up in terror, while Siegmund tries to hold her.) Away! Away!
Shun my dishonor!
Unholy's
The clasp of my arms
Defiled, dishonored,
Let me be dead:
Flee this body,
Leave me, I'm lost!
O winds, sweep her from here
Who basely beguiled the hero!——
Because he held her so dear,
And filled her with rare rapture,
Till all her heart was the man's,
Whose love did awaken her heart.
In her joy—in her sweetest, vor der süssesten Wonne heiligster Weihe, die ganz ihr Sinn

und Seele durchdrang, Grauen und Schauder ob grässlichster Schande musste mit Schreck die Schmähliche fassen, die je dem Manne gehorcht, der ohne Minne sie hielt!—
Lass' die Verfluchte, lass' sie dich flieh'n!
Verworfen bin ich,
der Würde bar!
Dir reinstem Manne
muss ich entrinnen;
dir herrlichem darf ich nimmer gehören:
Schande bring' ich dem Bruder, Schmach dem freienden Freund.

SIEGMUND: Was je Schande dir schuf, das büsst nun des Frevlers Blut!
Drum fliehe nicht weiter;
harre des Feindes;
hier—soll er mir fallen:
wenn Nothung ihm
das Herz zernagt.
Rache dann hast du erreicht.

SIEGLINDE: (schrickt auf und lauscht). Horch! die Hörner—hörst du den Ruf?—
Ringsher tönt wüthend Getös';
aus Wald und Gau
gellt es herauf.
Hunding erwachte
aus hartem Schlaf;
Sippen und Hunde
ruft er zusammen; muthig gehetzt
heult die Meute, wild bellt sie zum Himmel um der Ehe gebrochenen Eid!
(Sie lacht wie wahnsinnig auf:—dann schrickt sie ängstlich zusammen.) Wo bist du, Siegmund?
seh' ich dich noch?
brünstig geliebter leuchtender Bruder!
Deines Auges Stern
lass' noch einmal mir strahlen:
wehre dem Kuss des verworf'nen Weibes nicht!— Horch! o Horch!
das ist Hunding's Horn!
Seine Meute naht
mir mächt'ger Wehr.
Kein Schwert frommt vor der Hunde Schwall:—
wirf es fort, Siegmund!—
Siegmund—wo bist du?— Ha dort—ich sehe dich—schrecklich Gesicht!— Rüden fletschen die Zähne nach Fleisch; sie achten nicht
deines edlen Blick's;
bei den Füssen packt dich das feste Gebiss—du fällst—in Stücken zerstaucht das Schwert:— die Esche stürzt—

Holiest bliss, as Her soul and sense were drowned in passion, Sudden a shudder
Of shame and of terror
Came with a shock
To shatter the sinner
Who once a husband had known Unloved, unloving, and bound!—
Leave her, accursed,
Leave her to flee!
An outcast am I,
Of honor shorn!
Your purer passion
Must be denied me;
Your bride, o my dear one,
Never should you name me:
Shame I'd bring to the brother,
Scorn and woe to the friend!

SIEGMUND: For the shame you have seen,
The blood of your foe shall pay!
So flee no further;
Wait for his coming;
Here—surely I'll slay him
When Nothung once
Shall gnaw his heart,
Vengeance shall surely be yours!

SIEGLINDE: (Starts up and listens.) Hark! He calls you!—
Do you hear the horns?—
Round and round
Fiercely they blare;
Through wood and vale
Wilder they ring.
Hunding has awakened,
He sleeps no more;
Kinsmen and bloodhounds
Come as he calls them:
Maddened with hate
Come the hunters,
Howl loudly to heaven
To avenge the offense to one wed!
(She laughs wildly, and then shudders.)
Where are you, Siegmund?
Are you still here?
Hotly belovèd
Beacon and brother!
Shall your starlit eyes
Never more, then, delight me?
Spurn not the kiss
Of the outcast one, your bride!—
Hark! o hark!
That is Hunding's horn!
And his host draws near
With hateful might.
No sword serves
Where yon hounds give tongue:—
Cast it down, Siegmund!—
Siegmund—where are you?—
Ah, look!—I see you there—Dreadful the sight!—
Dogs are gnashing
Their ravening fangs;
No heed they pay
To your fiery glance;
Now your feet they seize in Their pitiless maws—
You fall!—
In splinters now lies your sword:—
The ash—it falls!—
The trunk is ripped apart!
Brother! o brother!

es bricht der Stamm!—
Bruder! mein Bruder!
Siegmund!—ha!—
(Sie sinkt mit einem Schrei ohnmächtig in Siegmund's Arme.)

SIEGMUND: Schwester! Geliebte!
(Er lauscht ihrem Athem und überzeugt sich, dass sie noch lebe. Er lässt sie an sich herabgleiten, so dass sie, als er sich selbst zum Sitze niederlässt, mit ihrem Haupt auf stienem Schooss zu ruhen kommt. In dieser Stellung verbleiben beide bis zum Schlusse des folgenden Auftrittes. Langes Schweigen, während dessen Siegmund mit zärtlicher Sorge über Sieglinde sich hinneigt, und mit einem langen Kusse ihr die Stirn küsst.—Bruennhilde ist, ihr Ross am Zaume geleitend aus der Höhle langsam und feierlich nach vornen geschritten und hält nun, Siegmund zur Seite, in geringer Entfernung von ihm. Sie trägt Schild und Speer in der einen Hand, lehnt sich mit der andren an den Hals des Rosses und betrachtet so, in ernstem Schweigen, eine Zeit lang Siegmund.)

BRUENNHILDE: Siegmund—
Sieh' auf mich!
Ich—bin's,
der bald du folgst.

SIEGMUND: (richtet den Blick zu ihr auf).
Wer bist du, sag',
die so schön und ernst mir erscheint?

BRUENNHILDE: Nur Todgeweihten
taugt mein Anblick:
wer mich erschaut,
der scheidet vom Lebens-Licht.
Auf der Walstatt allein erschein' ich Edlen:
wer mich gewahrt,
zur Wal kor ich ihn mir.

SIEGMUND: (blickt ihr lange in das Auge, senkt dann sinnend das Haupt und wendet sich endlich mit feierlichem Ernste wieder zu ihr). Der dir nun folgt, wohin führst du den Helden?

BRUENNHILDE: Zu Walvater, der dich gewählt,
führ' ich dich:
nach Walhall folgst du mir.

SIEGMUND: In Walhall's Saal
Walvater find' ich allein?

BRUENNHILDE: Gefall'ner Helden
hehre Schaar umfängt dich hold mit hoch-heiligem Gruss.

SIEGMUND: Fänd' ich in Walhall Wälse, den eig'nen Vater?

BRUENNHILDE: Den Vater findet der Wälsung dort.

Siegmund!—Ah! (She gives a shriek and falls senseless into Siegmund's arms.)

SIEGMUND: Sister! Beloved!
(He listens to her breathing, and convinces himself that she still lives. He lowers her gently, seats himself, and rests her head on his knee. In this position they remain till the end of the next scene. A long pause follows, while Siegmund bends tenderly over Sieglinde, and impresses a long kiss on her brow. Meanwhile Brünnhilde, leading her steed by the bridle, enters slowly from the cave and advances solemnly. On nearing Siegmund, she halts. In one hand she holds her shield and spear. With the other she caresses the neck of her steed. For some time she remains in this attitude, silently and earnestly observing Siegmund.)

BRÜNNHILDE: Siegmund—
Look at me!
I—wait.
Your hour draws near.

SIEGMUND: (Looking at her.)
Who are you?—speak.
You are fair, though you seem stern.

BRÜNNHILDE: The doomed, they only Know my glances:
Who beholds me
Must part with the light of life.
On the death-field alone
I come to heroes:
Him whom I meet,
I bear away to death.

SIEGMUND: (Looks at her fixedly, bends his head as if reflecting, and turns solemnly to her again.)
When you call,
To what goal ride the heroes?

BRÜNNHILDE: The War-Father,
Who you did choose,
Waits for you:
To Walhall.

SIEGMUND: In Walhall's hall
Lives the War-Lord alone?

BRÜNNHILDE: Of fallen heroes
Mighty hosts
Shall throng to greet you,
And bid you all-hail.

SIEGMUND: Lives there in Walhall
Wälse, my own dear father?

BRÜNNHILDE: The Wälsung's father
Shall there be found.

SIEGMUND: Grüsst mich in Walhall froh eine Frau?

BRUENNHILDE: Wunschmädchen
walten dort hehr:
Wotan's Tochter
reicht dir traulich den Trank.

SIEGMUND: Hehr bist du:
und heilig gewahr' ich das Wotanskind:
doch Eines sag' mir, du Ew'ge!
Begleitet den Bruder
die bräutliche Schwester?
umfängt Siegmund Sieglinde dort?

BRUENNHILDE: Erdenluft
muss sie noch athmen:
Sieglinde
sieht Siegmund dort nicht!

SIEGMUND: So grüsse mir Walhall, grüsse mir Wotan, grüsse mir Wälse und alle Helden—
grüss' auch die holden Wunsches-Mädchen:
zu ihnen folg' ich dir nicht.

BRUENNHILDE: Du sahest der Walküre
sehrenden Blick:
mit ihr musst du nun zieh'n!

SIEGMUND: Wo Sieglinde lebt in Lust und Leid, da will Siegmund auch säumen:
noch machte dein Blick nicht mich erbleichen:
vom Bleiben zwingt er mich nie!

BRUENNHILDE: So lang' du lebst zwäng' dich wohl nichts; doch zwingt dich Thoren der Tod:— ihn dir zu künden kam ich her.

SIEGMUND: Wo wäre der Held, dem heut' ich fiel?

BRUENNHILDE: Hunding fällt dich im Streit.

SIEGMUND: Mit stärk'rem drohe als Hunding's Streichen!
Lauerst du hier lüstern auf Wal.
jenen kiese zum Fang:
ich denk' ihn zu fällen im Kampf

BRUENNHILDE: (den Kopf schüttelnd). Dir, Wälsung—höre mich wohl!—
dir ward das Loos gekies't.

SIEGMUND: Kennst du dies Schwert?
Der mir es schuf, beschied mir Sieg:
deinem Drohen trotz' ich mit ihm!

BRUENNHILDE: (mit stark erhobener Stimme). Der dir es schuf, beschied dir jetzt Tod:
seine Tugend nimmt er dem Schwert!

SIEGMUND: Shall no sweet woman
Wait in the hall?

BRÜNNHILDE: Dream-maidens are there Many
Wotan's daughter shall fill.
Your beaker.

SIEGMUND: High are you,
And holy I know you Wotan's child.
Tell me one thing, goddess!
Shall she who is sister
Be bride to the brother?
Shall I, Siegmund, woo
Sieglinde?

BRÜNNHILDE: Earthly air
Here she'll be breathing:
Sieglinde
Shall not see Siegmund!

SIEGMUND: Then greet for me Walhall, Greet for me Wotan,
Greet for me Wälse
And all the heroes—
Greet the blessed Beauteous maidens:
To them I go not with you!

BRÜNNHILDE: You've seen the Walkyrie's
Withering glance:
Thou need'st must when she bids!

SIEGMUND: Where Sieglinde lives
In joy or pain,
There will Siegmund still linger:
Your look has not chilled
My heart with terror
It shall not tear us apart!

BRÜNNHILDE: While life shall last,
Have you your way;
But yield you must to dark Death:—
To hail his coming,
Came I here.

SIEGMUND: Then whose is the hand
Shall lay me low?

BRÜNNHILDE: Hunding's prey you shall be.

SIEGMUND: I scorn the menace
Of Hunding's malice!
Lurk, and you will,
Lusting for death,
Take him for your prey—
I shall slay him to-day.

BRÜNNHILDE: (Shaking her head.) No, Wälsung!— Heed my voice!—
You have been doomed to die!

SIEGMUND: Do you know this sword?
He who wrought it Shall make me win:
With this steel I can brave your threats!

BRÜNNHILDE: (Raising her voice.) He who wrought it
Now dooms you to death:
For he robs the sword of its spell!

SIEGMUND: (heftig). Schweig' und schrecke die Schlummernde nicht!— (er beugt sich, mit hervorbrechendem Schmerz zärtlich über Sieglinde.)
Weh! Weh!
süssestes Weib!
Du traurigste aller Getreuen!
Gegen dich wüthet in Waffen die Welt:
und ich, dem du einzig vertraut, für den du ihr einzig getrotzt—mit meinem Schutz nicht soll ich dich schirmen, die Kühne verrathen im Kampf?— O Schande ihm, der das Schwert mir schuf, beschied er mir Schimpf für Sieg!
Muss ich denn fallen, nicht fahr' ich nach Walhall—Hella halte mich fest!

BRUENNHILDE: (erschüttert). So wenig achtest du ewige Wonne?
Alles wär' dir
das arme Weib, das müd' und harmvoll
matt auf dem Schoosse dir hängt!
Nichts sonst hieltest du hehr?

SIEGMUND: (bitter zu ihr aufblickend). So jung und schön erschimmerst du mir:
doch wie kalt und hart kennt dich mein Herz!— Kannst du nur höhnen, so hebe dich fort,
du arge, fühllose Maid!
doch musst du dich weiden an meinem Weh', mein Leiden letze dich denn;
meine Noth labe
dein neidvolles Herz:—
nur von Walhall's spröden Wonnen sprich du wahrlich mir nicht!

BRUENNHILDE: (mit wachsender Ergriffenheit). Ich sehe die Noth, die das Herz dir zernagt; ich fühle des Helden heiligen Harm—— Siegmund, befiehl mir dein Weib;
mein Schutz umfange sie fest!

SIEGMUND: Kein andrer als ich soll die Reine lebend berühren:
verfiel ich dem Tod, die Betäubte tödt' ich zuvor!

BRUENNHILDE: Wälsung! Rasender!
Hör' meinen Rath: befiehl mir dein Weib
um des Pfandes willen, das wonnig von dir es empfing!

SIEGMUND: (sein Schwert ziehend). Diess Schwert—das dem Treuen ein Trugvoller schuf:
diess Schwert—das feig vor dem Feind mich verräth:—
frommt es nicht gegen den Feind, so fromm' es denn wider den Freund!— (Das Schwert auf Sieglinde zückend.)
Zwei Leben lachen dir hier:—
nimm sie, Nothung, neidischer Stahl!
nimm sie mit einem Streich!

BRUENNHILDE: (im heftigsten Sturme des Mitgefühls). Halt' ein,
Wälsung!
höre mein Wort!
Sieglinde lebe—
und Siegmund lebe mit ihr!
Beschlossen ist's;
das Schlachtloos wend' ich;
dir, Siegmund,
schaff' ich Segen und Sieg!
(Man hört aus dem fernen Hintergrunde Hornrufe erschallen.) Hörst du den Ruf?
Nun rüste dich, Held!
Traue dem Schwert
und schwing' es getrost:
treu hält dir die Wehr, wie die Walküre treu dich schützt!—
Leb' wohl, Siegmund, seligster Held!
auf der Walstatt grüss' ich dich wieder!
(Sie stürmt fort und verschwindet mit dem Rosse rechts in einer Seitenschlucht. Siegmund blickt ihr freudig und erhoben nach. Die Bühne hat sich allmälig verfinstert; schwere Gewitterwolken senken sich auf den Hintergrund herab und hüllen die Gebirgswände, die Schlucht und das erhöhte Bergjoch nach und nach gänzlich ein.—Von allen Seiten lassen sich aus der Ferne Rufe von Heerhörnern vernehmen, die während des Folgenden allmälig näher erschallen.)

SIEGMUND: (über Sieglinde sich beugend). Zauberfest bezähmt ein Schlaf
der Holden Schmerz und Harm:
da die Walküre zu mir trat, schuf sie ihr den wonnigen Trost?
Sollte die grimmige Wal nicht schrecken ein gramvolles
Weib?
Leblos scheint sie,
die dennoch lebt:
der Traurigen kos't ein lächelnder Traum.—
(Neue Hornrufe.)
So schlumm're nun fort, bis die Schlacht gekämpft, und Friede dich erfreu'!
(Er legt sich sanft auf den Steinsitz, küsst ihr die Stirn und bricht dann, nach abermaligen Hornrufen auf.) Der dort mich ruft, rüste dich nun;
was ihm gebührt,
biet' ich ihm:
Nothung zahl' ihm den Zoll!

SIEGMUND: (Angered.) Peace!
Disturb not
My slumbering bride!
(He bends tenderly and with anguish over Sieglinde.)
Woe! Woe!
Sweetest of wives!
You sad woman, and true
Round you now
Rages in arms a whole world:
And I, whom alone you trusted,
For whom you the world has forsworn,
I may not shield
Nor serve you, as shelter?
The brave am I doomed to betray?
O shame on him
Who the sword once wrought,
And makes me a mark for scorn!
Should I be vanquished,
I ride not to Walhall—Hella's prey I will be!

BRÜNNHILDE: (Agitated.) So careless are you
Of heavenly rapture?
One weak woman
To you is all,
Who, worn and weary,
Hangs on your knee for her rest!
Do you hold nothing else dear?

SIEGMUND: (Looking up at her bitterly.) So young and fair
On me you do shine:
Yet so cold and hard
Now knows my heart!—
Must you go mocking,
Most cruel of maids?
Then go and leave me alone!
But when you have sated
Yourself with woe,
On sorrow feasted your eyes;
Though your heart glow at
The sight of my pain:—
When you paint Walhall's pleasures,
All your pleading you'll waste!

BRÜNNHILDE: (With growing emotion.) The pain I behold
That your heart weighs down;
I feel all the hero's
Woe and dismay
Siegmund, trust me with your wife;
My shield shall be her shelter!

SIEGMUND: No being but I,
While she lives, shall dare to approach her:
And though I be doomed, Before she awake, I will slay my bride!

BRÜNNHILDE: Wälsung! Reckless
one!
Heed my advice!
Entrust her to me,
For a pledge she brings you
Of rapture and love you have given!

SIEGMUND: (Drawing his sword.) This sword—
That a traitor wrought for one true;
This sword—
That soon shall undo its master;
Faithless when fronting the foe,
Shall faithfully strike at the friend!
(Turning the sword against Sieglinde.)
Two lives lie
Here at your call:—
Take them, Nothung, Traitorous steel!
Take them at one fell stroke!

BRÜNNHILDE: (Stirred to the depths by sympathy.) Forbear, Wälsung!
Hear my words!
I bring life to Sieglinde—
And life to Siegmund!
It is sworn and done;
Your sword shall conquer:
You, Siegmund,
Victor soon shall be hailed!
(The faint sound of horns is heard in the background.)
Do you hear the call?
Now, hero, to arms!
Trust to your sword
And wield it right well:
True still be your blade,
As the Walkyr, your true, sure shield!—
Farewell, Siegmund,
Bravest of all!
On the field will I give you greeting!
(She rushes off with her steed, by way of a ravine on the right. Siegmund follows her with his eyes, and seems elated with joy. The stage, meanwhile, has gradually grown dark. Heavy thunderclouds have descended in the background, hiding the hills, the ravine and the lofty rocks in the foreground. Distant sounds of horns are heard on all sides, and continue to be heard throughout the following scene. Gradually they grow louder.)

SIEGMUND: (Bending over Sieglinde.) Locked in sleep.
Her lovely eyes are blind.
To pain and woe.
Did the Walkyr, with magic art,
Bring her this most merciful rest?
Was the wild fury of war
Not fated her heart to affright?
Lifeless seeming,
She clings to life:
Her sorrow is stilled,
And smiling she dreams.—
Then slumber in peace,
Till the strife is over,
And all peril is past!
(He lays her gently on the rocky seat, kisses her on the brow, and, after the horns have again been heard, makes ready to go.)
Let him who calls
Arm for the fight;
What he demands
Soon he'll find:
Nothung now he shall know!
(He hurries towards the background and disappears beyond

(Er eilt dem Hintergrunde zu, und verschwindet auf dem Joche sogleich in finstres Gewittergewölk.)

SIEGLINDE: (träumend). Kehrte der Vater nun heim!
Mit dem Knaben noch weilt er im Forst.
Mutter! Mutter!
mir bangt der Muth:—
nicht freund und friedlich scheinen die Fremden!—
Schwarze Dämpfe—schwüles Gedünst—feurige Lohe
leckt schon nach uns—es brennt das Haus—
zu Hülfe, Bruder!
Siegmund! Siegmund!
(Starke Blitze zucken durch das Gewölk auf; ein furchtbarer Donnerschlag erweckt Sieglinde: sie springt jäh auf.)
Siegmund!–Ha!
(Sie starrt mit steigender Angst um sich her;—fast die ganze Bühne ist in schwarze Gewitterwolken verhüllt; fortwährender Blitz und Donner. Von allen Seiten dringen immer näher Hornrufe her.) HUNDING'S: (Stimme im Hintergrunde, vom Bergjoche her). Wehwalt! Wehwalt!

Steh' mir zum Streit, sollen dich Hunde nicht halten!

SIEGMUND'S: (Stimme, von weiter hinten her, aus der Schlucht). Wo birgst du dich, dass ich vorbei dir schoss?
Steh' dort, dass ich dich stelle!

SIEGLINDE: (die in furchtbarer Aufregung lauscht). Hunding—Siegmund—
könnt' ich sie sehen!

HUNDING'S: (Stimme). Hieher, du frevelnder Freier:
Fricka fälle dich hier!

SIEGMUND'S: (Stimme, nun ebenfalls auf dem Bergjoche). Noch wähnst du mich waffenlos, feiger Wicht?
Drohst du mit Frauen,
so ficht nun selber,
sonst lässt dich Fricka im Stich!
Denn sieht: deines Hauses heimischem Stamm entzog ich zaglos das Schwert; seine Schneide schmecke jetzt du!
(Ein Blitz erhellt für einen Augenblick den Bergjoch, auf welchem jetzt Hunding und Siegmund kämpfend gewahrt worden.)

SIEGLINDE: (mit höchster Kraft). Haltet ein, ihr Männer, mordet erst mich!
(Sie stürzt auf das Bergjoch zu: ein von rechts her über die Kämpfer ausbrechender heller Schein blendet sie aber plötzlich so heftig, dass sie wie erblindet zur Seite schwankt. In dem Lichtglanze erscheint Bruennhilde über Siegmund schwebend und diesen mit dem Schilde deckend.)

BRUENNHILDE'S: (Stimme). Triff' ihn, Siegmund!
Traue dem Schwert!
(Als Siegmund so eben zu einem tödtlichen Streiche auf Hunding ausholt, bricht von links her ein glühend röthlicher Schein durch das Gewölk aus, in welchem Wotan erscheint, über Hunding stehend und seinen Speer Siegmund quer entgegenhaltend.)

WOTAN'S: (Stimme). Zurück vor dem Speer!
In Stücken das Schwert!
Mit Siegmund's Fall ist zugleich von beiden Seiten der glänzende Schein verschwunden; dichte Finsterniss ruht im Gewölk bis nach vorn; in ihm wird Bruennhilde undeutlich sichtbar, wie sie in jäher Hast Sieglinden sich zugewendet.)

BRUENNHILDE: Zu Ross, dass ich dich rette!
(Sie hebt Sieglinde schnell zu sich auf ihr, der Seitenschlucht nahe stehendes Ross und verschwindet sogleich gänzlich mit ihr.
Alsbald zertheilt sich das Gewölk in der Mitte, so dass man deutlich Hunding gewahrt, wie er sein Schwert dem gefallenen Siegmund aus der Brust zieht.—Wotan, von Gewölk umgeben, steht hinter ihm auf einem Felsen, an seinen Speer gelehnt und schmerzlich auf Siegmund's Leiche blickend.)

WOTAN: (nach einem kleinen Schweigen, zu Hunding gewandt). Geh' hin, Knecht!
Kniee vor Fricka:
meld' ihr, dass Wotan's Speer gerächt, was Spott ihr schuf.—
Geh'!—Geh'!—
(Vor seinem verächtlichen Handwink sinkt Hunding todt zu Boden.)

WOTAN: (plötzlich in furchtbarer Wuth auffahrend). Doch Brünnhilde—weh' der Verbrecherin!
Furchtbar sei
die Freche gestraft, erreicht mein Ross ihre Flucht!
(Er verschwindet mit Blitz und Donner.—Der Vorhang fällt schnell.)

the rocky arch, which is instantly hidden by dark thunderclouds.)

SIEGLINDE: (Dreaming.) Would that my father were home!
With his boy he still roams in the woods.
Mother! Mother!
I'm filled with dread:—
How stern and solemn Seem all these strangers!—
Smoke and darkness—
Sulphurous fumes—
Roaring and leaping,
Follow the flames—
The house—it burns—
O help me, brother!
Siegmund! Siegmund!
(Vivid lightnings flash from the clouds. A terrible thunderbolt wakes Sieglinde. She leaps to her feet in alarm.)
Siegmund! Ah!
(She stares in all directions with growing terror. The stage is almost entirely wrapped in dark clouds. Thunder and lightning. Horns are heard calling on all sides, and growing louder.)

HUNDING'S VOICE: (Heard from the rocky arch in the background.) Woeful! Woeful!
Stand and give fight—
See where the hounds would devour you!

SIEGMUND'S VOICE: (Heard more in the distance from the ravine.) Where are you hiding?
How did I miss you, hound?
Stand, let me but face you!

SIEGLINDE: (Listening, horror struck.) Hunding—Siegmund—
Could I but see them!

HUNDING'S VOICE: This way, you lecherous lover:
Fricka waits for you here!

SIEGMUND'S VOICE: (Now also heard from the rocky arch.) Do you expect me to be a weaponless, cowardly warrior?
Bold but with women—
Now fight your fiercest,
Lest Fricka fails you in need!
For see: from the ashen
Tree in your home
Unstayed I stole my keen sword;
With its steel I'll slay you to-day.
(A flash of lightning lights up the rocky arch for a moment. Hunding and Siegmund are seen fighting.)

SIEGLINDE: (At the top of her voice.) Hold your hands, foemen!
Murder me first!
(She rushes toward the rocks, but stops, blinded by a sudden and terrific flash that comes from the right. She totters. Brünnhilde appears in the lightning, hovering about Siegmund and protecting him with her shield.)

BRÜNNHILDE'S VOICE: Slay him, Siegmund!
Trust in your sword!
(As Siegmund aims a deadly blow at Hunding, a reddish glow comes through the clouds at the left of the rocks, heralding Wotan, who stands above Hunding and points his spear at Siegmund.)

WOTAN'S VOICE: Back, back! from the spear!
Down, down! with your sword!
(Brünnhilde, with her shield has recoiled in terror, at the approach of Wotan. Siegmund'S sword is shivered to pieces against the outstretched spear. Hunding thrusts his sword into the breast of his defenseless foe. Siegmund falls. Sieglinde, who has heard his dying groan, shrieks and falls senseless.)
(As Siegmund falls, the glow vanishes and the lightning stops. Darkness enshrouds the scene. Brünnhilde is dimly visible as she hastens to the assistance of Sieglinde.)

BRÜNNHILDE: To horse! and I will save you!
(She lifts Sieglinde swiftly into the saddle as she hurries to her horse in the cave on the right, and both disappear.)
(Instantly the clouds roll back on either side, plainly disclosing Hunding, as he draws his sword from the breast of Siegmund. Wotan, surrounded by clouds, stands behind him on a rock, leaning against his spear, and gazing sorrowfully on Siegmund's body.)

WOTAN: (Turning to Hunding, after a brief pause.) Away, slave!
Kneel to Fricka:
Tell her that Wotan's spear
Avenged what brought her shame.—
Go!—Go!— (At a contemptuous gesture of Wotan's hand, Hunding falls dead.)

WOTAN: (Breaking suddenly into a fury of wrath.) But Brünnhilde—Woe to me who braves me!
Dread shall be
The fate she must know,
For Wotan rides in her wake! (He vanishes thunder and lightning. Quick curtain.)

DRITTER AUFZUG

Auf dem Gipfel eines Felsberges.

Rechts begrenzt ein Tannenwald die Scene. Links der Eingang einer Felshöhle, die einen natürlichen Saal bildet: darüber steigt der Fels zu seiner höchsten Spitze auf. Nach hinten ist die Aussicht gänzlich frei; höhere und niedere Felssteine bilden den Rand vor dem Abhange, der—wie anzunehmen ist—nach dem Hintergrunde zu steil hinabführt.—Einzelne Wolkenzüge jagen, wie vom Sturm getrieben, am Felsensaume vorbei.
(Die Namen der acht Walküren, welche—ausser Bruennhilde—in dieser Scene auftreten, sind: Gerhilde, Ortlinde, Waltraute, Schwertleite, Helmwige, Siegrune, Grimgerde, Rossweisse.)
Gerhilde, Ortlinde, Waltraute und Schwertleite haben sich auf der Felsspitze, an und über der Höhle, gelagert; sie sind in voller Waffenrüstung.

GERHILDE: (zu höchst gelagert und dem Hintergrunde zugewendet). Hojotoho! Hojotoho!
Heiaha! Heiaha!
Helmwige, hier!
Hieher mit dem Ross!
(In einem vorbeiziehenden Gewölk bricht Blitzesglanz aus; eine Walküre zu Ross wird in ihm sichtbar; über ihrem Sattel hängt ein erschlagener Krieger.) HELMWIGE'S: (Stimme, von aussen). Hojotoho! Hojotoho!

Hojotoho! Hojotoho!

GERHILDE, WALTRAUTE UND SCHWERTLEITE: (der Ankommenden entgegenrufend).
Heiaha!
(Die Wolke mit der Erscheinung ist rechts hinter dem Tann verschwunden.)

ORTLINDE: (in den Tann hineinrufend). Zu Ortlinde's Stute stell' deinen Hengst:
mit meiner Grauen
gras't gern dein Brauner!

WALTRAUTE: (ebenso). Wer hängt dir im Sattel?

HELMWIGE: (aus dem Tann schreitend). Sintolt der Hegeling!

SCHWERTLEITE: Führ' deinen Braunen
fort von der Grauen: Ortlinde's Mähre
trägt Wittig, den Irming!

GERHILDE: (ist etwas näher herabgestiegen). Als Feinde nur sah ich Sintolt und Wittig.

ACT III

The Summit of a Rocky Hill.

The names of the eight Walkyrs, exclusive of Brünnhilde, who appear, are: Gerhilde, Ortlinde, Waltraute, Schwertleite, Helmwige, Siegrune, Grimgerde, and Rossweisse.
Gerhilde, Ortlinde, Waltraute and Schwertleite are stationed on the peak near and above the cave. They are in full armor.

GERHILDE: (At the summit of the peak, with her face towards the back.) Ho-yo-to ho! Ho-yo-to-ho!
Hi-ya-ha! Hi-ya-ha!
Helmwige, here!
Hurry here on your horse!
(Lightning flashes from one of the clouds that drift by, revealing a mounted Walkyr. From her saddle-bow hangs a warrior, slain in fight.)

HELMWIGE'S VOICE: (Without.)
Ho-yo-to-ho! Ho-yo-to-ho!
Ho-yo-to-ho! Ho-yo-to-ho!
Hi-ya-ha!

GERHILDE, WALTRAUTE AND SCHWERTLEITE: (Calling to the newcomer.)
Hi-ya-ha! Hi-ya-ha!
(The cloud with the apparition has disappeared behind a fir-tree on the right.)

ORTLINDE: (Shouting in the direction of the fir-tree.) In Ortlinde's stable Tether your steed:
With my grey mare
Your bay was well mated!

WALTRAUTE: (As above.) Who hangs from your saddle?

HELMWIGE: (Issuing from behind the fir-tree.) Sintolt, the Hegeling!

SCHWERTLEITE: Do not stable your charger with Ortlinde's:
Wittig, the Irming,
Her mare has been bearing!

GERHILDE: (Descending a few steps.) And foes were they always,
Your Sintolt and Wittig!

ORTLINDE: (bricht schnell auf und läuft in den Tann). Heiaha!
Heiaha! Die Stute
stösst mir der Hengst!

SCHWERTLEITE UND GERHILDE: (lachen laut auf). Der Recken Zwist entzweit noch die Rosse!

HELMWIGE: (in den Tann zurückrufend). Ruhig dort, Brauner!
Brich nicht den Frieden!

WALTRAUTE: (hat für Gerhilde die Wacht auf der äussersten Spitze genommen). Hojoho! Hojoho!
Siegrune, hier!
Wo säumst du so lang?
(Wie zuvor Helmwige, zieht jetzt Siegrune im gleichen Aufzuge vorbei, dem Tann zu.) SIEGRUNE'S: (Stimme von rechts). Arbeit gab's!

Sind die And'ren schon da?

DIE WALKUEREN: Hojotoho! Hojotoho!
Heiaha! Heiaha!
(Siegrune ist hinter dem Tann verschwunden. Aus der Tiefe hört man zwei Stimmen zugleich.)

GRIMGERDE UND ROSSWEISSE: (von unten). Hojotoho! Hojotoho!
Heiaha! Heiaha!

WALTRAUTE: Rossweiss' und Grimgerde!

GERHILDE: Sie reiten zu zwei.
(Ortlinde ist mit Helmwige und der so eben angekommenen Siegrune aus dem Tann herausgetreten: zu drei winken sie von dem hinteren Felssaume hinab.)

ORTLINDE, HELMWIGE UND SIEGRUNE: Gegrüsst, ihr Reissige!
Rossweiss' und Grimgerde!

DIE ANDREN WALKUEREN ALLE: Hojotoho! Hojotoho!
Heiaha! Heiaha!
(In einem blitzerglänzenden Wolkenzuge, der von unten heraufsteigt und dann hinter dem Tann verschwindet, erschinen Grimgerde und Rossweisse, ebenfalls auf Rossen, jede einen Erschlagenen im Sattel führend.)

GERHILDE: In Wald mit den Rossen zu Rast und Weid'!

ORTLINDE: (in den Tann rufend). Führt die Mähren fern von einander, bis uns'rer Helden
Hass sich gelegt!

HELMWIGE: (während die Andern lachen). Der Helden Grimm schon büsste die Graue!
(Grimgerde und Rossweisse treten aus dem Tann auf.)

ORTLINDE: (Suddenly darting over to the fir-tree.) Hi-ya-ha! Hi-ya-ha!
My beauty's locked with your bay!

SCHWERTLEITE AND GERHILDE: (Laughing wildly.) The heroes' wrongs
The horses remember!

HELMWIGE: (Shouting back into the trees.) Quiet, there, quiet!
Why would you quarrel?

WALTRAUTE: (Who has taken the place of Gerhilde at the top of the peak.) Ho-yo-ho! Ho-yo-ho!
Siegrune, here!
Why did you stay so long?
(Siegrune rides by, as Helmwige did, in the direction of the fir-tree.)

SIEGRUNE'S VOICE: (From the right.) Work to do!
Are the rest of you met?

THE WALKYRS: Ho-yo-to-ho! Ho-yo-to-ho!
Hi-ya-ha! Hi-ya-ha!
(Siegrune has disappeared behind the firs. Two voices are heard together from the depths.)

GRIMGERDE AND ROSSWEISSE: (From below.) Ho-yo-to-ho! Ho-yo-to-ho!
Hi-ya-ha! Hi-ya-ha!

WALTRAUTE: Rossweiss' and Grimgerde!

GERHILDE: They ride two by two.
(Ortlinde, with Helmwige and Siegrune, has issued from the firs. All three wave their hands from the hindermost rocks.)

ORTLINDE, HELMWIGE AND SIEGRUNE: We greet you, Rossweisse!
We greet you, Grimgerde!

THE OTHER WALKYRS: Ho-yo-to-ho! Ho-yo-to-ho!
Hi-ya-ha! Hi-ya-ha!
(Grimgerde and Rossweisse, mounted, appear in a glowing thundercloud which ascends from the depths and vanishes behind the fir-tree. Each carries a slain warrior at her saddle-bow.)

GERHILDE: Away with the horses,
To feed and rest!

ORTLINDE: (Shouting into the trees.) Keep the chargers Clear of each other,
Till all the heroes'
Hate is allayed!

HELMWIGE: (Amid the laughter of her companions.) The grey has paid
For their feuds and quarrels!
(Grimgerde and Rossweisse issuing from the fir-trees.)

DIE WALKUEREN: Willkommen!
Willkommen!

SCHWERTLEITE: War't ihr
Kühnen zu zwei?

GRIMGERDE: Getrennt ritten wir, trafen uns heut'.

ROSSWEISSE: Sind wir alle versammelt, so säumt nicht lange:
nach Walhall brechen wir auf, Wotan zu bringen die Wal.

HELMWIGE: Acht sind wir erst, eine noch fehlt.

GERHILDE: Bei dem braunen
Wälsung
weilt wohl noch Brünnhild'?

WALTRAUTE: Auf sie noch harren müssen wir hier:
Walvater gäb' uns grimmigen Gruss, säh' ohne sie er uns nah'n!

SIEGRUNE: (auf der Felsspitze, von wo sie hinausspäht). Hojotoho! Hojotoho!
Hieher! Hieher!
In brünstigem Ritt jagt Brünnhilde her.

DIE WALKUEREN: (nach der Felsspitze eilend). Heiaha! Hojotoho! Hojotoho!
Brünnhilde! hei!

WALTRAUTE: Nach dem Tann lenkt sie das taumelnde Ross.

GRIMGERDE: Wie schnaubt Grane vom schnellen Ritt!

ROSSWEISSE: So jach sah ich nie Walküren jagen!

ORTLINDE: Was hält sie im Sattel?

HELMWIGE: Das ist kein Held!

SIEGRUNE: Eine Frau führt sie.

GERHILDE: Wie fand sie die Frau?

SCHWERTLEITE: Mit keinem Gruss
grüsst sie die Schwestern?

WALTRAUTE: Heiaha!
Brünnhilde!
hörst du uns nicht?

ORTLINDE: Helft der Schwester
vom Ross sich schwingen!

DIE WALKUEREN: Hojotoho! Hojotoho!
Heiaha! Heiaha!
(Gerhilde und Helmwige stürzen in den Tann.)

WALTRAUTE: Zu Grunde stürzt Grane der starke!
(Siegrune und Waltraute folgen den beiden.)

GRIMGERDE: Aus dem Sattel hebt sie hastig das Weib.

THE WALKYRS: O welcome! O welcome!

SCHWERTLEITE: Did you come single, or in pairs?

GRIMGERDE: Alone galloped we,
And met on our way.

ROSSWEISSE: If we all are assembled We'll tarry no more
To Walhall haste and away;
Wotan our coming awaits.

HELMWIGE: We are eight here.
One we still lack.

GERHILDE: For the warrior
Wälsung
(Waits Brünnhilde.)

WALTRAUTE: Then till she comes,
We must wait here:
Grim were the greeting
Wotan would give,
Were she not there when we came!

SIEGRUNE: (Peering into the distance from the top of the peak.)
Ho-yo-to-ho! Ho-yo-to-ho!
Hie here! Hie here!
Brünnhilde comes riding
Madly this way!

THE WALKYRS: (Hurrying to the summit.) Ho-yo-to-ho! Ho-yo-to-ho!
Hi-ya-ha!
Brünnhilde! Heigh!

WALTRAUTE: To the wood rushes
Her staggering steed.

GRIMGERDE: See how Grane
Pants and strains!

ROSSWEISSE: So fast did I never See Walkyrs flying!

ORTLINDE: What hangs at her saddle?

HELMWIGE: That is no man!

SIEGRUNE: It is a weak woman.

GERHILDE: And where was she found?

SCHWERTLEITE: She gives her sisters no greeting glad.

WALTRAUTE: Hi-ya-ha!
Brünnhilde!
Can you not hear?

ORTLINDE: Help our sister
To leave the saddle!

THE WALKYRS: Ho-yo-to-ho! Ho-yo-to-ho!
Hi-ya-ha! Hi-ya-ha!
(Gerhilde and Helmwige rush into the fir-trees.)

WALTRAUTE: Now Grane groans, Trembles and totters!
(Siegrune and Waltraute follow the two others.)

GRIMGERDE: From the saddle, quick she lifts
The woman.

DIE UEBRIGEN WALKUEREN:
(dem Tann zueilend). Schwester!
Schwester!
Was ist gescheh'n?
(Alle Walküren kehren auf die Bühne zurück; mit ihnen kommt Bruennhilde, Sieglinde unterstützend und hereingeleitend.)

BRUENNHILDE: (athemlos).
Schützt mich, und helft
in höchster Noth!

DIE WALKUEREN: Wo rittest du her in rasender Hast?
So fliegt nur, wer auf der Flucht!

BRUENNHILDE: Zum erstenmal flieh' ich und bin verfolgt!
Heervater hetzt mir nach!

DIE WALKUEREN: (heftig erschreckend). Bist du von Sinnen?
Sage uns! Wie?
Verfolgt dich Heervater?
fliehst du vor ihm?

BRUENNHILDE: (ängstlich) O Schwestern, späht von des Felsens Spitze.
Schaut nach Norden,
ob Walvater naht!
(Ortlinde und Waltraute springen hinauf.) Schnell! seht ihr ihn schon?

ORTLINDE: Gewittersturm
naht von Norden.

WALTRAUTE: Starkes Gewölk
staut sich dort auf.

DIE WALKUEREN: Heervater reitet sein heiliges Ross!

BRUENNHILDE: Der wilde Jäger, der wüthend mich jagt,
er naht, er naht von Nord!
Schützt mich, Schwestern!
wahret dies Weib!

DIE WALKUEREN: Was ist mit dem Weibe?

BRUENNHILDE: Hört mich in Eile!
Siegmund's Schwester und Braut: Gegen die Wälsungen wüthet Wotan in Grimm:— dem Bruder sollte Brünnhilde heut' entziehen den Sieg, doch Siegmund schützt' ich mit meinem Schild, trotzend dem Gott:—
der traf ihn da selbst mit dem Speer.
Siegmund fiel:
doch ich floh
fern mit der Frau:
sie zu retten
eilt' ich zu euch, ob mich bange auch ihr berget vor dem strafenden Streich.

THE REMAINING WALKYRS:
(Hurrying towards the fir-trees.)
Sister! Sister!
What is your pain?
(All the Walkyrs return. With them comes Brünnhilde, supporting and guiding Sieglinde.)

BRÜNNHILDE: (Breathless.)
Shield me, and help
In direst need!

THE WALKYRS: From where did you ride here
In furious haste?
One only flies like that when fleeing.

BRÜNNHILDE: I flee, who fled never,
And fear pursuit!
Wotan has pressed me hard!

THE WALKYRS: (In wild excitement.) Have you your senses?
Speak! Speak to us!
Does Wotan follow you?
Do you flee from him?

BRÜNNHILDE: (Anxiously.) O sisters, watch
From the rocky summit!
Look northward.
Is Wotan not near? (Ortlinde and Waltraute rush to the summit and look off.) Quick! Comes he this way?

ORTLINDE: A thunderstorm
Comes from northward.

WALTRAUTE: Dark are the clouds,
Denser they grow.

THE WALKYRS: Wotan comes riding
His terrible steed.

BRÜNNHILDE: The dreadful hunter
Who's hunting me down,
Draws near from northward!
Shield me, sisters!
Shelter the waif!

THE WALKYRS: What troubles
this woman?

BRÜNNHILDE: Haste and hear me!
She is Sieglinde, Siegmund's sister and bride;
Against the two Wälsungs was Wotan's anger aroused:—
Brünnhilde bade he Siegmund today
To doom to defeat.
But, braving Wotan,
I, with my shield,
Siegmund did aid:—
Then slew him the god with his spear.
Siegmund fell:
But I fled
Far with his bride:
How to save her
I came here,
Though trembling, give Me shelter from the wrath that I dread.

DIE WALKUEREN: (in grösster Bestürzung). Bethörte Schwester!
Was thatest du?
Wehe! Wehe!
Brünnhilde, wehe!
Brach ungehorsam
Brünnhilde
Heervaters heilig Gebot?

WALTRAUTE: (von der Höhe). Nächtig zieht es von Norden heran.

ORTLINDE: (ebenso). Wüthend steuert hierher der Sturm.

SIEGRUNE: (dem Hintergrunde zugewendet). Wild wiehert Walvaters Ross,
schrecklich schnaubt es daher!

BRUENNHILDE: Wehe der Armen, wenn Wotan sie trifft, den Wälsungen allen
droht er Verderben!— Wer leih't mir von euch das leichteste Ross, das flink die Frau ihm entführ'?

SIEGRUNE: Auch uns räth'st du rasenden Trotz?

BRUENNHILDE: Rossweisse,
Schwester!
Leih' mir deinen Renner!

ROSSWEISSE: Vor Walvater floh der fliegende nie.

BRUENNHILDE: Helmwige, höre!

HELMWIGE: Dem Vater gehorch' ich.

BRUENNHILDE: Grimgerde! Gerhilde!
Gönnt mir eu'r Ross!
Schwertleite! Siegrune!
Seht meine Angst!
O seid mir treu,
wie traut ich euch war:
rettet diess traurige Weib!

SIEGLINDE: (die bisher finster und kalt vor sich hingestarrt, fährt auf, als Bruennhilde sie lebhaft—wie zum Schutze—umfasst). Nicht sehre dich Sorge um mich:
einzig taugt mir der Tod!
Wer hiess dich Maid dem Harst mich entführen?
Im Sturm dort hätt' ich den Streich empfah'n von derselben Waffe, der Siegmund fiel:
das Ende fand ich vereint mit ihm!
Fern von Siegmund—
Siegmund von dir!
O deckt mich Tod, dass ich's denke!—
Soll um die Flucht
dir Maid ich nicht fluchen, so erhöre heilig mein Fleh'n—stosse dein Schwert mir in's Herz!

THE WALKYRS: (In consternation.) Misguided sister!
What did you do then?
Woe's me!
Brünnhilde, woe's me!
Could you, Brünnhilde, Dare you defy the War-father's Will?

WALTRAUTE: (From the height.)
Dark and darker
It has grown in the North.

ORTLINDE: (As above.) Rushing on Comes the storm.

THE WALKYRS: (Turning towards the background.) Loud neighs
Wotan's wild steed:
Snorting, panting, it comes!

BRÜNNHILDE: Woe to this victim
When Wotan shall come!
For all of the Wälsungs Vows he to ruin!—
Which one of ye all
Will lend me a steed
To rob the god of his prey?

SIEGRUNE: So, we must be Dragged to your doom?

BRÜNNHILDE: Rossweise, sister,
Lend me your horse!

ROSSWEISE: From Wotan, I trow,
My horse has never fled.

BRÜNNHILDE: Helmwige, hear me!

HELMWIGE: My father I follow.

BRÜNNHILDE: Grimgerde! Gerhilde!
Grant me a steed!
Schwertleite! Siegrune!
See my despair!
O be true,
As I was true:
Help me to save this woman!

SIEGLINDE: (Who till now has stared hopelessly into space, starts up as Brünnhilde puts her arm about her protectingly.) Nay, sorrow not, strive not for me;
Death alone would I seek!
Who bade you, maid,
Avert the god's vengeance?
The storm that thundered
Had seen me slain
With the self-same weapon
That Siegmund slew:
The end had found me
At peace with him!
Far from Siegmund—
Siegmund, from you.
O would I were dead,
It were less dreadful!—
Lest I should curse
You, maid, for your coming,
Do you hear me, humbly I pray
you—
Bury your blade in my heart!

BRUENNHILDE: Lebe, o Weib, um der Liebe willen!
Rette das Pfand,
das von ihm du empfingst:
ein Wälsung wächst dir im Schooss.

SIEGLINDE: (ist heftig erschrocken; plötzlich strahlt dann ihr Gesicht in erhabener Freude auf).
Rette mich, Kühne!
rette mein Kind!
Schirmt mich, ihr Mädchen, mit mächtigstem Schutz!
(Furchtbares Gewitter steigt im Hintergrunde auf, nahender Donner.)

WALTRAUTE: (von der Höhe).
Der Sturm kommt heran.

ORTLINDE: (ebenso). Flieh', wer ihn fürchtet!

DIE WALKUEREN: Fort mit dem Weibe, droht ihm Gefahr:
der Walküren keine wag' ihren Schutz!

SIEGLINDE: (auf den Knieen vor Bruennhilde). Rette mich, Maid!
Rette die Mutter!

BRUENNHILDE: (mit schnellem Entschluss). So fliehe denn eilig—und fliehe allein!
Ich—bleibe zurück, biete mich Wotan's Rache:
an mir zögr' ich den Zürnenden hier, während du seinem Rasen entrinnst.

SIEGLINDE: Wohin soll ich mich
wenden?

BRUENNHILDE: Wer von euch, Schwestern,
schweifte nach Osten?

SIEGRUNE: Nach Osten weithin dehnt sich ein Wald:
der Niblungen Hort
entführte Fafner dorthin.

SCHWERTLEITE: Wurmes-Gestalt
schuf sich der Wilde:
in einer Höhle hütet er Alberich's Reif.

GRIMGERDE: Nicht geheu'r ist's dort für ein hülflos Weib.

BRUENNHILDE: Und doch vor Wotan's Wuth
schützt sie sicher der Wald:
ihn scheut der Mächt'ge und meidet den Ort.

WALTRAUTE: (von der Höhe).
Furchtbar fährt dort Wotan zum Fels.

DIE WALKUEREN: Brünnhilde, hör'
seines Nahens Gebraus'!

BRUENNHILDE: (Sieglinden die Richtung weisend). Fort denn, eile nach Osten gewandt!
Muthigen Trotzes
ertrag' alle Müh'n—Hunger und Durst,

BRÜNNHILDE: Woman, live on,
For the love of loving!
Rescue the pledge
That his love gave to you
A Wälsung soon you shall bear!

SIEGLINDE: (After a moment of alarm, her face beams with joy.)
Rescue me, maiden!
Rescue my child!
Save me, maidens,
So mighty to shield!
(Terrible thunderclaps are heard in the distance. They grow louder.)

WALTRAUTE: (From the height.)
The storm grows apace!

ORTLINDE: (As above.) Flee, you who fear it!

THE WALKYRS: Hence with the woman—
Peril she bodes!
No Walkyr would dare
To serve as her shield!

SIEGLINDE: (Kneeling to Brünnhilde.) Rescue me, maid!
Rescue the mother!

BRÜNNHILDE: (Coming to a decision quickly.) Then flee, swiftly,
And flee alone!
I—will remain here, Waiting for Wotan's vengeance:
On me will fall
His furious ire,
And his wrath you meanwhile shall escape.

SIEGLINDE: Where, ah where shall I wander?

BRÜNNHILDE: Which of you sisters
Speeds to the east?

SIEGRUNE: There lies a wood Far from here, in the East:
The Nibelung's hoard
Has been hid there by Fafner.

SCHWERTLEITE: Shaped as a worm, Fafner lies lurking
In a deep cavern
Watching over Alberich's ring.

GRIMGERDE: It is a dreadful spot
For a helpless wife!

BRÜNNHILDE: And yet from Wotan's wrath
Safe were she in the wood:
For, though so mighty,
He shuns the forest.

WALTRAUTE: (From the height.)
Wildly now
Rides Wotan our way!

THE WALKYRS: Brünnhilde, hear
The loud roar as he nears!

BRÜNNHILDE: (Directing Sieglinde.) Hence then, hasten
And hide in the East!
Bravely and boldly Enduring your woe—
Hunger and thirst,

Dorn und Gestein;
lache, ob Noth,
ob Leiden dich nagt!
Denn eines wiss'
und wahr' es immer:
den hehrsten Helden der Welt hegst du, o Weib, im schirmenden Schooss!—
(Sie reicht ihr die Stücke von Siegmund's Schwert.)
Verwahr' ihm die starken Schwertes-Stücken;
seines Vaters Walstatt entführt' ich sie glücklich:
der neu gefügt
das Schwert einst schwingt, den Namen nehm' er von mir—
,,Siefried'' erfreu' sich des Sieg's

SIEGLINDE: Du hehrstes Wunder! herrliche Maid!
Dir, Treuen, dank' ich heiligen Trost!
Für ihn, den wir liebten, rett' ich das Liebste:
meines Dankes Lohn
lache dir einst!
Lebe wohl!
Dich segnet Sieglinde's Weh'!
(Sie eilt rechts im Vordergrunde ab.—Die Felsenhöhe ist von schwarzen Gewitterwolken umlagert; furchtbarer Sturm braust aus dem Hintergrunde daher: ein feuriger Schein erhellt den Tannenwald zur Seite. Zwischen dem Donner hört man Wotan's Ruf.)

WOTAN'S: (Stimme). Steh'!
Brünnhild'!

DIE WALKUEREN: Den Fels erreichten Ross und Reiter:
weh', Brünnhild'!
Rache entbrennt!

BRUENNHILDE: Ach, Schwestern, helft!
mir schwankt das Herz!
Sein Zorn zerschellt mich,
wenn eu'r Schutz ihn nicht zähmt.

DIE WALKUEREN: Hieher, Verlor'ne!
lass' dich nicht seh'n!
Schmiege dich an uns, und schweige dem Ruf!
(Sie ziehen sich alle die Felsspitze hinauf, indem sie Bruennhilde unter sich verbergen.) Weh'!
Wüthend schwingt sich Wotan vom Ross—hieher ras't
sein rächender Schritt!
(Wotan schreitet in furchtbar zürnender Aufregung aus dem Tann heraus, und hält vor dem Haufen der Walküren an die auf der Höhe eine Stellung einnehmen, durch welche sie Bruennhilde schützen.)

Hardship and pain;
Laugh, although need
And sorrow should gnaw!
For one thing ever Hold fast and treasure:
The noblest hero on earth
Soon
Shall leap into life from your womb!
(She hands her the fragments of Siegmund's sword.)
The sword that was shivered,
See you save him:
From his father's death-field
I brought the bits safely:
Who, newly forged,
The sword shall swing,
The name I give him shall bear—
"Siegfried," a Victor shall stand!

SIEGLINDE: Glorious wonder!
Valorous maid!
Your truth has lent me
Courage and trust!
For him, whom we honored,
Save I my dearest:
Would that thanks alone
Could repay you!
Farewell!
Be blessed by Sieglinde's woe!
(She hurries away on the right.—The summit of the rocks is enveloped in dark thunderclouds. A terrible storm grows in the background. A lurid glow appears in the fir-trees. Between the thunderclaps Wotan's voice is heard.)

WOTAN'S VOICE: Stay,
Brünnhilde!

THE WALKYRS: The steed and rider
Rush to reach us:
Woe, Brünnhilde!
His wrath is wild!

BRÜNNHILDE: Ah, sisters, help!
My heart grows faint!
Unless you tame him
I am undone now, and doomed!

THE WALKYRS: Hide here, o lost one,
Lest you be seen!
Cling close to us
And heed not his call!
(All ascend to the top of the peak, concealing Brünnhilde)
Woe!
Wildly Wotan
Leaps from his steed—
See how fierce
He flames on his way!
(Wotan, frenzied with anger, issues from the firs and halts at the foot of the height on which the Walkyrs are grouped, hiding Brünnhilde)

WOTAN: Wo ist Brünnhild'?
Wo die Verbrecherin?
Wagt ihr, die Böse
vor mir zu bergen?

DIE WALKUEREN: Schrecklich ertos't dein Toben:— was thaten, Vater, die Töchter, das sie dich reizten zu rasender Wuth?

WOTAN: Wollt ihr mich höhnen?
Hütet euch, Freche!
Ich weiss: Brünnhilde bergt ihr vor mir.
Weichet von ihr,
der ewig Verworf'nen, wie ihren Werth
von sich sie warf!

DIE WALKUEREN: Zu uns floh die Verfolgte, uns'ren Schutz flehte sie an!
mit Furcht und Zagen fasst sie dein Zorn.
Für die bange Schwester
bitten wir nun, dass den ersten Zorn du bezähm'st.

WOTAN: Weichherziges Weibergezücht!
So matten Muth
gewannt ihr von mir?
Erzog ich euch kühn,
zu Kämpfen zu zieh'n, schuf ich die Herzen
euch hart und scharf, dass ihr Wilden nun weint und greint, wenn mein Grimm eine Treulose straft?
So wisst denn, Winselnde, was die verbrach, um die euch Zagen die Zähre entbrennt!
Keine wie sie
kannte mein innerstes Sinnen!
keine wie sie
wusste den Quell meines Willens;
sie selbst war
meines Wunsches schaffender Schooss: und so nun brach sie den seligen Bund.
dass treulos sie
meinem Willen getrotzt, mein herrschend Gebot
offen verhöhnt,
gegen mich die Waffe gewandt, die allein mein Wunsch ihr schuf!— Hörst du's, Brünnhilde?
du, der ich Brünne, Helm und Wehr, Wonne und Huld,
Namen und Leben verlieh?
Hörst du mich Klage erheben, und birgst dich bang dem Kläger, dass feig' du der Straf' entflöh'st?

BRUENNHILDE: (tritt aus der Schaar der Walküren hervor, schreitet demüthigen, doch festen Schrittes von der Felsenspritze herab und tritt so in geringer Ferne vor Wotan). Hier bin ich, Vater:
gebiete die Strafe!

WOTAN: Where is Brünnhild'?
She who betrayed me?
Do you dare to shelter the guilty
From me?

THE WALKYRS: Fearful your fury rages:—
What did your daughters, O father,
Do to awaken
Your anger and rage?

WOTAN: Would you then mock me?
Do you dare defy me?
I know: Brünnhilde
Fain would hide.
Shrink from her, ay,
Forsake her, the traitress,
For she herself
Hath now betrayed!

THE WALKYRS: To us fled she, your victim;
She implored, wept for our aid!
Now worn and woeful
Dreads she your wrath!
We entreat you, father,
Pity your child!
Let her sorrow soften your heart!

WOTAN: Weak-hearted and Womanly brood!
Do you fancy your sire so faint and slow?
For this were you taught
To battle and war,
Hardened and heartened
To dare and do?
Would you weep and whimper and groan
When my wrath on the criminal falls?
Then know this, whimperers,
What is the crime
Of her who draws
From your terror these tears?
None of you all
Knew as she knew what I purposed.
None of you all
Fathomed my will and my meaning; Herself was
She the soul and source of my will:
And she has broken
Our holiest bond,
For faithless what
I had willed she defied,
My solemn behest Openly braved—
She turned the weapons against me
That my will alone had wrought!—
Do you hear, Brünnhilde?
You to whom I lent buckler,
Helm and spear,
Being and honor?
Do you hear how I accuse you,
And do you hide and tremble
In dread of the doom you've fled?

BRÜNNHILDE: (Issues from the group formed by the other Walkyrs, descends humbly, but with a firm step, from the peak, and halts at a little distance from Wotan.)
Here I am father:
You order my doom!

WOTAN: Nicht—straf' ich dich erst:
deine Strafe schufst du dir selbst.
Durch meinen Willen
warst du allein:
gegen mich doch hast du gewollt;
meine Befehle nur
führtest du aus:
gegen mich doch hast du befohlen;
Wunsch-Maid
war'st du mir:
gegen mich doch hast du gewünscht;
Schild-Maid
war'st du mir:
gegen mich doch hob'st du den Schild;
Loos-Kieserin
war'st du mir:
gegen mich doch kies'test du Loose; Helden-Reizerin
war'st du mir:
gegen mich doch reiztest du Helden.
Was sonst du war'st, sagte dir Wotan:
was jetzt du bist,
das sage dir selbst!
Wunschmaid bist du nicht mehr;
Walküre bist du gewesen:—
nun sei fortan, was so du noch bist!

BRUENNHILDE: (heftig erschrocken). Du verstössest mich?
versteh' ich den Sinn?

WOTAN: Nicht send' ich dich mehr aus Walhall, nicht weis' ich dir mehr Helden zur Wal:
nicht führ'st du mehr Sieger in meinen Saal:
bei der Götter trautem Mahle das Trinkhorn nicht reichst du traulich mir mehr;
nicht kos' ich dir mehr
den kindischen Mund.
Von göttlicher Schaar
bist du geschieden, ausgestossen
aus der Ewigen Stamm; gebrochen ist unser Bund:
aus meinem Angesicht bist du verbannt.

DIE WALKUEREN: (in Jammer ausbrechend). Wehe! Weh'!
Schwester! Ach Schwester!

BRUENNHILDE: Nimmst du mir alles, was einst du gab'st?

WOTAN: Der dich zwingt, wird dir's entzieh'n!
Hieher auf den Berg banne ich dich;
in wehrlosen Schlaf
schliess' ich dich fest;
der Mann dann fange die Maid, der am Wege sie findet und weckt.

DIE WALKUEREN: Halt', o Vater! halt' ein den Fluch!
Soll die Maid verblüh'n und verbleichen dem Mann?
Ach, wende von ihr die schreiende Schmach, schrecklicher Gott!
wie die Schwester, träf' uns der Schimpf!

WOTAN: Hörtet ihr nicht, was ich verhängt?
Aus eurer Schaar ist die treulose Schwester geschieden;
mit euch zu Ross
durch die Lüfte nicht reitet sie länger; die magdliche Blume verblüht der Maid;
ein Gatte gewinnt ihre weibliche Gunst:
dem herrischen Manne
gehorcht sie fortan, am Herde sitzt sie und spinnt, aller Spottenden Ziel und Spiel.
(Bruennhilde sinkt schreiend vor seinen Füssen zu Boden; die Walküren machen eine Bewegung des Entsetzens.) Schreckt euch ihr Loos?
So flieht die Verlor'ne!
Weichet von ihr
und haltet euch fern!
Wer von euch wagte
bei ihr zu weilen, wer mir zum Trotz
zu der Traurigen hielt', die Thörin theilte ihr Loos:
das künd' ich der Kühnen an!—
Fort jetzt von hier!
meidet den Felsen!
Hurtig jagt mir von hinnen, sonst erharrt Jammer euch hier!

DIE WALKUEREN: Weh'! Weh'!
(Die Walküren fahren mit wildem Wehschrei auseinander und stürzen in hastiger Flucht in den Tann: bald hört man sie wie mit Sturm auf ihren Rossen davonjagend.—Nach und nach legt sich während des Folgenden das Gewitter; die Wolken verziehen sich; Abenddämmerung, und endlich Nacht, sinken bei ruhigem Wetter herein.
Wotan und Bruennhilde, die noch zu seinen Füssen hingestreckt liegt, sind allein zurückgeblieben. —Langes, feierliches Schweigen: unveränderte Stellung Wotan's und Bruennhilde's.)

BRUENNHILDE: (endlich das Haupt langsam erhebend, sucht Wotan's noch abgewandten Blick und richtet sich während des Folgenden allmälig ganz auf). War es so schmählich, was ich verbrach,
dass mein Verbrechen so schmählich du bestraf'st?
War es so niedrig, was ich dir that,
dass du so tief mir Erniedrigung schaff'st?
War es so ehrlos,
was ich beging,
dass mein Vergeh'n nun die Ehre mir raubt?

WOTAN: Nay—I do not doom:
By your deed yourself you have doomed.
My will, mine only,
Gave you your life:
Yet against that will you have warred.
Nothing but my bidding
You once did obey:
Yet against me now you have bidden;
You were once wish-maid:
Yet against me now you have willed;
You were one shield-maid
Yet against me you raise your shield;
You were once fate-messenger
Yet against me fate you were moving;
You were once hero-ravisher
Yet you turned heroes against me.
What more you were Wotan has told you.
What now you are,
Yourself should know best!
You're wish-maid no more;
You're Walkyrie no longer:—
Henceforth then be What only you can!

BRÜNNHILDE: (In terrible agitation.) You would cast me out?
Is that your decree?

WOTAN: No more you'll ride now from Walhall;
No more shall you bid Heroes to death;
No more bring the victors
To fill my hall:
When together gods are gathered
My horn you shall never Bring me to drain;
No more I can kiss
Your innocent lips
The gods you met
Know you no longer;
Outcast you are
From the race of the gods.
For broken now is our bond,
And from my presence you are banished for aye!

THE WALKYRS: (Lamenting.)
Woe, ah, woe!
Ah, sister, o sister!

BRÜNNHILDE: All you are taking
That once you gave?

WOTAN: He, your lord—takes it away!
Now here to this hill
I banish you, to sleep unguarded
I sentence you:
That man shall capture the maid,
Who shall wake her to life on his way.

THE WALKYRS: Have done! O father, Enough you've cursed!
Must the maiden pale
And be prey to a man?
O turn from her head
This terrible shame,
Merciless god!
Or let us share our sister's woe and her fate!

WOTAN: Did you not hear What I decreed?
Far from you all Shall your renegade sister be driven;
With you no more
Through the air she shall ride on her charger;
Her maidenly blossom Shall fail and fade;
A husband shall win her
And wear her for wife;
A man and a master
Shall hold her in servitude
At home she'll sit and she'll spin,
As a mock and a mark for scorn.
(Brünnhilde shrieks and falls at his feet. The Walkyrs are convulsed with terror)
Do you fear her fate?
Then flee from the outcast.
Leave her to bear
Her sentence alone!
She who would venture
Near her to linger,
She who should venture
To condone her crime,
Shall surely share in her doom:
I warn you, so hear and heed!—
Up and begone!
Do not haunt the mountain!
Haste you hence, as I bid you
Lest you all rue your delay!

THE WALKYRS: Woe! Woe!
(The Walkyrs disperse, with wild lamentations, and rush away into the fir-trees. Shortly after they are heard riding away at a furious gallop. The storm gradually abates. The clouds clear off, dusk comes and then at last is merged into placid night.)
(Wotan remains alone with Brünnhilde, who is still prostrate at his feet. A long, solemn silence follows, during which Wotan and Brünnhilde do not stir.)

BRÜNNHILDE: (Slowly lifts her head, seeking response from Wotan's averted eyes. Then she rises.)
Was it so shameful,
All I have done,
That my misdoings should steep me so in shame?
Have I sinned so deeply,
When I did sin,
That you should sink me so deep in disgrace?
Had I no honor,
Even in my guilt,
That you must rob me of honor for always?
Ah, speak, father,
Face me now frankly:

O sag', Vater, sieh' mir in's Auge:
schweige den Zorn,
zähme die Wuth!
Deute mir hell
Die dunkle Schuld, die mit starrem Trotze dich zwingt, zu verstossen dein trautestes Kind!

WOTAN: (finster). Frag' deine That—sie deutet dir deine Schuld!

BRUENNHILDE: Deinen Befehl führte ich aus.

WOTAN: Befahl ich dir für den Wälsung zu fechten?

BRUENNHILDE: So hiessest du mich
als Herrscher der Wal.

WOTAN: Doch meine Weisung
nahm ich wieder zurück.

BRUENNHILDE: Als Fricka den eig'nen Sinn dir entfremdet:
da ihrem Sinn du dich fügtest, warst du selber dir Feind.

WOTAN: (bitter). Dass du mich verstanden, wähnt' ich, und strafte den wissenden Trotz;
doch feig' und dumm
dachtest du mich:
so hätt' ich Verrath nicht zu rächen, zu gering wär'st du meinem Grimm?

BRUENNHILDE: Nicht weise bin ich;
doch wusst' ich das Eine—dass den Wälsung du liebtest:
ich wusste den Zwiespalt,
der dich zwang,
dies Eine ganz zu vergessen.
Das And're musstest einzig du seh'n, was zu schau'n so herb schmerzte dein Herz—dass Siegmund Schutz du versagtest.

WOTAN: Du wusstest es so, und wagtest dennoch den Schutz?

BRUENNHILDE: Weil für dich im Auge das Eine ich hielt, dem, im Zwange des And'ren schmerzlich entzweit, rathlos den Rücken du wandtest.
Die im Kampfe Wotan den Rücken bewacht, die sah nun das nur, was du nicht sah'st:—
Siegmund musst' ich seh'n.
Tod kündend
trat ich vor ihn, gewahrte sein Auge, hörte sein Wort;
ich vernahm des Helden heilige Noth; tönend erklang mir
des Tapfersten Klage—freiester Liebe furchtbares Leid, traurigsten Muthes mächtigster Trotz:

Silence your wrath,
Stifle your rage!
And tell me, I pray,
My deadly crime,
That compels you to be ruthless,
And to make an outcast of your child!

WOTAN: (Gloomily.) Question your crime—
It will show the depth of your guilt!

BRÜNNHILDE: I obeyed your own command.

WOTAN: And did I bid you
To fight for the Wälsung?

BRÜNNHILDE: So did you command
As master of war.

WOTAN: Ay, but I revoked my bidding Swiftly

BRÜNNHILDE: When Fricka your honest Mind had perverted:
By giving way to content her,
You did betray yourself.

WOTAN: (Bitterly.) You did understand me, clearly:
Your wilful rebellion I scourge.
But weak and dull Seemed I to you
Should treason itself go unpunished,
Too unworthy were you for wrath?

BRÜNNHILDE: I have no wisdom
Yet this I knew surely—
That you loved the Wälsung.
I knew of the quarrel
That compelled
Your heart to seem so forgetful.
No help was left for you
But to behold
What with shame and pain
So harrowed up your heart—
And Siegmund soon was forsaken.

WOTAN: You knew it well,
And yet you did stand his shield?

BRÜNNHILDE: Ay, for you, and you only
I did not forget,
When, a slave to another,
Sad and alone,
Helpless away you did turn
She who Wotan's rearguard
In battle had been
Could see what you
Now no more could see:
I sought Siegmund straight.
Death-dooming,
Went I my way,
And, meeting his glances,
Heard what he spake;
Then I knew the hero's
Terrible woe;
Thrilled as I sounded
His valor and sorrow—
Heard him unbosom
Anguish and love,
Sad and yet dauntless, Daring and strong:

meinem Ohr' erscholl,
mein Aug' erschaute, was tief im Busen das Herz zu heil'gem Beben mir traf.—
Scheu und staunend stand ich in Scham:
ihm nur zu dienen
konnt' ich noch denken:
Sieg oder Tod
mit Siegmund zu theilen—diess nur erkannt' ich zu kiesen als Loos!
Der diese Liebe
mir in's Herz gehaucht, dem Willen, der dem Wälsung mich gesellt, ihm innig vertraut—
trotzt' ich deinem Gebot.

WOTAN: So thatest du, was so gern zu thun ich begehrt—doch was nicht zu thun die Noth zwiefach mich zwang?
so leicht wähntest du Wonne des Herzes erworben, wo brennend Weh'
in das Herz mir brach, wo grässliche Noth
den Grimm mir schuf, einer Welt zu Liebe
der Liebe Quell
im gequälten Herzen zu hemmen?
Wo gegen mich selber ich sehrend mich wandte, aus Ohnmacht-Schmerzen schäumend ich aufschoss, wüthender Sehnsucht sengender Wunsch den schrecklichen Willen mir schuf, in den Trümmern der eig'nen Welt meine ew'ge Trauer zu enden:—
da labte süss dich, selige Lust;
wonniger Rührung üppigen Rausch enttrankst du lachend der Liebe Trank—als mir göttlicher Noth nagende Galle gemischt?
Deinen leichten Sinn lass' dich denn leiten:
von mir sagtest du dich los!
Dich muss ich meiden,
gemeinsam mit dir
nicht darf ich Rath mehr raunen;
getrennt nicht dürfen
traut wir mehr schaffen:
so weit Leben und Luft, darf der Gott dir nicht mehr begegnen!

BRUENNHILDE: Wohl taugte dir nicht die thör'ge Maid, die staunend im Rathe nicht dich verstand wie mein eig'ner Rath nur das Eine mir rieth—zu lieben, was du geliebt.—
Muss ich denn scheiden und scheu dich meiden, musst du spalten,
was einst sich umspannt, die eig'ne Hälfte fern' von dir halten—

What my ear heard
And eye did fathom,
Awoke and tortured my heart
With holy passion and pain.
Awed, astounded,
I stood in shame:
Now thinking only
How I could serve him:
Triumph or death
With Siegmund beside me—
This could I only
Of fortune demand!
Him who this love had roused,
Within my heart
The will that had the Wälsung Bound to me,
In faith and in trust—
I now dared to defy.

WOTAN: So you did do
What I once indeed had desired—
But what not to do
By fate fast I was bound?
So soon hoped you
Rapture would pay your for loving,
When burning woe
In my heart did flame,
And terrible need Compelled my wrath,
For the sake of saving
A world with love,
In my heart to dry up love's sources?
When, turning all my anger, against My own self
In helpless sorrow Fiercely I struggled, Passionate longing
Raging awoke,
The merciless wish in me roused,
In the wreck of the world I ruled My unending sorrow to bury:—
And you did dream
Of joy and of love,
Revel in rapture,
Riot in bliss;
Did drain, delighted,
The draught of love—
While I, god though I be,
Poisoned my bosom with gall?
Let your wanton will Lead you hereafter:
From me now yourself you've loosed!
Now are we severed;
Together with you
No more I'll come for counsel
We two can never Plan to work wonders:
So, while life shall be yours,
From the god you're parted for ever!

BRÜNNHILDE: As nothing you hold
The foolish maid
Who, seeking your meaning, Misunderstood;
To her simple mind
One thing only was meant
To love what your heart had loved.—
Must we be parted
For always, and sundered?
Must you sever
What once was entwined?
Ah, would you banish dass sonst sie ganz dir gehörte, du, Gott, vergiss das nicht!

Dein ewig Theil
nicht wirst du entehren, Schande nicht wollen,
die dich beschimpft;
dich selbst liessest du sinken, säh'st du dem Spott mich zum Spiel!

WOTAN: Du folgtest selig der Liebe Macht:
folge nun dem,
den du lieben musst!

BRUENNHILDE: Soll ich aus Walhall scheiden, nicht mehr mit dir schaffen und walten:
dem herrischen Manne
gehorchen fortan—dem feigen Prahler gieb mich nicht Preis!
nicht werthlos sei er,
der mich gewinnt.

WOTAN: Von Walvater schiedest du—nicht wählen darf er für dich.

BRUENNHILDE: Du zeugtest ein edles Geschlecht; kein Zager kann je ihm entschlagen:
der weihlichste Held—ich weiss es—entblüht dem Wälsungenstamm.

WOTAN: Schweig' von dem Wälsungenstamm!
von dir gescheiden
schied ich von ihm:
vernichten musst' ihn der Neid.

BRUENNHILDE: Die von dir sich riss—rettete ihn:
Sieglinde hegt die heiligste Frucht;
in Schmerz und Leid, wie kein Weib sie gelitten, wird sie gebären,
was bang sie birgt.

WOTAN: Nie suche bei mir Schutz für die Frau, noch für ihres Schoosses Frucht!

BRUENNHILDE: Sie wahret das Schwert, das du Siegmund schufest.—

WOTAN: Und das ich ihm in Stücken schlug Nicht streb', o Maid, den Muth mir zu stören!
Erwarte dein Loos, wie sich's dir wirft:
nicht kiesen kann ich es dir!—
Doch fort muss ich jetzt, fern mich verzieh'n:
zuviel schon zögert' ich hier.
Von der Abwendigen
wend' ich mich ab;
nicht wissen darf ich,
was sie sich wünscht:
die Strafe nur
muss vollstreckt ich seh'n.

BRUENNHILDE: Was hast du erdacht, dass ich erdulde?

Half of your being—
Who long obeyed you so blindly,
You god, forget not that!
Your deathless self
You will not dishonor,
Could not repay me
With shame for shame;
Yourself would you punish,
Were you to mock me with scorn!

WOTAN: You've yielded lightly
Where love allured.
Yield yourself now
To a love foredoomed!

BRÜNNHILDE: Must I then leave Walhalla—
No more reign with you and do battle?
Bow down and be mastered
At beck of a man
Then give no braggart Boaster the prize!
Let no worthless coward
Win your daughter

WOTAN: The War-Father you've disowned—
He may not choose you the man.

BRÜNNHILDE: A valorous race
you've begot;
No coward could come of your breeding:
A hero alone—that I know
Of Wälsung blood could be born.

WOTAN: Leave the Wälsungs in peace!
From them I parted,
Parting with you.
It was envy doomed them to die.

BRÜNNHILDE: She who's rent from you Rescued their race:
Sieglinde bears
The holiest fruit;
In pain and woe
Such as none have ever suffered,
What in her's hidden
She brings to life.

WOTAN: Yet hope not from me
Help for her pain,
Nor for her unhallowed child!

BRÜNNHILDE: The sword she has saved
You sent to Siegmund.

WOTAN: And that I split into splinters!
Seek not, o maid,
My mind to unsettle!
Await the lot
Your sin has earned:
I may not change it for you.
And now I must go:
Far from this place.
Too long I've lingered today.
Now I turn from you
As you did from me;
Forbidden am I to learn
Your wish.
Your crime alone
I must see punished.

BRÜNNHILDE: What have you conceived
That I must suffer?

WOTAN: In festen Schlaf verschliess' ich dich:
wer so die Wehrlose weckt, dem ward, erwacht, sie zum Weib

BRUENNHILDE: (stürzt auf ihre Kniee). Soll fesselnder Schlaf fest mich binden, dem feigsten Manne zur leichten Beute:
diess Eine musst du erhören, was heil'ge Angst zu dir fleht!
Die Schlafende schütze mit scheuchenden Schrecken:
dass nur ein furchtlos freiester Held hier auf dem Felsen einst mich fänd'!

WOTAN: Zu viel begehrst du—zu viel der Gunst!

BRUENNHILDE: (seine Kniee umfassend). Dies Eine musst—du erhören!
Zerknicke dein Kind,
das dein Knie umfasst;
zertritt die Traute, zertrümm're die Maid;
ihres Leibes Spur
zerstöre dein Speer:
doch gieb, Grausamer, nicht
der grässlichsten Schmach sie preis!
(Mit Wildheit.)
Auf dein Gebot entbrenne ein Feuer;
den Felsen umglühe
lodernde Gluth:
es leck' ihre Zung', es fresse ihr Zahn
den Zagen, der frech sich wagte, dem freislichen Felsen zu nah'n!

WOTAN: (blickt ihr ergriffen in das Auge und hebt sie auf). Leb' wohl, du kühnes, herrliches Kind!
Du meines Herzens heiligster Stolz, leb' wohl! leb' wohl! leb' wohl!
Muss ich dich meiden, und darf nicht minnig mein Gruss dich mehr grüssen;
sollst du nun nicht mehr
neben mir reiten, noch Meth beim Mahl mir reichen, muss ich verlieren
dich, die ich liebe, du lachende Lust meines Auges:— ein bräutliches Feuer soll dir nun brennen, wie nie einer Braut es gebrannt!
Flammende Gluth
umglühe den Fels;
mit zehrenden Schrecken scheuch' es den Zagen, der Feige fliehe Brünnhilde's Fels:—
denn Einer nur freie die Braut, der freier als ich, der Gott!
(Bruennhilde wirft sich ihm gerührt und entzückt in die Arme.)
Der Augen leuchtendes Paar, das oft ich lächelnd gekos't, wenn Kampfes-Lust
ein Kuss dir lohnte,

WOTAN: In slumber deep
I lock your eyes
He who awakes the sleeper Shall win, and wear, her for wife.

BRÜNNHILDE: (Falling on her knees.) Lest fettering sleep
Fast should bind me
The prey and booty
Of any coward:
One boon you will not deny me
As deep in anguish I pray!
The sleeper, o, shelter
With ramparts of terror.
A hero only,
Fearless and free,
Here to the mountain
Then could come.

WOTAN: You ask too much—Too great's the grace!

BRÜNNHILDE: (Clinging to his knees.) This boon you must—
Not deny me!
Ah, crush out the life
Of your child who kneels;
Destroy your servant,
The truest of maids;
With your mighty lance transpierce
Her bosom;
But give, gruesome one, not
Your daughter to scorn and shame!
(Wildly)
At your command
Let threatening fires
Encircle the mountain,
Raven and glow:
And, heavenward leaping,
Pitiless tongues
Strike terror in him who'd venture
The desolate rock to invade!

WOTAN: (Gazes with emotion into her eyes, and helps her to rise.) Farewell, you bravest, Rarest of maids!
You, my heart's treasure,
Idol and pride,
Farewell! farewell! farewell!
Must I forsake you
And now may never
My soul send you greeting:
Shall you no more then,
Go riding near me,
Nor bring me mead to cheer me;
Must I then lose you,
O, my belovèd,
You, laughter and light in my sorrow:—
For you will I kindle
Burning red beacons
That never for a bride had yet flamed!
Ruddy the fire
Shall glow round the rock;
With raging and roaring Taunting the coward;
Who fears shall flee from Brünnhilde's bed:—
For he alone frees her, the bride,
Who's freer than I, the god!
(Overcome with joyous emotion, Brünnhilde throws herself into his arms.)
O, eyes aglow with delight,
That often I tenderly wooed, wenn kindisch lallend

der Helden Lob von holden Lippen dir floss:—
dieser Augen strahlendes Paar, das oft im Sturm mir geglänzt, wenn Hoffnungs-Sehnen
das Herz mir sengte, nach Welten-Wonne
mein Wunsch verlangte aus wild webendem Bangen:—
zum letzten Mal
letz' es mich heut' mit des Lebewohles letztem Kuss!
Dem glücklicher'n Manne glänze sein Stern;
dem unseligen Ew'gen muss es scheidend sich schliessen!
Denn so—kehrt
der Gott sich dir ab:
so küsst er die Gottheit von dir.
(Er küsst sie auf beide Augen, die ihr sogleich verschlossen bleiben: sie sinkt sanft ermattend in seinen Armen zurück. Er geleitet sie zart auf einen niedrigen Mooshügel zu liegen, über den sich eine breitästige Tanne ausstreckt. Noch einmal betrachtet er ihre Züge und schliesst ihr dann den Helm fest zu; dann verweilt sein Blick nochmals schmerzlich auf ihrer Gestalt, die er endlich mit

When lust of strife
A kiss had won you,
When, gently opening,
Your maiden lips
The heroes' praises would sing;
O, dear eyes that often in the storm
Would beam and brighten my way
When hope and passion
My heart set longing
For earthly rapture
And bliss of loving,
With wild wishing and dreading:
A parting kiss
Take you tonight,
As I bid farewell
To light and bliss!
Your starry-bright glances Keep for the man;
On me luckless immortal
You are closing for ever!
For thus—doth
The god renounces you
Thus kissing your godhead away.
(He kisses both her eyes, which at once close. She sinks insensible in his arms. He bears her tenderly to a low mossy bank, shaded by the wide-spreading branches of a great fir-tree. Once more he gazes on her features. Then he closes her helmet tightly. Again he looks sorrowfully at her recumbent form, which he at last covers with the Walkyr's steel shield. Then, with dem langen Stahlschilde der Walküre zudeckt.—Dann schreitet er mit feierlichem, Entschlusse in die Mitte der Bühne und kehrt die Spitze seines Speeres gegen einen mächtigen Felsstein.) Loge hör'!

lausche hieher!
Wie zuerst ich dich fand
als feurige Gluth, wie dann einst du mir schwandest als schweifende Lohe:
wie ich dich band,
bann' ich dich heut'!
Herauf, wabernde Lohe, umlod're mir feurig den Fels!
Loge! Loge! Hieher!
(Bei der letzten Anrufung schlägt er mit der Spitze des Speeres dreimal auf den Stein, worauf diesem ein Feuerstrahl entfährt, der schnell zu einem Flammenmeere anschwillt, dem Wotan mit einem Winke seiner Speerspitze den Umkreis des Felsens als Strömung zuweist.)
Wer meines Speeres

durchschreite das Feuer nie!

DAS ENDE.

solemn determination, he moves to the centre of the stage, and points the head of his spear toward a mighty rock.)
Loge, hear!
Lend me your ear!
As at first I found you.
A fiery flame,
As thou did escape me,
A-leaping and glowing:
As you were bound,
I bind you now:
Arise, flaring and glowing,
Ring round the whole mountain with fire!
Loge! Loge! Arise!
(After the last invocation Wotan strikes the rock three times with the point of his spear, whereupon a flame leaps up. It soon grows into a sea of flames, which, with a motion of his spear, Wotan confines in a circle that hems round the rock.)
Who from my spear-point
Shrinks in terror,
Shall never the flame defy!
(He disappears in the background amid the flames. The curtain falls.)

THE END.

Siegfried (1876)

Music and Libretto by Richard Wagner

This three-act opera was first performed at the Festspielhaus in Bayreuth on August 16, 1876. Mime, the dwarf, is trying futilely to forge an unbreakable sword for Siegfried, Sieglinde's son, who she left in his care when she died. He believes Siegfried's vitality and fearlessness will help him slaughter Fafner, who has changed himself into a dragon and guards the Rhinegold, the Tarnhelm and the ring, all hidden in a secret place deep in the forest. Siegfried brings a bear back from the forest; the bear frightens Mime, but Siegfried just laughs and breaks yet another sword, leaving before a wanderer, blinded in one eye and wrapped in a cloak, appears and prophecizes that "only a fearless man can temper the sword" and warns Mime to be wary of this individual. Mime realizes he's not capable of reforging the sword and asks Siegfried, who is afraid of nothing, to try. Siegfried reforges Notung, splitting the anvil in two with his first blow. Alberich, deep in the forest, keeps watch over the cave of the Rhinegold. The wanderer warns Alberich about Mime, telling him of his plan to poison Siegfried. At dawn, Mime takes Siegfried to the cave. The forest awakens with the song of the birds. Siegfried blows on his silver horn, waking Fafner, and thrusts Notung into the dragon's heart. A drop of blood burns his hand. He sucks on the burn to ease the pain, and he is able to understand the forest bird, who instructs him where to find the Tarnhelm and the ring and warns him to beware of Mime, who will offer him a drink containing poison. Siegfried sets off with the bird as his guide. Wotan asks Erda to predict the future, but gets only an ambiguous response. Wotan tries to block Siegfried's path. Siegfried breaks Wotan's spear, and, with it, the power of the gods. The sight of Brünnhilde combined with his need for his mother fills his heart with terror for the first time in his life. He kisses Brünnhilde, awakening her. They declare their deep and passionate love for one another and sing "let the twilight of the gods begin."

■ ACT I

WALD.

Den Vordergrund bildet ein Theil einer Felsenhöhle die sich links tiefer nach innen zieht, nach rechts aber gegen drei Viertheile der Bühne einnimmt. Zwei natürlich gebildete Eingänge stehen dem Walde zu offen: der eine nach rechts, unmittelbar im Hintergrunde, der andere, breitere, ebenda seitwärts. An der Hinterwand, nach links zu, steht ein grosser Schmiedeherd, aus Felsstücken natürlich geformt; künstlich ist nur der grosse Blasebalg: de rohe Esse geht—ebenfalls natürlich—durch das Felsdach hinauf. Ein sehr grosser Ambos und andre Schmiedegeräthschaften.—

MIME: (sitzt, als der Vorhang nach einem kurzen Orchester-Vorspiel aufgeht, am Ambos, und hämmert mit wachsender Unruhe an einem Schwerte: endlich hält er unmuthig ein). Zwangvolle Plage!
Müh' ohne Zweck!
Das beste Schwert,
das je ich geschweisst,
in der Riesen Fäusten hielte es fest:
doch dem ich's geschmiedet,
der schmähliche Knabe,

■ Act I

A FOREST.

The foreground represents a portion of a rocky cave which extends inwards on the left, but occupies only three-fourths of the stage on the right. Two natural entrances open onto the woods; one halfway up the stage, forms the back, the other, R, is wider and slanting at the side. On the left against the wall stands a large smith's forge, naturally formed of stones, the bellows alone being artificial. The rough chimney—also natural—leads up through the top of the cave. A very large anvil and other smith's appliances.

MIME: (when, after a short orchestral prelude, the curtain rises, is discovered sitting at the anvil, and hammering, with increasing discouragement, at a sword. At last he ceases work in despair).
Forced undertaking!
Toil without fruit!
The stoutest sword
that I ever shaped
was found firm in a giant's fingers, but he whom it is forged for,
the fiery stripling,
will strain and twist it in two as if it er knickt und schmeisst es entzwei, als schüf' ich Kindergeschmeid!—

(Er wirft das Schwert unmuthig auf den Ambos, stemmt die Arme ein und blickt sinnend zu Boden.) Es giebt ein Schwert, das er nicht zerschwänge:
Nothung's Trümmer
zertrotzt' er mir nicht, könnt' ich die starken Stücken schweissen, die meine Kunst
nicht zu kitten weiss.
Könnt' ich's dem Kühnen schmieden, meiner Schmach erlangt' ich da Lohn!—
(Er sinkt tiefer zurück, und neigt sinnend das Haupt.) Fafner, der wilde Wurm, lagert im finst'ren Wald;
mit des furchtbaren Leibes Wucht
der Niblungen Hort
hütet er dort.
Siegried's kindischer Kraft erläge wohl Fafner's Leib:
des Niblungen Ring
erränge ich mir.
Ein Schwert nur taugt zu der That, nur Nothung nützt meinem Neid, wenn Siegfried sehrend ihn schwingt:—
und nicht kann ich's schweissen, Nothung das Schwert!—
(Er fährt in höchstem Unmuth wieder fort zu hämmern.) Zwangvolle Plage!
Müh' ohne Zweck!

were a straw or a toy.
(He throws the sword pettishly on the anvil, set his arms akimbo, and gazes thoughtfully on the ground.)
There is a blade that is not so brittle:
"Needful's" fragments
he'd never fracture me;
could I but mend
the mighty metal;
but all my craft cannot compass that.
If I could weld it with cunning
I should well be paid for my pains.
(He sinks more back and shakes his head thoughtfully.)
Fafner, the wicked worm, rests here in forest wilds;
with his frame of terrific weight he holds guard over the Nibelung's gold.
Siegfried's unproved prowess may master even Fafner's might: the Nibelung Ring would rest then to me.
For this may serve but one sword;
now none but "Needful" I need, by Siegfried searchingly swung:— and I cannot shape me
"Needful" the sword!—
(He recommences hammering, much discouraged.)
Forced undertaking!
Toil without fruit!
The stoutest sword
that I ever shaped will never be drawn

Das beste Schwert,
das je ich geschweisst,
nie taugt es je zu der einz'gen That!
Ich tapp'r' und hämm're nur, weil der Knab' os heischt;
or knickt und schmeisst es entzwei, und schmählt doch, schmied'ich ihm nicht!
(Siegfried, in wilder Waldkleidung, mit einem silbernen Horn an einer Kette; kommt mit jähem Ungestüm aus dem Walde herein; er hat einen grossen Bären mit einem Bastseile gezäumt, und treibt diesen mit lustigem Übermuthe gegen Mime an. Mime'n entsinkt vor Schreck das Schwert; er flüchtet hinte den Herd; Siegfried treibt ihm den Bären überall nach.)

SIEGFRIED: Hoiho! Hoiho!
Hau' ein! Hau' ein!
Friss' ihn! Friss' ihn, den Fratzenschmied!
(Er lacht unbändig.)

MIME: Fort mit dem Thier!
Was taugt mir der Bär!

SIEGFRIED: Zu zwei komm' ich,
dich besser zu zwicken:
Brauner, frag' nach dem Schwert!

MIME: He! lass' das Wild!
Dort liegt die Waffe:
fertig fegt' ich sie heut'.

SIEGFRIED: So fährst du heute noch heil!
(Er löst dem Bären den Zaum, und giebt ihm damit einen Schlag auf den Rücken.)
Lauf', Brauner;
dich brauch' ich nicht mehr!
(Der Bär läuft in den Wald zurück.)

MIME: (zitternd hinter dem Herde vorkommend). Wohl leid' ich's gern, erleg'st du Bären:
was bringst du lebend die braunen heim?

SIEGFRIED: (setzt sich, um sich vom Lachen zu erholen). Nach bess'rem Gesellen sucht' ich, als daheim mir einer sitzt;
im tiefen Walde mein Horn liess ich da hallend tönen:
ob sich froh mir gesellte ein guter Freund?
das frug' ich mit dem Getön'.
Aus dem Busche kam ein Bär, der hörte mir brummend zu;
er gefiel mir besser als du,
doch bess're wohl fänd' ich noch:
mit dem zähen Baste
zäumt' ich ihn da, dich, Schelm, nach dem Schwerte zu fragen.
(Er springt auf und geht nach dem Schwerte.)

in the cause that I need.
I knock and I hammer
but at the boy's request he'll bend and snap it in two, yet scold me, should I not forge.
(Siegfried in a wild forest dress, with a silver horn slung by a chain, bursts impetuously from the wood. He has bridled a great bear with a bast rope, and urges it with merry roughness towards Mime, who drops the sword in terror, and flies behind the forge. Siegfried drives the bear everywhere after him.)

SIEGFRIED: Oho! Oho!
Come on! come on!
Tear him! tear him!
The trumpery smith!
(He shouts with laughter.)

MIME: Take him away!
I do not want the bear!

SIEGFRIED: We come double the better to cow you.
Bruin, ask for the sword!

MIME: Ho! keep away!
I've cast the weapon
Fit and fairly today.

SIEGFRIED: So far you've saved
then your skin.
(He looses the bear from the rope and gives him a blow on the back with it.)
Run, Bruin;
your business is done!
(The bear trots back into the wood.)

MIME: (coming out trembling from behind the forge).
I like it when you slay bears;
why bring that brute to me alive?

SIEGFRIED: (sitting down to recover from his laughter). Pining for better companions than the one at home,
I went to leafy woodland,
while I wound my horn right loudly;
for I had discovered a welcome friend;—
rang forth my notes with that aim.
From the bushes came a bear who listened with brutish growl, and I liked him better than you, though better luck I'd have yet.
With a strong bast rope
I bridled him straight to seek for my sword from this rascal.
(He jumps up and goes towards the sword.)

MIME: (erfasst das Schwert, es Siegfried zu reichen). Ich schuf die Waffe scharf, ihrer Schneide wirst du dich freu'n.

SIEGFRIED: (nimmt das Schwert). Was frommt seine helle Schneide, ist der Stahl nicht hart und fest?
(Er prüft es mit der Hand.)
Hei! was ist das für müss'ger Tand!
Den schwachen Stift
nennst du ein Schwert?
(Er zerschlägt es auf dem Ambos, dass die Stücken ringsum fliegen: Mime weicht erschrocken aus.)
Da hast du die Stücken, schändlicher Stümper:
hätt' ich am Schädel
dir sie zerschlagen!—
Soll mich der Prahler länger noch prellen?
Schwatzt mir von Riesen und rüstigen Kämpfen, von kühnen Thaten
und tüchtiger Wehr;
will Waffen mir schmieden, Schwerte schaffen;
rühmt seine Kunst,
als könnt' er was Rechtes:
nehm' ich zur Hand nun was er gehämmert, mit einem Griff
zergreif' ich den Quark!—
Wär' mir nicht schier zu schäbig der Wicht, ich zerschmiedet' ihn selbst mit seinem Geschmeid, den alten albernen Alp!
Des Aergers dann hätt' ich ein End'.
(Er wirft sich wüthend auf eine Steinbank, zur Seite rechts.)

MIME: (der ihn immer vorsichtig ausgewichen). Nun tob'st du wieder wie toll:
dein Undank, traun! ist arg.
Mach' ich dem bösen Buben nicht alles gleich zu best, was ich Gutes ihm schuf, vergisst er gar zu schnell!
Willst du denn nie gedenken was ich dich lehrt' vom Danke?
Dem sollst du willig gehorchen, der je sich wohl dir erwies.
(Siegfried wendet sich unmuthig um, mit dem Gesicht nach der Wand, so dass er ihm den Rücken kehrt.)
Das willst du wieder nicht hören!—
Doch speisen magst du wohl?
Vom Spiesse bring' ich den Braten:
versuchtest du gern den Sud?
Für dich sott ich ihn gar.
(Er bietet Siegfreid Speise hin. Dieser, ohne sich umzuwenden, schmeisst ihm Topf und Braten aus der Hand.)

SIEGFRIED: Braten briet ich mir selbst: deinen Sudel sauf' allein!

MIME: (taking up the sword to hand it to Siegfried). I've shaped the weapon sharp;
You will be well pleased with its sheen.

SIEGFRIED: (taking the sword).
What purpose would have its shining were the steel not hard of proof?
(Tries it in his hand.)
Hey! what an idle
toy is this!
You call this silly switch a sword?
(He beats it on the anvil till the pieces fly around. Mime retreats in terror.)
Then there are the splinters, scandalous sloven;
would I had smashed it over your skull now!— Shall such a liar longer delude me?
Prating of giants,
of jousts and battles,
of bravest deeds
and of daring in war;
while he smithies weapons,
he shapes me swords, praising his art
as if it were approved?
Yet when I handle
what he has hammered, a single stroke
destroys all the trash.
Were he not, sure,
too scurvy a wight,
I would smithy and smite
the smith with his stuff,— the ancient, imbecile imp!
My anger might then be allayed.
(He throws himself raging on a stone seat, R.)

MIME: (who has cautiously kept his distance). Now you rave in a rage!
What gross ingratitude!
This overbearing boy
if he gets not all the best, the good things I have given are each and all forgot.
Will you then never think of what I have said on thanking?
You should delight to obey him who's shown you love for so long.
(Siegfried sulkily turns his back on him and remains with his face to the wall.)
You're loath to listen to my blaming!
But spurn not food at least.
That spit shall render its roast meat;
or say, would you like the soup?
It simmers long for you.
(Brings food to Siegfried, who, without turning, strikes pot and meat out of his hand.)

SIEGFRIED: I make meals for myself: you can swill your slop alone!

MIME: (stellt sich empfindlich).
Das ist nun der Liebe schlimmer Lohn!
Das der Sorgen schmählicher Sold!—
Als zullendes Kind
zog ich dich auf,
wärmte mit Kleiden
den kleinen Wurm:
Speise und Trank
trug ich dir zu, hütete dich
wie die eig'ne Haut.
Und wie du erwuchsest,
wartet' ich dein;
dein Lager schuf ich,
dass leicht du schlief'st.
Dir schmiedet' ich Tand und ein tönend Horn;
dich zu erfreu'n
mäht' ich mich froh:
mit klugem Rathe
rieth ich dir klug, mit lichtem Wissen
lehrt' ich dich Witz.
Sitz' ich daheim in Fleiss und Schweiss, nach Herzenslust schweif'st du umher:
für dich nur in Plage, in Pein nur für dich
verzehr' ich mich alter armer Zwerg!
Und aller Lasten
ist das nun der Lohn, dass der hastige Knabe mich quält und hasst!
(Er geräth in Schluchzen.)

SIEGFRIED: (der sich wieder umgewendet, un in Mime's Blick ruhig geforscht hat). Vieles lehrtest du, Mime, und manches lernt' ich von dir;
doch was du am liebsten mich
lehrtest zu lernen gelang mir nie:—
wie ich dich leiden könnt'.— Träg'st du mir Speise und Trank herbei—der Ekel speis't mich allein;
schaff'st du ein leichtes Lager zum Schlaf—der Schlummer wird mir da schwer willst du mich weisen
witzig zu sein—gern bleib' ich taub und dumm.
Seh' ich dir erst
mit den Augen zu, zu übel erkenn' ich was alles du thu'st:
seh' ich dich steh'n,
gangeln und geh'n,
knicken und nicken,
mit den Augen zwicken:
beim Genick' möcht' ich den Nicker packen, den Garaus geben dem garst'gen Zwicker!—
So lernt' ich, Mime, dich leiden.
Bist du nun weise,
so hilf mir wissen, worüber umsonst ich sann:—
in den Wald lauf' ich,
dich zu verlassen,—
wie kommt das, kehr' ich zurück?

MIME: (appearing much hurt).
This is my affection's foul reward!
This my toil's disgraceful return!
A querulous brat kindly I reared, wrapped in warm linen
the little wretch:
water and food
for you I found, looked upon you
as my very life.
And as you grew
I waited on you;
in care for your slumber
a couch made soft.
I shaped toys for you,
and a tuneful horn;
ever at your whim
willingly worked:
with cunning counsel
I read you all craft, with subtle wisdom
sharpened your wits.
Moping at home
I toil and moil, while heedless from me you hurry away
For you do I plague myself, takes pains but for you;
so dwindle my powers
—a poor old dwarf!—
For all my worry is this my reward, from the hot-headed boy
but abuse and hate!
(He bursts into a fit of sobbing.)

SIEGFRIED: (who has again turned round and gazed steadily in Mime's face). Much you've taught me, Mime,
and many tales have you told;
but what you would like best to teach me were a lesson I'd gladly let be:— how not to loathe your sight.
Bread do you bring, refreshment too—
I feed on disgust alone.
Spread you my couch with comforts for sleep—
then slumber wends from my side; when all my wits
you work to instruct
I would be deaf and dumb.
Soon as I open my eyes on you
I see only evil there whatever you do.
Seeing you stand shambling and shaking,
shrinking and slinking, with your eyelids blinking,— I'd take you by the neck and shake and wake you, to end your idiot antics forever!—
Such feelings, Mime, I foster.
If you have wisdom
then listen to me wisely,
One thing I have pored upon.—
When I scour forests seeking to fly you, what motive makes me return?

Alle Thiere sind
mir theurer als du:
Baum und Vogel,
die Fische im Bach, lieber mag ich sie leiden als dich:—
wie kommt das nun, kehr' ich zurück?
Bist du klug, so thu' mir's kund.

MIME: (setzt sich in einiger Entfernung ihm traulich gegenüber).
Mein Kind, das lehrt dich kennen, wie lieb ich am Herzen dir lieg'.

SIEGFRIED: (lacht). Ich kann dich ja nicht leiden,— vergiss das nicht so leicht!

MIME: Dess' ist deine Wildheit schuld, die du Böser bändigen sollst.— Jammernd verlangen Junge nach ihrer Alten Nest; Liebe ist das Verlangen:
so lechzest du auch deinen
Mime—
so lieb'st du auch deinen Mime—so musst du ihn lieben!
Was dem Vögelein ist der Vogel, wenn er im Nest es nährt, eh' das flügge mag fliegen:
das ist dir kindischem Spross der kundig sorgende Mime—das muss er dir sein.

SIEGFRIED: Ei, Mime bist du so witzig,
so lass' mich eines noch wissen!—
Es sangen die Vöglein so selig im Lenz, das eine lockte das and're du sagtest selbst—da ich's wissen wollt'— das wären Männchen und Weibchen.
Sie kos'ten so lieblich,
und liessen sich nicht;
sie bauten ein Nest
und brüteten drin;
da flatterte junges Geflügel auf,
und beide pflegten der Brut.
So ruhten im Busch
auch Rehe gepaart, selbst wilde Füchse und Wölfe: Nahrung brachte
zum Nest das Männchen, das Weibchen säugte die Welpen Da lernt' ich wohl was Liebe sei;
der Mutter entwandt' ich die Welpen nie.—
Wo hast du nun, Mime, dein minniges Weibchen,
dass ich es Mutter nenne?

MIME: (verdriesslich). Was ist dir, Thor?
Ach, bist du dumm
Bist doch weder Vogel noch Fuchs?

SIEGFRIED: Das zullende Kind zogest du auf, wärmtest mit Kleiden den kleinen Warm:—
wie kam dir aber

There's not a beast that I love better than you;
bird in forest,
or fish in the brook,
dearer than you
I deem all of these:—
what motive then makes me return?
If you mind, then tell it to me.

MIME: (sits affectionately a little way from Siegfried). My son, this clearly shows you how closely your heart clings to me.

SIEGFRIED: (laughing). But I cannot endure you,—forget not that indeed.

MIME: This is but your wilful way, which were quickly quelled at will.
Young ones are ever yearning, needing the parent nest;
Love's the name of this longing:
such leaning you have to me,
this love you feel for your Mime.
You must surely love him!
What the father is to the fledgling which it nursed in the nest before in flight it could flutter, such to you, foolish child, is faithful, cherishing Mime.
You must be his charge.

SIEGFRIED: Hey, Mime, since you're so clever, explain this to me also clearly.—
The birds in the springtime so bravely did sing,
the one beseeching the other:
you said yourself,
when I asked of it,
these warblers husband and wife were.
They kissed with such pleasure and never parted, they built a nest
and brooded there;
then fluttered soon
the young fledglings out,
and both took care of the brood.
So duly reposed
the deer which had paired, even wolves and foxes the wildest:
the male furnished food,
for the family,
the cubs were nursed by his consort.
I learned from this what love must be;
the whelps I never moved from the mother's side.—
Where have you, Mime, your darling consort that I may call her mother?

MIME: (angrily). Are you a fool?
What is it to you?
Are you either fowl or fox?

SIEGFRIED: A querulous brat
you kindly reared,
wrapped in warm linen
the little wretch:—
how came you, then,

der kindishce Wurm?
Du machtest wohl gar ohne Mutter mich?

MIME: (in grosser Verlegenheit).
Glauben sollst du,
was ich dir sage:
ich bin dir Vater
und Mutter zugleich.

SIEGFRIED: Da lügst du, garstiger Gauch!—
Wie die Jungen den Alten gleichen, das hab' ich mir glücklich erseh'n.
Nun kam ich zum klarne Bach:
da erspäht' ich die Bäum'
und Thier' im Spiegel; Sonn' und Wolken,
wie sie nur sind,
im Glitzer erschienen sie gleich.
Da sah' ich denn auch mein eigen Bild;
ganz anders als du dünkt' ich mir da:
so glich wohl der Kröte.
ein glänzender Fisch;
doch kroch nie ein Fisch aus der Kröte.

MIME: (höchst ärgerlich).
Gräulichen Unsinn
kram'st du da aus!

SIEGFRIED: (immer lebendiger).
Sich'st du, nun fällt auch selbst mir ein, was zuvor ich umsonst besann:
wenn zum Wald ich laufe,
dich zu verlassen,
wie das kommt, kehr' ich doch heim?
(Er springt auf.)
Von dir noch muss ich erfahren, wer Vater und Mutter mir sei!

MIME: (weicht ihm aus). Was Vater! was Mutter!
Müssige Frage!

SIEGFRIED: (packt ihn bei der Kehle). So muss ich dich fassen um 'was zu wissen gutwillig
erfahr' ich doch nichts!
So musst' ich Alles ab dir trotzen:
kaum das Reden
hätt' ich errathen, entwand ich's nicht mit Gewalt dem Schuft!
Heraus damit, räudiger Kerl!
Wer ist mir Vater und Mutter?

MIME: (wachdem er mit dem Kopfe genickt und mit den Händen gewinkt, ist von Siegfried losgelassen worden). An's Leben geh'st du mir schier!—
Nun lass'! was zu wissen dich geizt, erfahr' es, ganz wie ich's weiss.—
O undankbares, arges Kind!
jetzt hör', wofür du mich hassest!
Nicht bin ich Vater noch Vetter dir.—
und dennoch verdankst du mir dich!
Ganz fremd bist du mir, deinem einz' gen Freund;

by this clamoring wretch?
Do you mean that I was made without a mother?

MIME: (much embarrassed).
Only trust whatever I tell you;
I am your father and mother in one.

SIEGFRIED: You lie! perfidious fool!—
That the young one is like the parent long since have I proved for myself.
I came to the crystal brook and could trace bird and beast within its mirror;
mist and sunlight,
seen as they are,
the faithful reflex of their form.
My own pictured image
I also saw;
unlike yourself surely I seemed;
as it were to compare with a toad a bright fish;
a fish never had toad for a father.

MIME: (much vexed). Terrible stuff you chatter still.

SIEGFRIED: (with increasing animation). See now, I vow my self I've found what in vain I so long have sought:
when I fly from you to roam in the forest
how it happens home I return.
(He springs up.)
It is to make you inform me what father and mother are mine.

MIME: (retreating from him).
What father? What mother?
Meaningless fancies!

SIEGFRIED: (seizing him by the throat). Then must I force you to tell me some truth;
good temper
will further me nothing.
I must fulfil my wishes by force; scarcely language should I have learned
if not wrested from you, wretch, my main strength!
So tell me now, rascally knave, who are my father and mother?

MIME: (who has signed with his head and hands for Siegfried to release him). You nearly have crushed my life!—
Let loose! what you wish to know
I'll tell you, now—without wile.—
O thankless and unthinking boy!
Now hear why you hate me!
I am no father nor flesh of yours;
yet owe all to my aid.
You're no kin of mine who yet am so kind;
I have out of goodness,

aus Erbarmen allein barg ich dich hier:
nun hab' ich lieblichen Lohn!
Was verhofft' ich Thor mir auch Dank?
Einst lag wimmernd ein Weib da draussen im wilden Wald:
zur Höhle half ich ihr her,
am warmem Herd sie zu hüten.
Ein Kind trug sie im Schoss; traurig gebar sie's hier;
sie wand sich hin und her,
ich half so gut ich konnt':
stark war die Noth, sie starb—doch Siegfried, der genas.

SIEGFRIED: (hat sich gesetzt). So starb meine Mutter an mir?

MIME: Meinem Schutz übergab sie dich;
ich schenkt' ihn gern dem Kind.
Was hat sich Mime gemüht! was gab sich der Gute für Noth!
Als zullendes Kind
zog ich dich auf...

SIEGFRIED: Mich dünkt, dess' gedachtest du schon Jetzt sag:' woher heiss' ich Siegfried?

MIME: So hiess mich die Mutter möcht' ich dich heissen:
als Siegfried würdest du stark und schön.—
Ich wärmte mit Kleiden
den kleinen Wurm...

SIEGFRIED: Nun melde, wie hiess meine Mutter?

MIME: Das weiss ich wahrlich kaum!—
Speise und Trank
trug ich dir zu...

SIEGFRIED: Den Namen sollst du mir nennen!

MIME: Entfiel er mir wohl? doch halt!
Sieglinde mochte sie heissen, die dich in Sorge mir gab.—
Ich hütete dich
wie die eig'ne Haut...

SIEGFRIED: Dann frag' ich, wie hiess mein Vater?

MIME: (barsch). Den hab' ich nie geseh'n.

SIEGFRIED: Doch die Mutter nannte den Namen?

MIME: Erschlagen sei er, das sagte sie nur;
dich Vaterlosen
befahl sie mir da:—
"und wie du erwuchsest,
wartet' ich dein'
dein Lager schuf ich,
dass leicht du schlief'st. . ."

SIEGFRIED: Still mit dem alten Staarenlied!— Soll ich der Kunde glauben, hast du mir nichts gelogen,
so lass mich nun Zeichen seh'n!

MIME: Was soll dir's noch bezeugen?

guarded your life.
My love is preciously paid!
Did I look for tender return?
A poor woman lay wailing once in woodland wild:
I helped her home to this hole,
and gave my hearth for a haven.
Of child proved she in labor;
pining she bore it here;
deep anguish harried her,
I helped her as best I could.
Baleful her lot,—she died,
but Siegfried saw the light.

SIEGFRIED: (who has seated himself). So my mother died then?

MIME: To my charge she confided you;
I willingly cherished the babe.
What work for Mime you made.
What woes the poor wight has endured!
I kindly reared a querulous brat.

SIEGFRIED: It seems you have said that before. Now say, who named me Siegfried?

MIME: Presently your mother said
I must name you:
you grew as Siegfried staunch and strong.—
I wrapped in warm linen
the little wretch . . .

SIEGFRIED: Now, Mime, what name bore my mother?

MIME: I scarcely know.—
I found water and food for you . . .

SIEGFRIED: Her title instantly tell me!

MIME: It is forgot!—Yet hold!
Sieglinde certainly is the name of she who gave you sadly to me.—
I looked upon you
as my very life . . .

SIEGFRIED: Now tell me my father's title.

MIME: (harshly). I never saw his face.

SIEGFRIED: But my mother has mentioned his name?

MIME: She said that someone slew him, and no more;
fatherless
she confided you to me.—
"And when you waxed
I waited on you,
in care for your slumber
you, couch made soft . . . . "

SIEGFRIED: Stint with that endless starling note!— Shall I believe your tidings, and not think you a liar, then let me see a sign.

MIME: How shall I then assure you?

SIEGFRIED: Dir glaub' ich nicht mit dem Ohr', dir glaub' ich nur mit dem Aug';
welch' Zeichen zeugt für dich?

MIME: (holt nach einigem Besinnen die zwei Stücken eines zerschlagenen Schwertes herbei). Das gab mir deine Mutter:
für Mühe, Kost und Pflege liess sie's als schwachen Lohn.
Sieh' her, ein zerbroch'nes Schwert!
Dein Vater, sagte sie, führt' es, als im letzten Kampf er erlag.

SIEGFRIED: Und diese Stücken sollst du mir schmieden:
dann schwing' ich mein rechtes Schwert!
Eile dich, Mime,
mühe dich rasch;
kannst du 'was Recht's.
nun zieg' deine Kunst!
Täusche mich nicht
mit schlechtem Tand:
den Trümmern allein tau' ich 'was zu.
Find' ich dich faul, füg'st du sie schlecht, flick'st du mit Flausen den festen Stahl,— dir Feigem fahr' ich zu Leib, das Fegen lernst du von mir!
Denn heute noch, schwör' ich,
will ich das Schwert;
die Waffe gewinn' ich noch heut'.

MIME: (erschrocken). Was willst du noch heut' mit dem Schwert?

SIEGFRIED: Aus dem Wald fort in die Welt zieh'n:
nimmer kehr' ich zurück.
Wie ich froh bin,
dass ich frei ward,
nichts mich bindet und zwingt!
Mein Vater bist du nicht;
in der Ferne bin ich heim;
dein Herd ist nicht mein Haus, meine Decke nicht dein Dach.
Wie der Fisch froh in der Fluth schwimmt, wie der Fink frei sich davon schwingt flieg' ich von hier, fluthe davon, wie der Wind über'n Wald weh' ich dahin—
dich, Mime, nie wieder zu seh'n!
(Er stürmt in den Wald fort.)

MIME: (in höchster Angst). Halte! halte! wohin?
(Er ruft mit der grössten Anstrengung in den Wald.)
He! Siegfried!
Siegfried! He!—
Da stürmt er hin!—
Nun sitz' ich da:—
zur alten Noth hab' ich die neue!
vernagelt bin ich nun ganz!—
Wie helf' ich mir jetzt?
Wie halt' ich ihn fest?
Wie führ' ich den Huien zu Fafner's Nest?— Wie füg' ich die Stücken des tückischen Stahl's?
Keines Ofens Gluth
glüht mir die ächten!
keines Zwergen Hammer
zwingt mir die harten;
des Niblungen Neid, Noth und Schweiss
nietet mir Nothung nicht, schweisst mir das Schwert nicht zu ganz!—
(Er knickt verzweifelnd auf dem Schemel hinter dem Ambos zusammen.)

(Der Wanderer (Wotan) tritt aus dem Wald an das hintere Thor der Höhle heran.— Er trägt einen dunkelblauen langen Mantel; einen Speer führt er als Stab. Auf dem Haupte hat er einen grossen Hut mit breiter runder Krämpe, die über das fehlende eine Auge tief hereinhängt.)

WANDERER: Heil dir, weiser Schmied!
Dem wegmüden Gast gönne hold des Hauses Herd!

MIME: (ist erschrocken aufgefahren). Wer ist's, der im wilden Wald mich sucht?
Wer verfolgt mich im öden Forst?

WANDERER: Wand'rer heisst mich die Welt.
weit wandert' ich schon,
auf der Erde Rücken
rührt' ich mich viel.

MIME: So rühre dich fort und raste nicht hier, heisst dich Wand'rer die Welt.

WANDERER: Gastlich ruht' ich bei Guten, Gaben gönnten mir viele:
denn Unheil fürchtet, wer unhold ist.

MIME: Unheil wohnte
immer bei mir:
willst du dem Armen es mehren?

WANDERER: (weiter hereintretend). Viel erforscht' ich, erkannte viel:
Wichtiges konnt' ich manchem künden, manchem wehren was ihn mühte, nagende Herzens Noth.

MIME: Spürtest du klug
und erspähtest viel, hier brauch' ich nicht Spürer noch Spähe!
Einsam will ich und einzeln sein,
Lungerern lass' ich den Lauf.

WANDERER: (wieder einige Schritte näher schreitend). Mancher wähnte weise zu sein, nur was ihm noth that wusst' er nicht;

SIEGFRIED: I trust you not with my ears,
I trust in but my eyes:
what witness will you bring?

MIME: (after some hesitation, brings forward the two pieces of a broken sword). I had this of yours mother's for menage, toil and trouble, was it my scant reward.
See here, but a broken sword!
She said your father had swung it at the fight in which he was felled.

SIEGFRIED: And you shall forge now for me the fragments;
I'll find so my right defense!
Up! arm yourself, Mime!
Move and be brisk!
Can you be brave?
Then show me your craft!
Playthings no more on me impose:
these pieces alone promise to serve.
If you should fail,
forge it poorly, find I a flaw
in the faultless steel, you, fumbler, finely I'll beat;— you'll feel the burnish yourself!
This day will I surely wield my own sword;
I'll win this weapon at once.

MIME: (frightened). What would you do with the sword?

SIEGFRIED: In the wide world
I will wander, never more to return.
What a full joy to have freedom!
nothing anchors me here.
You're not my father.—
I shall find another home!
Your hearth is not my house, never I'll rest beneath your roof.
As the fish gladly through the flood shoots, as the flinch flies
to a free shore;
far from here I flee,
flow like a stream;
with the wind over the woods wafting away,— then, Mime, I'll never return!
(He rushes away into the woods.)

MIME: (in great alarm). Halt there! halt there! what ho!
(He calls with his utmost strength toward the wood.) Ho! Siegfried!
Siegfried! Ho!
He hurls away,
and here I sit.—
To old distress comes added trouble;
I am completely entangled.—
What help can I find
How can I handle him best?
How shall I force him to hasten to Fafner's nest?
How forge me these worthless pieces of stubbornest steel?
For no furnace heat helps me to fuse them, no kobold's hammer
conquers their hardness,
By Niblung's annoy, need and sweat,
"Needful" can never be knit;
Mime cannot mend the sword.
(He crouches down despairingly on his stool behind the anvil.)

(The Wanderer (Wotan) advances from the wood to the back entrance of the cave. He wears a long, dark blue cloak, and bears a spear as a staff. On his head is a large hat with a broad, round brim hanging low over his missing eye.)

WANDERER: Hail, wisest smith!
To way-wearied guest grant as host your house and hearth.

MIME: (starting up in terror). By whom am I sought in this woodland wild?
Who has tracked me to this retreat?

WANDERER: "Wanderer" calls me the world:
I've made wide wanderings;
I roam at my will all the earth around.

MIME: Then roam on your way and rest not here, or you were no Wanderer.

WANDERER: Good men render me a greeting, gifts they grant to me as well;
forever misers have evil ends.

MIME: Evil weighs forever on me;
Would you augment my anger?

WANDERER: (advancing closer).
I've mastered much and treasured much;
I've told wondrous tales to men, from many warded what dismayed them,— torturing heart's distress.

MIME: You spy well,
and you spoke truth,
I want neither a spy nor a word smith!
Solitary
I seek to bide.
I leave loungers to their own devices.

WANDERER: (again approaching a few steps nearer). Men have believed their wisdom was great, but what should boot them was not their brains.

was ihm frommte,
liess ich erfragen;
lohnend lehrt' ihn mein Wort.

MIME: (immer ängstlicher, da der Wanderer sich nähert). Müss'ges Wissen wahren manche:
ich weiss mir grade genug;
mir genugt mein Witz,
ich will nicht mehr:
dir Weisem weis' ich den Weg!

WANDERER: (setzt sich am Herde nieder). Hier sitz' ich am Herd, und setze mein Haupt der Wissens-Wette zum Pfand:
mein Kopf ist dein,
du hast ihn erkies't, erfrägst du dir nicht was dir frommt, lös' ich's mit Lehren nicht ein.

MIME: (erschrocken und befangen, für sich). Wie werd' ich den Lauernden los?
Verfänglich muss ich ihn fragen.—
(Laut.) Dein Haupt pfänd' ich für den Herd:
nun sorg', es sinnig zu lösen!
Drei der Fragen
stell' ich mir frei.

WANDERER: Dreimal muss ich's treffen.

MIME: (nach einigem Nachsinnen). Du rührtest dich viel
auf der Erde Rücken, die Welt durchwandert'st du weit:
nun sage mir schlau,
welches Geschlecht
tagt in der Erde Tiefe?

WANDERER: In der Erde Tiefe tagen die Nibelungen: Nibelheim ist ihr Land.
Schwarzalben sind sie;
Schwarz-Alberich
hütet' als Herrscher sie einst:
eines Zauberringes zwingende Kraft zähmt' ihm das fleissige Volk.
Reicher Schätze schimmernden Hort häuften sie ihm:
der sollte die Welt ihm gewinnen.—
Zum zweiten was frägst du Zwerg?

MIME: (in tieferes Sinnen gerathend). Viel, Wanderer, weisst du mir
aus der Erde Nabelnest:—
nun sage mir schlicht,
welches Geschlecht
ruht auf der Erde Rücken?

WANDERER: Auf der Erde Rücken wuchtet der Riesen Geschiecht: Riesenheim ist ihr Land.
Fasolt und Fafner,
der Rauhen Fürsten, neideten Nibelung's Macht;
den gewaltigen Hort gewannen sie sich,

What was good straightaway I gave them; spoke, and strengthened their minds.

MIME: (terrified at the approach of the Wanderer). Many yearn for useless matters;
for me my craft suffices:
I've sufficient wit,
I want no more;
so, wise one, wend on your way.

WANDERER: (seating himself at the hearth). Here gaining your hearth,
I gage my head
as stake in struggle of wits.
My head is yours
It will fall to your hand if vainly you ask my advice,— should I not save it by wit.

MIME: (aside, frightened and perplexed). How shall I be rid of this rogue?
In trial must I entrap him.—
(Aloud).
Staking your head against my hearth,
with care and cunning redeem it.
Three the questions that I require.

WANDERER: Three times I must answer.

MIME: (after some reflection).
Your rovings have led you to earth's far regions, you have wandered widely over worlds:—
now, answer me this,
what is the race
born in the earth's deep bowels?

WANDERER: In the earth's deep bowels burrow the Nibelungs:
Nibelheim is their land.
Black elves are they all;
Black Alberich
guarded and governed them once.
By the mighty spell of a magical ring
There roved the industrious dwarfs.
Endless riches, rarest of hoards
he made them heap, wherewith all the world should be won him.
Propose, dwarf, your second point.

MIME: (in brown study). Wanderer, you saw much
of the earth's most central cells—
Now say to me;
what is the stock
which sojourns on its back?

WANDERER: On its back the giants live, an ungentle stock;
Giantdom is their land.
Fasolt and Fafner,
the jealous people,
envied Alberich's might,
and his wonderful hoard
they won for themselves,

errangen mir ihm den Ring:
um den entbrannte
den Brüdern Streit;
der Fasolt fällte, als wilder Wurm
bütet nun Fafner den Hort.—
Die dritte Frage nun droht.

MIME: (der ganz in Träumerei entrückt ist). Viel, Wand'rer, weisst du mir
von der Erde rauhem Rücken:—
nun sage mir wahr,
welches Geschlecht
wohnt auf wolkigen Höh'n?

WANDERER: Auf wolkigen Höh'n wohnen die Götter:
Walhall heisst ihr Saal.
Lichtalben sind sie;
Licht-Alberich,
Wotan, waltet der Schaar.
Aus der Welt-Esche weihlichstem Aste schuf er sich einen Schaft:
dorrt der Stamm,
nie verdirbt doch der Speer;
mit seiner Spitze sperrt Wotan die Welt.
Heil'ger Verträge
Treue-Runen
schnitt in den Schaft er ein.
Den Haft der Welt
hält in der Hand,
wer den Speer führt, den Wotan's Faust umspannt.
Ihm neigte sich
der Niblungen Heer; der Riesen Gezücht zähmte sein Rath:
ewig gehorchen sie alle
des Speeres starkem Herrn.
(Er stösst wie unwillkürlich mit dem Speer auf den Boden; ein leiser Donner lässt sich vernehmen, wovon Mime heftig erschrickt.) Nun rede, weiser Zwerg:
wusst' ich der Fragen Rath?
behalte mein Haupt ich frei?

MIME: (is aus seiner träumerischen Versunkenhell aufgefahren, und gebärdet sich nun ängstlich, indem er den Wanderer nicht anzublicken wagt).
Fragen und Haupt
hast du gelös't:
nun, Wand'rer, geh' deines Weg's!

WANDERER: Was zu wissen dir frommt solltest du fragen; Kunde verbürgte mein Kopf.— dass du nun nicht weisst was dir nützt,
dess' fass' ich jetzt deines als Pfand.
Gastlich nicht
galt mir dein Gruss:
mein Haupt gab ich in deine Hand,
um mich des Herdes zu freu'n.
Nach Wettens Pflicht
pfänd' ich nun dich, lösest du drei
der Fragen nicht leicht:
drum frische dir, Mime, den Muth.

and ravished also the ring.
Between the brothers then broke out strife,
and, Fasolt fallen,
as dragon dread
hold now Fafner the hoard.
Now threatens
Your third inquiry.

MIME: (who is quite absorbed in thought). Wanderer,
You saw much
of the earth's far stretching surface.
Now tell me as well
what is the race
guards the sky above?

WANDERER: The sky above guard well the Aesir;
where they dwell is Valhall'.
Light elves of heaven,
Light Alberich,
Wotan, ward their host.
From the World's ash tree's worshipful arm
he shaped himself once a shaft:
true that spear,
though the tree may be spoiled, with such a sceptre
Wotan sways the world.
Holiest treaties'
truthful runes
he wrote all around the shaft.
The head of worlds
he, by whose hand gripped is the spear that Wotan's grasp now spans.
There kneels to him
the Niblung host;
the giants must bow,
by him enjoined:
all must allegiance owe him,
the spear's resistless lord.
(He rests his spear, as if accidentally, on the ground; a slight peal of thunder is heard. Mime terrified.)
Now tell me, sapient dwarf, have I spoken the answers true?
My head do I hold my own?

MIME: (who has recovered from his dreamy brooding, now shows renewed fear and dares not look at the Wanderer).
You have redeemed questions and head:
now, Wanderer, go on your way.

WANDERER: What your welfare concerns you should have sought before holding my head in pledge.
Since you have not believed in what is good,
we'll gamble with your head as security.
You begrudged your guest greeting
I gave my head into your hands,
that of your hearth I might be free;
so now
yours is placed in pledge, can you not thrice declare my riddles.
Make resolute, Mime, your mind.

MIME: (schüchtern und in furchtsamer Ergebung). Lang' schon mied ich mein Heimathland, lang' schon schied ich aus der Mutter Schoss;
mir leuchtete Wotan's Auge, zur Höhle lugt' es herein:
vor ihm magert
mein Mutterwitz.
Doch frommt mir's nun weise zu
sein
Wand'rer, frage denn zu!
Vielleicht glückt mir's gezwungen zu lösen des Zwergen Haupt.

WANDERER: Nun, ehrlicher Zwerg,
sag, mir zum ersten:
welches ist das Geschlecht, dem Wotan schlimm sich zeigt, und das doch das liebste ihm lebt?

MIME: Wenig hört' ich von Heldensippen:
der Frage doch mach' ich mich frei.
Die Wälsungen sind
das Wunschgeschlecht, das Wotan zeugte
und zärtlich liebt, zeigt er auch Ungunst ihm.
Siegmund und Sieglind' stammten von Wälse, ein wild-verzweifeltes Zwillingspaar:
Siegfried zeugten sie selbst, den stärksten Wälsungenspross.
Behalt' ich, Wanderer, zum ersten mein Haupt?

WANDERER: Wie doch genau das Geschlecht du mir nennst:
schlau eracht' ich dich Argen!
Der ersten Frage ward'st du frei:
zum zweiten nun sag' mir,
Zwerg:—
Ein weiser Niblung wahret Siegfried:
Fafner'n soll er ihm fällen,
dass er den Ring erränge, des Hortes Herrscher zu sein.
Welches Schwert
muss nun Siegfried schwingen.
taug' es zu Fafner's Tod?

MIME: (seine gegenwärtige Lage immer mehr vergessend, und von dem Gegenstande lebhaft angezogen). Nothung heisst ein neidliches Schwert;
in einer Esche Stamm
stiess es Wotan:
dem sollt' es geziemen,
der aus dein Stamm' es zög'.
Der stärksten Helden keiner bestand's:
Siegmund, der Kühne, konnt's allein;
fechtend führt' er's im Streit, bis an Wotan's Speer es zersprang.
Nun verwahrt die Stücken ein weiser Schmied;
denn er weiss, dass allein mit dem Wotansschwert ein kühnes dummes Kind, Siegfried, den Wurm versehrt.

MIME: (shyly, and with cowed submission). Long I've quitted my native land, long I've issued from my mother earth;
the eye-glance of Wotan cows me,
he peered into my cave;
his gaze melts all my mother wit.
But quick must my wisdom be now.—
Wanderer, question away!
Likewise may I redeem myself, deliver the dwarf's poor head.

WANDERER: Now, amiable dwarf, first let me ask you:
what is that noble race that Wotan ruthlessly dealt with,
and which yet he deems most dear?

MIME: Of your heroes
I hear little;
yet certainly this I can solve.
The Volsungs are they,
the valued race that Wotan fathered and fondly loved,
though he withdrew favor.
Siegmund and Sieglind'
sprang from the Volsung, a very turbulent
twin-born pair;
Siegfried too is their son,
the stoutest Volsung ever shaped.
My head then, Wanderer, this time do I hold?

WANDERER: Yes, you rightly declared me the race:
clearly you've proven your prowess!
You've quit the primal question so, secondly hear and say.— A wily Niblung wards Siegfried,— fated slayer of Fafner, that he may ravish the rings and hold the hoard for himself.
But what sword must Siegfried then strike with, dealing Fafner death?

MIME: (forgetting his present position in his eager interest in the subject). "Needful" is the name of the sword;
It was struck by Wotan in an ash tree's stem:
he whose hand could snatch it out solely might own it.
By strongest heroes was it not stirred; Siegmund, the warlike;
won the prize:
well he wore it in strife,
till by Wotan's spear it was split.
Now, a subtle smith
preserves the shreds, for he knows with no other than Wotan's sword that bold and foolish boy, Siegfried, will slay the worm.

(Ganz vergnügt.)
Behalt' ich Zwerg auch zweitens mein Haupt?

WANDERER: Der witzigste bist du unter den Weisen:
wer käm' dir an Klugheit gleich?
Doch bist du so klug, den kindischen Helden für Zwergen-Zwecke zu nützen: mit der dritten Frage droh' ich nun!—
sag' mir, du weiser Waffenschmied,
wer wird aus den starken Stücken Nothung, das Schwert, wohl schweissen.

MIME: (fährt im höchsten Schrecken auf). Die Stücken!
Schwert!
O weh! mir schwindelt!—
Was fang' ich an?
Was fällt mir ein?
Verfluchter Stahl,
dass ich dich gestohlen!
Er hat mich vernagelt in Pein und Noth;
mir bleibt er hart,
ich kann ihn nicht hämmern:
Niet' und Löthe
lässt mich im Stich!
Der weiseste Schmied weiss sich nicht Rath:
wer schweisst nun das Schwert, schaff' ich es nicht?
Das Wunder, wie soll ich's wissen?

WANDERER: (ist vom Herd aufgestanden). Dreimal solltest du fragen, dreimal stand ich dir frei:
nach eitlen Fernen forschtest du;
doch was zunächst sich dir fand, was dir nützt, fiel dir nicht ein.
Nun ich's errathe, wirst du verrückt:
gewonnen hab' ich das witzige Haupt.— Jetzt, Fafner's kühner Bezwinger, hör' verfallener Zworg:—
nur wer das Fürchten
nie erfuhr,
schmiedet Nothung neu.
(Mime starrt ihn gross an: er wendet sich zum Fersgange.) Dein weises Haupt
wahre von heut':
verfallen—lass' ich's dem,
der das Fürchten nicht gelernt.
(Er lacht und geht in den Wald.)

MIME: (ist, wie vernichtet, auf den Schemel hinter den Ambos zurückgesunken: er stiert, grad' vor sich aus, in den sonnig beleuchteten Wald hinein.— Nach längerem Schweigen geräth er in heftiges Zittern). Verfluchtes Licht!
Was flammt dort die Luft?
Was flackert und lackert, was flimmert und schwirrt, was schwebt dort und webt und wabert umher?

(Quite pleased).
Thus have I saved
my head a second time.

WANDERER: Surely,
you are the wittiest of wise ones; whose cunning can come near yours?
But since you have sought this simpleton hero for to make use of Niblung's need, now my third inquiry
threatens you, Say then, you wise
weaponsmith, who will Reestablish "Needful," the sword, from the stubborn splinters?

MIME: (starts up in the greatest terror). The splinters! the sword!
Alas! it escapes me!—
What can I say?
What course pursue?
The cursed steel,
would I never had stolen it!
To be thus entangled in fatal toils!
It is far too hard to yield to my hammer;
flux and solder
serve not to smelt.
The most artful smith is at a loss!
Who shapes the sword
since I cannot?
How may I master this marvel?

WANDERER: (who has risen from the hearth). Three times your questions were asked.
three times I was acquit;
but your queries were quite foreign, for what was near to your heart and your needs, did you not ask.
Now I have found it, wondrous your fright:
Your witty brain
have I won as a prize.
Hear, Fafner's would-be undoer, heed, you fated dwarf:—
none but who has never felt fear
makes "Needful" new.
(Mime stares wildly at him as he turns to depart.)
Your head so wise henceforth guard well!
I leave it to fall to him who has not yet learned fear.
(He turns away, laughing, and disappears in the forest.)

MIME: (paralyzed with terror, sinks back on his stool behind the anvil. He stares for a while before him at the sunlit forest. After a long silence he begins to tremble violently). Accursed light!
How you creep aloft!
What quivers and shivers?
What quickens and sways, what swirls and inflames and flickers around?
All glitters and gleams in the sunlight's glint.

Da glimmert's und glitzt's in der Sonne Gluth: was säuselt und summ't
und saus't nun gar?
Es brummt und braus't und prasselt hierher!
Dort bricht's durch den Wald, will auf mich zu!
Ein grässlicher Rachen reisst sich mir auf!—
Der Wurm will mich fangen!
Fafner! Fafner!
(Er schreit laut auf und knickt hinter dem breiten Ambos zusammen.)

SIEGFRIED: (bricht aus dem Waldgesträuch hervor, und ruft noch von aussen). Heda! Fauler!
bist du nun fertig?
Schnell! wie steht's mit dem Schwert?
(Er ist eingetreten und hält verwundert an.) Wo steckt der Schmied?
Stahl er sich fort?
Hehe! Mime! du Memme!
Wo bist du? wo birg'st du dich?

MIME: (mit schwacher Stimme hinter dem Ambos). Bist du es, Kind?
Kommst du allein?

SIEGFRIED: Hinter dem Ambos?— Sag', was schufest du dort?
schärftest du mir das Schwert?

MIME: (hochst verstört und zerstreut). Das Schwert? das Schwert?
wie möcht' ich's schweissen?—
(Halb für sich.)
"Nur wer das Fürchten
nicht erfuhr,
schmiedet Nothung neu."— Zu weise ward ich für solches Werk!

SIEGFRIED: Wirst du mir reden?
Soll ich dir rathen?

MIME: (wie zuvor). Wo nehm' ich redlichen Rath?—
Mein weises Haupt
hab' ich verwettet:
verfallen, verlor ich's an den,
"der das Fürchten nicht gelernt."

SIEGFRIED: (heftig). Sind mir das Flausen? Willst du mir flieh'n?

MIME: (allmälig sich etwas fassend). Wohl flöh' ich dem, der's Fürchten kennt:—
doch das liess ich dem Kinde zu lehren: Ich Dummer vergass was einzig gut:
Liebe zu mir
sollt' er lernen;—
das gelang nun leider faul!
Wie bring' ich das Fürchten ihm bei?

SIEGFRIED: (packt ihn). He! Muss ich helfen?
Was fegtest du heut'?

MIME: Für dich nur besorgt, versank ich in Sinnen,
wie ich dich Wichtiges wiese.

What hisses and hums and holds my gaze?
It roars and rolls and rumbles toward;— it rends through the wood,— where shall I flee?
Before me I see monstrous jaws!—
The dragon has found me!
Fafner! Fafner!
(He shrieks aloud and cowers down behind the great anvil.)

SIEGFRIED: (breaks from the thicket and calls, still from without). Ho! lazy fellow!
Haven't you finished?
Say now, how goes the sword?
(Enters and pauses in surprise.)
Where hides the smith?
Has he decamped?
Ho, ho! Mime, you mooncalf!
Do you hear me? where have you hidden?

MIME: (with feeble voice, from behind the anvil). Is it you, boy?
Are you alone?

SIEGFRIED: Under the anvil!
Say, what do you see down there?
Is my sword sharpened yet?

MIME: (greatly disturbed and confused). The sword? The sword?
How can I shape it?—
(Half aside.)
"None but who has never felt Fear makes 'Needful' new."
Too wise my wits are for such a work.

SIEGFRIED: Will you not tell me?
Or must I teach you?

MIME: (as before). Where shall I hope for help?
I held my wily head
in wager;
I've lost it; it is forfeited to him
"who has not yet learned to fear."

SIEGFRIED: (violently). Still do you flout me?
Would you then fly?

MIME: (gradually recovering himself). I'd fly from him who had known fear:
but that truly I never have taught him.
I, fool-like, forgot the one good thing:
love towards me was my lesson;—
but, alas! I lost my work.
What force can awake in him fear?

SIEGFRIED: (seizing him). Ho!
must I help you?
What whim's in your head?

MIME: Alone for your sake
I sank in absorption.
Would I could weightily warn you!

SIEGFRIED: (lachend). Bis unter den Sitz warst du versunken:
was Wichtiges fandest du da?

MIME: (sich immer mehr erholend). Das Fürchten lernt' ich für dich, dass ich's dich Dummen lehre.

SIEGFRIED: Was ist's mit dem Fürchten?

MIME: Erfuhr'st du's noch nie, und willst aus dem Wald fort in die Welt
Was frommte das festeste Schwert blieb dir das Fürchten fern?

SIEGFRIED: (ungeduldig). Faulen Rath erfindest du wohl?

MIME: Deiner Mutter Rath
redet aus mir:
was ich gelobt'
muss ich nun lösen,
in die listige Welt
dich nicht zu lassen,
eh' du nicht das Fürchten gelernt.

SIEGFRIED: Ist's eine Kunst, was kenn' ich sie nicht?—
Heraus! Was ist's mit dem Fürchten?

MIME: (immer belebter). Fühltest du nie im finstern Wald, bei Dämmerschein am dunklen Ort, wenn fern es säuselt,
summs't und saus't, wildes Brummen
näher braus't, wirres Flackern
um dich flimmert, schwellend Schwirren zu Leib' dir schwebt,— fühltest du dann nicht grieselnd Grausen die Glieder dir fah'n?
Glühender Schauer
schüttelt die Glieder wirr verschwimmend schwinden die Sinne, in der Brust bebend und bang berstet hämmernd das Herz?— Fühltest du das noch nicht, das Fürchten blieb dir dann fremd.

SIEGFRIED: Sonderlich seltsam muss das sein!
Hart und fest,
fühl' ich, steht mir das Herz.
Das Grieseln und Grausen, Glühen und Schauern, Hitzen und Schwindeln, Hämmern und Beben—gern begehr' ich das Bangen, sehnend verlangt mich's der Lust.—
Doch wie bringst du,
Mime mir's bei?
Wie wär'st du Memme mir Meister?

SIEGFRIED: (laughing). No, under the seat well were you sinking;
what weighty affairs took you there?

MIME: (with still more selfpossession). With fear I trembled for you that I the thing might teach you.

SIEGFRIED: What do you mean by fearing?

MIME: You never felt it, yet will go forth to the world from this world?
How fruitless the firmest of swords
if fear is far from you.

SIEGFRIED: (impatiently).
You're feeding me with foolish talk.

MIME: It is your mother's counsel
read by me:
I must be loyal to what she left me;—
to the lures of the world
I never should leave you till you had learned to duly fear.

SIEGFRIED: If it is an art
why am I untaught?
What is it, this fearing?

MIME: (with increasing animation). You never felt in forest dark, at twilight hour
in gloomy spots, when with a rustle,
rush and roar fearful hurling toward you howls, dazzling flickers flutter around you, swelling surges
swoop toward you,
you felt then, no grisly gruesomeness grow over your fancy?
Baleful shudders shake your whole body, all your senses
sink and forsake you, bursting and big in your breast beat your hammering heart?—
you know nothing of this,
you have not yet found fear.

SIEGFRIED: Strange and right singular that must seem!
The strings of my heart feel hard and firm,
This grimness and growling, this glowing and shaking,
this burning and shivering, beating and quaking,— well I wish to acquire them, how for such a pastime I pant!
But how bring it,
Mime, about?
What means could make you my master?

MIME: Folge mir nur, ich führe dich wohl;
sinnend fand ich's aus.
Ich weiss einen schlimmen Wurm, der würgt' und schland schon viel:
Fafner lehrt dich das Fürchten, folgst du mir zu seinem Nest.

SIEGFRIED: Wo liegt er im Nest?

MIME: Neid-Höhle
wird es genannt:
im Ost, am Ende des Wald's.

SIEGFRIED: Dann wär's nicht weit von der Welt?

MIME: Bei Neidhöhl' liegt sie ganz
nah'.

SIEGFRIED: Dahin denn sollst du mich führen:
lernt' ich das Fürchten,
dann fort in die Welt!
Drum schnell schaffe das Schwert, in der Welt will ich es schwingen.

MIME: Das Schwert? O Noth!

SIEGFRIED: Rasch in die Schmiede!
Weis' was du schuf'st.

MIME: Verfluchter Stahl:
Zu flicken vorsteh' ich ihn nicht!
Den zähen Zauber bezwingt keines Zwergen Kraft.
Wer das Fürchten nicht kennt, der fänd' wohl eher die Kunst.

SIEGFRIED: Feine Finten
weiss mir der Faule;
dass er ein Stümper
sollt' er gesteh'n:
nun lügt er sich listig heraus.—
Her mit den Stücken!
Fort mit dem Stümper!
Des Vaters Stahl
fügt sich wohl mir:
ich selbst schweisse das Schwert!
(Er macht sich rasch an die Arbeit.)

MIME: Hättest du fleissig die Kunst gepflegt, Jetzt käm' dir's wahrlich zu gut;
doch lässig warst du stets in der Lehre:
was willst du nun Rechtes rüsten!

SIEGFRIED: Was der Meister nicht kann, vermöcht' es der Knabe, hätt' er ihm immer gehorcht?—
Jetzt mach' dich fort,
misch' dich nicht d'rein:
sonst fällst du mir mit in's Feuer!

(Er hat eine grosse Menge Kohlen auf dem Herd gehäuft, und unterhält in einem fort die Gluth, während er die Schwertstücke in den Schraubstock einspannt und sie zu Spähnen zerfeilt.)

MIME: (indem er ihm zusieht).
Was machst du da?
Nimm doch die Löthe:
den Brei braut' ich schon längst.

SIEGFRIED: Fort mit dem Brei!
ich brauch' ihn nicht:
mit Bappe back' ich kein Schwert!

MIME: Follow me well,
I'll find you a way;
thinking, fell I upon it.
I know of a monstrous Worm, who's wasted many folk;
You'll learn fear from Fafner, follow me to his hole.

SIEGFRIED: Where does his hole lie?

MIME: Hate-cavern,
well is it known;
to east, at end of the wood.

SIEGFRIED: And would the world be that way?

MIME: To Hate-cavern it lies close at hand.

SIEGFRIED: Toward it then, let me follow, learn about fearing,
and forth to the world!
Then swift! shape the sword!
In the world would I assay it.

MIME: The sword? o sorrow!

SIEGFRIED: Quick to your smithy!
What can you show?

MIME: Accursed steel!
I cannot restore it again!
Such mighty magic's too much for poor Mime's force.
One who knows not fear the knack might quickly find.

SIEGFRIED: Famous falsehoods, sluggard, you're framing:
You must admit that you're a muddler, not seek to dissemble with lies.— Bring me the bits here!
Fly, you old bungler!
My father's blade
fails not with me:
I'll soon shape it myself!
(He quickly prepares for work.)

MIME: Had you been careful to master the craft, now might your work be of use:
You were too lazy ever to learn;
how will you best set about it?

SIEGFRIED: Where the master was balked,
what more could the boy do, who to his counsel gave heed?—
So move afar, meddle not here,
for fear you be made to fuel!

(He has heaped a mass of coal on the fire and blown well up; now, fixing the sword pieces in a vice, he commences to file them to powder.)

MIME: (looking on at his proceedings). What are you about?
Take but the solder;
the flux fused for you, see!

SIEGFRIED: Out on your flux!
it will fit me nothing.
Such filth will forge me no sword!

MIME: Du zerfeil'st die Feile, zerreib'st die Raspel:
wie willst du den Stahl zerstampfen?

SIEGFRIED: Zersponnen muss ich in Spähne ihn seh'n:
was entzwei ist, zwing' ich mir so.

MIME: (während Siegfried eifrig fortfeilt). Hier hilft Kein Kluger, das seh' ich klar:
hier hilft dem Dummen die Dummheit selbst!
Wie er sich müht
und mächtig regt:
ihm schwindet der Stahl, doch wird ihm nicht schwül!— Nun ward ich so alt wie Höhl' und Wald, und hab' nicht so 'was geseh'n!
Mit dem Schwert gelingt's, das lern' ich wohl:
furchtlos fegt er's zu ganz,— der Wand'rer wusst' es gut!—
Wie berg' ich nun mein banges Haupt?
Dem kühnen Knaben verfiel's, lehrt' ihn nicht Fafner die Furcht.—
Doch weh' mir Armen!
Wie würgt' er den Wurm, erführ' er das Fürchten von ihm?
Wie erräng' er mir den Ring?
Verfluchte Klemme!
Da klebt' ich fest,
fänd' ich nicht klugen Rath, wie den Furchtlosen selbst ich bezwäng'.—

SIEGFRIED: (hat nun die Stücken zerfeilt und in einem Schmelztigel gefangen, den er jetzt in die Herdgluth stellt: unter dem Folgenden nährt er die Gluth mit dem Blasebalg). He, Mime, geschwind:
wie heisst das Schwert, das ich in Spähne zersponnen?

MIME: (aus seinen Gedanken auffahrend). Nothung nennt sich das neidliche Schwert:
deine Mutter gab mir die Märe.

SIEGFRIED: (zu der Arbeit). Nothung! Nothung!
neidliches Schwert!
was musstest du zerspringen?
Zu Spreu nun schuf ich die scharfe Pracht, im Tigel brat' ich die Spähne!
Hoho! hoho!
hahei! hahei!
Blase, Balg!
blase die Gluth!—
Wild im Walde wuchs ein Baum, den hab' im Forst gefällt;
die braune Esche
brannt' ich zu Kohl', auf dem Herd nun liegt sie gehäuft.
Hoho! hoho!
hahei! hahei!
Blase, Balg!
blase die Gluth!—

MIME: But the file is failing,
the rasp is ruined:
why do you destroy your steel so?

SIEGFRIED: I'd see each fiber and splinter in shreds:
what is marred were mended but
so.

MIME: (while Siegfried diligently files away). Here helps no cunning, to me it is clear:
here speeds the dullard
by dullness alone!
Look how he works with mighty will!
The steel is dissolved,
yet is he not strained.—
though I am old as this cave or wood such wondrous sight never I've seen!
He'll achieve the work,
I know full well:
fearless, fashion the sword,
as well the Wanderer saw.— Where shall I hide
my shrinking head?
For by this boy it must fall, if he learns no fear of Fafner—
But woe's me, luckless!
Who'll waste me the worm
if terror it teaches to him?
And the ring how shall I reach?
Cursed dilemma!
It locks me close,
no light comes to me, how to cozen this bold-hearted boy!

SIEGFRIED: (has reduced the sword to powder and put it in a crucible which he now places in the forge. During the following he blows up the fire with the bellows). Hey! Mime! Now say, how should the sword that I have filed into fibers be named?

MIME: (starting out of a reverie).
"Needful" named is the notable sword;
so your mother stated to me.

SIEGFRIED: (over his work).
Needful! Needful!
Notable sword!
Why were you thus dissevered?
I've shattered
your shining blade to shreds, the pot shall melt now the slivers!
Oho! Oho!
Aha! Aha!
Bellows blow!
brighten the glow!—
A tree waved wild in woodlands which I felled in the forest.
the brown-hued ash
I baked into coal,
It lies now on the hearth in heaps.
Oho! Oho!
Aha! Aha!
Bellows blow!
brighten the glow!—
The branches' fragments,

Des Baumes Kohle,
wie brennt sie kühn,
wie glüht sie hell und hehr!
In springenden Funken sprüht sie auf,
schmilzt mir des Stahles Spreu.
Hoho! hoho!
hahei! hahei!
Blase, Balg!
blase die Gluth!—
Nothung! Nothung!
neidliches Schwert!
schon schmilzt deines Stahles Spreu:
im eig'nen Schweisse schwimmst du nun—
bald schwing' ich dich als mein Schwert!

MIME: (während der Absätze von Siegfried's Lied immer für sich, entfernt sitzend). Er schmiedet das Schwert, und Fafner fällt er:
das seh' ich nun sicher voraus;
Hort und Ring
erringt er im Harst:—
wie erwerb, ich mir den Gewinn?
Mit Witz und List
erlang' ich Beides, und berge heil mein Haupt.
Rang er sich müd' mit dem Wurm, von der Müh' erlab' ihn ein Trank;
aus würz' gen Säften,
die ich gesammelt,
brau' ich den Trank für ihn;
wenig Tropfen nur braucht er zu trinken, sinnlos sinkt er in Schlaf:
mit der eig'nen Waffe,
die er sich gewonnen,
räum' ich ihn leicht aus dem Weg,
erlange mir Ring und Hort.
Hei! Weiser Wand'rer, dünkt' ech dich dumm,
wie gefällt dir nun
mein feiner Witz?
Fand ich mir wohl
Rath und Ruh'?
(Er springt vergnügt auf, holt Gefässe herbei und schüttet aus ihnen Gewürz in einen Topf.)

SIEGFRIED: (hat den geschmolzenen Stahl in eine Stangenform gegossen, und diese in das Wasser gesteckt man hört jetzt das laute Gezisch der Kühlung). In das Wasser floss ein Feuerfluss:
grimmiger Zorn zischt' ihm da auf;
frierend zähmt' ihm der Frost.
Wie sehrend er floss,
in des Wassers Fluth fliesst er nicht mehr:
starr ward er und steif,
herrisch der harte Stahl:
heisses Blut doch fliesst ihm bald!—
Nun schwitze noch einmal, dass ich dich schweisse, Nothung, neidliches Schwert!
(Er stösst den Stahl in die Kohlen und glüht ihn. Dann wendet er sich zu Mime, der vom anderen how bravely they flame!

Their glow how fierce and fair!
They spring in the air with scattering sparks and smelt me the steely shreds.
Oho! Oho!
Aha! Aha!
Bellows blow!
brighten the glow!—
Needful! Needful!
notable sword!
I've smelted your steely shreds.
In your own sweat
you swim now;—
I soon shall call you my sword!

MIME: (during the last verse of Siegfried's song continues his own reflections aside). He'll smithy the sword and fell Fafner;
I see it is as settled as fate.
Store and ring
he'll snatch away in the strife:—
in what way can I win the prize?
By wit and craft
I'll win it surely,
and save perhaps my head.
Wearied in fight with the worm, in his faintness willingly he will drink
From potent simples
by me assorted.
I will prepare a draught, but one drop need he drink of,
senseless, he'll sink to sleep.
With the very weapon
he valiantly welds there he shall be razed from my way;
the ring and the hoard I'll have.
Hey! wisest Wanderer,
Was I deemed dull?
How do you like now my lusty wit?
Do I lack still a rightful answer?
(He springs up in glee, fetches vessels and pours decoctions from them into a pot.)

SIEGFRIED: (has poured the molten steel into a mold and plunged this into water, and the loud hiss of its cooling is heard). To the water flowed a fiery flood;
anger and hate
hissed from the depths, its head was cowed by the cold.
Though scorching it struck in the watery stream, it stirs no more;
it lies stiff and stark,
haughty and hard the steel.
Chances are, in blood
it soon will bathe!—
Now sweat once again,
that so I may shape you,
Needful, notable sword!
(He thrusts the sword into the coals and heats it. Then he turns to Mime, who at the other end of the hearth has carefully put his Ende des Herdes her einen Topf an den Rand der Gluth setzt.)

Was schafft der Tölpel dort mit dem Topf?
Brenn' ich hier Stahl, brau'st du dort Sudel?

MIME: Zu Schanden kam ein Schmied, den Lehrer sein Knabe lehrt;
mit der Kunst ist's beim Alten aus, als Koch dient er dem Kinde:
brennt es das Eisen zu Brei, aus Eiern brau't
der Alte ihm Sud.
(Er fährt fort zu kochen.)

SIEGFRIED: (immer während der Arbeit). Mime, der Künstler, lernt nun Kochen;
das Schmieden schmeckt ihm nicht mehr:
seine Schwerter alle
hab' ich zerschmissen;
was er kocht, ich kost' es ihm nicht.
Das Fürchten zu lernen will er mich führen;
ein Ferner soll es mich lehren:
was am besten er kann,
mir bringt er's nicht bei;
als Stümper besteht er in allem!
(Er hat den rothglühenden Stahl hervorgezogen, und hämmert ihn nun, während des folgenden Liedes mit dem grossen Schmiedehammer auf dem Ambos.)
Hoho! hahei! hoho!
Schmiede, mein Hammer
ein hartes Schwert!
Hoho! hahei!
hahei! hoho!
Hahei! hoho! hahei!
Einst färbte Blut
dein falbes Blau;
sein rothes Rieseln röthete dich:
kalt lachtest du da,
das warme lecktest du kühl!
Hahahei! hahahei!
hahahei! hei! hei!
Hoho! hoho! hoho!
Nun hat die Gluth
dich roth geglüht:
deine weiche Härte dem Hammer weicht:
zornig sprüh'st du mir Funken.
dass ich dich Spröden gezähmt.
Heiaho! heiaho:
heiaho! ho! ho!
Hoho! hoho! hahei!
Hoho! hahei! hoho!
Schmiede, mein Hammer.
ein hartes Schwert!
Hoho! hahei!
hahei! hoho!
Hahei! hoho! hahei!
Der frohen Funken,
wie freu' ich mich!
Es ziert den Kühnen des Zornes Kraft:
lustig lach'st du mich an,
stellst du auch grimm dich und gram Hahahei! hahahei!
hahahei! hei! hei!
Hoho! hoho! hoho!
Durch Gluth und Hammer

pipkin on the fire.)
What is that patch
about with his pot?
While I burn steel would you brew sauces?

MIME: The smith has come to shame,
the pupil proves his conqueror;
all the craftman's art is over,
he has become your cook.
Burn then iron to broth, while I will brew
my eggs into soup.
(Goes on cooking.)

SIEGFRIED: (still over his work). Mime the craftsman now learns cooking;
the smithy serves him no more all the swords he made I shattered and shivered;
what he cooks I care not to taste.
To fear he will teach me
if I but follow;
far away there dwells a tutor.
But the best he can do will not bring it about;
a fool have I found him in all things.
(He has taken out the red-hot steel and proceeds to hammer it on the anvil with a great smith's hammer, during the following song.)
Oho! Oho! Oho!
Shape me, my hammer,
a hardy sword!
Oho! Aha!
Aha! Oho!
Aha! Oho! Aha!
Your steely blue once streamed with blood;
its ruddy ripples
reddened your sides;
cold laughter was yours,
the warm stream licking to cool!
Heiha! Heiha!
Heiha! Ha! Ha!
Oho! Oho! Oho!
Now in the glow
you redly gleam;
your weakness heeds
my hammer's weight:
you scatter testy sparks,
that I have tamed your spirit!
Heiho! Heiho!
Heiho! Ho! Ho!
Oho! Oho! Aha!
Oho! Aha! Oho!
Shape me, my hammer,
a hardy sword!
Oho! Aha!
Aha! Oho!
Aha! Oho! Aha!
These springing sparks,
what a sport to see!
In rage the brave are arrayed the best;
you laugh on me,
yet can be grisly and grim!
Heiha! Heiha!
Heiha! Ha! Ha!
Oho! Oho! Oho!
Both fire and hammer failed me not!
With stalwart strokes
I stretched you out;

glückt' es mir!
Mit starken Schlägen streckt' ich dich:
nun schwinde die rothe Scham;
werde kalt und hart wie du kannst.
Heiaho! heiaho!
heiaho! ho! ho!
hahei! hoho! hahei!
(Er taucht mit dem letzten den Stahl in das Wasser und lacht bei dem starken Gezisch.)

MIME: (während Siegfried die geschmiedete Schwert klinge in dem Griffhefte befestigt,—wieder im Vordergrunde). Er schafft sich ein scharfes Schwert, Fafner zu fällen,
der Zwerge Feind:
ich braut' ein Trug-Getränk, Siegfried zu fällen, dem Fafner fiel.
Gelingen muss mir die List;
lachen muss mir der Lohn!
Den der Bruder schuf, den schimmernden Reif,
in den er gezaubert zwingends Kraft, das helle Gold,
das zum Herrscher macht—ich hab' ihn gewonnen!
ich walte sein'!—
Alberich selbst,
der einst mich band,
zu Zwergenfrohne
zwing' ich ihn nun:
als Niblungenfürst
fahr' ich danieder;
gehorchen soll mir
alles Heer!—
Der verachtete Zwerg, was wird er geehrt!
Zu dem Hort hin drängt sich Gott und Held:
vor meinem Nicken
neigt sich die Welt, vor meinem Zorne
zittert sie hin!—
Dann wahrlich müht sich Mime nicht mehr:
ihm schaffen And're
den ew'gen Schatz.
Mime, der kühne.
Mime ist König,
Fürst der Alben,
Walter des All's!
Hei, Mime! wie glückte mir das!
wer glaubte wohl das von dir!

SIEGFRIED: (während der Absätze von Mime's Lied das Schwert feilend, schleifend und mit dem kleinen Hammer hämmernd). Nothung! Nothung!
neidliches Schwert!
jetzt haftest du wieder im Heft.
Warst du entzwei,
ich zwang dich ganz,
kein Schlag soll nun dich zerschlagen.
Dem sterbenden Vater zersprang der Stahl, der lebende Sohn
schuf ihn neu:
nun lacht ihm sein heller Schein, seine Schärfe schneidet ihm hart.

let sink now your blush of shame, be as cold and hard as you can.
Heiho! Heiho!
Heiho! Ho! Ho!
Aha! Oho! Aha!
(With the last words, he plunges the sword into the water, laughing at the hiss it makes.)

MIME: (while Siegfried is fastening the forged swordblade into a handle,—again coming to the front). He shapes him a sword so sharp, it fell Fafner,
the Niblung's foe.
A draught of might I've made, Siegfried to finish
when Fafner falls.
This treachery must I contrive, triumph must I attain.
What my brother shaped,
the shimmering ring, endowed with enchantment's charms and control—the peerless gold which all power gives,—
I plainly have gained it!
I govern it!—
Alberich even,
whom once I served, as bondsman will I bind me soon.
As Nibelheim's lord
let me be known there;
I'll humble to me
all their host!—
The poor vilified dwarf
how will they revere!
To the gold will go thronging men and gods;
before my bidding
bows all the world;
before my anger
awed are they all!
In toil then moves Mime no more;
his wealth unending shall others work.
Mime the mighty,
Mime is monarch;
prince of earth-gnomes,
ruler of all!
Hey, Mime! how glad will you be then!
Who would believe this of you?

SIEGFRIED: (during the last part of Mime's song has been filing and sharpening the sword and hammering it with a small hammer).
Needful! Needful!
notable sword!
in handle once more you are held.
When you were wrecked
I wrought you anew;
no stroke shall again destroy you,
your steel flew in tandem from the stricken sire;
the life-glowing son shapes it anew;
now laughs upon him its sheen,
and its sharpness surely cuts home.
Needful! Needful!

Nothung! Nothung!
neu und verjüngt!
zum Leben weckt' ich dich wieder.
Todt lag'st du in Trümmern dort, jetzt leuchtest du trotzig und hehr.
Zeige den Schächern nun deinen Schein!
schlage den Falschen, fälle den Schelm!—
Schau, Mime, du Schmied:
so schneidet Siegfried's Schwert.
(Er hat während des zweiten Verses das Schwert geschwungen, und schlägt nun damit auf den Ambos: dieser zerspaltet in zwei Stücken, von oben bis unten, so dass er unter grossem Gepolter auseinander fällt, Mime, — in höchster Verzückung — fällt vor Schreck sitzlings zu Boden. Siegfried hält jauchzend das Schwert in die Höhe.—Der Vorhang fällt schnell.)

■ ACT II

TIEFER WALD.

Ganz im Hintergrunde die Öffnung einer Höhle. Der Boden hebt sich bis zur Mitte der Bühne, wo er eine kleine Hochebene bildet; von da senkt er sich nach hinten, der Höhle zu, wieder abwärts, so dass von dieser nur der obere Theil der Öffnung dem Zuschauer sichtbar ist. Links gewahrt man durch Waldbäume eine zerklüftete Felsenwand. — Finstere Nacht, am dichtesten über dem Hintergrunde, wo anfänglich der Blick des Zuschauers gar nichts zu unterscheiden vermag.

ALBERICH: (an der Felsenwand zur Seite gelagert, in düsterem Brüten). In Wald und Nacht vor Neidhöhl' halt' ich Wacht:
er lauscht mein Ohr, mühvoll lugt mein Aug'.— Banger Tag,
beb'st du schon auf?
dämmerst du dort
durch das Dunkel her?
(Sturmwind erhebt sich rechts aus dem Walde.) Welcher Glanz glitzert dort auf?
Näher schimmert ein heller Schein:
es rennt wie ein leuchtendes Ross bricht durch den Wald brausend daher.
Naht schon des Wurmes Würger?
Ist's schon, der Fafner fällt?
(Der Sturmwind legt sich wieder; der Glanz verlischt.) Das Licht erlischt—der Glanz barg sich dem Blick:
Nacht ist's wieder.—
Wer naht dort schimmernd im Schatten?

notable sword!
I have given you life again.
You lay dead
once desolate,
now leap up dauntless and bright.
Out then, and show
the cowards your sheen!
Shatter the false ones, fall on the sly!—
See! and Mime, smith;
so serves Siegfried's sword!
(During the second verse he brandishes the sword and now smites it on the anvil which splits in half from top to bottom, falling with a loud noise. Mime, in extreme terror, falls flat on the ground. Siegfried, shouting with glee, waves his sword in the air. The curtain falls quickly.)

■ Act II

A DEEP FOREST.

At the extreme back the opening of a cave. The ground rises in the middle of the stage, forming a little knoll; it sinks again towards the cave at back, so that the upper part of the cavern's mouth alone is visible. L. is to be seen through the trees a rocky cliff rent with fissures.—Gloomy night, darkest at back, where at first the eye of the audience can discern nothing distinctly.

ALBERICH: (leaning against the rocky wall at side, in gloomy reflection). In woodland haunt by Hate-cave I keep watch.
I prick my ear,
keenly peers my eye.—
Anxious day!
Have you arrived?
Throw you there light through the thicket?
(A gust of storm passes R. from the wood.)
But what gleam glances from there?
Nearer glimmers
a brilliant glow,
and strides, as of fiery steed,
course through the wood,
crashing this way.
Nearer the dragon's death-man?
Is it now that Fafner falls?
(The wind subsides again and the glow fades.)
The light allays—
the glow sinks from my sight:
night falls once more.—
Who nears, shining through shadow?

DER WANDERER: (tritt aus Wald auf, und hält Alberich gegenüber an). Zur Neidhöhle fuhr ich bei Nacht:
wen gewahr' ich im Dunkel dort?
(Wie aus einem plötzlich zerreissenden Gewölk bricht Mondschein herein, und beleuchtet des Wanderer's Gestalt.)

ALBERICH: (erkennt den Wanderer, und fährt er schrocken zurück). Du selbst lässt dich hier seh'n?
(Er bricht in Wuth aus.)
Was willst du hier?
Fort, aus dem Weg!
Von dannen, schamloser Dieb!

WANDERER: Schwarz-Alberich, schweif'st du hier?
hütest du Fafner's Haus?

ALBERICH: Jag'st du auf neue Neidthat umher?
Weile nicht hier!
weiche von hinnen!
Genug deines Truges tränkte die Stätte mit Noth.
Drum, du Frecher, lass' sie jetzt frei!

WANDERER: Zu schauen kam ich, nicht zu schaffen:
wer wehrte mir Wand'rers Fahrt?

ALBERICH: (lacht tückisch auf).
Du Rath wüthender Ränke!
wär' ich dir zu lieb
doch noch dumm wie damals, als du mich Blöden bandest!
Wie leicht gerieth es den Ring mir nochmals zu rauben!
Hab' Acht: deine Kunst kenne ich wohl;
doch wo du schwach bist,
bleib mir auch nicht verschwiegen Mit meinen Schätzen zahltest du Schulden; mein Ring lohnte
der Riesen Müh', die deine Burg dir gebaut was mit den trotzigen einst du vertragen, dess' Runen wahrt noch heut' deines Speeres herrischer Schaft.
Nicht du darist,
was als Zoll du gezahlt, den Riesen wieder entreissen;
du selbst zerspelltest
deines Speeres Schaft: in deiner Hand
der herrische Stab, der starke zerstiebte wie Spreu'!

WANDERER: Durch Vertrages
Treue-Runen
band er dich Bösen mir nicht:
dich beugt er mir durch seine Kraft:
zum Krieg drum wahr' ich ihn wohl.

ALBERICH: Wie stolz du dräu'st in trotziger Stärke, und wie dir's im Busen doch bangt!
Verfallen dem Tod

THE WANDERER: (enters from the wood and pauses opposite Alberich.) To Hate-cave by night have I come;
who confronts me in darkness dim?
(As from a suddenly parted cloud, the moonlight breaks forth and illumines the Wanderer's figure.)

ALBERICH: (recognizes the Wanderer and recoils in dread.) Yourself is it I see?
(Bursting into wrath.)
What would you here?
Hence, from my way!
Away, you shameless rogue!

WANDERER: Black Alberich, Do you remain here?
Have you kept Fafner's house?

ALBERICH: Come you to inflict new annoyance?
Linger not here,
make your way homeward!
This place has sorely suffered from you and your plots.
Therefore, villain, quickly leave!

WANDERER: I came as witness, not as worker:
who'll bar the Wanderer's way?

ALBERICH: (laughing spitefully).
You spell-working conspirer!
Were I dull as once in past days you deemed, when I was bound through blindness, how soon by ruse
were the ring again from me ravished!
Beware! all your wiles
well do I know;
also your weak point plainly am I aware of.
With all my wealth you have wiped out your debt;
my gem dowered
the giants' toil,
what time they built you your town.
What was agreed upon with those grim ones in runes is written this day on your spear's all-dominant shaft.
Nor do you dare
what as price you have paid to juggle back from the giants.
Your spear you speedily would spoil yourself:
in your own hand
the heavenly staff, the strong one, would split like a straw.

WANDERER: Through no runes of righteous compact were you bound,
base one, by it:
It bowed you down but by its strength:
for strife I ward it then well.

ALBERICH: How proud your threats of menacing power,
and yet how your spirit sinks!

durch meinen Fluch ist Fafner, des Hortes Hüter:— wer—wird ihn beerben?
wird der neidliche Hort dem Niblung wieder gehören?
Das sehrt dich mit ew'ger Sorge!
Denn fass' ich ihn wieder einst in der Faust, anders als dumme Riesen üb' ich des Ringes Kraft:
dann zitt're der Helden heiliger Hüter!
Walhall's Höhen
stürm' ich mit Hella's Heer:
der Welt walte dann ich!

WANDERER: Deinen Sinn kenn' ich;
doch sorgt er mich nicht:
des Ringes waltet wer ihn gewinnt.

ALBERICH: Wie dunkel sprichst
du,
was ich deutlich doch weiss!
An Heldensöhne
hält sich dein Trotz, die traut deinem Blute entblüht?
Pflegtest du wohl eines Knaben, der klug die Frucht dir pflücke, die du—nicht brechen darf'st?

WANDERER: Mit mir—nicht, had're mit Mime:
dein Bruder bringt dir Gefahr;
einen Knaben führt er daher, der Fafner ihm fällen soll.
Nichts weiss der von mir;
der Niblung nützt ihn für sich.
Drum sag' ich dir, Gesell:
thue frei wie's dir frommt!
Höre mich wohl,
sei auf der Hut:
nicht kennt der Knabe den Ring, doch Mime kundet' ihn aus.

ALBERICH: Deine Hand hieltest du vom Hort?

WANDERER: Wen ich liebe lass' ich für sich gewähren:
er steh' oder fall',
sein Herr ist er:
Helden nur können mir frommen.

ALBERICH: Mit Mime räng' ich allein um den Ring?

WANDERER: Ausser dir begehrt er einzig das Gut.

ALBERICH: Und doch gewänn' ich ihn nicht?

WANDERER: Ein Helde naht
den Hort zu befrei'n;
zwei Niblungen geizen das Gold:
Fafner fällt,
der den Ring bewacht:—
wer ihn rafft, hat ihn gewonnen.—
Willst du noch mehr?
Dort liegt der Wurm:
warn'st du ihn vor dem Tod, willig wohl liess' er den Tand.—
Ich selber weck' ihn dir auf.—

Decreed unto death through my curse is Fafner, the store's possessor:— who'll hold it hereafter?
Will the notable hoard
a Nibelung once more inherit?
This tears you with endless trouble!
For, passes the ring
once more to my palm,
in other ways than foolish giants
I'll use the jewel's power.
Then tremble, high protector of heroes, for Valhalla
I'll seize on with Hella's host;
the world will then be mine!

WANDERER: I know well your intent;
it troubles me not;
the ring's but wielded when it is won.

ALBERICH: How darkly you say, what I doubtless know well!
In heroes' offspring have you then trust, who truly have leaped from your loins?
Have you not fostered a stripling who straight the fruit should reach
you,
that you dare not to thieve?

WANDERER: Mind me not—wrangle with Mime:
Your brother brings you a foe;
for the boy who follows him here shall fell for him Fafner soon.
He knows nothing of me;
the Nibelung's need he should serve.
And so, my friend, I say,
you can work as you will Give good heed, be on your guard;
he knows nothing of the ring:
but Mime necessarily must disclose,

ALBERICH: And your hand hold you from the hoard?

WANDERER: My beloved one
I leave to act unmanaged;
he stands or he falls,
unhelped by me;
heroes' aid only I've faith in.

ALBERICH: With Mime wrestle but I for the ring?

WANDERER: Only he would gather also the gold.

ALBERICH: Yet I never may win it again?

WANDERER: A hero nears
the hoard to set free;
two Niblungs are greedy for gold;
Fafner falls,
who does guard the wealth;
when it is gained, luck to the winner!—
Would you know more?
There lies the worm:
warn him then of his risk,
well he will leave you the ring.—

(Er wendet sich nach hinten.) Fafner! Fafner!
erwache, Wurm!

ALBERICH: (in gespanntem Erstaunen, für sich).
Was beginnt der Wilde?
gönnt er mir's wirklich?
(Aus der finstern Tiefe des Hintergrundes hört man.)

FAFNER: (Stimme). Wer stört mir den Schlaf?

WANDERER: Gekommen ist einer, Noth dir zu künden:
er lohnt dir's mit dem Leben, lohnst du das Leben ihm mit dem Horte, den du hütest.

FAFNER: Was will er?

ALBERICH: Wache, Fafner!
wache, du Wurm!
Ein starker Helde naht, dich Heil'gen will er besteh'n.

FAFNER: Mich hungert sein'.

WANDERER: Kühn ist des Kindes Kraft, scharf schneidet sein Schwert.

ALBERICH: Den gold'nen Ring
geizt er allein:
lass' mir den Ring zum Lohn, so wend' ich den Streit;
du wahrest den Hort,
und ruhig leb'st du lang'!

FAFNER: (gähnt). Ich lieg' und besitze:—
lasst mich schlafen!

WANDERER: (lacht laut). Nun, Alberich, das schlug fehl!
Doch schilt mich nicht mehr Schelm!
Diess Eine, rath' ich,
achte noch wohl:
Alles ist nach seiner Art:
an ihr wirst du nichts ännern.
Ich lass' dir die Stätte:
stelle dich fest!
versuch's mit Mime, dem Bruder:
der Art ja versiehst du dich besser.
Was anders ist,
das lerne nun auch!
(Er verschwindet im Walde. Sturmwind erhebt sich und verliert sich schnell wieder.)

ALBERICH: (nachdem er ihm lange grimmig nachgesehen). Da reitet er hin auf lichtem Ross:
mir lässt er Sorg' und Spott!
Doch lacht nur zu,
ihr leichtsinniges, lustgieriges Göttergelichter:
euch seh' ich noch alle vergeh'n:
So lang das Gold am Lichte glänzt, hält ein Wissender Wacht!— trügen wird euch sein Trotz.
(Morgendämmerung. Alberich verbirgt sich zur Seite im Geklüft.)

Myself I'll wake him for you—
(He turns towards the back.) Fafner, Fafner!
Awaken, worm!

ALBERICH: (aside, in expectancy and wonder). Does he mean to tell me the treasure is mine?
(From the gloomy depth at back is heard Fafner's voice.)

FAFNER: (voice.) Who stirs me from sleep?

WANDERER: Here waits a friend to warn you of danger:
Your life he will allow you,
You light his life for him with the treasure that you tend.

FAFNER: What does he want?

ALBERICH: Waken, Fafner!
Waken, worm!
A stalwart hero nears,
Your head to humble in strife.

FAFNER: I starve for him!

WANDERER: Brave is the boy and steadfast, sharply shears his sword.

ALBERICH: The circlet rare
he seeks alone:
let me but lift the ring,
I'll ward you from harm;
then watch the hoard and rest in length of life!

FAFNER: (yawning). I lie in possession:—
let me slumber!

WANDERER: (laughing loudly).
Now, Alberich, that stroke fails!
But stay your anger's storm!
One thing I advise you,
think on it well:
all things act in their nature,
nor may you alter anything.
I leave you your station:
stand to your guard!
Encounter Mime, your brother;
his nature overcomes you better.
What happens therafter you quickly shall find!
(He disappears in the wood. A storm gust rises and quickly subsides again.)

ALBERICH: (after watching his retreat a while in wrath.) There storms he away on lightning steed, and leaves me in scoff and scorn!
Yes, laugh away!
light-spirited,
lust-gluttonous,
godly enlightener;
I'll see you yet
all in your graves!
So long as the gold in light shall gleam
I hold warily watch!—
Envy works out its end!—
(Morning dawns. Alberich hides in a cleft of the rock at side.)

(Mime und Siegfried treten bei anbrechendem Tage auf. Siegfried trägt das Schwert an einem Gehenke. Mime erspäht genau die Stätte, forscht endlich dem Hintergrunde zu, der—während die Anhöhe im mittlern Vordergrunde später immer heller von der Sonne beleuchtet wird—in finstern Schatten gehüllt bleibt, und bedeutet dann Siegfried.)

MIME: Zur Stelle sind wir! bleib' hier steh'n!

SIEGFRIED: (setzt sich unter eine grosse Linde). Hier soll ich das Fürchten lernen?—
Fern hast du mich geleitet;
eine volle Nacht im Walde selbander wanderten wir:
nun sollst du, Mime,
fortan mich meiden!
Lern' ich hier nicht was ich lernen muss, allein zieh' ich dann weiter:
dich werd' ich endlich da los!

MIME: (setzt sich ihm gegenüber, so dass er die Höhle immer noch im Auge behält). Glaub' mir, Lieber!
lernst du heute
hier das Fürchten nicht:
an andrem Ort
zu and'rer Zeit schwerlich erfährst du's je.— Siehst du dort
den dunklen Höhlenschlund?
Darin wohnt ein gräulich wilder Wurm:
unmassen grimmig ist er und gross:
ein schrecklicher Rachen reisst sich ihm auf;
mit Haut und Haar auf einen Happ verschlingt der Schlimme dich wohl.

SIEGFRIED: Gut ist's, den Schlund ihm zu schliessen:
drum biet' ich mich nicht dem Gebiss.

MIME: Giftig giesst sich ein Geifer ihm aus:
wen mit des Speichels Schweiss er bespei't, dem schwinden Fleisch und Gebein.

SIEGFRIED: Dass des Geifers Gift mich nicht sehre, weich' ich zur Seite dem Wurm.

MIME: Ein Schlangenschweif schlägt sich ihm auf:
wen er damit umschlingt
und fest umschliesst, dem brechen die Glieder wie Glas!

SIEGFRIED: Vor des Schweifes Schwang mich zu wahren halt' ich den Argen im Aug'.—
Doch heisse mich das:
hat der Wurm ein Herz?

MIME: Ein grimmiges, hartes Herz!

(As the day breaks Mime and Siegfried enter. The latter wears the sword in his girdle. Mime narrowly reconnoitres the place and at last seeks towards the background, which remains still in shadow, while the higher ground in the middle is more and more brightened by the sun; he then draws Siegfried's attention.)

MIME: The spot you see! here we stop.

SIEGFRIED: (seating himself under a great lime tree). Here shall I in fear take lesson?— Far distant you have led me; since the fall of night through woodlands
we two have wended our way.
Now shall you, Mime, henceforth move from me!
Find I not here
what I rather would learn, afar then will I wander;
I want to be free from you!

MIME: (seats himself opposite, so as to keep the cave in sight still).
Trust me, dearie!
Do you not here in haste discover fear, in other hours,
and other ways scarce were it ever learned.— Do you see yonder yawning cavern's shade?
Therein dwells
a gruesome dreadful dragon.
Awfully grisly is he, and great; he opens savage and monstrous jaws;
both skin and scalp,
at single snap
the beast will bolt.

SIEGFRIED: It were well to baffle his biting:
I'll thrust myself not in his throat.

MIME: Potent poison
he pours with his breath;
he whom his spittle's spume splashes must shrivel up, body and bones.

SIEGFRIED: That his vile venom may not sear me lightly aside will I leap.

MIME: A twisting tail
he turns about;
if taken in its toils
and firmly twined,
your limbs will be ground up like glass.

SIEGFRIED: From his tail's entangle to keep I'll have an eye on his acts.—
But listen to me now:
has this worm a heart?

MIME: A cruel and hardened heart!

SIEGFRIED: Das sitzt ihm doch wo es jedem schlägt, trag' es Mann oder Thier?

MIME: Gewiss, Knabe,
da führt's auch der Wurm;
nun kommt dir das Fürchten wohl an?

SIEGFRIED: Nothung stoss' ich dem Stolzen in's Herz:
soll das etwa Fürchten heissen?
He, du Alter!
ist das alles, was deine List
mich lehren kann?
Fahr' deines Wegs dann weiter;
das Fürchten lern' ich hier nicht.

MIME: Wart' es nur ab!
Was ich dir sagte,
dünke dich tauber Schall:
ihn selber musst du hören und seh'n, die Sinne vergeh'n dir dann schon!
Wenn dein Blick verschwimmt, der Boden dir schwankt, im Busen bang
dein Herz erbebt:—
dann dankst du mir, der dich führte, gedenkst wie Mime dich liebt.

SIEGFRIED: (springt unwillig auf). Du sollst mich nicht lieben!
sagt' ich dir's nicht?
Fort aus den Augen mir;
lass' mich allein:
sonst halt' ich's hier länger nicht aus, fängst du von Liebe gar an!
Das eklige Nicken und Augenzwicken, wann endlich soll ich's
nicht mehr seh'n?
wann werd' ich den Albernen los?

MIME: Ich lasse dich schon:
am Quell dort lagr' ich mich.
Steh' du nur hier;
steigt die Sonne zur Höh',
merk' auf den Wurm, aus der Höhle wälzt er sich her:
hier vorbei
biegt er dann, am Brunnen sich zu tränken.

SIEGFRIED: (lachend). Mime, weilst du am Quell
dahin lass' ich den Wurm wohl geh'n Nothung stoss' ich ihm erst in die Nieren, wenn er dich selbst dort
mit 'weg gesoffen!
Darum, hör' meinen Rath, raste nicht dort am Quell:
kehre dich 'weg,
so weit du kannst,
und komm' nie mehr zu mir!

MIME: Nach freislichem Streit dich zu erfrischen, wirst du mir wohl nicht wehren?
Rufe mich auch,
darbst du des Rathes—
oder wenn dir das Fürchten gefällt.
(Siegfried weis't ihn mit einer heftigen Geberde fort.) (im Abgehen, für sich). Fafner und Siegfried—Siegfried und Fafner—o brächten beide sich um!
(Er geht in den Wald zurück.)

SIEGFRIED: (allein. Er setzt sich wieder unter die grosse Linde.) Dass der mein Vater nicht ist, wie fühl' ich mich drob so froh!
Nun erst gefällt mir
der frische Wald;
nun erst lacht mir
der lustige Tag,
da der Garstige von mir schied, und ich gar nicht ihn wiederseh'!
(Sinnendes Schweigen.)
Wie sah wohl mein Vater aus?—
Ha!—gewiss wie ich selbst:
denn wär' wo von Mime ein Sohn, müsst' er nicht ganz
Mime gleichen?
G'rade so garstig, griesig und grau,
klein und krumm
höckrig und hinkend, mit hängenden Ohren, triefigen Angen—
fort mit dem Alp!
ich mag ihn nicht mehr seh'n.
(Er lehnt sich zurück und blickt durch den Baumwipfel auf. Langez Schweigen.—Waldweben.) Aber—wie sah
meine Mutter wohl aus?
Das—kann ich nun gar nicht mir denken!—
Der Rehhindin gleich glänzten gewiss ihr hell schimmernde Augen,— nur noch viel schöner!—
Da bang sie mich geboren, warum aber starb sie da?
Sterben die Menschenmütter an ihren Söhnen alle dahin?
Traurig wäre das, traun!—
Ach! möcht' ich Sohn meine Mutter seh'n!—
meine—Mutter!—
ein Menschenweib!—
(Er seufzt und streckt sich tiefer zurück. Langez Schweigen.—)
(Wachsendes Waldeweben, Siegfried's aufmer ksamkeit wird endlich durch den Gesang der Waldvögeln gefesselt.) Du holdes Voglein, dich hort ich noch nie:
Bist du im wald hier daheim?
Verstünd' ich sein süsses stammeln!
Gewiss sagt' es mir' was reil licht,
Von der lieben mutter!
Ein zankender Zwerg hat mir erzählt, der Vöglein Stammeln gut zu versteh'n,
dazu könnte man kommen:
wie das wohl möglich wär'?
(Er sinnt nach. Sein Blick fällt auf ein Rohrgebüsch unweit der Linde.) Hei! ich versuch's, sing' ihm nach:
auf dem Rohr tön' ich ihm ähnlich!
Entrath' ich der Worte, achte der Weise,

SIEGFRIED: He bears it, sure,
where in all its beats,
both in man and in beast?

MIME: No doubt, youngster,
it lies there indeed.
Not yet have you learned fear?

SIEGFRIED: Needful straightaway
I'll strike to his heart:
will that be like fearing, by chance?
Hey, my ancient,
is this only what all your lore can teach me?
Forth on your way then wander, for fearing I learn not here.

MIME: Wait a while!
You think what I have spoken is empty sound:
himself must meet
you hearing and sight,
your senses will leave you then straight!
When your glances swim,
the ground beneath you sinks,
and grimly gripped,
your heart gasps:—
then thank him who has led you, and think of Mime's great love.

SIEGFRIED: (springing up crossly). You shall no more love me!
Said I not so?
Forth from the sight of me—
leave me alone!
this nuisance no longer I'll stand.
Prattle you of loving me still?
This idiot shrinking and eyelid winking—whenever shall I lose the sight?
when will this old object be gone?

MIME: I leave you now;
I'll linger near the spring.
Stay here,
soon when the sun is on high look for the worm;
he'll warily come from his cave:
close this way will he pass to water at the fountain

SIEGFRIED: (laughing). Mime, wait at the stream and there I'll let the worm proceed.
Needful first shall nestle in his vitals when all your joints
he has well digested!
So now heed what I tell—tarry not by the spring:
take yourself off
to other tracks;
return no more to me!

MIME: When faint with the strife you would refresh yourself, would I not win a welcome.
Call on me then,
should you need counsel—or if you find pleasure in fearing.
(Siegfried bids him to be gone with a violent gesture.)
(aside—going). Fafner and Siegfried—Siegfried and Fafner—
Would each the other might kill!
(He retreats into the wood.)

SIEGFRIED: (alone. He seats himself under the great lime again).
How full is the joy I feel that he's no father of mine!
Now the forest seems truly fragrant;
now how glad is
the glorious day!
since that miscreant wretch has gone,
never more to confront my gaze!
(Thoughtful silence.)
My sire—what semblance was his?—
Ha!—no doubt like myself;
for, were there of Mime a son, must he not look Mime's likeness?
growing as gruesome,
grizzled and gray,
cramped and crooked,
halting and humpbacked, with hanging ears stretching, bleary eyes staring—
Out on the sight!
I'll look on it no more.
(He leans back and looks up through the branches of the tree. Long silence. Forest murmur.) Surely—my mother,
what semblance had she?
I—cannot imagine it ever!—
Like soft fallow doe's deeply would shine her soft languishing eyes,— only more lovely!—
When balefully she bore me
why must she have died too?
Die thus all mortal mothers, leaving their dear ones lonely behind?
Sad were such a fate, sure!— Ah! might these looks but light on my mother!—
My own—mother!—
a mortal's mate!—
(He sighs and reclines still lower. Long silence.) (Increased rustling of the trees. Siegfried's attention is at last riveted by the songs of forest birds.)
You happy warbler, I hear you now first:
Have you in this forest your home?
Your strain, could I understand it!
Probably utters to me some news of my loving mother!
That drivelling dwarf told me one day
the meaning bound in language of birds one could truly attain to:—
I wish I could learn the way!
(He reflects. His eyes fall on a clump of reeds, not far from the lime tree.)
Ha! I'll essay;
sing with him
on a reed similar sounding;
without regard for the meaning,
seize but the music.

sing' ich so seine Sprache, verstch' ich wohl auch was er spricht.
(Er hat sich mit dem Schwerte ein Rohr abgeschnitten, und schnitzt sich eine Pfeife daraus.) Es schweigt und lauscht:—
so schwatz' ich denn los!
(Er versucht auf der Pfeife die Weise der Vogel nachzuahmen es glückt ihm nicht, verdriesslich schüttelt er oft den Kopf: endlich setzt er ganz ab.)

Das tönt nicht recht:
auf dem Rohre taugt die wonnige Weise nicht.— Vöglein, mich dünkt, ich bleibe dumm:
von dir lernt sich's nicht leicht!
Nun schäm' ich mich gar vor dem schelmischen Lauscher:
er lugt, und kann nichts erlauschen.—
Heida! so höre
nun auf mein Horn;
auf dem dummen Rohre
geräth mir nichts.—
Einer Waldweise,
wie ich sie kann,
der lustigen sollst du lauschen.
Nach liebem Gesellen lockt' ich mit ihr:
nichts Bess'res kam noch als Wolf und Bär.
Nun will ich seh'n,
wen jetzt sie mir lockt:
ob das mir ein lieber Gesell?
(Er hat die Pfeife fortgeworfen, und bläst nun esseinem kleinen silbernen Horne eine lustige Weise.)

(Im Hintergrunde regt es sich. Fafner, in der Gestalt eines ungeheuren eidechsenartigen Schlangenwurmes, hat sich in der Höhle von seinem Lager erhoben; er bricht durch das Gesträuch, und wälzt sich aus der Tiefe nach der höheren Stelle vor, so dass er mit dem Vorderleibe bereits auf ihr angelangt ist. Er stösst jetzt einen starken gähnenden Laut aus.)

SIEGFRIED: (wendet sich um, gewahrt Fafner, blickt ihn verwundert an, und lacht). Da hätte mein Lied mir 'was Liebes erblasen!
du wär'st mir ein saub'rer Gesell!

FAFNER: (hat bei Siegfried's Anblick angehalten). Was ist da?

SIEGFRIED: Ei, bist du ein Thier, das zum Sprechen taugt, wohl liess' sich von dir 'was lernen!
Hier kennt einer das Fürchten nicht:
kann er's von dir erfahren?

FAFNER: Hast du Übermuth?

So his speech, if I sing it, my senses perhaps will glimpse.
(He cuts himself a reed with his sword and fashions a pipe out of it.)
He stops to listen:—
I'll stammer along!
(He tries to imitate the note of the bird on his pipe: he is unsuccessful, and after repeated trials, shaking his head in vexation he desists.)

That tone's not right; on the reed I see the melody may not be waked.— Birdie, I deem myself but dull:
my deed spans not your speech.
Now I am shamed
by the shrewd little piper:
he peeps to know why I'm pausing.— Ho there! then listen now to my horn;
with the stupid reed
I can render nothing.—
To a wild wood-note, which I can sound,
the lustiest shall you now hear.
A loving companion lately I called;
nothing better came yet than wolf and bear.
So let me see whom now it will lure to make me a loving consort?
(He has thrown away the reed and now blows a merry call on his little silver horn.)

(There is a stir in the background. Fafner, in the form of a huge lizard-like dragon, rises from his lair in the cave; he breaks through the underwood and crawls from the dell up to the higher ground till his forelegs rest quite on the knoll. He then utters a loud yawning growl.)

SIEGFRIED: (turns round, perceives Fafner, looks at him in surprise and then laughs). At last has my melody attracted something lovely!
I've waked up a fair-favored friend!

FAFNER: (who has paused, on sight of Siegfried). What is that?

SIEGFRIED: Hey! are you a beast that of speech can boast?
You surely might teach me something.
Here is one who never learned to fear:
could he by you effect it?

FAFNER: You're not over-bold?

SIEGFRIED: Muth und Übermuth—was weiss ich!
Doch dir fahr' ich zu Leibe, lehrst du das Fürchten mich nicht!

FAFNER: (lacht). Trinken wollt' ich:
nun treff' ich auch Frass!
(Er öffnet seinen Rachen und zeigt die Zähne.)

SIEGFRIED: Eine zierliche Fresse zeig'st du mir da:
lachende Zähne
im Leckermaul!
Gut wür's den Schlund dir zu schliessen dein Rachen reckt sich zu weit!

FAFNER: Zu tauben Reden taugt er schlecht:
dich zu verschlingen
frommt der Schlund.
(Er droht mit dem Schweife.)

SIEGFRIED: Hoho! du grausam grimmiger Kerl, von dir verdaut sein
dünkt mich übel:
räthlich und fromm doch scheint's du verrecktest hier ohne Frist.

FAFNER: (brüllt). Pruh! komm'! prahlendes Kind.

SIEGFRIED: (fasst das Schwert). Sieh' dich vor, Brüller:
der Prahler kommt!
(Er stellt sich Fafner entgegen: dieser hebt sich weiter vor auf die Bodenerhöhung, und sprüht aus seinen Nüstern nach ihm. Siegfried springt zur Seite. Fafner schwingt den Schweif nach vorn, um Siegfried zu fassen: dieser weicht ihm aus, indem er mit einem Satze über den Rücken des Wurmes hinwegspringt; als der Schweif sich auch hierhin ihm schnell nachwendet, und ihn fast schon packt, verwundet Siegfried diesen mit dem Schwerte. Fafner zieht den Schweif hastig zurück, brüllt, und bäumt seinen Vorderleib, um mit dessen voller Wucht zur Seite sich auf Siegfried zu werfen: so bietet er diesem die Brust, Siegfried erspäht schnell die Stelle des Herzens, und stösst sein Schwert bis an das Heft hinein. Fafner bäumt sich von Schwert noch höher, und sinkt, als Siegfried das Schwert losgelassen und zur Seite gesprungen ist, auf die Wunde zusammen.)

SIEGFRIED: Da lieg', neidischer Kerl!
Nothung trägst du im Herzen.

FAFNER: (mit schwächerer Stimme). Wer bist du, kühner Knabe, der das Herz mir traf?
Wer reizte des Kindes Muth zu der mordlichen That?
Dein Hirn brütete nicht, was du vollbracht.

SIEGFRIED: Bold or over-bold—
What do I know?
but I'll tackle you finely,
if you teach not fearing to me.

FAFNER: (laughs). I came for drink, now food drops to me!
(He opens his jaws and shows his teeth.)

SIEGFRIED: An extravagant frontage you turn on me:
dazzling with teeth
is that dainty maw!
Well were it to close up the cavern:
your gullet gapes far too wide.

FAFNER: For senseless gabble serves it ill:
rather to eat you it opens.
(He lashes his tail menacingly.)

SIEGFRIED: Oho! you gruesome, grim-looking knave!
To stay your stomach suits me little: it is wiser to remove you from here, and at once.

FAFNER: (roaring). Bah! come, boast-making cub!

SIEGFRIED: (drawing his sword). Look out, growler!
the boaster comes.
(He confronts Fafner: the latter creeps more over the knoll and spits from his nostrils at him. Siegfried springs aside. Fafner curls his tail forwards to reach Siegfried, but he avoids it and springs over the back of the dragon with a bound; as the tail follows him and almost reaches him, he wounds it with his sword. Fafner hastily draws back his tail, roars, and raises the forepart of his body, in order to throw his full weight sideways upon Siegfried, thus exposing his breast to him. Siegfried quickly espies the position of his heart and plunges his sword there up to the very hilt. Fafner rears still higher in pain and sinks down upon the wound, while Siegfried lets go the sword and springs aside.)

SIEGFRIED: There lie, noisy rogue!
Needful sticks in your gizzard.

FAFNER: (with weaker voice). Who are you, stalwart stripling, that has struck my heart?
Who wakened and stirred your mind to this murderous deed?
Your own brain never, I believe, brought it about.

SIEGFRIED: Viel weiss ich noch nicht, noch nicht auch wer ich bin:
mit dir mordlich zu ringen reiztest du selbst meinen Muth.

FAFNER: Du helläugiger Knabe, unkund deiner selbst:
wen du gemordet
meld' ich dir.
Die einst der Welt gewaltet, der Riesen ragend Geschlecht, Fasolt und Fafner,
die Brüder, fielen nun beide.
Um verfluchtes Gold,
von Göttern vergabt, traf ich Fasolt zu todt:
der nun als Wurm
den Hort bewachte, Fafner, den letzten Riesen, fällte ein rosiger Held.— Blick nun hell, blühender Knabe;
des Hortes Herrn
umringt Verrath:
der dich Blinden reizte zur That.
beräth nun des Blühenden Tod (Ersterbend.) Merk' wie's endet:—
acht' auf mich!

SIEGFRIED: Woher ich stamme, rathe mir noch;
weise ja scheinst du Wilder im Sterben;
rath' es nach meinem Namen:
Siegfried bin ich genannt.

FAFNER: Siegfried...!
(Er seufzt, hebt sich und stirbt.)

SIEGFRIED: Zur Kunde taugt kein Todter.—
So leite mich denn mein lebendes Schwert!
(Fafner hat sich im Sterben zur Seitegewälzt. Siegfried zieht das Schwert aus seiner Brust: dabei wird seine Hand vom Blute benetzt; er fährt heftig mit der Hand auf.)
Wie Feuer brennt das Blut!
(Er führt unwillkürlich die Finger zum Munde, um das Blut von ihnen abzusaugen. Wie er sinnend vor sich hinblickt, wird plötzlich seine Aufmerksamkeit von dem Gesange der Waldvögel angezogen. Er lauscht mit verhaltenem Athem.)— Ist mir doch fast—als sprächen die Vöglein zu mir:
deutlich dünken mich's Worte!
Nützte mir das
des Blutes Genuss?— Das selt'ne Vöglein hier—horch! was singt es mir?

STIMME EINES WALDVOGEL'S: (in der Linde). Hei! Siegfried gehört nun der Niblungen Hort:
o fänd' in der Höhle
den Hort er jetzt!
Wollt' er den Tarnhelm gewinnen,

SIEGFRIED: Much I do not know, not even who I am;
yourself only did urge me
to this murderous end.

FAFNER: You bright, eager-eyed stripling, even strange to yourself:
whom you have murdered must you hear.
The giants' generous race which ruled the world at one time—Fasolt and Fafner,
the brothers, now both lie fallen.
For the fatal gold
we gained from the gods dealt death to Fasolt, Now I, as Worm
the hoard overwatching, Fafner, the last of giants, fall by a juvenile hand.—
Bear good heed, blossoming hero:
Amid treason treads
he who holds the hoard:
one who blindly showed you this deed shapes for you, boy, surely death.
(Dying.)
Weigh what happens:—
heed my words!

SIEGFRIED: What were my parents counsel to me yet!
you appear to be wise,
wild one, expiring;
tell it too from my title:
I am Siegfried, I believe.

FAFNER: Siegfried...!
(He sighs, raises himself up and dies.)

SIEGFRIED: The dead can tell no tidings.
So lead me henceforth my life-keeping sword.
(Fafner has rolled over on his side in dying. Siegfried draws the sword from his breast: in doing so his hand becomes smeared with blood: he draws it hastily away.)
Like fire burns the blood!
(He instinctively puts his finger to his mouth to suck blood off it. As he gazes thoughtfully before him, his attention is arrested all at once by the song of the birds. He listens with bated breath.)
Would it not seem that songster were speaking to me?—
well the words I distinguish!
Was it the blood that worked this magic?
That stranger bird I hear—
Listen! what sings he now?

VOICE OF A WOODBIRD: (in the lime tree). Hey! Siegfried holds now the Nibelung's hoard:
O he'll find the hoard
in the hole soon!
Were he to win the Tarnhelm,
it would tide him through wonderful tasks;

der taugt' ihm zu wonniger That:
doch möcht' er den Ring sich errathen,
der macht' ihn zum Walter der Welt!

SIEGFRIED: Dank, liebes Vöglein, für deinen Rath:
gern folg' ich dem Ruf.
(Er geht und steigt in die Höhle hinab, wo er alsbald gänzlich verschwindet.)
(Mime schleicht heran, scheu umherblickend, um sich von Fafner's Tod zu überzeugen.—Gleichzeitig kommt von der anderen Seite Alberich aus dem Geklüft hervor; er beobachtet Mime genau. Als dieser Siegfried nicht mehr gewahrt, und vorsichtig sich nach hinten der Höhle zuwendet, stürzt Alberich auf ihn zu, und vertritt ihm den Weg.)

ALBERICH: Wohin schleich'st du eilig und schlau, schlimmer Gesell?

MIME: Verfluchter Bruder, dich braucht' ich hier!
Was bringt dich her?

ALBERICH: Geizt es dich Schelm nach meinem Gold?
Verlang'st du mein Gut?

MIME: Fort von der Stelle!
Die Stätte ist mein: was stöberst du hier?

ALBERICH: Stör' ich dich wohl im stillen Geschäft, wenn du hier stiehl'st?

MIME: Was ich erschwang mit schwerer Müh', soll mir nicht schwinden.

ALBERICH: Hast du dem Rhein das Gold zum Ringe geraubt?
Erzeugtest du gar den zähen Zauber im Reif?

MIME: Wer schuf den Tarnhelm, der die Gestalten tauscht?
Der sein' bedurfte, erdachtest du ihn wohl?

ALBERICH: Was hättest du Stümper je wohl zu stampfen verstanden?
Der Zauberring
zwang mir zur Kunst erst den Zwerg!

MIME: Wo hast du den Ring?
Dir Zagem entrissen ihn Riesen!
Was du verlor'st,
meine List erlangt' es für mich.

ALBERICH: Mit des Knaben That will der Knicker nun knausern?
Dir gehört sie gar nicht, der Helle ist selbst ihr Herr!

MIME: Ich zog ihn auf;
fü die Zucht zahlt er mir nun:
für Müh' und Last erlauert' ich lang' meinen Lohn!

but were he the ring too to ravish
it would give him the ward of the world!

SIEGFRIED: Thanks, pretty warbler, for your advice:
I'll follow your voice.
(He goes up and descends into the cavern, where he disappears from view.) (Mime slinks on, looking about timidly, to assure himself of Fafner's death.—At the same time Alberich comes out from his cleft at the opposite side; he watches Mime narrowly. As the latter, not finding Siegfried, carefully steals towards the cave, Alberich darts upon him and bars his way.)

ALBERICH: Where do you slink, hasty and sly,
slippery scamp?

MIME: Accursed brother,
what brings you here?
What brings you here?

ALBERICH: Do you grasp rogue, towards my gold?
Do you lust for my goods?

MIME: Yield the position!
This station is mine.
What stir you here?

ALBERICH: You are startled from stealthy concerns, that I've disturbed?

MIME: What I have shaped with shrewdest toil shall not be shaken.

ALBERICH: Wasn't it you that robbed the golden ring from the Rhine? or charged it with great and choice enchantment around?

MIME: Who formed the Tarnhelm, which into any form can turn?
By you it was wanted;
its worker were you too?

ALBERICH: What could you ever, fool, yourself have fancied and fashioned?
The magic ring made the dwarf equal to the task.

MIME: Where now is your ring?
The giants have robbed you, recreant!
What you have lost,
by my lore, I will gain.

ALBERICH: By the boy's exploit shall you, booby, be bettered?
You shall have it not,
for its holder in truth is he.

MIME: I nourished him,
and now shall he pay his nurse:
for toil and woe,
a long while have I waited reward.

ALBERICH: Für des Knaben Zucht will der knick'rige schäbige Knecht keck und kühn gar wohl König nun sein?
Dem räudigsten Hund wäre der Ring
gerath'ner als dir:
nimmer erring'st du Rüpel den Herrscherreif!

MIME: Behalt' ihn denn:
hüte ihn wohl
den hellen Reif!
Sei du Herr:
doch mich heisse auch Bruder!
Um meines Tarnhelm's lustigen Tand tausch' ich ihn dir:
uns beiden taugt's,
theilen die Beute wir so.

ALBERICH: (höhnisch lachend).
Theilen mit dir?
und den Tarnhelm gar?
Wie schlau du bist!
Sicher schlief ich niemals vor deinen Schlingen!

MIME: (ausser sich). Selbst nicht tauschen?
Auch nicht theilen?
Leer soll ich geh'n,
ganz ohne Lohn?
Gar nichts willst du mir lassen?

ALBERICH: Nichts von allem, nicht einen Nagel sollst du dir nehmen!

MIME: (wüthend). Weder Ring noch Tarnhelm soll dir denn taugen!
nicht theil' ich nun mehr.
Gegen dich ruf' ich Siegfried zu Rath und des Recken Schwert:
der rasche Held,
der richte, Brüderchen, dich!

ALBERICH: Kehre dich um:—
aus der Höhle kommt er schon
her.—

MIME: Kindischen Tand
erkor er gewiss.—

ALBERICH: Den Tarnhelm hat er!—

MIME: Doch auch den Ring!—

ALBERICH: Verflucht!—den
Ring!—

MIME: (lacht hämisch). Lass' ihn den Ring dir doch geben!—
Ich will ihn mir schon gewinnen.—
(Er schlüpft in den Wald zurück.)

ALBERICH: Und doch, seinem Herrn
soll er allein noch gehören!
(Er verschwindet im Geklüft.)

ALBERICH: For a child's keep would this beggarly, haggardly boor,
bold and blustering,
be well near as a king?
To rankest of dogs boot the ring far rather than you:
never, you rogue,
shall reach you the magic round!

MIME: Then hold it still and heed it well, you hoarded ring.
Be head,
but yet hail me as brother!
For my own Tarnhelm, excellent toy,
I'll tender it to you!
It will boot us two,
we'll share the booty like this.

ALBERICH: (laughing scornfully). Share it with you?
and the Tarnhelm too?
How sly you are!
Safe I'd sleep then never from your ensnarings.

MIME: (beside himself). Will you not bargain?
Will you not barter?
Bare must I go,
gaining no boon?
Will you give to me no booty?

ALBERICH: Not an atom, not even a nail's worth:
all I deny you.

MIME: (furiously). In the ring and Tarnhelm never shall you triumph!
We'll not talk of shares!
Unto you I'll call for Siegfried to come;
with his carving sword
the caustic boy shall crush you, brother of mine!

ALBERICH: Turn your head round;—
from the cavern towards us he comes.—

MIME: Trivial toys have tempted him there.—

ALBERICH: The Tarnhelm he holds!—

MIME: Aye, and the ring!—

ALBERICH: A curse!—the ring!—

MIME: (with an evil laugh). Let him render the ring to you—I imagine that very soon I shall win
it.
(He slips back into the wood.)

ALBERICH: And yet to its lord alone shall it be delivered!
(He disappears in the cleft.)

(Siegfried ist, mit Tarnhelm und Ring, während des Letzten langsam und sinnend aus der Höhle vorgeschritten: er betrachtet gedankenvoll seine Beute, und hält, nahe dem Baume, auf der Höhe wieder an—Grosse Stille.)

SIEGFRIED: Was ihr mir nützt weiss ich nicht.
doch nahm ich euch
aus des Horts gehäuftem Gold, weil guter Rath mir es rieth.
So taug' eu're Zier als des Tages Zeuge: mich mahne der Tand dass ich kämpfend Fafner erlegt, doch das Fürchten noch nicht gelernt.
(Er steckt den Tarnhelm sich in den Gürtel, und den Reif an den Finger. — Stillschweigen. Wachsendes Waldweben. — Siegfried achtet unwillkürlich wieder des Vogel's, und lauscht ihm mit verhaltenem Athem.)

STIMME DES WALDVOGEL'S: (in der Linde). Hei! Siegfried gehört nun der Helm und Ring!
O traut' er Mime
dem Treulosen nicht!
Hörte Siegfried nur scharf auf des Schelmen Heuchlergered':
wie sein Herz es meint
kann er Mime versteh'n;
so nützt' ihm des Blutes Genuss.
(Siegfried's Miene und Geberde drücken aus, dass er alles wohl vernommen. Er sieht Mime sich nähern, und bleibt, ohne sich zu rühren, auf sein Schwert gestützt, beobachtend und in sich geschlossen, in seiner Stellung auf der Anhöhe bis zum Schlusse des folgenden Auftrittes.)

MIME: (langsam auftretend). Er sinnt und erwägt
der Beute Werth:— weilte wohl hier ein weiser Wand'rer, schweifte umher, beschwatzte das Kind mit listiger Runen Rath?
Zwiefach schlau
sei nun der Zwerg:
die listigste Schlinge leg' ich jetzt aus, dass ich mit traulichem Trug-Gerede
bethöre das trotzige Kind!
(Er tritt näher an Siegfried heran.) Willkommen, Siegfried!
Sag', du Kühner, hast du das Fürchten gelernt?

SIEGFRIED: Den Lehrer fand ich noch nicht.

MIME: Doch den Schlangenwurm, du hast ihn erschlagen:
das war doch ein schlimmer Gesell?

SIEGFRIED: So grimm und tückisch er war, sein Tod grämt mich doch schier,
da viel üblere Schächer

(Siegfried, with Tarnhelm and ring, has stepped out, during the last words, from the cave, slowly and thoughtfully: he inspects his prizes reflectively, and again pauses on the knoll by the tree.—Deep silence.)

SIEGFRIED: How you may serve
I hardly see;
I snatched you, though,
from the hoard of heaped-up gold,
as guiding voice did advise.
Let serve then your wealth
as this struggle's witness;
these baubles shall show that in fight I Fafner laid low but of fear I learned nothing.
(He sticks the Tarnhelm in his girdle and puts the ring on his finger.—Perfect stillness. Increased rustling of the woods.—Siegfried mechanically looks for the bird and listens to it with bated breath.)

VOICE OF THE WOODBIRD: (in the lime tree). Hey! Siegfried holds now the helm and the ring!
O trust not in Mime,
the treacherous elf!
Hear Siegfried sharply
the shifty hypocrite's words:
what at heart he means shall by Mime be shown;
so profits the taste of the blood.
(Siegfried's expression and gestures show that he has understood all. He perceives Mime's approach and remains without moving, leaning on his sword, observing and self-repressed, in his station on the mound till the end of the following speech.)

MIME: (slowly entering). He broods as he weighs the booty's worth.— Walked there with him a wily Wanderer, foraging here,
informing the boy
with cunning runes and advice?
Doubly sly shall be my deeds;
my most artful traps
all shall be set,
that I with true-seeming traitorous talk may entrap the truculent boy!
(He advances nearer to Siegfried.)
I hail you Siegfried!
Say, my hero,
have you then attained fearing?

SIEGFRIED: The teacher I found not here.

MIME: But the serpent-worm,
then have you destroyed him?
He, sure, was a foul sort of friend.

SIEGFRIED: Though he was grim and dreadful,
his death grieves me, in truth, while far more evil scoundrels

unerschlagen noch leben!
Der mich ihn morden hiess, den hass' ich mehr als den Wurm.

MIME: Nur sacht'! nicht lange sieh'st du mich mehr:
zu ew'gem Schlaf
schliess' ich die Augen dir bald!
Wozu ich dich brauchte, das hast du vollbracht;
jetzt will ich nur noch die Beute dir abgewinnen:—
mich dünkt, das soll mir gelingen;
zu bethören bist du ja leicht!

SIEGFRIED: So sinnst du auf meinen Schaden?

MIME: Wie sagt' ich das?—
Siegfried, hör' doch, mein Sohn!
Dich und deine Art
hasst' ich immer von Herzen;
aus Liebe erzog ich dich Lästigen nicht:
dem Horte in Fafners Hut, dem Golde galt meine Müh'.
Giebst du mir das nun gutwillig nicht—Siegfried, mein Sohn, das siehst du wohl selbst—dein Leben musst du mir lassen!

SIEGFRIED: Dass du mich hassest, hör' ich gern:
doch mein Leben auch muss ich dir lassen?

MIME: Das sag' ich doch nicht?
du verstehst mich falsch!
(Er giebt sich die ersichtlichste Mühe zur Verstellung.)
Sieh', du bist müde von harter Müh';
brünstig brennt dir der Leib:
dich zu erquicken mit queckem Trank säumt' ich Sorgender nicht.
Als dein Schwert du dir branntest, braut' ich den Sud:
trinkst du nun den,
gewinn' ich dein trautes Schwert,
und mit ihm Helm und Hort.
(Er kichert dazu.)

SIEGFRIED: So willst du mein Schwert und was ich erschwungen, Ring und Beute mir rauben?

MIME: Was du doch falsch mich
versteh'st!
Stamml' ich und fas'le wohl gar?
Die grösste Mühe geb' ich mir:
mein heimliches Sinnen heuchelnd zu bergen, und du dummer Bube
deutest alles doch falsch!
Öff'ne die Ohren, und vernimm genau:
höre, was Mime meint!—
Hier nimm! trinke dir Labung!
mein Trank labte dich oft:
that'st du wohl unwirsch,
stelltest dich arg:
was ich dir bot—erbos't auch—nahmst du's doch immer.

are yet living!
Who made me murder him,
I hate him more than the worm.

MIME: Now softly! You will not see me much more:
an endless sleep
soon shall weigh on your eyes!
For all that I wanted have you well worked;
I'll try now
to win the golden treasure from you I think I'll safely effect it:
you were ever easy to fool!

SIEGFRIED: You're seeking to work my death then?

MIME: What? did I say that?—
Siegfried, hear me, my sonny!
You and all your kind have I constantly hated;
from fondness, you burden,
I fostered you not:
the hoard under Fafner's hold alone I labored to win.
If you'll not give up that with good will—Siegfried, my son,
you see yourself—
life you must really relinquish!

SIEGFRIED: That you should hate me hurts me not:
but must my life be delivered to you?

MIME: I said nothing of that!
You mistake me quite.
(Giving himself the most elaborate pains to disguise his meaning.)
See, you are tired with mighty toil;
your body burns with heat.
So, to restore you with stirring drink, swiftly I speed to you.
While you did beat out your sword,
I brewed this stuff:
take but a sip,
I win me your trusty sword, and with it hoard and helm.
(He chuckles.)

SIEGFRIED: So, both of my sword and what I have seized on,
Ring and booty, you'd rob me?

MIME: How you falsely distort!
Stammers—falters my speech?
The greatest trouble
I give myself my secret designing safely to bury,
and you, stupid boy,
construe all opposite-wise!
Open your ears then and awake your wits:
hear what Mime means!
Here, take! and drink for refreshment!
my draughts freshened you often:
deep though your anger,
sullen your ire,
yet all I brought,
abusing,—you took ever.

SIEGFRIED: (ohne eine Miene zu verzieh'n). Einen guten Trank hätt' ich gern:
wie hast du diesen gebrau't?

MIME: Hei! so trink' nur:
trau' meiner Kunst!
In Nacht und Nebel sinken die Sinne dir bald:
ohne Wach' und Wissen, stracks streck'st du die Glieder.
Lieg'st du nun da, leicht könnt' ich die Beute nehmen und bergen:
doch erwachtest du je, nirgends wär' ich sicher vor dir,
hätt' ich selbst auch den Ring.
D'rum mit dem Schwert, das so scharf du schuf'st, hau' ich dem Kind den Kopf erst ab:
dann hab' ich mir Ruh' und den Ring!
(Er kichert wieder.)

SIEGFRIED: Im Schlafe willst du mich morden?

MIME: Was möcht' ich? sagt' ich denn das?— Ich will dir Kind nur den Kopf abhau'n!
Denn hasste ich dich auch nicht so hell, und hätt' ich des Schimpf's und der schändlichen Müh' auch nicht so viel zu rächen:
aus dem Weg dich zu räumen darf ich nicht rasten, wie käm' ich sonst anders zur Beute, da Alberich auch nach ihr lugt?—
Nun, mein Wälsung!
Wolfssohn du!
Sauf' und würg' dich zu Tod:
nie thu'st du mehr einen Schluck!

(Er hat sich nahe an Siegfried herangemacht, und reicht ihm jetzt mit widerlicher Zudringlichkeit ein Trinkhorn, in das er zuvor aus einem Gefässe das Getränk gegossen. Siegfried hat bereits das Schwert gefasst, und streckt jetzt, wie in einer Anwandlung heftigen Ekel's, Mime mit einem Streiche todt zu Boden.—Man hört Alberich aus dem Geklüft heraus ein höhnisches Gelächter aufschlagen.)

SIEGFRIED: Schmeck' du mein Schwert, ekliger Schwätzer!
Neides-Zoll
zahlt Nothung:
dazu durft' ich ihn schmieden.
(Er packt Mime's Leichnam auf, schleppt ihn nach der Höhle, und wirft ihn dort hinein.)
In der Höhle hier lieg' auf dem Hort!
Mit zäher List
erzieltest du ihn:
jetzt magst du des Wonnigen walten!—
Einen guten Wächter

SIEGFRIED: (without stirring in the least). Of a goodly draught were I glad:
of what compounded you this?

MIME: Hey! just try it:
trust to my skill!
In deathly darkness soon shall your senses be laid:
without mind or motion straight-stretched will your limbs be.
Lying then so,
light were it
the prize to take and deposit;
did you wake though again, never were I safe from your reach,
did I seize even the ring.
So with the sword
you have shaped so sharp truly I'll hew your head right off:
then I shall have rest and the ring!
(He chuckles again.)

SIEGFRIED: Must I be murdered in slumber?

MIME: What mean you? did I say that?— I will but chop from the child his head!
For, had I not hated
you so sore,
and had not your scoffs and my shameful endurance so loudly called for payment,
I must without pausing fling you from my pathway;
how else should I earn me the treasure which Alberich aims at as well?—
Now, my Volsung, valpine cub!
taste and vanish in death:
no more drink you will try.

(He has come close up to Siegfried and now hands him with offensive importunity a drinking horn into which he has previously poured the draught from his flask. Siegfried has already grasped his sword, and, as if with an impulse of sudden disgust, lays Mime dead to the ground with one stroke.—From the cleft Alberich is heard to send forth a peal of mocking laughter.)

SIEGFRIED: Taste my sword, infamous serpent!
"Needful" pays pests nimbly;
for this I forged the weapon.
(He seizes the body of Mime, drags it to the cave's mouth and throws it inside.)
In the hollow here lie with the hoard!
With stubborn lures
you strove for it,
so now with its wealth I reward
you!—
And a goodly watchdog
I give to you,

geb' ich dir auch,
dass er vor Dieben dich deckt.
(Er wälzt die Leiche des Wurmes vor den Eingang des Höhle, so dass er diesen ganz damit verstopft.)
Da lieg auch du, dunkler Wurm!
Den gleissenden Hort
hüte zugleich
mit dom beuterührigen Feind:
so fandet ihr beide nun Ruh'!
(Er kommt nach der Arbeit wieder vor.—Es ist Mittag.)
Heiss ward mir von der harten Last:— Brausend jagt sich mein brünstiges Blut;
die Hand brennt mir am Haupt.—
Hoch steht schon die Sonne:
aus lichtem Blau blickt ihr Aug'
auf den Scheitel steil mir herab.—
Linde Kühlugn
erkies' ich mir unter der Linde!
(Er streckt sich wieder unter der Linde aus.—Grosse Stille. Waldweben. Nach einem längeren Schweigen):
Noch einmal, liebes Vöglein, da wir so lang'
lästig gestört,— lauscht' ich gern deinem Sang auf dom Zweige seh' ich wohlig dich wiegen;
zwitschernd umschwirren dich Brüder und Schwestern, umschweben dich lustig und lieb!
Doch ich—bin so allein, hab' nicht Bruder noch Schwester,
meine Mutter schwand, meine Vater fiel:
nie sah sie der Sohn!—
Mein einz'ger Gesell war ein garst'ger Zwerg; Güte zwang
nie uns zu Liebe;
listige Schlingen
warf mir der Schlaue:—
nun musst' ich ihn gar erschlagen!— Freundliches Vöglein, dich frag' ich nun:
gönntest du mir
wohl ein gutes Gesell?
Willst du das Rechte mir rathen?
Ich lockte so oft,
und erloos't es nicht:
du, mein Trauter,
träf'st es wohl besser!
So recht ja riethest du schon:
nun sing'! ich lausche dem Sang.
(Schweigen; dann):

STIMME DES WALDVOGEL'S:
Hei! Siegfried erschlug nun den schlimmen Zwerg!
Jetzt wüsst' ich ihm noch
das herrlichste Weib.
Auf hohem Felsen sie schläft,
ein Feuer umbrennt ihren Saal:
durchschritt' er die Brunst,
erweckt' er die Braut,
Brünnhilde wäre dann sein!

that so no thieves may threaten.
(He drags the carcass of the dragon to the cave's mouth so as to stop it up with it completely.)
There you lie too, twining worm,
the glittering hoard
helping to guard,
with that booty-ravishing fool!
So find both at last your rest!
(He returns from his task.—It is midday.)
Hot am I with my heavy load!— Brawling speeds
my boiling blood;
my hand burns on my head.——
High stands the sun now!
In heaven's blue beams his eye, from the distance darting to me.—
Languid coolness shall court me under the lime tree!
(He again stretches himself under the lime tree.—Perfect stillness. Forest murmurs. After a long pause):
Now once more, lovely warbler, as we have lacked long a discourse,
I'd listen gladly to your song:
on the twig I see you restfully rocking:
twittering soar around brothers and sisters, encircling you, and loved.
But I—am all alone,
have no brother nor sister:
my mother sped,
my father fallen;— they saw their son never!—
I did but consort with a cankerous dwarf, kindness drew us not together;
guileful toils
the traitor contrived:—
to death was I forced to treat him!—
Friendliest warbler,
I would demand,
grant to me
a gracious friend.
Will you rightly counsel me to one?
I've called one so often and he comes to me never:
you, my favorite;
farest, sure, better!
Already rightly you've spoken;
now sing! I listen to our song.
(Silence; then):

VOICE OF THE WOODBIRD: Hey!
Siegfried has slain
now the sinister dwarf!
I foresee for him now
a glorious wife.
In guarded fastness she sleeps,
fire emborders the spot:
overstepped he the blaze,
waked he the bride,
Brünnhilde then would be his!

SIEGFRIED: (fährt mit jäher Heftigkeit vom Sitze auf). O holder Sang!
süssester Hauch!
Wie brennt sein Sinn mir sehnend die Brust!
Wie zückt er heftig zündend mein Herz!
Was jagt mir so jach durch Herz und Sinne?
Sing' es mir, süsser Freund!

DER WALDVOGEL: Lustig im Leid sing' ich von Liebe; wonnig und weh'
web' ich mein Lied:
nur Sehnende kennen den Sinn!

SIEGFRIED: Fort jagt mich's jauchzend von hinnen, fort aus dom Wald auf den Fels!
Noch einmal sage mir, holder Sänger:
werd' ich das Feuer durchbrechen!
kann ich erwecken die Braut?

DER WALDVOGEL: Die Braut gewinnt, Brünnhild' erweckt ein Feiger nie:
nur wer das Fürchten nicht kennt!

SIEGFRIED: (lacht auf vor Entzücken). Der dumme Knab' der das Fürchten nicht kennt!
mein Vöglein, das bin ja ich!
Noch heut' gab ich vergebens mir Müh', das Fürchten von Fafner zu lernen.
Nun brennt mich die Lust, es von Brünnhild' zu wissen:
wie find' ich zum Felsen den Weg?
(Der Vogel flattert auf, schwebt über Siegfried, und filegt davon.) (jauchzend). So wird mir der Weg gewiesen:
wohin du flatterst
folg' ich dem Flug!
(Er eilt dem Vogel nach.—Der Vorhang fällt.)

■ ACT III

WILDE GEGEND

Am Fusse eines Felsenberges, der links nach hinten steil aufsteigt.—Nacht, Sturm und Wetter, Blitz und Donner.
Vor einem gruftähnlichen Höhlenthore im Felsen steht der WANDERER: Wache! Wache!

Wala, erwache!
Aus langem Schlafe
weck' ich dich Schlummernde wach.
Ich rufe dich auf:
herauf! herauf!
Aus nebliger Gruft, aus nächt'gem Grunde herauf.
Erda! Erda!
Ewiges Weib!

SIEGFRIED: (starting impetuously to his feet). O lovely song!
Sweetest delight!
How burns its sense
my suffering breast!
How flies it headlong, firing my heart!
What swiftly oversways
my heart and senses?
Say to me, dearest friend!

THE WOODBIRD: Lightly, though desolate, I sing of loving;
cheerful in woe
weaving my tune;
warm hearts can alone comprehend!

SIEGFRIED: I hurry forward henceforth exulting;
forth from the wood to the mountain!—
But once more say to me, lovely singer,—
may I the furnace then break through?
waken the marvellous bride?

THE WOODBIRD: The bride is won, Brünnhilde awakened by faint heart never:
but by him who knows not fear.

SIEGFRIED: (laughing with delight). The stupid lad, who has not learned to fear,
dear flutter, that is myself!
Today I put me to profitless toil
this fearing to gather from Fafner.
I burn now to gain it from Brünnhilde's counsel:
who'll point me the path to her rock?
(The bird flutters, hovers over Siegfried and flies away.)
(shouting with joy). The road then direct me rightly:
my foot follows wherever you fly!
(He hastens after the bird.—The curtain falls.)

■ Act III

A WILD REGION

At the foot of a rocky mountain which rises steeply L. towards the back.—Night, storm, thunder, and lighting.
Before a vault-like hollow in the rocks stands the WANDERER: Waken, witch-wife!

Witch-wife, awaken!
Let lengthy sleep
wend from your slumbering eyes.
I summon you forth;
arise! arise!
from nebulous depths,
arise from night and darkness!
Erda! Erda!
undying witch!
From hidden abysses

Aus heimischer Tiefe tauche zur Höh'!
Dein Wecklied sing' ich,
dass du erwach'st;
aus sinnendem Schlafe sing' ich dich auf.
Allwissende!
Urweltweise!
Erda! Erda!
Ewiges Weib!
Wache, du Wala! erwache!
(Die Höhlengruft hat zu erdämmern begonne: in bläulichem Lichtscheine steigt Erda aus der Tiefe. Sie erscheint wie von Reif bedeckt; Haar und Gewand werfen einen glitzernden Schimmer von sich.)

ERDA: Stark ruft das Lied; kräftig reizt der Zauber:
ich bin erwacht
aus wissendem Schlaf:
wer scheucht den Schlummer mir?

WANDERER: Der Weckrufer bin ich, und Weisen üb' ich,
dass weithin wache was fester Schlaf umschliesst.
Die Welt durch zog ich, wanderte viel,
Kunde zu werben,
urweisen Rath zu gewinnen.
Kundiger giebt es keine als dich:
bekannt ist dir
was die Tiefe birgt, was Berg und Thal,
Luft und Wasser durchwebt.
Wo Wesen sind
weht dein Athem:
wo Hirne sinnen
haftet dein Sinn;
alles, sagt man,
sei dir bekannt.
Dass ich nun Kunde gewänne, weckt' ich dich aus dem Schlaf.

ERDA: Mein Schlaf ist Träumen, mein Träumen Sinnen, mein Sinnen Walten des Wissens.
Doch wenn ich schlafe, wachen Nornen:
sie weben das Seil,
und spinnen fromm was ich weiss:—
was frag'st du nicht die Nornen?

WANDERER: Im Zwange der Welt weben die Nornen:
sie können nichts wenden noch wandeln doch deiner Weisheit dankt' ich den Rath wohl, wie zu hemmen ein rollendes Rad?

ERDA: Männerthaten umdämmern mir den Muth:
mich Wissende selbst bezwang ein Waltender einst.
Ein Wunschmädchen
gebar ich Wotan:
der Heden Wal
heiss er für ihn sie küren.
Kühn ist sie
und weise auch:

bear you on high!
I sing your reveille,
let it arouse you;
from sentient slumber
All-knower of all world-wisdom!
Erda! Erda!
Undying witch!
Waken, witch-wife! awaken!
(The hollow has begun to glow with light. Erda rises from below in a bluish halo. She seems as if covered with frost; her hair and garments gleam with iridescent light.)

ERDA: Great might has song!
strongly moves the enchantment.
I am awakened from witful repose:
who drives my sleep away?

WANDERER: I am your summoner and song I utter to stir the senses sealed in bonds of slumber.
I roved through wander far to win tidings,
all-wisdom well to beware of.
Counsellors none can cope with your lore;
you can declare what the deep holds,
what hill and dale,
wind and tide contain.
Where life awakens
Your spirit walks, where brains are searching Your soul broods;
all things they say straight you can tell;
That you may surrender tidings
I arouse you from your sleep.

ERDA: My sleep is dreaming, my dream is searching,
my search for weapons of wisdom.
But while I slumber
wake the Nornen:
they weave at their rope and rightly spin what I wish—Why not seek the Nornen?

WANDERER: Controlled by the world weave on the Nornen, and they can weaken nor ward off nothing.
Yet would I thank Your wisdom to tell me how a wheel in its roll to arrest?

ERDA: Mortal workings bewilder much my mind:
a warder of heaven
subdued my will to him once I bore to Wotan
a wish-maiden, who by her will assembled bands of heroes.
Staunch is she and wise as well:

was weck'st du mich,
und frag'st um Kunde nicht Erda's und Wotan's Kind?

WANDERER: Die Walkäre mein'st du,
Brünnhild', die Maid?
Sie trotzte dem Stürmebezwinger:
wo am stärksten er selbst sich bezwang was den Lenker der Schlacht zu thun verlangte, doch dem er wehrte
—zuwider sich selbst—allzu vertraut wagte die Trotzige
das für sich zu vollbringen, Brünnhild' in brennender Schlacht.
Streitvater
strafte die Maid;
in ihr Auge drüuckt' er Schlaf;
auf dem Felsen schläft sie fest:
erwachen wird die Weihliche nur um einen Mann zu minnen als Weib.
Frommten mir Fragen an sie?

ERDA: (ist in Sinnen versunken, und beginnt erst längerem Schweigen). Wirr wird mir's seit ich erwacht:
wild und kraus
kreis't die Welt!
Die Walküre,
der Wala Kind,
büsst' in Banden des Schlaf's, als die wissende Mutter schlief?
Der den Trotz lehrte straft den Trotz?
Der die That entzündet zürnt um die That?
Der das Recht wahrt, der die Eide hütet—wehret dem Recht? herrscht durch Meineid?—
Lass' mich wieder hinab: Schlaf verschliesse mein Wissen!

WANDERER: Dich Mutter lass' ich nicht zieh'n, da des Zaubers ich mächtig bin.—
Urwissend
stachest du einst der Sorge Stachel in Wotan's wagendes Herz:
mit Furcht vor schmachvoll feindlichem Ende, füllt' ihn dein Wissen, dass Bangen band seinen Muth.
Bist du der Welt weisestes Weib,
sage mir nun:
wie besiegt die Sorge der Gott?

ERDA: Du bist—nicht was du nich nenn'st!
Was kam'st du störrischer Wilder zu stören der Wala Schlaf?
Friedloser,
lass' mich frei!
Löse des Zaubers Zwang!

why wake then me,
nor question challenge with Erda's and Wotan's child?

WANDERER: The Valkyrie, you mean?
Brünnhilde, my maid?
She disobeyed the tempest-subduer,
when in truth he had subdued himself;
what the fight-controller had willingly accomplished, but what he stifled
in spite of himself, Brünnhilde free sought then defiantly to accomplish unbidden, boldly in battle's assault.
Sternly descended his wrath;
on her eyes he laid magic sleep:
on the mountain she slumbers fast.
Awakened will
the war-maiden be,
but to mate with a man as his wife.
Can I then question with her?

ERDA: (has become absorbed in thought, and replies after a considerable silence). Weak I wax since I awoke;
wild and strange seems the world!
The war-maiden—
the witch's child, pines in penance of sleep which her wisdomful mother shares?
Does then pride's teacher punish pride?
Is the plan's arranger
wroth with the plan?
Does the right's defense—
Does the truth's upholder fetter the right—harbor untruth?
Let me quickly depart:
sleep my senses shall quiet!

WANDERER: You, mother, shaltl not depart while the power of magic I wield.—
All-witting struck once the sting of sorrow in Wotan's warrior heart:
with fear of shameful, fatal extinction
your wisdom filled him:
his courage was cowed by dismay.
Are you the world's wisest of women,
give me then advice:
how the god may grapple with care?

ERDA: You are scarce what you seem!
Why stubborn and wild one,
startle the witch from sleep?
Restless one,
let me rest!
Loose your constraining spell!

WANDERER: Du bist—nicht was du dich wähn'st!
Urmütter-Weisheit
geht zu Ende:
dein Wissen verweht vor meinem Willen.
Weisst du, was Wotan—will?
Dir Unweisen
ruf' ich's in's Ohr, dass du sorglos ewig nun schläf'st.—
Um der Götter Ende gräm't mich die Angst nicht, seit mein Wunsch es will!
Was in Zwiespalt's wildem Schmerze verzweifelnd einst ich beschloss, froh und freudig
führ' ich frei es nun aus:
weiht' ich in wüthendem Ekel des Niblungen Neid schon die Welt dem wonnigsten Wälsung weis' ich mein Erbe nun an.
Der von mir erkoren, doch nie mich gekannt,
ein kühnster Knabe, meines Rathes bar,
errang des Niblungen Ring:
ledig des Neides, liebesfroh,
erlahmt an dem Edlen Alberich's Fluch;
denn fremd bleibt ihm die Furcht.
Die du mir gebar'st,
Brünnhilde,
sie weckt hold sich der Held:
wachend wirkt dein wissendes Kind erlösende Weltenthat.— D'rum schlaf nun du,
schliesse dein Auge;
träumend erschau' mein Ende!
Was jene auch wirken—dem ewig Jungen weicht in Wonne der Gott.—
Hinab denn, Erda!
Urmütter-Furcht!
Ur-Sorge!
Zu ewigem Schlaf
hinab! hinab!—
Dort seh' ich Siegfried nah'n.—
(Erda versinkt. Die Höhle ist wieder ganz finster geworden: an dem Gestein derselben lehnt sich der Wanderer an, und erwartet so Siegfried.)— (Monddämmerung erhellt die Bühne etwas. Das Sturmwetter hört ganz auf.)

SIEGFRIED: (von rechts im Vordergrunde auftreten). Mein Vöglein schwebte mir fort;— mit flatterndem Flug und süsse Sang
wies es mir wonnig den Weg:
nun schwand es fern mir davon.
Am besten find' ich selbst nun den Berg:
wohin mein Führer mich wies, dahin wandr' ich jetzt fort.
(Er schreitet weiter nach hinten.)

WANDERER: You are—not what you think!
All-mother's wit
draws near its ending:
your wisdom wanes before my wishes. Do you wish what Wotan—wills?
Unwise,
I cry in your ear,
that you so unanxious may sleep.—
For the Aesir's ending
I feel no anguish,
since it works my will.
What in pain of wild dissension despairing once I resolved, willingly and fearless
I fitly finish here.
Once though I wished in my anger the Niblung might net him the world,
now, Volsung most gay,
willed is its heirdom to you!
One announced by me,
but to me unknown,
a notable novice,
without counsel from me,
has reached the Nibelung's ring.
Lacking in malice,
large of love,
he'll lightly disarm Alberich's curse;
for far bides he from fear.
She whom you have borne,
Brünnhilde,
will this hero hail.
When she wakes your child will work
a deed for the world's release.
Then slumber again,
seal up your eyelids, dream, and foresee my ending.
Whatever may happen
the god will always hail the heaven of love.
Away then, Erda!
All-mother-fear—
All-sorrow—
To endless sleep away! away!
I see that Siegfried comes.— (Erda vanishes. The hollow again becomes quite dark. The Wanderer leans against the rocks and awaits Siegfried.)— (Moonrise slightly illumines the stage. The storm has subsided.)

SIEGFRIED: (entering R. in the foreground). My favorite soars not before.—
With fluttering flight and sweetest song plainly it pointed the path:
now seems it far to have flown.
It were right to find the rock for myself:
the way my feathered friend went—there will I now fare.
(He goes further towards the back.)

WANDERER: (in seiner Stellung an der Hölhe verbleibend). Wohin, Knabe, heisst dich dein Weg?

SIEGFRIED: Da redet's ja:
wohl räth das mir den Weg.—
Einen Felsen such' ich, von Feuer ist der umwabert:
dort schläft ein Weib das ich wecken will.

WANDERER: Wer sagt' es dir den Fels zu suchen, wer nach der Frau dich zu sehnen!

SIEGFRIED: Mich wies es ein singend Waldvöglein:
das gab mir gute Kunde.

WANDERER: Ein Vöglein schwatzt wohl manches;
kein Mensch doch kann's versteh'n:
wie mochtest du Sinn dem Sange entnehmen?

SIEGFRIED: Das wirkte das Blut eines wilden Wurm's, der mir vor Neidhöhl' erblasste:
kaum netzt' es zündend die Zunge mir, da verstand ich der Vöglein Gestimm'

WANDERER: Erschlugst du den Riesen,
wer reizte dich,
den starken Wurm zu besteh'n?

SIEGFRIED: Mich führte Mime, ein falscher Zwerg;
das Fürchten wollt' er mich lehren:
zum Schwertschlag aber,
der ihn erschlug,
reizte der Wurm mich selbst;
seinen Rachen riss er mir auf.

WANDERER: Wer schuf das
Schwert
so scharf und hart, dass der stärkste Feind ihm fiel?

SIEGFRIED: Das schweisst' ich mir selbst, da's der Schmied nicht konnte:
schwertlos noch wär' ich wohl sonst.

WANDERER: Doch wer schuf die starken Stücken, daraus das Schwert du geschweisst?

SIEGFRIED: Was weiss ich davon!
Ich weiss allein, dass die Stücken nichts mir nützten, schuf ich das Schwert mir nicht
neu.

WANDERER: (bricht in ein freudig gemüthliches Lachen aus).
Das—mein' ich wohl auch!

SIEGFRIED: Was lach'st du mich
aus?
Alter Frager,
hör' einmal auf;
lass' mich nicht lange mehr schwatzen!

WANDERER: (remaining in his station by the cave). Say, boy where shall you bend your way?

SIEGFRIED: I hear a voice:
will he tell me the way?
For a rock I'm seeking around which fire wanders:
there sleeps a woman whom I would awaken.

WANDERER: Who stirred your mind
the mountain to seek and for the maiden to struggle?

SIEGFRIED: It was a singing wood minstrel who gave the good tidings.

WANDERER: A bird sings much nonsense;
but none may understand.
How did you know the song's import?

SIEGFRIED: It was by the blood of a wicked worm, whom I at Hate-cavern butchered:
scarcely had it tingled
the tongue of me when I straightaway the bird understood.

WANDERER: You slew the giant?
How germed in you
the scheme to fight with the serpent?

SIEGFRIED: I followed Mime, a faithless dwarf,
who wanted to teach me fearing.
The swordstroke, truly, beneath which he sank mainly the worm did seek;
with his jaws he menaced my life.

WANDERER: Who shaped the sword
so sharp and hard that so strong a foe it felled?

SIEGFRIED: I shaped it myself,
as the smith was helpless;
else should I be swordless still.

WANDERER: But who shaped the sturdy splinters from which you smelted the sword?

SIEGFRIED: What thought I of that?
But this I knew—for no work were fit those fragments were they not welded anew.

WANDERER: (breaking into a peal of good-humored laughter).
That well I admit!

SIEGFRIED: Why laugh you at me?
Old enquirer,
Listen once and for all;—
lead me no longer to chatter!
Can you direct the road to me, do so;

Kannst du den Weg
mir weisen, so rede:
vermag'st du's nicht,
so halte dein Maul!

WANDERER: Geduld, du Knabe!
Dünk' ich dich alt,
so sollst du mir Achtung bieten.

SIEGFRIED: Das wär' nicht übel!
So lang' ich lebe stand mir ein Alter stets im Wege:
den hab' ich nun fort gefegt.
Stemm'st du dort länger dich steif mir entgegen—sieh' dich vor, mein' ich, dass du wie Mime nicht fähr'st!
(Er tritt näher an den Wanderer heran.)
Wie sieh'st du denn aus?
Was hast du gar
für 'nen grossen Hut?
Warum hängt der dir so in's Gesicht?

WANDERER: Das ist so Wand'rers Weise, wenn dem Wind entgegen er geht.

SIEGFRIED: Doch darunter fehlt dir ein Auge?
Das schlug dir einer gewiss schon aus, dem du zu trotzig
den Weg vertrat'st?
Mach' dich jetzt fort!
sonst möchtest du leicht das and're auch noch verlieren.

WANDERER: Ich seh', mein Sohn, wo nichts du weisst, da weisst du dir leicht zu helfen Mit dem Auge, das als and'res mir fehlt, erblick'st du selber das eine, das mir zum Sehen verblieb.

SIEGFRIED: (lacht). Zum Lachen bist du mir lustig!—
Doch hör', nun schwatz' ich nicht länger:
geschwind zeig' mir den Weg, deines Weges ziehe dann du;
zu nichts and' rem
acht' ich dich nütz':
d'rum sprich, sonst spreng' ich dich fort!

WANDERER: Kenntest du mich, kühner Spross,
den Schimpf—spartest du mir!
Dir so vertraut,
trifft mich schmerzlich dein Dräu'n Liebt' ich von je deine lichte Art,— Grauen auch zeugt' ihr mein zürnender Grimm:
dem ich so hold bin.
allzu hehrer,
heut' nicht wecke mir Neid, er vernichtete dich und mich!

SIEGFRIED: Bleib'st du mir stumm, störrischer Wicht?
Weich' von der Stelle!
Denn dorthin, ich weiss,
führt es zur schlafenden Frau:
so wies es mein Vöglein,
das hier erst flüchtig entfloh.
(Es wird allmälig wieder ganz finster.)

WANDERER: (in Zorn ausbrechend). Es floh dir zu seinem Heil; den Herrn der Raben errieth es hier:
weh' ihm holen sie's ein!—
Den Weg, den es zeigte, sollst du nicht zieh'n!

SIEGFRIED: Hoho! du Verbieter!
Wer bist du denn,
dass du mir whren willst?

WANDERER: Fürchte des Felsens Hüter!
Verschlossen hält meine Macht die schlafend Maid wer sie erweckte, wer sie gewänne,
machtlos macht' er mich ewig!
Ein Feuermeer
umfluthet die Frau, glühende Lohe umleckt den Fels:
wer die Braut begehrt, dem brennt entgegen die Brunst.
(Er winkt mit dem Speere.) Blick' nach der Höh'!
erlug'st du das Licht?—
Es wächst der Schein, es schwillt die Gluth;
sengende Wolken, wabernde Lohe,
wälzen sich brennend
und prasselnd herab.
Ein Licht-Meer
umleuchtet dein Haupt:
bald frisst und zehrt dich zündendes Feuer:—
zurück denn, rasendes Kind!

SIEGFRIED: Zurück, du Prahler, mit dir!
Dort, wo die Brünste brennen, zu Brünnhilde muss ich jetzt hin.
(Er schreitet darauf zu.)

WANDERER: (den Speer vorhaltend). Fürchtest das Feuer du nicht, so sperre mein Speer dir den Weg!
Noch hält meine Hand
der Herrschaft Haft;
das Schwert, das du schwing'st, zerschlug einst dieser Schaft:
noch einmal denn
zerspring' es am ewigen Speer!

SIEGFRIED: (das Schwert ziehend). Meines Vaters Feind!
Find' ich dich hier?
Herrlich zur Rache gerieth mir das!
Schwing' deinen Speer:
in Stücken spalt' ihn mein Schwert!
(Er ficht mit dem Wanderer und haut ihm den Speer in Stücken. Furchtbarer Donnerschlag.)

WANDERER: (zurückweichend). Zieh' hin! Ich kann dich nicht halten.
(Er verschwindet.) and can you not then keep your mouth closed!

WANDERER: But patience, my youngster!
Since I am old
you should accord me some honor.

SIEGFRIED: That is a good one!
So long as I've lived ever in my way an old one waited, whom now I have swept aside.
Stay you here longer still planted before me,
it seems fit, see now,
that you should fare like Mime.
(He approaches nearer to the Wanderer.)
What do you look like?
Why have you on such an ample hat?
Why does it hang so far over your face?

WANDERER: Such is the way of Wanderer, when he goes against the wind.

SIEGFRIED: But below an eyeball is lacking!
No doubt you lost it to one of late,
when you too boldly
did bar his way.
Take yourself off,
or, maybe, I'll quench
the other one too, and quickly.

WANDERER: I see, my son, that where you know nothing,
you contrive to help yourself.
With an eye, too,
like the one that I lack you look on the other that yet is left for me to see.

SIEGFRIED: (laughing). Your language moves me to laughter.
But come! I'll quibble no longer.
Be quick! tell me the way;
then, I warn you, turn on your own!
In nothing else do
I need your aid,
so speak, or I'll spurn you aside!

WANDERER: Did you know me, daring son,
of scoffs you would be sparing!
Fiercely your taunts tear the heart that envelopes you.
Love though I bear to your lineage bright, fear too I've wrought
by my wrath when it fell.
You whom I cherish—youth enchanting—chafe not my spirit now to annihilate you and me!

SIEGFRIED: Dumb are you still, stubborn old creature?
Wend from your station!
For I know that way brings me to the slumbering bride.
So warned me the flutterer that here has fled from me first.
(It gradually becomes quite dark again.)

WANDERER: (breaking out into wrath). It fled you to save its life.
The lord of ravens its road did lead to:
woe to it, light they on it!—
The way that it pointed you shall not pass.

SIEGFRIED: Oho! my withholder!
And who are you that thus arrest my road?

WANDERER: Mock not the mountain's guardian!
A spell encompasses by my might the slumbering maid.
One who can wake her,— one who can win her,
makes me mightless forever!
A fiery main flows round her form, glittering lightnings overlook the mountain:
he who'd find the bride will feel the brunt of the fire.
(He points with his spear.)
Turn toward the hill!
Do you look on the light?
That waxing sheen,
that swelling glare—
smothering vapors, varying lightnings, vacillate burning and crackling downwards.
A light-flood illumines your head:
the furnace soon will seize and engulf you.—
Away then, foolhardy boy!

SIEGFRIED: Away, old boaster, yourself!
Straight where the blaze is burning to Brünnhilde's side will I go.
(He advances on him.)

WANDERER: (stretching out his spear). Have you no heed of the fire?
My spear then shall spare you no path!
My still hand holds the hallowed haft;
the sword that you sway was shivered on this shaft:
so too again
it will snap on the eternal spear!

SIEGFRIED: (drawing his sword). Then my father's foe faces me here?
How that will serve the
for sweet revenge!
Stretch out your spear:
my sword shall strike it to shreds.
(He attacks the Wanderer and hews his spear in pieces. Terrific clap of thunder.)

WANDERER: (recoiling). Advance! I cannot prevent you!
(He disappears.)

SIEGFRIED: Mit zerfocht'ner Waffe wich mir der Feige?
(Mit wachsender Helle haben sich Feuerwolken aus der Höhe des Hintergrundes herabgesenkt: die ganze Bühne erfüllt sich wie von einem wogenden Flammenmeere.) Ha, wonnige Gluth! leuchtender Glanz!
Strahlend offen
steht mir die Strasse.—
Im Feuer mich baden!
Im Feuer zu finden die Braut!
Hoho! hoho!
hahaei! hahei!
Lustig! lustig!
Jetzt lock' ich ein liebes Gesell!
(Er setzt sein Horn an, und stürzt sich, seine ●●● weise blasend, in das Feuer,—Die Lohe ergiesst sich nun auch über den ganzen Vordergrund. Man hört Siegfried's Horn erst näher, dann ferner.—Die Feuerwolken ziehen immer von hinten nach vorn, so dass Siegfried, dessen Horn man wieder näher hört, sich nach hinten zu, die Höhe hinauf, zu wenden scheint.)

Die Scene, von der das Gewölk gänzlich gewichen ist, stellt die Höhe eines Felsengipfels (wie im dritten Aufzuge der "Walküre") dar: links der Eingang eines natürlichen Felsengemaches; rechts breite Tannen; der Hintergrund ganz frei.—Im Vordergrunde unter dem Schatten einer breitästigen Tanne, liegt Brünnhilde, in tiefem Schlafe: sie ist in vollständiger, glänzender Panzerrüstung, mit dem Helm auf dem Haupte, den langen Schild über sich gedeckt.—Siegfried ist so eben im Hintergrunde, am felsigen Saume der Höhe, angelangt. (sin Horn hatte zuletzt wieder ferner geklungen, bis es ganz schwieg.)—Er blickt staunend um sich.)

Selige Oede
auf sonniger Höh'!—
(In den Tann hinein sehend.)
Was ruht dort schlummernd
Im schattigen Tann?— Ein Ross ist's, rastend in tiefem Schlaf!
(Er betritt vollends die Höhe, und schreitet langsam weiter vor; als er Brünnhilde noch aus einiger Entfernung gewahrt, hält er verwundert an.)
Was strahlt mir dort entgegen?—
Welch' glänzendes Stahlgeschmeide!

SIEGFRIED: With defeated weapon flies my foe?
(Fiery clouds have descended from the heights at back with increasing brightness: the entire stage becomes filled with a rolling sea of fire.)
Ha! heavenly glow!
brightning glare!
roads are now opening radiantly around me.
In fire will I bathe, through fire will I fare to my bride!
Oho! Oho!
Aha! Aha!
Gaily! gaily!
Soon greets me a glorious friend!
(He winds his horn and plunges into the fire, blowing his call—The fire now flows over the whole foreground. Siegfried's horn is heard, first near, then more distant.—The fiery clouds continue to pour from the back towards the front, so that Siegfried, whose horn is now again heard nearer, appears to be ascending the mountain.)

(At last the glow begins to fade and sinks to a fine transparent veil, which also clears off and reveals the lovely-clear blue sky and bright weather.—The scene, from which all the vapors have fled, represents the summit of a rocky mountain-peak (as in the third Act of the "Valkyrie"): L. the entrance to a natural rocky field; R. spreading fir trees; the background quite open.—In the foreground beneath the shade of a spreading fir tree, lies Brünnhilde in deep sleep; she is in a complete suit of gleaming plate armor, with helmet on her head and long shield over her body.—Siegfried has now reached the rocky heights in the background. (His horn has sounded more and more distant till it ceased altogether.) He looks around in astonishment.)

Sweet is this haven on sun-illuminated heights!—
(Looking into the wood.)
What calmly slumbers beneath shadowy trees?
A war-horse,
waiting in tranquil sleep!
(He surmounts the height completely and advances slowly; on seeing Brünnhilde at a little distance he pauses in surprise.)
What strikes me with its gleaming?
What glittering suit of steel!
Blind are my eyes
as yet with the blaze!

Blendet mir noch die Lohe den Blick?— (Er tritt näher hinzu.)
Helle Waffen!—
Heb' ich sie auf?
(Er hebt den Schild ab, und erblickt Brünnhilde's Gesicht, das jedoch der Helm noch zum grossen Theils verdeckt.)
Ha! in Waffen ein Mann:—
wie mahnt mich wonnig sein Bild!
Das hehre Haupt drückt wohl der Helm?
leichter würd' ihm,
löst' ich den Schmuck.
(Vorsichtig löst er den Helm und hebt ihn der Schlafenden vom Haupte ab: langes, lockiges Harr bricht hervor.—Siegfried erschrickt.)
Ach!—wie schön!—
(Er bleibt in den Anblick versunken.) Schimmernde Wolken
säumen in Wellen den hellen Himmelssee:
leuchtender Sonne lachendes Bild strahlt durch das Wogengewölk!
(Er lauscht dem Athem.) Von schwellendem Athem schwingt sich die Brust:—
brech' ich die engende Brünne?
(Er versucht es mit grosser Behutsamkeit—aber e vergebens.) Komm', mein Schwert, schneide das Eisen!
(Er durchschneidet mit zarter Vorsicht die Panzer-ringe zu beiden Seiten der ganzen Rüstung, und hebt dann die Brünne und die Schienen ab, so dass nun Brünnhilde in einem weichen weiblichen Gewande vor ihm liegt.—Überrascht und staunend fährt er auf.)
Das ist kein Mann!—
Brennender Zauber
zückt mir in's Herz;
feurige Angst
fasst meine Augen:
mir schwankt und schwindelt der Sinn!
Wen ruf' ich zum Heil, dass er mir helfe?—
Mutter! Mutter!
Gedenke mein'!—

(Er sinkt mit der Stirn an Brünnhilde's Busen Langes Schweigen—Dann fährt er seufzend auf.) Wie weck' ich die Maid, dass sie die Augen mir öff'ne?—
Das Auge mir öff'nen?
Blende mich auch noch der Blick Wagt' es mein Trotz?
ertrüg' ich das Licht?—
Mir schwebt und schwankt und schwirrt es umher;
sehrendes Sengen zehrt meine Sinne: am zagenden Herzen zittert die Hand!—
Wie ist mir Feigem?—
Ist es das Fürchten?—

(He comes nearer.) Shining weapons!—
Shall lift them off?
(He raises the shield and discovers Brünnhilde's face, which the helmet still in a great measure conceals.)
Ha! a warrior, sure!
I scan with wonder his form!—
His haughty head is pressed by the helmet;
lighter would he lie were it loosened.
(He carefully unfastens the helmet and removes it from the sleeper; long, curling hair breaks forth.—Siegfried starts.)
Ah!—how fair!
(He remains absorbed in contemplation.) Fleecy as cloudlets fringing the clearness of azure ether seas:
laughing, the sun's enlightening face shines through the cluster of clouds.
(He listens for the sleeper's breath.)
But heavily breathing heaves his breast:
better to open his corselet
(He tries very cautiously, but in vain.)
Come, my sword, cut through the iron!
(With tender care he cuts through the rings of mail on each side, and lifts off the corselet and greaves, so that Brünnhilde then lies before him in a soft, female clothing. Surprised and astonished, he starts back.)
This is no man!
Burning enchantment charges my heart;
fiery awe
falls on my eyesight;
my senses stagger and sway.
O whom shall I hail that he may help me?
Mother! Mother!
look down on me!—
(He sinks with his head on Brünnhilde's bosom.—Long silence.—Then he starts up suddenly.)

O what shall I do that she may open her eyelids?—
Her eyes to me open!
Blind then were mine with their blaze.
How could I dare endure such a light?
All sways and swims and staggers around;
scorching desires entangle my senses, and trembles my heart
at touch of my hand!
What is this feeling?
Can it be fearing?
O mother! mother!
how mighty your son!
A woman folded in sleep

O Mutter! Mutter! dein muthiges Kind! Im Schlafe liegt eine Frau:— die hat ihn das Fürchten gelehrt!— Wie end' ich die Furcht? wie fass' ich Muth?— Dass ich selbst erwache, muss die Maid ich erwecken!— Süss erbebt mir ihr blühender Mund: wie mild erzitternd mich Zagen er reizt!— Ach, dieses Athem's wonnig warmes Gedüft!— Erwache erwache! heiliges Weib!— Sie hört mich nicht.— So saug' ich mir Leben aus süssesten Lippen— sollt' ich auch sterbend vergeh'n! (Er küsst sie lange und inbrünstig.—Erschreckt fährt er dann in die Höhe:—Brünnhilde hat die Augen aufgeschlagen.—Staunend blickt er sie an. Beide verweilen eine Zeit lang in ihren gegenseitiger Anblick versunken.)	at last has enslaved him with fear! How can I be calm— recall my mind? Before I quell this weakness must the maid be awakened? Sweetly beckons her blossoming mouth: what mild alarms in me lightly it stirs!— Ah! and the ardent winning warmth of her breath! Awaken! awaken! maiden bewitched!— She hears me not.— Then life I will drain me from lips the most dainty, did they even doom me to death! (He imprints a long and ardent kiss upon her lips.—He starts back in surprise; Brünnhilde has opened her eyes. He gazes on her in astonishment. Both remain for some time absorbed in mutual contemplation.)
BRÜNNHILDE: (langsam und feierlich sich zum Sitze aufrichtend). Heil dir, Sonne! Heil dir, Licht! Heil dir, leuchtender Tag! Lang war mein Schlaf; ich bin erwacht: wer ist der Held, der mich erweckt'?	BRÜNNHILDE: (slowly and solemnly rising to a sitting position). Hail, sunshine! Hail, light! Hail loveliest day! long was my rest; I rise from sleep. say, who is he that wakes my sense?
SIEGFRIED: (von ihrem Blicke und ihrer Stimme feierlich ergriffen). Durch das Feuer drang ich, das den Fels umbrann; ich erbrach dir den festen Helm: Siegfried heiss' ich, der dich erweckt'.	SIEGFRIED: (awestruck by her appearance and voice). I thrust through the fire that burns round the mountain, and I broke your defending helmet. I'm Siegfried. by whom you are waked.
BRÜNNHILDE: (hoch aufgerichtet sitzend). Heil euch, Götter! Heil dir, Welt! Heil dir, prangende Erde! Zu End' ist nun mein Schlaf: erwacht seh' ich: Siegfried ist es der mich erweckt!	BRÜNNHILDE: (sitting erect). Hail, gods all! Hail, world! Hail, glories of nature! Unknit is now my sleep; I stand awake; Siegfried, it is who unwinds the spell!
SIEGFRIED: (in erhabenster Entzückung). O Heil der Mutter die mich gebar; Heil der Erde, die mich genährt: dass ich das Auge erschaut, das jetzt mir Seligem strahlt!	SIEGFRIED: (in exalted rapture). O hail to her who gave me to life! Hail to earth, my fostering nurse! that I should ever have seen the sight that smiles on me here!
BRÜNNHILDE: (mit grösster Bewegtheit). O Heil der Mutter, die dich gebar; Heil der Erde, die dich genährt: nur dein Blick durfte mich schau'n erwachen durft' ich nur dir!— O Siegfried! Siegfried! seliger Held! Du Wecker des Lebens, siegendes Licht! O wüsstest du, Lust der Welt, wie ich dich je geliebt! Du war'st mein Sinnen mein Sorgen du! Dich Zarten nährt' ich noch eh' du gezeugt; noch eh' du geboren barg dich mein Schild: so lang' lieb' ich dich, Siegfried!	BRÜNNHILDE: (deeply stirred). O hail to her who gave you to life! Hail to earth, you fostering nurse! But one glance was to behold me: for you I was to awake. O Siegfried! Siegfried! sanctified hero! wakener of life, sovereign light! O know, lord of worlds, since what time you have had my love! You were my object, You were my aim! I fostered you before you were formed; before you were born I brought you my shield: so long I've loved you Siegfried.
SIEGFRIED: (leise und schüchtern). So starb nicht meine Mutter? schlief die Minnige nur?	SIEGFRIED: (gently and bashfully). My mother did not die then? she merely drooped in sleep?
BRÜNNHILDE: (lächelnd). Du wonniges Kind, deine Mutter kehrt dir nicht wieder Du selbst bin ich, wenn du mich Selige lieb'st. Was du nicht weisst, weiss ich für dich: doch wissend bin ich nur—weil ich dich liebe.— O Siegfried! Siegfried! siegendes Licht! dich liebt' ich immer; denn mir allein erdünkte Wotan's Gedanke. Der Gedanke, den nie ich nennen durfte; den ich nicht dachte, sondern nur fühlte; für den ich focht, kämpfte und stritt; für den ich trotzte dem, der ihn dachte; für den ich büsste, Strafe mich band, weil ich nicht ihn dachte und nur empfand! Denn der Gedanke— dürftest du's lösen!— mir war er nur Liebe zu dir!	BRÜNNHILDE: (smiling). Innocent child, you will never be charmed by her image. I am you, if your pure spirit can love. What you want well can I teach: but wisdom only grew—because I loved you, O Siegfried! Siegfried! sovereign light! I loved you always, for I alone distinguished Wotan's intention. The intention that I never named nor told of, that I never tested— I only felt it:— for which I fought, struggled and strove, for which I flouted him who framed it, for which I suffered in penance of sleep, having never thought it, but known it still! Truly, that intention— it is for your solving— was but that my love should be yours!
SIEGFRIED: Wie Wunder tönt was wonnig du sing'st: doch dunkel dünkt mich der Sinn. Deines Auges Leuchten seh' ich licht; deines Athem's Wehen fühl' ich warm; deiner Stimme Singen hör' ich süss: doch was du singend mir sag'st staunend versteh' ich's nicht. Nicht kann ich das Ferne sinnig erfassen, da all' meine Sinne dich nur sehen und fühlen Mit banger Furcht fesselst du mich; du Einz'ge hast ihre Angst mich gelehrt. Den du gebunden in mächt'gen Banden, birg' meinen Muth mir nicht mehr!	SIEGFRIED: With winning tones what wonders you sing of: but my senses seem to grow dark. By your eyes' fair light I stand illuminated, by your ardent breath my breast is warmed, by your singing sweet my ears are sooth; but what you say in song strangely strikes my mind. Now nothing can I fathom subtle and far off, for every sense is centered and fastened on you. With timid fear you fill me: you only have awakened in me awesomeness. You who bound me with manacles breakless, bring back my manhood once more!
BRÜNNHILDE: (wehrt ihn sanft ab, und wendet ihren Blick nach dem Tann). —Dort seh' ich Grane, mein selig Ross: wie weidet er munter, der mit mir schlief! Mit mir hat ihn Siegfried erweckt.	BRÜNNHILDE: (gently repulses him and turns her eyes towards the wood). There feeds Grani, my faithful steed: how briskly he wanders who with me slept! He too was by Siegfried awakened.

SIEGFRIED: Auf wonnigem Munde weidet mein Auge:
in brünstigem Durst
doch brennen die Lippen, dass der Augen Weide sie labe!

BRÜNNHILDE: (ihn mit der Hand bedeutend). Dort seh' ich den Schild, der Helden schirmte;
dort seh' ich den Helm,
der das Haupt mir barg:
er schirmt, er birgt mich nicht mehr!

SIEGFRIED: Eine selige Maid
versehrte mein Herz; Wunden dem Haupte
schlug mir ein Weib:—
ich kam ohne Schild und Helm!

BRÜNNHILDE: (mit gesteigerter Wehmuth). Ich sehe der Brünne prangenden Stahl:
ein scharfes Schwert
schnitt sie entzwei;
von dem maidlichen Leibe löst' en die Wehr:—
ich bin ohne Schutz und Schirm, ohne Trutz ein trauriges Weib!

SIEGFRIED: Durch brennendes Feuer fuhr ich zu dir;
nicht Brünne noch Panzer barg meinen Leib:
mir in die Brust
brach nun die Lohe, es braus't mein Blut in blühender Brunst;
ein zehrendes Feuer
ist mir entzündet:
die Gluth, die Brünnhild's Felsen umbrann, die brennt mir nun in der Brust!— Du Weib, jetzt lösche den Brand!
schweige die schäumende Gluth!
(Er umfasst sie heftig; sie springt auf, wehrt ihm mit der höchsten Kraft der Angst, und entflieht nach der andern Seite.)

BRÜNNHILDE: Kein Gott nahte mir je:
der Jungfrau neigten scheu sich die Helden:
heilig schied sie aus Walhall!—
Wehe! Wehe!
Wehe der Schmach,
der schmählichen Noth!
Verwundet hat mich,
der mcih erweckt!
Er erbrach mir Brünne und Helm:
Brünnhilde bin ich nicht mehr!

SIEGFRIED: Noch bist du mir die träumende Maid: Brünnhilde's Schlaf
brach ich noch nicht.
Erwache! sei mir ein Weib!

BRÜNNHILDE: Mir schwirren die Sinne!
Mein Wissen schweigt:
soll mir die Weisheit schwinden?

SIEGFRIED: Sang'st du mir nicht, dein Wissen sei
das Leuchten der Liebe zu mir?

SIEGFRIED: On glorious lips my glances are feasting;
with feverish thirst
I feel my own burning, till the eyes' refreshment they taste of.

BRÜNNHILDE: (pointing with her hand). I see there the shield that sheltered heroes;
I see there the helmet
that did protect my head;
they'll shield—they'll ward me no more!

SIEGFRIED: As a woman divine you wound my heart;
mortal the hurt
so shaped by a maid:—
I came without shield or helmet.

BRÜNNHILDE: (with growing melancholy). I see there the coat of mail's glittering steel;
a sturdy sword split it apart and the maiden's protection tore from her form:
without either shelter or shield
but a weak woman I feel!

SIEGFRIED: Through billows of fire
I fared to your side;
nor byrnie nor shield defends my body,
Now burst the flames
unchecked in my breast;
now bounds my blood
in blissful blaze;
a rapturous fire
is raging within me:
the flames that round Brünnhilde once roared now rend me with fearful wrath.
O maid, extinguish the rays!
still this disturbance in me!
(He seizes her impetuously; she springs up, repulses him with the utmost strength of terror and flies to the opposite side.)

BRÜNNHILDE: No god has touched me! as a maiden ever heroes revered me:
virgin I came from Valhalla!—
Woe's me! woe's me!
Woe for the shame,
the shunless disgrace!
My wakening hero
deals me this wound!
He has burst my byrnie and helmet:
I am Brünnhilde I no more!

SIEGFRIED: Still you're to me
the slumbering maid:
Brünnhilde's sleep
binds her yet.
Awaken! be my wife!

BRÜNNHILDE: My senses are swaying,
my wit forsakes me:
shall all my wisdom escape me?

SIEGFRIED: Didn't you say that your wisdom showed the light of love on me?

BRÜNNHILDE: Trauriges Dunkel
trübt mir den Blick;
mein Auge dämmert,
das Licht verlischt:
Nacht wird's um mich:
aus Nebel und Grau'n
windt sich wüthend ein Angstgewirr.
Schrecken schreitet
und bäumt sich empor!
(Sie birgt heftig die Augen mit den Händen.)

SIEGFRIED: (lös't ihr sanft die Hände vom Blicke). Nacht umbangt gebundene Augen;
mit den Fesseln schwindet das finst're Grau'n:
tauch' aus dem Dunkel und sieh—sonnenhell leuchtet der Tag!

BRÜNNHILDE: (in höchster Ergriffenheit). Sonnenhell leuchtet der Tag meiner Noth!—
O Siegfried! Siegfried!
Sieh' meine Angst!
Ewig war ich,
ewig bin ich,
ewig in süss sehnender Wonne—doch ewig zu deinem Heil!
O Siegfried! Herrlicher!
Hort der Welt!
Leben der Erde!
Lachender Held!
Lass', ach lass'!
lasse von mir!
Nahe mir nicht
mit der wüthenden Nähe!
Zwinge mich nicht
mit dem brechenden Zwang!
Zertrümm're die Traute dir nicht!—
Sah'st du dein Bild im klaren Bach?
Hat es dich Frohen erfreut?
Rührtest zur Woge das Wasser du auf;
zerflösse die klare Fläche des Bach's:
dein Bild säh'st du nicht mehr, nur der Welle schwankend Gewog'
So berühre mich nicht, trübe mich nicht:
ewig licht
lachst du aus mir
dann selig selbst dir entgegen, froh und heiter ein Held!—
O Siegfried! Siegfried!
leuchtender Spross!
Liebe—dich,
und lasse von mir:
vernichte dein Eigen nicht!

SIEGFRIED: Dich—lieb' ich:
o liebtest mich du!
Nicht hab' ich mehr mich
o hätte ich dich!—
Ein herrlich Gewässer wogt vor mir;
mit allen Sinnen
seh' ich nur sie, die wonnig wogende Welle:
brach sie mein Bild,
so brenn' ich nun selbst,

BRÜNNHILDE: Dismal blackness dazes my sight;
my eyes are blinded,
their light is lost:
night veils me.
In vaporous mists is foully forced up a grisly fear:
horrors haunt and encompass me.
(She clasps her hand over her eyes hastily.)

SIEGFRIED: (gently drawing her hands from her face). Darkness frightens closed eyelids;
set them free, and fled is the fearsome spell.
Draw from the shadow and see:— with bright sunshine smiles the day.

BRÜNNHILDE: (in extreme agitation). Bright sunshine smiles this day on my shame!—
O Siegfried! Siegfried!
See how I dread!—
Deathless was I deathless am I, deathless to sweet sway of affection—but deathless for your safety!
O Siegfried! happiest hope of the world!
Life of the universe!
Lordliest hero!
Listen! ah listen!
Leave me in peace!
Press not upon me
your ardent approaches!
Master me not with your conquering might!
Your servant, O sully her not!— You saw ever your face in crystal floods?
Did it not gladden your glance?
When into wavelets
the water was roused, the brook's glassy surface broken and flawed
you saw your face no more:
nothing but ripples swirling around.
So disturb me no more, trouble me not:
ever then you will shine in me an image reflected, fair and lovely, my lord!—
O Siegfried! Siegfried! light of my soul!
Love—yourself,
and leave me in peace:
destroy not your faithful slave!

SIEGFRIED: I love—you:
Do you love me?
I have no more self:
O had I only you—
The grandest of floods rolls before me, and all my senses
seize on the sight, these billows beauteous and buoyant.
Likeness—be lost!

sengende Gluth
in der Fluth zu kühlen;
ich selbst, wie ich bin, spring' in den Bach:—
o dass seine Wogen mich selig verschlängen, mein Sehnen schwänd' in der Fluth!— Erwache, Brünnhilde!
Wache, du Maid!
Lebe und lache,
süsseste Lust!
Sei mein! sei mein! sei mein.

BRÜNNHILDE: O Siegfried!
dein—
war ich von je!

SIEGFRIED: War'st du's von je,
so sei es jetzt!

BRÜNNHILDE: Dein werde ich ewig sein!

SIEGFRIED: Was du sein wirst, sei es mir heut'!
Fasst dich mein Arm,
umschling' ich dich fest;
schlägt meine Brust brünstig die deine;
zünden die Blicke,
zehren die Athem sich;
Aug' in Auge, Mund an Mund:
dann bist du mir,
was bang du mir war'st und wirst!
Dann brach sich die brennende Sorge, ob jetzt Brünnhilde mein?
(Er hat sie umfasst.)

BRÜNNHILDE: Ob jetzt ich dein?— Göttliche Ruhe
ras't mir in Wogen;
keuschestes Licht
lodert in Gluthen;
himmlisches Wissen
stürmt mir dahin, Jauchzen der Liebe
jagt es davon!
Ob jetzt ich dein!—
O Siegfried! Siegfried!
siehst du mich nicht?
Wie mein Blick dich verzehrt, erblindest du nicht?
Wie mein Arm dich presst!
entbrennst du nicht?
Wie in Strömen mein Blut entgegen dir stürmt, das wilde Feuer
fühlst du es nicht?
Fürchtest du, Siegfried, fürchtest du nicht
das wild wüthende Weib?

SIEGFRIED: Ha'—
Wie des Blutes Ströme sich zünden wie der Blicke Strahlen sich zehren wie die Arme brünstig sich pressen, kehrt mir zurück
mein kühner Muth, und das Fürchten, ach!

I long now myself straightaway my fire in the flood to slacken;
at once I would spring into the stream:
O, that its waters
in bliss might embrace me, and abate my blaze with its wave!—
Awake, Brünnhilde!
waken, maid!
Laugh that you live,
sweetest delight!
Be mine! be mine! be mine!

BRÜNNHILDE: O Siegfried! Yours ever I've been!

SIEGFRIED: Ever you've been?
Then so abide.

BRÜNNHILDE: Yours ever will I be.

SIEGFRIED: What you then were,
be to me now.
Fast in my arms,
wrapped in their fold, resting your breast beating against mine, while glances and breath are glowing with eagerness, eye to eye,
and lip to lip—
as you said, you were and will be.
How briskly were banished your fears if indeed Brünnhilde were mine!
(He has clasped her with his arms.)

BRÜNNHILDE: If I am yours!
Godlike repose is plunged into tempest, once tranquil radiance rises to frenzy, heavenly teachings
from me are hid, wildness of passion
whirls it away!
If I am yours!
O Siegfried! Siegfried! Do you not see me?
When my eyes devour yours,
then are you not blind?
by my arm embraced you,
then burn you not?
and when seething my blood against you does surge, its fiery fury
you feel not?
You fear, Siegfried—you fear not the mad, mutinous maid?

SIEGFRIED: Ha! How the glowing bloodstreams are bounding!
How the glances brightly are burning!
How our arms are gladly entwining!
Comes now back
my courage bold,

das nie ich gelernt—das Fürchten, das du kaum mich gelehrt:
das Fürchten—mich dünkt—
ich Dummer, vergass es schon wieder.
(Er lässt bei den letzten Worten Brünnhilde unwill kürlich los.)

BRÜNNHILDE: (im höchsten Liebesfuer wild auflachend). O kindischer Held!
O herrlicher Knabe!
du hehrster Thaten thöriger Hort!
Lachend muss ich dich lieben, lachend will ich erblinden;
lachend lass' uns verderben—lachend zu Grunde geh'n!
Fahr' hin, Walhall's leuchtende Welt!
Zerfall' in Staub
deine stolze Burg!
Leb' wohl, prangende Götter-Pracht!
Ende in Wonne,
du ewig Geschlecht!
Zerreisst, ihr Nornen, das Runenseil!
Götter-Dämm'rung,
dunkle herauf!
Nacht der Vernichtung, neble herein!—
Mir strahlt zur Stunde Siegfried's Stern:
er ist mir ewig,
er ist mir immer,
Erb' und Eigen,
ein' und all':
leuchtende Liebe,
lachender Tod!

SIEGFRIED: (mit Brünnhilde zugleich). Lachend erwachst du Wonnige mir:
Brünnhilde lebt!
Brünnhilde lacht!—
Heil der Sonne, die uns bescheint!
Heil dem Tage
der uns umleuchtet!
Heil dem Licht,
das der Nacht enttaucht!
Heil der Welt,
der Brünnhild' erwacht!
Sie wacht! sie lebt!
sie lacht mir entgegen!
Prangend strahlt
mir Brünnhilde's Stern!
Sie ist mir ewig,
sie ist mir immer,
Erb' und Eigen,
ein' und all';
leuchtende Liebe,
lachender Tod!
(Brünnhilde stürzt sich in Siegfried's Armes.)

Der Vorhang Fällt.

and this fearing, ah!
that to me was strange—this fear, that scarce even you could bestow—this fearing—I feel—that fool-like, again it is forgot.
(With the last words he has unconsciously released Brünnhilde.)

BRÜNNHILDE: (laughing in wild transport of passion). O high-minded boy!
O blossoming hero!
Babe of prowess past all that breathe!
Gladly love do I glow with, gladly yield to you blindly, gladly glide to destruction, gladly go down to death!
Far from here, Valhall' lofty and vast,
let fall your structure of stately towers;
farewell, grandeur
and pride of gods!
End in rapture
Aesir, your reign!
Go rend, Nornen,
your rope of runes!
Round us darken,
Dusk of the gods!
Night of annulment
now on us gain!
here still is streaming Siegfried, my star.
He is forever,
is for always my own, my only and my all.— Love that illuminates
laughing at death.

SIEGFRIED: (with Brünnhilde).
Gladly, bewitcher,
wake to me.
Brünnhilde lives,
Brünnhilde laughs!—
Hail the heavens, smiling in lightness!
Hail the sun
which shines down on us!
Hail the light that has burst from night!
Hail the world where Brünnhilde lives.!
She wakes, she lives!
she laughs as she greets me:
proudly streams down
Brünnhilde, my star.
She is forever,
is for always my own, my only and my all.
Love that illuminates
laughing at death.
(Brünnhilde throws herself into Siegfried's arms.)

The Curtain falls.

Götterdämmerung (1876)

The Dusk of the Gods

MUSIC & LIBRETTO BY RICHARD WAGNER

This three-act opera with prologue premiered at the Festspielhaus in Bayreuth on August 17, 1876. The story begins on the Valkyries' rock during the night. Flames light up the night as the three Norns weave the fate of men with that of the gods. The thread breaks and the Norns return to Erda, the goddess of Earth. Siegfried and Brünnhilde emerge from a cave at sunrise after their first night of love. She gives him Grane, her horse, and he gives her the ring. In the Hall of the Gibichungs, near the banks of the Rhine, Gunther and Gutrune, children of Gibich and Grimhild, rule with the advice of Hagen, their half-brother, child of Grimhild and Alberich. Hagen continues his father's quest for the ring. He causes Gunther to pine for Brünnhilde, without telling him that she is already married to Siegfried. He tells Gutrune to prepare a potion that will erase Siegfried's memory of any previous love the moment he sets eyes on the next woman who comes along—Gutrune. To please Gunther, Hagen will have Brünnhilde brought from the rock where she sleeps. Gutrune gives Siegfried the drink; he begs Gunther to marry him. They may marry if Siegfried wins Brünnhilde for Gunther. On the mountain, Waltraute pleads with Brünnhilde, her sister, begging her to return the ring to the Rhine maidens, thus saving Valhalla and the gods. Brünnhilde refuses, as it is a symbol of Siegfried's love. She hears his horn, but when he arrives he is unrecognizable—the Tarnhelm has transformed him so that he appears as Gunther. She tries to resist him; Siegfried pulls the ring off her finger and sends her into the cave. Hagen sees Alberich in a vision. He commands him to get the ring for the Nibelung and to be faithful to the memory of his father. Siegfried returns, Brünnhilde and Gunther behind him. The Gibich soldiers and serfs greet the bride and groom. Brünnhilde, stoic until she hears Siegfried's name, is shocked that he does not recognize her. She points to the ring on his finger, declaring that it was taken from her by the man who brought her through the fire. Gunther thinks that Siegfried has betrayed him, but Siegfried swears the ring was found amongst the dragon's booty. Brünnhilde swears vengeance. She, Gunther and Hagen plot to kill Siegfried during a boar hunt. The Rhine maidens beg Siegfried to return the ring, but even their warning, foretelling his death, can't change his mind. Gunther and Hagen ask him to tell them about himself while they rest. Siegfried relates as much as he can remember until his mind goes blank. Hagen gives him an antidote to the potion Gutrune had given him. Siegfried speaks of his discovery of Brünnhilde and their love. Two ravens fly off to tell the gods to prepare for catastrophe. Siegfried turns to look at the birds, and Hagen stabs him in the back—the only part of him Brünnhilde has not protected with her magic. Siegfried's last words are to Brünnhilde. Gunther condemns Hagen for Siegfried's murder, and Hagen kills him. Hagen approaches Siegfried's body and reaches for the ring; the dead man's hand rises up. Brünnhilde learns the truth about Siegfried from the Rhine maidens and orders a funeral pyre for her beloved. She reclaims the ring, sets fire to the forest and rides her horse into it. As the flames leap up around her, the Rhine overflows and the Rhine maidens take the ring. Hagen, trying to grab it, drowns in the swirling waters. The Hall of the Gibichungs comes crashing down. At Valhalla, the gods await their doom. Alberich's curse is at last fulfilled, and Brünnhilde's sacrifice for love purifies the earth.

■ VORSPIEL	■ PROLOGUE
Auf dem Walkürenfelsen.	On the Valkyries' Rock.
Die Scene ist dieselbe wie am Schlusse des zweites Tages.–Nacht. Aus der Tiefe des Hintergrundes leuchtet Feuerschein auf. Die drei Nornen, hohe Frauengestalten in langen, dunklen und schleierartigen Faltengewändern. Die erate (älteste) lagert im Vordergrunde rechts unter der breitästigen Tanne; die zweite (jüngere ist an einer Steinbank vor dem Felsengemache hingerstreckt; die dritte (jüngste) sitzt in der Mitte des Hintergrundes auf einem Felssteine des Höhensaumes.– Eine Zeit lang herrscht düsteres Schweigen.	(The same as at the end of "Siegfried." It is night and from below, at back, gleams the fire.) (The three Norns, tall females in somber and flowing drapery, are discovered. The first (and oldest) crouches in the foreground R, under the spreading fir-tree; the second (younger) is stretched on a rock before the cave; the third (and youngest) sits in the middle at back on a rock below the peak. For a while gloomy silence reigns.)
DIE ERSTE NORN: (ohne sich zu bewegen). Welch' Licht leuchtet dort?	THE FIRST NORN: (without moving). What light lurks there?
DIE ZWEITE: Dämmert der Tag schon auf?	THE SECOND: Do you think the day is near?
DIE DRITTE: Loge's Heer lodert feurig um den Fels. Noch ist's Nacht: was spinnen und singen wir nicht?	THE THIRD: Loki's flame leaps round about the rock. Night is new: why should we not spin and sing now?
DIE ZWEITE: (zu der ersten). Wollen wir singen und spinnen, woran spann'st du das Seil?	THE SECOND: (to the first). While we are spinning and singing on what do we stretch we the string?

DIE ERSTE NORN: (erhebt sich, und knüpft während ihres Gesanges ein goldenes Seil mit dem einen Ende an einen Ast der Tanne). So gut und schlimm es geh', schling' ich das Seil, und singe.—
An der Welt-Esche wob ich einst, da gross und stark dem Stamm entgrünte weihlicher Aeste Wald; im kühlen Schatten rauscht' ein Quell, Weisheit raunend
rann sein Gewell':
da sang ich heiligen Sinn.—
Ein kühner Gott trat zum Trunk an den Quell;
seiner Augen eines
zahlt' er als ewigen Zoll:
von, der Welt-Esche brach da Wotan einen Ast:
eines Speeres Schaft entschnitt der Starke dem Stamm.—
In langer Zeiten Lauf zehrte die Wunde den Wald falb fielen die Blätter, dürr darbte der Baum:
traurig versiegte
des Quelles Trank;
trüben Sinnes
ward mein Gesang.
Doch web' ich heut'
an der Welt-Esche nicht mehr, muss mir die Tanne taugen zu fesseln das Seil:
singe, Schwester,
—dir werf' ich's zu—
weisst du wie das ward?

DIE ZWEITE NORN: (während sie das zugeworfene Seil um einen hervorspringenden vorspringenden Felsstein am Eingange des Gemaches windet). Treu berath'ner Verträge Runen
schnitt Wotan
in des Speeres Schaft:
den hielt er als Haft der Welt.
Ein kühner Held zerhieb im Kampfe den Speer; in Trümmern sprang der Verträge heiliger Haft.—
Da niess Wotan
Walhall's Helden
der Welt-Esche welkes Geäst
mit dem Stamm in Stücke zu fällen die Esche sank;
ewig versiegte der Quell!— Fess'le ich heut' an dem scharfen Fels das Seil:
singe, Schwester,
—dir werf' ich's zu—
weisst du wie das wird?

DIE DRITTE NORN: (das seil auffangend, und dessen Ende hinter sich werfend). Es ragt die Burg, von Riesen gebaut:
mit der Götter und Helden heiliger Sippe Sitzt dort der Wotan im Saal.
Gehau'ner Scheite
hohe Schicht

THE FIRST NORN: (rises and fastens one end of a golden cord to a branch of the fir-tree during her song). For weal to serve and woe, setting the string I sing:—
At the world's ash-tree once I wove,
when fast and strong,
the stem was overwhelmed with wondrous verdure.
In pleasant shade
a fountain purled;
wisdom floated forth on its wave;
I sang there a mystic song.
A fearless god sought to sip at the fount, giving up one eye
to buy the ineffable boon.
From the world's ash-tree Wotan wrested off an arm:
and with sturdy strokes
he shaped the shaft of a spear.
In tardy course of time
cankered the wound in the wood;
the leaves could not retain life;
the tree waned—withered.
Drooping, the stream of the fountain dried;
dark with sorrow
waxed then my song.
I weave again
at the world's ash-tree no more, so must the fir-tree find me support for the string.
Sing, O Sister!
Weave it now!—
Do you know why this was?

THE SECOND NORN: (winding the cord which the other throws to her, round a projecting rock at the cave's mouth).
Truthful runes
to make treaties rigid set Wotan
on the shaft of his spear;
this served him to sway the world.
One bold and strong destroyed in battle that spear.
The binding witness of bonds was shivered to shreds.
Then straight Wotan warriors summoned, the world's ash-tree's withered arms with its stem to splinter and sunder,
The ask destroyed,
For every the spring must go dry.
Now round the keen-edged stone I knot the string;
Sing, O sister!
weave it now—
Do you know why this was?

THE THIRD NORN: (catching the rope and throwing the end behind her). A gemmed abode was built by giants:
with the AEsir and heroes'
holy assembly Wotan sits in state.
And huge heaps of sticks are formed, ranged on high ragt zu Hauf rings um die Halle:

die Welt-Esche war dies einst!
Brennt das Holz
heilig brünstig und hell, senkt die Gluth sehrend den glänzenden Saal:
der ewigen Götter Ende dämmert ewig da auf.—
Wisset ihr noch?
so windet von neuem das Seil;
von Norden wieder werf' ich's dir nach:
spinne, Schwester, und singe!
(Sie hat das Seil der zweiten, diese es wieder der ersten Norn zugeworfen.)

DIE ERSTE NORN: (lös't das Seil vom Zweige, und knüpft es während des folgenden Gesanges wieder an einen andern Ast).
Dämmert der Tag?
oder leuchtet die Lohe?
Getrübt trügt sich mein Blick; nicht hell eracht' ich das heilig Alte, da Loge einst entbrannte in lichter Gluth:—
weisst du was aus ihm ward?

DIE ZWEITE NORN: (das zugeworfene Seil wieder um den Stein windend). Durch des Speeres Zauber zähmte ihn Wotan; Räthe raunt' er dem Gott:
an des Schaftes Runen, frei sich zu rathen,
nagte zehrend sein Zahn.
Da mit des Speeres zwingender Spitze bannte ihn Wotan, Brünnhilde's Fels zu umbrennen:—
weisst du was aus ihm wird?

DIE DRITTE NORN: (das zugeschwungene Seil wieder hinter sich werfend). Des zerschlag'nen Speeres stechende Splitter taucht' einst Wotan dem Brünstigen tief in die Brust: zehrender Brand
zündet da auf;
den wirft der Gott
in der Welt-Esche zu Hauf geschichtete Scheite.— Wollt ihr wissen wann das wird, schwingt mir, Schwestern, das Seil!
(Sie wirft das Seil der zweiten, diese es wieder der ersten zu.)

DIE ERSTE NORN: (das Seil von neuem anknüpfend). Die Nacht weicht; nichts mehr gewahr' ich:
des Seiles Fäden find' ich nicht mehr;
verflochten ist das Geflecht.
Ein wüstes Gesicht wirrt mir wüthend den Sinn:—
das Rheingold
raubte Alberich einst:—
weisst du, was aus ihm ward?

round all Valhalla:
the world's ash-tree were they once.
When the brand brightly, wildly burns, when the fire
wastes the fair-fashioned walls, the deathless immortals draw towards the dusk of their day.
Do you know this?
The thread then be knotted again,
Anew I throw it to you from the north.
Spin, O sister, and sing!
(She throws the cord to the second Norn, who throws it to the first.)

THE FIRST NORN: (unties the cord from the branch and fastens it to another branch during the following song). Dawns the daylight, or flickers the fire?
My sight sorrow has dimmed.
Scarce bides my memory of bygone marvels, when Loki moved in burning and lambent flame: Do you know what was his work?

THE SECOND NORN: (begins taking the rope and winding it round the stone). By the spear's firm yoke he yielded to Wotan;
aid he offered the god:
but in struggle ever to throw off his bonds
he gnashed and tore with his teeth, till Wotan's spear's point tightly constrained him broadly to girdle
Brynhildr's rock with his brightness:
Do you know what was his work?

THE THIRD NORN: (snatches the rope again and throwing it behind her). Then the sturdy spear that split into splinters Wotan dips
in the burning one's wavering breast.
Quickly the brand
kindles thereat;
this Wotan throws
where the world's ash-tree is heaped, a forest of faggots.
When this will be would you think?
stretch then, sisters, the string!
(She throws the rope back to the second who throws it to the first).

THE FIRST NORN: (again knotting the cord). The night wanes;
I want nothing;
I cannot find the fiber again;
it falls entangled and frayed.
The woefullest sight whirls and weakens my sense:—
The Rhinegold
robbed by Alberic once:
Do you know what was its work?

DIE ZWEITE NORN: (mit mühevoller Hast das Seil um den Stein windend). Des steines Schärfe schnitt in das Seil;
nicht fest spannt mehr
der Fäden Gespinnst:
verwirrt ist das Geweb'.
Aus Noth und Neid nagt mir des Niblungen Ring:— ein rächender Fluch nagt meiner Fäden Geflecht—weisst du was daraus wird?

DIE DRITTE NORN: (das zugeworfene Seil hastig fassend). Zu locker das Seil!
mir langt es nicht:
soll ich nach Norden neigne das Ende, straffer sei es gestreckt!
(Sie zieht gewaltsam das Seil an: dieses reisst in der Mitte.)

DIE ZWEITE: Es riss!

DIE DRITTE: Es riss!

DIE ERSTE: Es riss!
(Erschreckt sind die drei Nornen aufgefahren und nach der Mitte der Bühne zusammengetreten; sie fassen die Stücke des zerrissenen Seiles und binden damit ihre Leiber an einander.)

DIE DREI NORNEN: Zu End' ewiges Wissen!
Der Welt melden
Weise nichts mehr:—
hinab zur Mutter, hinab!
(Sie verschwinden.)
(Der Tag, der zuletzt immer heller gedämmert, bricht vollends ganz an, und dämpft den Feuerschein in der Tiefe.)

SIEGFRIED, UND BRÜNNHILDE: (treten aus dem Steingemache auf: Siegfried ist in vollen Waffen. Brünnhilde führt ihr Ross beim Zaume).

BRÜNNHILDE: Zu neuen Thaten, theurer Helde, wie liebt' ich dich liess' ich dich nicht Ein einzig Sorgen lässt mich säumen; dass dir zu wenig mein Werth gewann.
Was Göfter mich wiesen, gab ich dir: heiliger Runen reichen Hort, doch meiner Stärke magdlichen Stamm nahm mir der Held, dem ich nun mich neige.
Des Wissens bar, doch des Wunsches voll: an Liebe reich, doch ledig der Kraft, mögst du die Arme nicht verachten, die dir nur gönnen, nicht geben mehr kann.

SIEGFRIED: Mehr gabst du, Wunderfrau, als ich zu wahren weiss:
nicht zürne, wenn dein Lehren mich unbelehret liess!
Ein Wissen doch wahr' ich wohl dass mir Brünnhilde lebt;
eine Lehre lernt' ich leicht:
Brünnhilde's zu gedenken!

THE SECOND NORN: (with careful haste winding the rope round the stone). The crag with keen edge cuts the cord;
the threads cling not,
and thin is the clue;
it has been wrought awry.
From ire and ill rears to me Alberic's ring:— a ravaging curse gnaws my cord to the core:—
Do you know what it will work?

THE THIRD NORN: (hastily catching the rope thrown to her). The rope is too slack,
I reach it not;
should it be thrown anew
to northward,
it must be stretched yet straighter!
(she pulls the cord forcibly: it breaks in the middle.)

THE SECOND: It breaks!

THE THIRD: It breaks!

THE FIRST: It breaks!
(The three Norns start up in alarm and advance to the center of the stage: they take the broken pieces of the cord and tie their bodies one to another with them.)

THE THIRD NORNS: Here ends all of our wisdom!
The world marks
our wise words no more.—
Away!
To mother!
Away!
(They disappear.)
(The day, which has been slowly breaking, now dawns brightly and conceals the distant fire-glow in the valley.)

SIEGFRIED AND BRÜNNHILDE: (enter from the cave. Siegfried is in full armor; Brünnhilde leads her horse by the bridle).

BRÜNNHILDE: Did I not send you, sweetest hero, to fresh exploits, frail were my love.
But one misgiving fights against it; for fear not wholly your heart I hold.
I gave to you all that gods had taught; heavenly runes, the richest hoard, but my restoreless maidenhood's strength snatched you from me, who but seek to serve you.
My wisdom fails, but good will remains, so full of love, but failing in strength, you will despise perchance the poor one, who having given all, can grant you no more.

SIEGFRIED: You have shown more to me than yet my sense can seize:
so chide not if I'm left unlearned despite your lessons
But one thing I know full well—for me Brünnhilde lives;
It was a lesson light to learn
To worship Brünnhilde forever!

BRÜNNHILDE: Willst du mir Minne schenken, gedenke deiner nur,
gedenke deiner Thaten!
Gedenke des wilden Feuers, das furchtlos du durchschrittest, da den Fels es rings umbrann—

SIEGFRIED: Brünnhilde zu gewinnen!

BRÜNNHILDE: Gedenk' der beschildeten Frau, die in tiefem Schlaf du fandest, der den festen Helm du erbrach'st—

SIEGFRIED: Brünnhilde zu erwecken!

BRÜNNHILDE: Gedenk' der Eide, die uns einen;
gedenk' der Treue,
die wir tragen;
gedenk' der Liebe,
der wir leben:
Brünnhilde brennt dann ewig heilig dir in der Brust!—

SIEGFRIED: Lass' ich, Liebste, dich hier in der Lohe heiliger Hut, zum Tausche deiner Runen reich' ich dir diesen Ring, Was der Thaten je ich schuf, dess' Tugend schliesst er ein;
ich erschlug einen wilden Wurm, der grimmig lang' ihn bewacht.
Nun wahre du seine Kraft als Weihe-Gruss meiner Treu'!

BRÜNNHILDE: (voll Entzücken den Ring sich ansteckend.) Ihn geiz' ich als einziges Gut: für den Ring nun nimm' auch mein Ross!
Ging sein Lauf mit mir einst kühn durch die Lüfte—mit mir verlor es die mächt'ge Art;
über Wolken hin
auf blitzenden Wettern nicht mehr schwingt es sich muthig des Weg's.
Doch wohin du ihn führst
—sei es durch's Feuer—grauenlos folgt dir Grane;
denn dir, o Helde,
soll er gehorchen!
Du hüt' ihn wohl;
er hört dein Wort:—
o bringe Grane
oft Brünnhilde's Gruss!

SIEGFRIED: Durch deine Tugend allein soll so ich Thaten noch wirken?
Meine Kämpfe kiesest du, meine Siege kehren zu dir?
Auf deines Rosses Rücken, in deines Schildes Schirm, nicht Siegfried acht' ich mich mehr, ich bin nur Brünnhilde's Arm!

BRÜNNHILDE: O wäre Brünnhild' deine Seele!

SIEGFRIED: Durch sie entbrennt mir der Muth.

BRÜNNHILDE: If you would wake my fondness, recall your course to mind;
recall your courage dauntless, recall your raging furnace that, fearless, you did pass through, when it fanned the rocky brow.

SIEGFRIED: Brünnhilde to attain to!

BRÜNNHILDE: Recall, too the shield-covered maid
You did find in sleep of magic,
and whose mail and helm you broke.

SIEGFRIED: Brünnhilde to awaken!

BRÜNNHILDE: Recall the pledges we have plighted; recall our troth,— never was there truer:
recall the affection which enfolds us;
Brünnhilde your bride then ever will hold her place in your breast.

SIEGFRIED: Love, before leaving your form in the defense of the fire, for all your runes and teachings take this ring in return.
All my valiant deeds of strength their virtue sprang from this.
I destroyed an unwieldly worm, who long had over it watched:
now well preserve the charm
as a wedding gift to my bride.

BRÜNNHILDE: (rapturously donning the ring.) Aye, gladly my all here I guard, and instead you shall own my steed:
he could lift me once athwart the air lightly;
with me
he lost all his magic powers:
over thronging clouds,
through lightning and thunder, no more boldly his way he will thread.
But wherever you shall force, were it through fire even,
Grani will follow gaily:
He'll serve my hero
trustily henceforth.
Then hold him well,
he'll heed your word:
O give Grani many fond greetings from me!

SIEGFRIED: Then through your virtues alone am I to vanquish my dangers?
You choose your champion's fights;
you turn the chance of the fray;
Your noble steed bestriding, and with your sheltering shield now Siegfried am I no more:
I'm but as Brünnhilde's arm!

BRÜNNHILDE: O were but Brünnhilde your spirit!

SIEGFRIED: She spurs my bravery alone.

BRÜNNHILDE: So wär'st du Siegfried und Brünnhild'?

SIEGFRIED: Wo ich bin, bergen sich beide.

BRÜNNHILDE: So verödet mein Felsenaal?

SIEGFRIED: Vereint fasst er uns zwei.

BRÜNNHILDE: (in grosser Ergriffenheit.) O heilige Götter, hehre Geschlechter!
weidet eür' Aug'
an dem weihvollen Paar!
Getrennt—wer will uns scheiden?
Geschieden—trennt es sich nie!

SIEGFRIED: Heil dir, Brünnhilde, prangender Stern!
Heil, strahlende Liebe!

BRÜNNHILDE: Heil dir, Siegfried! siegendes Licht!
Heil, strahlendes Leben!

BEIDE: Heil! Heil!
(Siegfried leitet das Ross den Felsen hinab, Brünnhilde blickt ihm vom Höhensaume lange entzückt nach. Aus der Tiefe hört man Siegfried's Horn munter ertönen. Der Vorhang fällt.)
(Das Orchester nimmt die Weise des Hornes auf, und führt sie in einem kräftigen Satze durch. Darauf beginnt sogleich der erste Aufzug.)

ERSTER AUFZUG

Erste Scene

Die Halle Der Gibichungen Am Rhein
(Sie ist dem Hintergrunde zu ganz offen; diesen nimmt ein freier Uferraum, in bis zum Flusse hin ein; felsige Anhöhen umgränzen den Raum.)
Gunther, Hagen, und Gutrune
(Gunther und Gutrune auf dem Hochsitze, vor dem ein Tisch mit Trinkgeräth steht; Hagen sitzt davor.)

GUNTHER: Nun hör', Hagen!
sage mir, Held:
sitz' ich herrlich am Rhein, Gunther zu Gibich's Ruhm?

HAGEN: Dich ächt genannten acht' ich zu neiden:
die beid' uns Brüder gebar,
Frau Grimhild' liess mich's begreifen.

GUNTHER: Dich neide ich:
nicht neide mich du!
Erbt' ich Erstlingsart, Weisheit ward dir allein:
Halbbrüder-Zwist
bezwang sich nie besser;
deinem Rath nur red' ich Lob, Frag' ich dich nach meinem Ruhm.

BRÜNNHILDE: So are you Siegfried and Brünnhilde?

SIEGFRIED: Our hearts both beat in one bosom.

BRÜNNHILDE: Is my rock-home deserted then?

SIEGFRIED: Both rest still in its bounds.

BRÜNNHILDE: (in exalted rapture.) O heavenly powers, holy protectors!
View with delight
our devotion of love!
Apart—who can divide us?
Divided—still we are one!

SIEGFRIED: Hail, O Brünnhilde, brightest of stars!
Hail, stream of our love-light!

BRÜNNHILDE: Hail, O Siegfried, sovereign light!
Hail, stream of our living!

BOTH: Hail! Hail!
(Siegfried leads the horse down the rocks; Brünnhilde gazes after him from the height for a long while. From the valley, the merry sound of Siegfried's horn is heard. The curtain falls.)
(The orchestra takes up the melody of the horn and works it up into an animated movement. Whereupon follows the First Act.)

ACT I

Scene I

(The Hall of the Giebichungs on the Rhine.)
(The back is quite open, showing a flat shore down to the river-stream; rocky heights border the stage.)
Gunther, Hagen and Gutrune
(Gunther and Gutrune are on the throne, before which is a table with drinking vessels. Hagen sitting before it.)

GUNTHER: Now hark, Hagen!
answer me, here:
is my hold of the Rhine glory for Gibich's race?

HAGEN: Your wondrous actions
waken my envy;
and much your mother and mine,
dame Grimhild,' lauded your greatness.

GUNTHER: You envy not;
I am envious of you.
If I am heir to all,
wisdom was left to you.
Half-brother's strife were never stifled better;
and your wisdom well I praise
when I ask you of my weal.

HAGEN: So schelt' ich den Rath, da schlecht noch dein Ruhm:
denn hohe Güter weiss ich,
die der Gibichung noch nicht gewann.

GUNTHER: Verschweigst du sie, so schelt' auch ich.

HAGEN: In sommerlich reifer Stärke seh ich Gibich's Stamm, dich, Gunther, unbeweibt, dich, Gutrun', ohne Mann.

GUNTHER: Wen räth'st du nun zu frei'n,
Dass uns'rem Ruhm es fromm'?

HAGEN: Ein Weib weiss ich, das herrlichste der Welt:—
auf Felsen hoch ihr Sitz;
ein Feuer entbrennt ihren Saal:
nur wer durch das Feuer bricht, darf Brünnhilde's Freier sein.

GUNTHER: Vermag das mein Muth zu besteh'n?

HAGEN: Einem Stärk'ren noch ist's
nur bestimmt.

GUNTHER: Wer ist der streitlichste
Mann?

HAGEN: Siegfried, der Wälsungen Spross:
der ist der stärkste Held.
Ein Zwillingspaar, von Liebe bezwungen, Siegmund und Sieglinde zeugten den ächtesten Sohn:
der im Walde mächtig erwuchs, den wünsch' ich Gutrun' zum
Mann

GUTRUNE: Welche That schuf er
so tapfer,
dass als herrlichster Held er genannt!

HAGEN: Vor Neidhöhle, den Niblungenhort bewachte ein riesiger Wurm:
Siegfried schloss ihm den freislichen Schlund, erschlug ihn mit siegendem
Schwert.
Solch' ungeheurer That enttagte des Helden Ruhm.

GUNTHER: Vom Niblungenhort vernahm ich.
er birgt den neidlichsten Schatz?

HAGEN: Wer wohl ihn zu nützen wüsst', dem neigte sich wahrlich die Welt.

GUNTHER: Und Siegfried hat ihn erkämpft?

HAGEN: Knecht sind die Niblungen ihm.

GUNTHER: Und Brünnhild' gewänne nur er?

HAGEN: Keinem And'ren wiche die Brunst.

GUNTHER: (unwillig sich vom Sitze erhebend.) Was weck'st du Zweifel und Zwist!
Was ich nicht zwingen soll, danach zu verlangen mach'st du mir Lust?

HAGEN: To blame is my wit that bad is your weal;
for rarer goods I know of than a Gibichung yet ever won.

GUNTHER: Then tell them, or
I too shall blame.

HAGEN: In radiance of summer ripeness rises Gibich's race;
but Gunther fails to wed and Gutrune finds no mate.

GUNTHER: Whom would you like me to wed, that we may win more worth?

HAGEN: A wife waits for you,
the rarest in the world:
a far off rock's her home,
a fire-flame embraces her hall:
but he who can brave that fire may fitly woo Brünnhilde.

GUNTHER: And may not my might stretch so far?

HAGEN: It is reserved for a stronger
one.

GUNTHER: Who is this most stalwart of men?

HAGEN: Siegfried of Volsung descent:
his is the strongest hand.
A twinborn pair in loving entwinement—
Siegmund and Sieglind'— between them begat such a son.
He has mightily waxed in woods, and well with Gutrune might mate.

GUTRUNE: Has he done marvellous deeds, that he is called of a courage so high?

HAGEN: At Hate-cavern
the hoard long accursed was watched by a horrible worm.
Siegfried shut up his maw for him straight and slew him with sovereign sword.
So this unheard-of feat has founded the hero's fame.

GUNTHER: I know of the Nibelungs' hoard;
it holds most notable wealth.

HAGEN: The one who best knows its worth annexes the world to his will.

GUNTHER: And Siegfried gained it in strife?

HAGEN: The Nibelungs are slaves to him.

GUNTHER: And Brünnhilde were won by none else?

HAGEN: To no other wanes the blaze.

GUNTHER: (rising from his seat in displeasure.) Why wake this discord and doubt?
Would you induce in me desire for a treasure
I may not touch?

HAGEN: Brächte Siegfried
die Braut dir heim, wär' dann Brünnhild' nicht dein?

GUNTHER: (bewegt in der Halle auf und ab schreitend.) Was zwänge den frohen Mann
dir mich die Braut zu frei'n?

HAGEN: Ihn zwänge bald deine Bitte, bänd' ihn Gutrun' zuvor.

GUTRUNE: Du Spötter, böser Hagen!
Wie sollt' ich Siegfried binden?
Ist er der herrlichste Held der Welt, der Erde holdeste Frauen
friedeten längst ihn schon.

HAGEN: Gedenk' des Trankes im Schrein; vertraue mir, der ihn gewann:
den Helden, dess' du verlangst, bindet er liebend an dich.
Träte nun Siegfried ein, genöss' er des würzigen Trank's, dass vor dir ein Weib er ersah, dass je ein Weib ihm genaht—vergessen müsst er dess' ganz.—
Nun redet:—
wie dünkt euch Hagen's Rath?

GUNTHER: (der wieder an den Tisch getreten, und auf ihn gelehnt aufmerksam zugerhört hat.) Gepriesen sei Grimhild,' die uns den Bruder gab!

GUTRUNE: Möcht' ich Siegfried je erseh'n!

GUNTHER: Wie fänden wir ihn auf?

HAGEN:
Jagt er auf Thaten wennig umher, zum engen Tann
wird ihm die Welt:
wohl stürmt er in rastloser Jagd auch zu Gibich's Strand an den Rhein.

GUNTHER: Willkommen hiess' ich ihn gern.
(Siegfried's Horn lässt sich von Ferne vernehmen.—Sie lauschen.) Vom Rhein her tönt das Horn.

HAGEN: (ist an das Ufer gegangen, späht den Fluss hinab und ruft zurück:) In einem Nachen Held und Ross:
der bläst so munter das Horn.—
Ein gemächlicher Schlag wie von müssiger Hand treibt jach den Kahn wider den Strom;
so rüstiger Kraft in des Ruder's Schwung rühmt sich nur der, der den Wurm erschlug:—
Siegfried ist es, sicher kein And'rer!

GUTRUNE: Jagt er vorbei?

HAGEN: Brought this Siegfried
the bride to you, would not then Brünnhilde be yours?

GUNTHER: (pacing up and down the hall in agitation.) What power could bind the man to win the bride for me?

HAGEN: Your prayer could work your wishes, wove first Gutrune a spell.

GUTRUNE: You scoff, wicked Hagen!
What spells then should I weave him?
And if so wondrous a warrior he,
the earth's most winsome of women will he have won before this.

HAGEN: Recall the drink in yon shrine, and doubt not him who gained the charm.
The hero for whom you burn fondly it will bind to your heart.
Did now but Siegfried come and taste of the wonderful draught, that he'd seen a woman before you—or ever a woman had neared, would wholly pass from his head.
Reply then,
how do you like Hagen's plan?

GUNTHER: (who has again approached the table and listened attentively, leaning on it.) All praise be to Grimhild' who gave such a brother!

GUTRUNE: If I could see Siegfried!

GUNTHER: How shall we find him first?

HAGEN: When he spurs on courses of fame,
the world
can but become too strait, be sure in his roamings he'll scour to the Gibich's strand on the Rhine.

GUNTHER: Welcome I'll heartily give.
(Siegfried's horn is heard in the distance;—they listen.)
I mark on the Rhine a horn.

HAGEN: (goes to the bank, looks down the river and calls back.)
Within a vessel horse and man!
He blows right gaily the horn.
With a laborless stroke
as if lazy his hand,
he drives the boat,
stemming the stream.
So active a hand at the oar-blade's sweep owns only he who slew the dragon.
It is Siegfried; surely no other!

GUNTHER: Does he proceed?

HAGEN: (durch die hohlen Hände nach dem Flusse zu rufend:) Hoiho! wohin, du heit'rer Held?

SIEGFRIED'S: (Stimme, aus der Ferne, vom Flusse her.) Zu Gibich's starkem Sohne.

HAGEN: Zu seiner Halle entbiet' ich dich:
Hieher! hier lege an!
Heil, Siegfried! theurer Held!

Zweite Scene

(Siegfried legt an.)
(Gunther ist zu Hagen an das Ufer getreten. Gutrune erblickt Siegfried vom Hochsitze aus, heftet eine Zeit lang in freudiger Ueberraschung den Blick auf ihn, und als die Männer dann näher zur Halle schreiten, entfernt sie sich in sichtbarer Verwirrung, nach links durch eine Thüre in ihr Gemach.)

SIEGFRIED: (der seine Ross an das Land geführt, und jetzt ruhig an ihm lehnt.) Wer ist Gibich's Sohn?

GUNTHER: Gunther, ich, den du such'st.

SIEGFRIED: Dich hört' ich rühmen weit am Rhein:
nun ficht mit mir,
oder sei mein Freund!

GUNTHER: Lass den Kampf, sei willkommen!

SIEGFRIED: Wo berg' ich mein Ross?

HAGEN: Ich biet' ihm Rast.

SIEGFRIED: Du rief'st mich Siegfried:
sah'st du mich schon?

HAGEN: Ich kannte dich nur an deiner Kraft.

SIEGFRIED: Wohl hüte mir Grane!
Du hieltest nie von edlerer Zucht am Zaume ein Ross.
(Hagen führt das Ross rechts hinter die Halle ab, und kehrt bald darauf wieder zurück. Gunther schreitet mit Siegfried in die Halle vor.)

GUNTHER: Begrüsse froh, o Held, die Halle meines Vaters;
wohin du schreitest,
was du ersieh'st,
das achte nun dein Eigen:
dein ist mein Erbe, Land und Leut':
hilf, mein Leib, meinem Eide!
Mich selbst geb' ich zum Mann.

SIEGFRIED: Nicht Land noch Leute biete ich,
noch Vater's Haus und Hof: einzig erbt' ich den eig'nen Leib;

HAGEN: (putting his hands to his mouth and shouting.) Hoiho!
Where are you going, hero?

SIEGFRIED'S: (voice in the distance on the river.) To Gibich's stalwart scion.

HAGEN: Behold his hall here!
I bid you to it.
Here! here lay me to!
Hail, Siegfried, bravest heart!

Scene II

(Siegfried lays to).
(Gunther has joined Hagen on the bank. Gutrune looks at Siegfried from the throne, fixing her gaze for some time on him in joyous surprise, and as the men come down into the hall she withdraws, in visible confusion, through a door leading to her chamber L.)

SIEGFRIED: (who has landed his horse and now stands quietly leaning on him). Which is Gibich's son?

GUNTHER: Gunther—I—whom you seek.

SIEGFRIED: Your fame has reached beyond the Rhine:
now fight with me,
or else be my friend!

GUNTHER: Nothing of war; you are welcome!

SIEGFRIED: Where stables my horse?

HAGEN: I'll see to him.

SIEGFRIED: You hail me "Siegfried;" sure we are strange?

HAGEN: Your strength unapproached declared you straight.

SIEGFRIED: Tend heedfully Grani!
you never held in bridle a horse
of higher degree.
(Hagen leads the horse away, R, behind the hall and returns immediately. Gunther advances into the hall with Siegfried.)

GUNTHER: Now, here, freely hail the homestead of your fathers.
The hall you stand in,
whatever you see,
I bid you hold your booty.
Yours is my birthright, soil and serfs:
hear me swear by my body!
Gunther is given to you.

SIEGFRIED: Nor soil nor serfs I offer you, nor father's house and hall:
all I'm heir to,
my able limbs,

lebend zehr' ich den auf.
Nur ein Schwert hab' ich, selbst geschmiedet—
hilf, mein Schwert, meinem Eide!
das biet' ich mit mir zum Bund.

HAGEN: (hinter ihnen stehend.)
Doch des Niblungen-Hortes nennt die Märe dich Herrn?

SIEGFRIED: Des Schatzes vergass ich fast:
so schätz' ich sein müss'ges Gut!
In einer Höhle liess ich's liegen, wo ein Wurm es einst bewacht.

HAGEN: Und nichts entnahm'st du ihm?

SIEGFRIED: (auf das stählerne Netzgewirk deutend, das er im Gürtel hängen hat.) Diess Gewirk, unkund seiner Kraft.

HAGEN: Den Tarnhelm kenn' ich, der Niblungen künstliches Werk:
er taugt, bedeckt er dein Haupt, dir zu tauschen jede Gestalt;
verlangt dich's an fernsten Ort, er entführt flugs dich dahin.—
Sonst nichts entnahmst du dem Hort?

SIEGFRIED: Einen Ring.

HAGEN: Den hütest du wohl?

SIEGFRIED: Den hütet ein hehres Weib.

HAGEN: (für sich.) Brünnhilde! ..

GUNTHER: Nicht, Siegfried, sollst du mir tauschen:
Tand gäb' ich für das Geschmeid, nähmst all mein Gut du dafür!
Ohn' Entgelt dien' ich dir gern.
(Hagen ist zu Gutrune's Thür gegangen, und öffnet sie jetzt. Gutrune tritt heraus, sie trägt ein gefülltes Trinkhorn, und naht damit Siegfried.)

GUTRUNE: Willkommen, Gast, in Gibich's Haus!
Seine Tochter reicht dir den Trank.

SIEGFRIED: (neigt sich ihr freundlich, und ergreift das Horn; er hält es gedankenvoll vor sich hin und sagt leise:) Vergass' ich alles was du mir gab'st von einer Lehre lass' ich doch nie:—
den ersten Trunk zu treuer Minne, Brünnhilde, bring' ich dir!
(Er trinkt und reicht das Horn Gutrune zurück, welche, verschämt und verwirrt, ihre Augen vor ihm niederschlägt.)

SIEGFRIED: (mit schnell entbrannter Leidenschaft den Blick auf sie heftend.) Die so mit de Blitz den Blick du mir seng'st, was senk'st du dein Auge vor mir?
(Gutrune schlägt, erröthend, das Auge zu ihm auf.)

life is holding in use.
I've a sword merely, self-constructed:
hear me swear by my weapon;
with it I'll strengthen our oath.

HAGEN: (standing behind them),
But we learn you are hailed as lord of Nibelheim's hoard?

SIEGFRIED: That wealth I forgot, well-nigh, so worthless I deem the gold!
Within a cavern lone I left it, where a worm did guard it once.

HAGEN: Have you had nothing of it?

SIEGFRIED: (pointing to the steel net-work, that hangs in his girdle.) But this work, which I cannot use.

HAGEN: The Tarnhelm is it, the Nibelungs' artfullest work:
its trick when set on your head is to turn you to any shape;
or you long for far-off lands,
in a flash, flight can you wing.
Have you moved no more of the wealth?

SIEGFRIED: But a ring.

HAGEN: You wear it still?

SIEGFRIED: It is worn by a woman sweet.

HAGEN: (aside) Brünnhilde!

GUNTHER: Nothing, Siegfried, shall to me tender Toys would for your treasures get, taking my wealth in exchange:
without wage I'll serve you well.
(Hagen has gone to Gutrune's door, and now opens it. Gutrune enters, and approaches Siegfried with a filled drinking horn.)

GUTRUNE: Welcome, O guest, to Gibich's house!
From its daughter take the drink.

SIEGFRIED: (bows friendly, and takes the horn; he holds it thoughtfully before him, and says softly): Though you gave gifts should all be forgot.
I'll grasp alone
one lesson for aye:
this goblet's quaffed with quenchless passion, Brünnhilde, my bride, to you!
(He drinks, and hands back the horn to Gutrune, who, abashed, cast down her eyes before his.)

SIEGFRIED: (gazing on her with swiftly kindling passion.) You fair one, whose beams have enflamed, my breast why fall thus your eyes before mine?
(Gutrune looks up at him, blushing.)

SIEGFRIED: Ha, schönstes Weib!
Schliesse den Blick! das Herz in der Brust brennt mir sein Strahl:
zu feurigen Strömen fühl' ich zehrend ihn zünden mein Blut!—
(Mit bebender Stimme.)
Gunther—wie heisst deine Schwester?

GUNTHER: Gutrune.

SIEGFRIED: Sind's gute Runen, die ihrem Aug' ich entrathe?
(Er fasst Gutrune mit feurigem Ungestüm bei der Hand.) Deinem Bruder bot ich mich zum Mann; der Stolze schlug mich aus:—
trägst du, wie er, mir Uebermuth, böt' ich mich dir zum Bund?
(Gutrune neigt demüthig das Haupt, und nait einer Gebärde, als fühle sie sich seiner nicht werth, verlässt sie wankenden Schrittes wieder die Halle.)

SIEGFRIED: (blickt ihr, wie fest gezaubert, nach, von Hagen und Gunther aufmerksam beobachtet; dann, ohne sich umzuwenden, frägt er:) Hast du, Gunther, ein Weib?

GUNTHER: Nicht freit' ich noch, und einer Frau
soll' ich mich schwerlich freu'n!
Auf eine setzt' ich den Sinn, die kein Rath je mir gewinnt.

SIEGFRIED: (lebhaft sich zu ihm wendend.) Was wär' dir versagt, steh' ich zu dir?

GUNTHER: Auf Felsen hoch ihr Sitz;
ein Feuer umbrennt den Saal—

SIEGFRIED: (verwundert, und wie um eines längst Vergessenen sich zu entsinnen, wiederholt leise:) "Auf Felsen hoch ihr Sitz;
ein Feuer umbrennt den Saal" . . . ?

GUNTHER: Nur wer durch das Feuer bricht,

SIEGFRIED: (hastig einfallend und schnell nachlassend.) "Nur were durch das Feuer bricht"?

GUNTHER: —darf Brünnhilde's Freier sein.
(Siegfried drückt durch seine schweigende Gebärde aus, dass bei Nennung von Brünnhilde's Namen die Erinnerung ihm vollends ganza schwindet.)

GUNTHER: Nun darf ich den Fels nicht erklimmen;
das Feuer verglimmt mir nie!

SIEGFRIED: (Heftig auffahrend) Ich—fürchte kein Feuer: für dich frei' ich die Frau:
denn dein Mann bin ich, und mein Muth ist dein—erwerb' ich Gutrun' zum Weib.

GUNTHER: Gutrune gönn' ich dir gern.

SIEGFRIED: Ha! sweetest maid!
Screen those bright beams,
the heart in my breast burns with their strength; in fiery streams I feel how my blood boils in my veins!
(With trembling voice.)
Gunther, what name has your sister?

GUNTHER: Gutrune.

SIEGFRIED: Are good the runes that now in her eyes I am reading?
(He seizes Gutrune with impatient ardor by the hand.)
When I sought to serve your brave brother his pride repelled my aid.
Would you be even as arrogant said I to you the same?
(Gutrune humbly droops her head, and then, with an expressive gesture, as if she felt her unworthiness, leaves the hall again with trembling steps.)

SIEGFRIED: (closely observed by Hagen and Gunther, gazes after her, as if spellbound; then without turning he asks) Have you, Gunther, a wife?

GUNTHER: I've never wooed yet;
besides, a wife
seems me I scarce can win:
on one my soul I have set,
but no help can gain my wish.

SIEGFRIED: (turning quickly to him.) What would be gainsaid, stood I your friend?

GUNTHER: A far-off rock's her home,
a fire breasts her hall.

SIEGFRIED: (repeats softly, in wonder, and as if striving to remember something long forgotten.) "A far-off rock's her home;
a fire breasts her hall" . . . .?

GUNTHER: But he who that fire can brave—

SIEGFRIED: (hastily chiming in and immediately ceasing.) "But he who that fire can brave"?

GUNTHER: —is Brünnhilde's fitting mate.
(Siegfried shows, by a silent gesture, that at the mention of Brünnhilde's name the remembrance has quite faded.)

GUNTHER: That mountain my feet may not approach, the fire never will pale for me,

SIEGFRIED: (with a sudden start.) I—fear not the fire, and your bride fain will I fetch;
for I am your own
and my arm is yours:
if I may gain Gutrune for my wife.

GUNTHER: I'll give Gutrune to you gladly.

SIEGFRIED: Brünnhilde bringe ich dir.

GUNTHER: Wie willst du sie täuschen?

SIEGFRIED: Durch des Tarnhelm's Trug tausch' ich mir deine Gestalt.

GUNTHER: So stelle Eide zum Schwur

SIEGFRIED: Blut-Brüderschaft schwöre ein Eid!
(Hagen füllt ein Trinkhorn mit frischem Wein; Siegfried und Gunther ritzen sich mit ihren Schwertern die Arme und halten diese einen Augenblick über das Trinkhorn.)

SIEGFRIED UND GUNTHER:
Blühenden Lebens
labendes Blut traüfelt' ich in den Trank:
bruder-brünstig
muthig gemischt, blüh' im Trank unser Blut, Treue trink' ich dem Freund, frohn und frei entblühe dem Bund Blut-Brüderschaft heut'!
Bricht ein Bruder den Bund, trügt den Treuen der Freund:
was in Tropfen hold heute wir tranken, in Strahlen ström' es dahin, fromme Sühne dem Freund!
So—biet' ich den Bund:
so trink' ich dir Treu!
(Sie trinken nacheinander, jeder zur Hälfte; dann zerschlägt Hagen, der während des Schwures zur Seite gelehnt, mit seinem Schwerte das Horn. Siegfried und Gunther reichen sich die Hände.)

SIEGFRIED: (zu Hagen.) Was nahmst du am Eide nicht Theil?

HAGEN: Mein Blut verdärb' euch den Trank! Nicht fliesst mir's ächt und edel wie euch;
störrisch und kalt
stockt's in mir;
nicht will's die Wange mir röthen.
D'rum bleib' ich fern vom feurigen Bund.

GUNTHER: Lass' den unfrohen Mann!

SIEGFRIED: Frisch auf die Fahrt!
Dort liegt mein Schiff;
schnell führt es zum Felsen:
eine Nacht am Ufer harrs't du im Nachen;
die Frau führst du dann heim.

GUNTHER: Rastest du nicht zuvor?

SIEGFRIED: Um die Rückkehr ist's mir jach. (Er geht zum Ufer.)

GUNTHER: Du Hagen, bewache die Halle!
(Er folgt Siegfried.)
(Gutrune erscheint an der Thüre ihres Gemaches.)

SIEGFRIED: I'll bring you Brünnhilde!

GUNTHER: How can she mistake us?

SIEGFRIED: Through the Tarnhelm's trick, turning me into your shape.

GUNTHER: Propose an oath for us pair.

SIEGFRIED: Blood-brotherhood hallowed by oath.
(Hagen fills a horn with fresh wine; Gunther and Siegfried scratch their arms with their sword-points, and hold the wound a moment over the wine.)

SIEGFRIED AND GUNTHER: Blossoming life's stream, liberal blood
drops into the drink.
Bravely brewed
by fiery friends, blazes the draught with our blood.
Truth I drink to my friend:
fair and free
be born from our bond blood-brotherhood here.
Breaks a brother the bond, fails in faith to his friend,
What in drops we here haste to drink of in streams be strained from his heart, forfeit stern to his friend.
Thus compact I claim!
Thus duty I drink.
(They each in turn drink half the contents of the horn, which Hagen, who has stood apart during the oath, then breaks in half with his sword. Gunther and Siegfried clasp hands.)

SIEGFRIED: (to Hagen.) Why have you not joined in the bond?

HAGEN: Your drink was spoiled by my blood!
It flows by no means nobly enough;
stubborn and cold,
scarce it stirs;
my cheek it is chary to redden.
I leave perforce the fiery league

GUNTHER: Have no heed for the churl.

SIEGFRIED: Forth let me fare!
There lies my skiff;
swiftly float to the fastness,
At the bank for one night wait with the boat;
then bear away the bride.

GUNTHER: You take no rest first?

SIEGFRIED: I'll return here in a trice.
(Goes to the shore.)

GUNTHER: You, Hagen, have ward of the homestead.
(He follows Siegfried.)
(Gutrune appears at the door of her room.)

GUNTHER: Wohin eilen die Schnellen?

HAGEN: Zu Schiff', Brünnhild' zu frei'n.

GUTRUNE: Siegfried?

HAGEN: Sieh', wie's ihn triebt zum Weib dich zu gewinnen!
(Er setzt sich mit Speer und Schild vor der Halle nieder. Siegfried und Gunther fahren ab.)

GUTRUNE: Siegfried—mein!
(Sie geht, lebhaft erregt, in ihr Gemach zurück.)

HAGEN: (nach längerem Stillschweigen.) Hier sitz' ich zur Wacht, wahre den Hof,
wehre die Halle dem Feind:—
Gibich's Sohne
wehet der Wind;
auf Werben fährt er dahin.
Ihm führt der Steuer ein starker Held,
Gefahr ihm will er besteh'n:
die eig'ne Braut
ihm bringt er zum Rhein;
mir aber bringt er— den Ring.—
Ihr freien Söhne, frohe Gesellen,
segelt nur lustig dahin!
Dünkt er euch niedrig, ihn dient ihm doch—
des Niblungen Sohn.
(Ein Teppich schlägt vor der Scene zusammen, und verschliesst die Bühne. Nachdem, während eines kurzen Orchester-Zwischenspieles, der Schauplatz verwandelt ist, wird der Teppich, der zufor den Vordergrund der Halle einfasste, gänzlich aufgezogen.)

Dritte Scene

(Die Felsenhöhe, wie im Vorspiel.)

BRÜNNHILDE: (Sitzt am Eingange des Steingemaches, und betrachtet in stummen Sinnen Siegfried's Ring; von wonninger Erinnerung überwättigt, bedeckt sie ihn dann mit Küssen,—als sie plötzlich ein fernes Geräusch vernimmt: sie lauscht und späht zur Seite in den Hintergrund.) Altgewohntes Geräusch raunt meinem Ohr die Ferne:— ein Luftross jagt im Laufe daher;
auf der Wolke fährt es wetternd zum Fels!—
Wer fand mich Einsame auf?

WALTRAUTE'S: (Stimme aus der Ferne). Brünnhilde! Schwester!
schläf'st oder wach'st du?

BRÜNNHILDE: (fährt vom Sitze auf). Waltraute's Ruf, so wonnig mir kund!—
Komm'st du, Schwester, schwing'st du kühn dich zu mir?
(in die Scene refend.)
Dort im Tann

GUTRUNE: O where do they haste so swiftly?

HAGEN: They sail, to find Brünnhilde.

GUTRUNE: Siegfried?

HAGEN: See what he does for wife striving to win you.
(He seats himself before the hall with spear and shield. Siegfried and Gunther float away.)

GUTRUNE: Siegfried—mine!
(Goes back to her room in great agitation.)

HAGEN: (after a long silence.)
Here I sit to wait, watching the hall,
warding the house from all foes.
Gibich's son is wafted by winds;
a-wooing forth is he gone.
And fleetly steers
a stalwart man, whose force can stem all peril.
His own the bride
he brings down the Rhine;
but he will bring me the Ring.
Oh gallant partners,
gleeful companions,
push then merrily from here!
Slight though your natures,
You still may serve the Nibelung's son.
(A curtain closes in from each side and hides the stage. After a short orchestral interlude, during which the scene is changed, the curtain, which before closed in all the front of the hall, is completely withdrawn.)

Scene III

(The Valkyries' rock, as in the Prelude.)

BRÜNNHILDE: (sits at the entrance of the cave in silent thought, gazing on Siegfried's ring; overcome by tender reminiscences, she covers it with kisses, when suddenly she hears a distant noise: she listens and looks off at back.) Old well-recognized sounds strike on my ear from distance;
a wind-horse
wings its course here, in the clouds it rumbles close to the rock.
Who rides my stillness to stir?

VALTRAUTA'S: (voice from the distance). Brünnhilde—sister!
Do you sleep or wake?

BRÜNNHILDE: (starting to her feet). Welcome that cry, it wafts from Valtrauta!
Truest sister!
Do you seek trace of me here!
(Calling towards the back.)
In yon wood,

—dir noch vertraut—steige vom Ross
und stell' den Renner zu Rast!
Kommst du zu mir?
Bist du so kühn?
mag'st ohne Grauen Brünnhild' bieten den Gruss?
(Waltraute ist aus dem Tann hastig aufgetreten; Brünnhilde ist ihr stürmisch entgegengeeilt: diese beachtet in der Freude nicht die ängstliche Scheu Waltraute's.)

WALTRAUTE: Einzig dir nur galt meine Eile.

BRÜNNHILDE: (in höchster freudiger Aufgeregtheit). So wagtest du, Brünnhild' zu lieb, Walvater's Bann zu brechen?
Oder wie? o sag'!
wär' wider mich
Wotan's Sinn erweicht?
Als dem Gott entgegen Siegmund ich schützte, fehlend—ich weiss es—
erfüllt' ich doch seinen Wunsch:
dass sein Zorn sich verzogen, weiss ich auch;
denn verschloss er mich gleich in Schlaf.
fesselt' er mich auf den Fels, wies er dem Mann' mich zur Magd, der am Weg' mich fänd und erweckt'— meiner bangen Bitte doch gab er Gunst:
mit zehrendem Feuer umgab er den Fels,
dem Zagen zu wehren den Weg.
So zur seligsten
schuf mich die Strafe:
der herrlichste Held gewann mich zum Weib;
in seiner Liebe
leucht' und lach' ich heut' auf.—
Lockte dich, Schwester, mei Loos?
An meiner Wonne
willst du dich weiden?
theilen, was mich betraf?

WALTRAUTE: Theilen den Taumel, der dich Thörin erfasst?—
Ein And'res bewog mich in Angst zu brechen Wotan's Gebot.

BRÜNNHILDE: Angst und Furcht fesselt dich Arme?
So verzieh der Strenge noch nicht?
du zag'st vor des Strafenden Zorn?

WALTRAUTE: Dürft' ich ihn fürchten.
meiner Angst fänd' ich ei End'!

BRÜNNHILDE: Staunend versteh' ich dich nicht!

WALTRAUTE: Wehr' deiner Wallung:
achtsam höre mich an!
Nach Walhall wieder treibt mich die Angst, die von Walhall hieher mich trieb.

BRÜNNHILDE: (erschrocken).
Was ist's mit den ewigen Göttern?

As you were wont, Straightway descend and safely stable your steed.
Do you come to me?
bold and uncowed,
Do you dare again then to greet banished Brünnhild'?
(Valtrauta has entered hastily from the wood; Brünnhilde rushes to meet her; in her joy she does not perceive Valtrauta's anxious timidity.)

VALTRAUTA: It is for you my gallop is taken.

BRÜNNHILDE: O was it for Brünnhilde's sake you broke War-father's ban?
Or for what?
O say!
Will Wotan's heart
once more softly wax?
When against the god once
I sheltered Siegmund—wrongly, I know well—
I wrought the thing that he wished.
That his anger was ended well I knew;
for though sealed he my eyes in sleep,
rivetting me to this rock, destining me to the man who this way should roam and awake me, yet I begged for the boon denied he not:
a terrible fire
he knit round the fell,
to ward all tremblers from the way.
So sweet solace was shaped by my sentence:
the highest of heroes won me for wife.
Filled with his love I live in light and laughter.
You lured, O sister, my lot?
Do you then pine for part in my pleasures, seek my pure bliss to share?

VALTRAUTA: Share the insaneness that has seized on your soul?
More matter has worked on my mind to break the ban of Wotan.

BRÜNNHILDE: Fear and dread drive over your features!
Does our father withhold pardon?
You fear his punishment's force?

VALTRAUTA: If I did fear him
this alarm would be fast allayed.

BRÜNNHILDE: Scared, I can scarce understand.

VALTRAUTA: Mask your emotion:
wisely hark to my words.
Again the grief hurries me back which did goad me here from Valhalla.

BRÜNNHILDE: (alarmed). What ails with the AEsir eternal?

WALTRAUTE: Höre mit Sinn was ich sage!—
Seit er von dir geschieden, zur Schlacht nicht mehr schickte uns Wotan;
irr und rathlos
ritten wir ängstlich zu Heer.
Walhall's muthige Helden mied Walvater:
einsam zu Ross
ohne Ruh' und Rast
durchstreift' er als Wand'rer die Welt Jüngst kehrte er heim;
in der Hand hielt er
seines Speeres Splitter:
die hatte ein Held ihm geschlagen.
Mit stummen Wink
Walhall's Edle
wies er zum Forst, die Welt-Esche zu fällen;
des Stammes Scheite
hiess er sie schichten zum regenden Hauf rings um der Seligen Saal.
Der Götter Rath
liess er berufen;
den Hochsitz nahm heilig er ein:
ihm zu Seiten
hiess er die Bangen sich setzen, in Ring und Reih' die Hall' erfüllen die Helden.
So—sitzt er,
sagt kein Wort, auf hehrem Sitze stumm und ernst,
des Speeres Splitter fest in der Faust; Holda's Aepfel
rührt er nicht an:
Staunen und Bangen
binden starr die Götter.—
Seiner Raben beide sandt' er auf Reise:
kehrten die einst
mit guter Kunde zurück, dann noch einmal
—zum letzten mal—
lächelte ewig der Gott.
Seine Knie' umwindend liegen wir Walküren:
blind bleibt er
den flehenden Blicken;
uns alle verzehrt
Zagen und endlose Angst.
An seine Brust
presst' ich mich weinend:
da brach sich sein Blick—er gedachte, Brünnhilde, dein!
Tief seufzte er auf, schloss das Auge, und wie im Traume
raunt' er das Wort:—
"Des tiefen Rheines Töchtern gäbe den Ring sie wieder zurück, von des Fluches Last erlös't wär' Gott und Welt!"— Da sann ich nach:
von seiner Seite
durch stumme Reihen stahl ich mich fort;
in heimlicher Hast bestieg ich mein Ross, und ritt im Sturme zu dir.

VALTRAUTA: Heed with your soul what I recite Since he was severed from you our sire no more sent us to warfare;
undirected
we rode, an awe-stricken host; Valhall's high-hearted heroes
he viewed no more.
Lonely a-horse,
without halt or home,
he went through the world as a Wanderer.
He lately came home,
in his hand holding fast
his spear in splinters:
it was hacked by a hero asunder.
With signs for words waved he all the warriors in haste to hew down the world's ash-tree.
The stem in sticks
he bade them to stack, and arrange in a bulk round the AEsir's sanctifed seat.
He called the gods
to the council;
then he took his proud sacred place:
to his side
appointed the tremblers to assemble.
In rank and ring
the warriors crowded Valhalla.
So he sits,
speaking no word,
in high position,
still and grave,
the splintered spear held fast in his fist.
Hulda's apples
he does not eat.
Gloomy and awe-struck
all the gods seem frozen.
But he turned his ravens
both out to travel;
when they wing their return with goodly tidings, once again then for evermore over the god breaks a smile.
Round his knees in vigil twine all we Valkyries; blind bides he
to eyes that are begging, and all of us stay,
struck with an ominous awe.
I pressed weeping to his breast;
his brooding then broke;
and his thoughts turned,
Brünnhilde, to you!
Deep sighs he uttered, closed his eyelids,
as were he dreaming,
and said these words:
"The day the Rhine's three daughters gain by surrender from her the Ring from the curse's load released are gods and men!"
I thought upon it;
and then I threaded amid throngs dumb-stricken thence from his side;
in haste
I threw me astride my horse

Dich, o Schwester, beschwör' ich nun:
was du vermagst,
vollend' es dein Muth!
Ende der Ewigen Qual!

BRÜNNHILDE: Welch' banger Träume Mären
meldest du Traurige mir!
Der Götter heiligem Himmels-Nebel bin ich Thörin enttaucht:
nicht fass' ich, was ich erfahre.
Wirr und wüst
scheint mir dein Sinn;
in deinem Aug'
—so übermüde—
glänzt flackernde Gluth:
mit blasser Wange du bleiche Schwester, was willst du Wilde von mir?

WALTRAUTE: (mit unheimlicher Hast.) An deiner Hand der Ring—er ist's: hör' meinen Rath:
für Wotan wirf ihn von dir!

BRÜNNHILDE: Den Ring—von mir?

WALTRAUTE: Den Rheintöchtern
gieb ihn zurück!

BRÜNNHILDE: Den Rheintöchtern—ich—den Ring?
Siegfrieds' Liebespfand?
Bist du von Sinnen?

WALTRAUTE: Hör' mich! hör' meine Angst?
Der Welt Unheil
haftet sicher an ihm:—
wirf ihn von dir fort in die Welle Walhall's Elend zu enden, den verfluchten wirf in die Fluth!

BRÜNNHILDE: Ha! weisst du, was er mir ist?
Wie kannst du's fassen, fühllose Maid!—
Mehr als Walhall's Wonne, mehr als der Ewigen Ruhm ist mir der Ring:
ein Blick auf sein helles Gold, ein Blitz aus dem hehren Glanz gilt mir werther als aller Götter
ewig währendes Glück!
Denn selig aus ihm leuchtet mir Siegfried's Liebe: Siegfried's Liebe!
O liess' sich die Wonne dir sagen!
Sie wahrt mir der Reif.
Geh' hin zu der Götter heiligem Rath;
von meinem Ringe
raun' ihnen zu:
die Liebe liesse ich nie, mir nehmen nie sie die Liebe, stürzt auch in Trümmern Walhall's strahlende Pracht!

and straightaway thrust towards you.
Then, my sister,
I supplicate:
do what you may if but you mind:
ward off the woe of the gods.
(Throws herself at Brünnhilde's feet.)

BRÜNNHILDE: What dreamy tales of mystery you mournfully tell to me!
From cloudy homes where the holy gods sit am I, poor fool, expelled;
recital conveys no sense.
Void and vain
seems your speech.
Within your eyes
so over-wearied
gleams fitfully glow.
You piteous woman
with pallid features,
what would your wildness of me?

VALTRAUTA: (with gloomy haste). There on your hand—the ring
It is that—hark to my story!
For Wotan will you resign it?

BRÜNNHILDE: The ring! resign it?

VALTRAUTA: Surrender it back to the Rhine!

BRÜNNHILDE: Surrender it—I—the ring?
Siegfried's bridal gift?
Wander your senses?

VALTRAUTA: Hear me! heed my distress!
The world's trouble
hangs upon it, I know.
Whirl it from you far in the water,
woe from Valhall' averting;
cast the foul thing away in the flood!

BRÜNNHILDE: Ah! Do you know what it is to me?
You cannot fathom, feelingless maid!
More than AEsir's honor,
More than Valhall's bright realm
I hold this ring.
One look at its beauteous gold, one light from its brilliant gleam gladdens me more than unending good to all the mass of the gods.
I see in its beams
lambent how Siegfried loves me.
Siegfried loves me!
How little you know of this sweetness!
The ring stays with me Get hence to the gods in holy array,
and of my ring
tell them this:
I'll loose not love from my heart;
no hest shall hinder my loving,
Sooner to ruins
Valhall's splendor shall crash.

WALTRAUTE: Diess deine Treue?
So in Trauer
entlässest du lieblos die Schwester?

BRÜNNHILDE: Schwinge dich fort;
fliege zu Ross:
den Ring entführst du mir nicht!

WALTRAUTE: Wehe! Wehe!
Weh' dir Schwester!
Walhall's Göttern Weh!
(Sie stürzt fort; man hört sie schnell—wie zu Ross vom Tann aus fortbrausen.)

BRÜNNHILDE: (blickt einer davonjagenden, hellerleuchteten Gewitterwolke nach, die sich bald gänzlich in der Ferne verliert).
Blitz und Gewölk, vom Wind geblasen,
stürme dahin:
zu mir nie steure mehr her!— (Es ist Abend geworden: aus der Tiefe leuchtet der Feuerschein stärker auf.) Abendlich Dämmern
deckt den Himmel:
Was leckt so wüthend die lodernde Welle zum Wall?
Zur Felsenspitze
wälzt sich der feurige Schwall.
(Man hört aus der Tiefe Siegfried's Hornruf nahen. Brünnhilde lauscht, und fährt dann entzückt auf.)
Siegfried!
Siegfried zurück?
seinen Ruf sendet er her!
Auf!—Auf, ihm entgegen!
in meines Gottes Arm!
(Sie stürzt in höchstem Entzücken dem Hittergrunde Feuerflammen schlagen über den Höhensaum auf: aus ihnen springt Siegfried auf einen hoch ragenden Felsstein empor, worauf die Flammen wieder zurückweichen, und abermals nur aus der Tiefe des Hintergrundes heraufleuchten.—Siegfried, auf dem Haupte den Tarnhelm, der ihm bis zur Hälfte das Gesicht verdeckt und nur die Augen frei lässt, erscheint in Gunther's Gestalt.)

BRÜNNHILDE: (voll Entsetzen zurückweichend.) Verrath!—Wer drang zu mir?
(Sie flieht bis in den Hintergrund, und heftet von da aus in sprachlosem Erstaunen ihren Blick auf Siegfried.)

SIEGFRIED: (Im Hintergrunde auf dem Steine verweilend, betrachtet sie lange, auf seinen Schild gelehnt; dann redet er sie mit verstellter—tieferer—Stimme an.) Brünnhild'! ein Freier kam, den dein Feuer nicht geschreckt.
Dich werb' ich nun zum Weib;
du folge willig mir!

VALTRAUTA: This is your truth then?
So in trouble
you leave your sister all loveless?

BRÜNNHILDE: Swiftly go forth, to ride far from here:
you'll not force the ring from me.

VALTRAUTA: Woe's me, woe's me!
Woe's to you, sister!
Woe to Valhall'—woe!
(She rushes away and is heard without—as if on horse—galloping away from the wood.)

BRÜNNHILDE: (gazes after a brightly lighted storm-cloud as it sails away and is quickly lost in the distance).
Black thunder-cloud that cleaves the heavens, stride quickly away:
no more be steered to me here.
(It is now evening. From the valley glimmers the firelight, gradually waxing.) Eve's dusky shadows shroud the heavens:
Why glare so wildly
the glittering waves over the wall?
The raging fire
its way over the rock-point would force.
(Siegfried's horn is heard below in the valley. Brünnhilde listens, and then starts up enraptured.)
Siegfried!
Siegfried is here!
Sure his horn sounded that call.
Up! up! and be gathered into my god's strong arm.
(She hurries towards the back in the highest transport. Flames dart up over the cliff; out of them springs Siegfried up on to a jutting rock, whereupon the flames fall back again and gradually retire to the valley. Siegfried appears in Gunther's form, wearing the Tarnhelm, the visor of which covers half his face, leaving only the eyes free.)

BRÜNNHILDE: (retreating in horror.) Betrayed!
What man are you?
(She flies to the front, and from thence, in speechless amazement, turns her looks upon Siegfried.)

SIEGFRIED: (remaining at back on the stone, leans on his shield and gazes at her a long while; then he speaks to her with altered—deeper—voice.) Brünnhilde!
A lover comes,
and your fire alarms him not.
I woo you for my wife;
so bend your will to me!

BRÜNNHILDE: (heftig zitternd).
Wer ist der Mann,
der das vermochte,
was dem Stärksten nur bestimmt?

SIEGFRIED: (immer noch auf dem Steine im Hintergrunde). Ein Helde, der dich zähmt bezwingt Gewalt dich nur.

BRÜNNHILDE: (von Grausen erfasst). Ein Unhold schwang sich auf jenen Stein;
ein Aar kam geflogen mich zu zerfleishcen!
Wer bist du, Schrecklicher?
(Siegfried—schweigt.) Stamm'st du von Menschen?
komm'st du von Hella's nächtlichem Heer?

SIEGFRIED: (nach längerem Schweigen). Ein Gibichung bin ich, und Gunther heisst der Held, dem, Frau, du folgen soll'st.

BRÜNNHILDE: (in Verzweiflung ausbrechend.) Wotan! ergrimmter, grausamer Gott!
Weh'! nun erseh' ich der Strafe Sinn:
zu Hohn und Jammer
jag'st du mich hin!

SIEGFRIED: (springt vom Stein herab und tritt näher.) Die Nacht bricht an:
in deinem Gemach
musst du dich mit mir vermählen.

BRÜNNHILDE: (den Finger, an dem sie Siegfried's Ring trägt, drohend emporstreckend.) Bleib' fern! fürchte dies Zeichen!
Zur Schande zwingst du mich nicht, so lang' der Ring mich schützt.

SIEGFRIED: Mannesrecht gebe er Gunther:
durch den Ring sei ihm vermählt!

BRÜNNHILDE: Zurück, Räuber!
frevelnder Dieb!
Erfreche dich nicht zu nah'n.
Stärker als Stahl macht mich der Ring:
nie raubst du ihn mir!

SIEGFRIED: Von dir ihn zu lösen
lehrst du mich nun.
(Er dringt auf sie ein; sie ringen, Brünnhilde windet sich los und flieht. Siegfried setzt ihr nach. Sie ringen von neuem; er erfasst sie, und entzieht ihrem Finger den Ring. Sie schreit laut auf und sinkt, wie zerbrochen, auf der Steinbank vor dem Gemach zusammen.)

SIEGFRIED: Jetzt bist du mein!
Brünnhilde, Gunther's Braut—gönne mir nun dein Gemach!

BRÜNNHILDE: (fast ohnmächtig.) Was könntest du wehren, elendes Weib?

BRÜNNHILDE: (trembling violently.) Who is the man has wrought the marvel that but one alone may work?

SIEGFRIED: (still standing on the rock at back.) A hero you'll obey if you're ruled by force.

BRÜNNHILDE: (filled with terror.) A demon stands upon yon stone!
an eagle has flown here who would rend my flesh!
Who are you, awful one?
(Siegfried is silent.)
Are you a mortal? Do you Come of Hella's night-dwelling host?

SIEGFRIED: (after a long silence.) I am a Gibichung and Gunther, maid, will mate with thee.

BRÜNNHILDE: (in a despairing outburst.) Wotan!
Resentful,
Stern-hearted sire!
Woe! now I fathom
your fiat fell!
My shame and wailing well have you shaped!

SIEGFRIED: (leaping from the rock and approaching.) The night falls,
I demand your room;
made mine by marriage.

BRÜNNHILDE: (threateningly stretching out her finger on which is Siegfried's ring.) Stand back!
bow to this token!
No shame can touch me from you while yet this ring is my shield.

SIEGFRIED: Husband's right it gains for Gunther:
with that ring be wed to him.

BRÜNNHILDE: Aroint, robber!
Villainous thief!
Nor venture near my side.
Stronger than steel
the ring makes me;
None rend it from me.

SIEGFRIED: Will I take it from you,
Taught by your words.
(He presses towards her; they wrestle. Brünnhilde slips herself loose and flies. Siegfried pursues her. Again they struggle; he seizes her, and plucks the ring from her finger. She utters a loud scream and sinks exhausted on the rocky seat in front of the cave.)

SIEGFRIED: Now be mine!
Brünnhilde, Gunther's bride:
go to your chamber with me.

BRÜNNHILDE: (almost fainting.)
How, woman too hapless, can you find help?
(Siegfried drives her in wit a commanding gesture. She goes into the cave trembling, and with tottering steps.)

(Siegfried treibt sie mit einer gebietenden Bewegung an: zitternd und wankenden Schrittes geht sie in das Gemach.)

SIEGFRIED: (das Schwert ziehend, mit seiner natürlichen Stimme.) Nun, Nothung, zeuge du, dass ich in Züchten warb:
die Treue wahrend dem Bruder, trenne mich von seiner Braut!
(Er folgt Brünnhilde nach.) (De Vorhang fällt.)

SIEGFRIED: (drawing his sword and speaking with his natural voice.) Now, Needful, witness that my wooing is chaste.
To seal my oath to my brother, separate me from his bride.
(He follows Brünnhilde.) (The curtain falls.)

■ ZWEITER AUFZUG

Erste Scene

(Uferraum vor der Halle der Gibichungen: rechts der offene Eingang zur Halle; links das Rheinufer; von diesem aus erhebt sich eine durch verschiedene Bergpfade gespaltene, felsige Anhöhe, quer über die Bühne, nach rechts dem Hintergrunde zu aufsteigend. Dort sieht man einen der Fricka errichtetes Welchstein, welchem, höher hinauf, ein grösserer für Wotan, sowie seitwärts ein gleicher für Donner geweihter entspricht. Es ist Nacht.) Hagen; den Speer im Arm, den Schild zur Seite, sitzt schlafend an der Halle. Der Mond wirrt plötzlich ein grelles Licht auf ihn und seine nächste Umgebung; man gewahrt Alberich vor Hagen kauernd, die Arme auf dessen Kniee gelehnt.)

ALBERICH: Schläfst du, Hagen, mein Sohn?
Du schläfst, und hörst mich nicht, den Ruh' und Schlaf verrieth?

HAGEN: (leise und ohne sich zu rühren, so dass er immerfort zu schlafen scheint, obwohl er die Augen offen hat.) Ich höre dich, schlimmer Albe:
was hast du meinem Schlaf zu sagen?

ALBERICH: Gemahnt sei der Macht, der du gebietest,
bist du so muthig,
wie die Mutter dich mir gebar.

HAGEN: Gab die Mutter mir Muth, nicht doch mag ich ihr danken, dass deiner List sie erlag:
frühalt, fahl und bleich,
hass' ich die Frohen, freue mich nie!

ALBERICH: Hagen, mein Sohn!
Hasse die Frohen!
Mich Lust-freien, Leid-belasteten,
liebst du so wie du sollst!
Bist du dräftig,
kühn und klug:
die wir bekämpfen
mit nächtigem Krieg, schon giebt ihnen Noth unser Neid

■ ACT II

Scene I

(River bank before the hall of the Gibichungs: the banks of the river L., entrance to the hall R. From the river bank rises diagonally towards the back a rocky slope divided by sundry mountain paths. There stands an altar stone, dedicated to Fricka, a larger one, higher up, for Wotan, and another towards the side for Donner. It is night.)
(Hagen, with spear in hand and shield at side, sits sleeping against the hall. The moon suddenly throws a keen light on him and his surroundings; Alberic is seen crouching in front of him, leaning his arms on Hagen's knees.)

ALBERIC: Do you sleep, Hagen, my son?
You sleep and hear not him whom rest and sleep have ruined.

HAGEN: (softly and without moving, so that he appears still to sleep, though his eyes are open.) I hear well, son of darkness:
what have you to instruct my slumber?

ALBERIC: I remind you what might own your spirit
if it is as manly as your mother did make it erst.

HAGEN: Though mighty she made me, I may not thank her that she succumbed to your craft Wizened, wan and pale,
I hate the happy,
hope for no joy.

ALBERIC: Hagen, my son!
hate the happy!
Your so hapless sire,
besieged by sorrow,
then lacks not your love.
If you are fearless,
fierce and false,
those whom we fight with a nocturnal feud shall surely be harmed by our hate.

Der einst den Ring mir entriss, Wotan, der wüthende Räuber, vom eig'nen Geschlechte
ward er geschlagen:
an den Wälsung verlor er Macht und Gewalt; mit der Götter ganzer Sippe in Angst ersieht er sein End'.
Nicht ihn fürcht' ich mehr:
fallen muss er mit Allen!
Schläf'st du, Hagen, mein Sohn?

HAGEN: (bleibt unverändert wie zuvor). Der Ewigen Macht, wer erbte sie?

ALBERICH: Ich—und du:
wir erben die Welt,
trüg' ich mich nicht
in deiner Treu', theil'st du meinen Gram und Grimm.
Wotan's Speer
zerspellte der Wälsung, der Fafner, den Wurm,
im Kampfe gefällt,
und kindisch den Reif sich errang:
jede Gewalt hat er gewonnen;
Walhall und Nibelheim neigen sich ihm;
an dem furchtlosen Helden erlahmt selbst mein Fluch:
denn nicht kennt er
des Ringes Werth, zu nichts nützt er
die neidlichste Macht;
lachend in liebender Brunst brennt er lebend dahin.
Ihn zu verderben
taugt uns nun einzig . . .
Hörst du, Hagen, mein Sohn?

HAGEN: Zu seinem Verderben dient er mir schon.

ALBERICH: Den gold'nen Ring,
den Reif gilt's zu erringen!
Ein weises Weib
lebt dem Wälsung zu Lieb':
rieth' sie ihm je des Rheines Töchtern —die in Wassers Tiefen einst mich bethört!—
zurück zu geben den Ring:
verloren ging' mir das Gold, keine List erlangte es je.
Drum ohne Zögern ziel' auf den Reif:
Dich Zaglosen
zeugt' ich mir ja, dass wider Helden
hart du mich hieltest.
Zwar stark nicht genug
den Wurm zu besteh'n, was allein dem Wälsung bestimmt, zu zähem Hass
erzog ich doch Hagen:
der soll mich nun rächen,
den Ring zu gewinnen,
dem Wälsung und Wotan zum Hohn!
Schwör'st du mir's, Hagen, mein Sohn?
(Ein immer finsterer Schatten bedeckt wieder Hagen und Alberich: vom Rhein her dämmert der Tag.)

He who once wrested my ring, Wotan, the worst of all robbers, at last is disabled
by his own offspring:
all his late power through the Volsung is lost.
All the gods together with him in awe are waiting their ending.
No more do I fear him:
he must fall now among them.
Do you sleep, Hagen, my son?

HAGEN: (remaining motionless as before.) The might of the gods, whose meed is it?

ALBERIC: Mine and yours!
We'll master the world;
if I may reckon
on your aid—
Do you share in my wrongs and wrath.
Wotan's spear was spoiled by the Volsung, who fiercely did vanquish Fafnir in fight,
the fair ring to take as a toy.
Now he is prince of every power, Valhall' and Nibelheim know him as their lord.
On this fear-lacking hero
my curse cannot fall;
for, the ring's might he uses not:
he knows nothing
of its notable worth.
Laughter, and I love with its glow glad his life-days alone.
Only his ruin must we now aim at . . . . .
Do you sleep, Hagen, my son?

HAGEN: I help him already ruin to seek.

ALBERIC: The golden round—the ring—we must arrive at.
A woman wise
loves him well as her life.
Rendered he ever
the river maidens
—by whose wiles amid the waves I was mocked—
the ring, obeying her counsel, for ever gone were the gold,
and no art could earn it again.
Then, without staying,
strive for the ring.
You were made stubborn and sturdy, that you should help
my hate against heroes.
You want strength indeed to vanquish the worm:
that alone the Volsung might work.
Yet potent hatred
I planted, Hagen, in you, my avenger:—
to win me the ring, you'll vanquish Volsung and Wotan, Swear to me, Hagen, my son?
(From this point an increasing gloom hides Hagen and Alberic. At the same time day begins to dawn on the Rhine.)

HAGEN: Den Ring soll ich haben:
harre in Ruh'!

ALBERICH: Schwör'st du mir's, Hagen, mein Held?

HAGEN: Mir selbst schwör' ich's:
schweige die Sorge!

ALBERICH: (wie er allmälig immer mehr dem Blicke entschwindet, wird auch seine Stimme immer unvernehmbarer.) Sei treu, Hagen, mein Sohn!
Trauter Helde, sei treu!
Sei treu!—treu!
(Alberich ist gänzlich verschwunden. Hagen, der unverrückt in seiner Stellung verblieben, blickt regungslos und starren Auges nach dem Rheine hin. Die Sonne geht auf und spiegelt sich in der Fluth.)
(Siegfried tritt plötzlich, dicht am Ufer, hinter einem Busche hervor. Er ist in seiner eigenen Gestalt; nur den Tarnhelm hat er noch auf dem Haupte: er zieht ihn ab, und hängt ihn in den Gürtel.)

SIEGFRIED: Hoiho! Hagen!
Müder Mann!
Siehst du mich kommen?

HAGEN: (gemächlich sich erhebend.) Heil! Siegfried!
Geschwinder Helde!
Wo brausest du her?

SIEGFRIED: Von Brünnhildenstein;
dort zog ich den Athem ein,
mit dem ich jetzt dich rief:
so schnell war meine Fahrt!
Langsamer folgt mir ein Paar:
Zu Schiff gelangt das her.

HAGEN: So zwangst du Brünnhild'!

SIEGFRIED: Wacht Gutrune?

HAGEN: Hoiho! Gutrune!
Komm heraus!
Siegfried ist da:
Was säum'st du d'rin?

SIEGFRIED: (zur Halle sich wendend.) Euch beiden meld' ich, wie ich Brünnhild' band.
(Gutrune tritt ihnen unter der Halle entgegen.)

SIEGFRIED: Heiss' mich willkommen, Gibichskind!
Ein guter Bote bin ich dir.

GUTRUNE: Freia grüsse dich zu aller Frauen Ehre!

SIEGFRIED: Frei und hold sei nur mir Frohen:
zum Weib gewann ich dich heut'.

GUTRUNE: So folgt Brünnhild' meinem Bruder?

SIEGFRIED: Leicht ward die Frau ihm gefreit.

GUTRUNE: Sengte das Feuer ihn
nicht?

HAGEN: I'll lay hands on the ring:
happily rest.

ALBERIC: Swear to me, Hagen, my hope.

HAGEN: My soul swears it: cease your sorrow.

ALBERIC: (as he gradually disappears from view, his voice becoming fainter and fainter.) Be true,
Hagen, my son.
Trusty hero, be true.
Be true!—true!
(He vanishes completely. Hagen, who has persistently remained in his place, gazes motionless and with fixed eyes upon the Rhine.)
(The sun rises and is mirrored in the waters.)
(Siegfried suddenly comes forward from behind a bush on the river bank. He is in his own semblance, but still wears the Tarnhelm; this he now doffs and hangs in his belt.)

SIEGFRIED: Hoiho!
Hagen!
sleepy soul!
See who is coming!

HAGEN: (indolently rising.) Hey,
Siegfried!
You speedy hero!
When did your brawl here?

SIEGFRIED: From Brünnhilde's rock.
It was there I imbibed the breath with which I waked you:
so rapid was my flight.
Slower will follow the pair;
by boat they slip up here.

HAGEN: Has mastered Brünnhilde?

SIEGFRIED: Wakes Gutrune yet?

HAGEN: Hoiho!
Gutrune!
Come without!
Siegfried is here:
why stay in house?

SIEGFRIED: (turning to the hall.)
I took Brünnhilde, and how—I'll tell you.
(Gutrune enters from the hall and meets him.)

SIEGFRIED: Now welcome make me, Gibich-maid!
You have A goodly herald in me.

GUTRUNE: Freia gives you joy,
by every fair one honored.

SIEGFRIED: Freely deign to show me favor:
I've won you as wife today.

GUTRUNE: Does Brünnhilde fare with my brother?

SIEGFRIED: Light was his wooing,
I believe.

GUTRUNE: Has he no wound from the fire?

SIEGFRIED: Ihn hätt' es auch nicht versehrt;
doch ich durchschritt es für ihn, da dich ich wollt' erwerben.

GUTRUNE: Doch dich hat es verschont?

SIEGFRIED: Mich freute die schwebende Brunst.

GUTRUNE: Hielt Brünnhild' dich für Gunther?

SIEGFRIED: Ihm glich ich auf ein Haar:
der Tarnhelm wirkte das,
wie Hagen tüchtig es wies.

HAGEN: Dir gab ich guten Rath.

GUTRUNE: So zwang'st du das kühne Weib?

SIEGFRIED: Sie wich Gunther's Kraft.

GUTRUNE: Und vermählte sie sich dir?

SIEGFRIED: Ihrem Mann gehorchte Brünnhild' eine ville bräutliche Nacht.

GUTRUNE: Als ihr Mann doch galtest du?

SIEGFRIED: Bei Gutrune weilte Siegfried.

GUTRUNE: Doch zur Seite war ihm Brünnhild'?

SIEGFRIED: (auf sein Schwert deutend). Zwischen Ost und West der Nord:
so nah war Brünnhild' ihm fern.

GUTRUNE: Wie empfing sie nun Gunther von dir?

SIEGFRIED: Durch des Feuers verlöschende Lohe im Frühnebel vom Felsen folgte sie mir zu Thal;
dem Strande nah, flugs die Stelle
tauschte Gunther mit mir:
durch des Geschmeides Tugend wünscht' ich mich schnell hieher.
Ein starker Wind nun treibt die Trauten den Rhein herauf:
d'rum rüstet jetzt den Empfang!

GUTRUNE: Siegfried, mächtigster Mann:
wie fasst mich Furcht vor dir!

HAGEN: (von der Höbe im Hintergrunde den Fluss hinas spähend).
In der Ferne seh' ich ein Segel.

SIEGFRIED: So sagt dem Boten Dank!

GUTRUNE: Lasst sie uns hold empfangen, dass heiter sie und gern hier weile!
Du Hagen! minnig
rufe die Mannen
nach Gibich's Hof zur Hochzeit!
Frohe Frauen
ruf' ich zum Fest:
der Freudigen folgen sie gern.
(Nach der Halle schreitend, zu Siegfried.) Rastest du, schlimmer Held?

SIEGFRIED: It would not even have burned him, but I in his stead went over.
that I might gain my Gutrune.

GUTRUNE: Then you have not been touched?

SIEGFRIED: I gleefully trampled the blaze.

GUTRUNE: Did Brünnhilde deem you Gunther?

SIEGFRIED: We differed not a hair.
The Tarnhelm worked all that,
as Hagen told me it would.

HAGEN: I gave you a good account.

GUTRUNE: Did you conquer the maid so fierce?

SIEGFRIED: She felt—Gunther's might.

GUTRUNE: Was she married then to you?

SIEGFRIED: To her mate submitted Brünnhilde all the night of bridal till morn.

GUTRUNE: And she gave herself to you?

SIEGFRIED: For Gutrune Siegfried waited.

GUTRUNE: By his side, though, was Brünnhilde?

SIEGFRIED: (pointing to his sword.) Between the East and West lies North:
so near was Brünnhilde to me.

GUTRUNE: How then made Gunther the bride his own?

SIEGFRIED: In the fiery surges consuming at first dawn she set foot and followed me toward the vale.
When shore was near,
Flash!—in shape reversed were Gunther and I.
Then by the helmet's virtue, wishing, I flew here.
By hastening wind impelled,
the pair up the river come.
Make ready then to receive.

GUTRUNE: Siegfried, marvellous man!
What fear I feel of you!

HAGEN: (looking down on the river from the heights at back.)
From afar approaches a pinnace.

SIEGFRIED: Then praise its herald here.

GUTRUNE: Let us give her hearty welcome, that haply she may bide here gladly.
You Hagen, please to summon the people to Gibich's walls for wedding.
Mirthful maids
shall be brought by me;
my merriment meetly they'll join.
(Going towards the hall, to Siegfried.)
Would you sleep, naughty guest?

SIEGFRIED: Dir zu helfen ruh' ich aus.
(Er folgt ihr. Beide gehen in die Halle ab.)

HAGEN: (auf der Anhöhe stehend, stösst, der Landseite zugewendet, mit aller Kraft in ein grosses Stierhorn.) Hoiho! Hoiho! Hoiho!
Ihr Gibichs Mannen, machet euch auf!
Wehe! Wehe!
Waffen! Waffen!
Waffen durch's Land!
gute Waffen!
Starke Waffen,
scharf zum Streit,
Noth! Noth ist da!
Noth! Wehe! Wehe!
Hoiho! Hoiho! Hoiho!
(Er bläst abermals. Aus verschiedenen Gengenden vom Lande her antworten Heerhörner. Von den Höhen und aus dem Thale stürmen in Hast und Eile gewaffnete Mannen herbei.)

DIE MANNEN: (erst einzeine, dann immer mehr zusammen.) Was tos't das Horn? was ruft es zu Heer?
Wir kommen mit Wehr, wir kommen mit Waffen;
mit starken Waffen,
mit scharfer Wehr!
Hoiho! Hoiho!
Hagen! Hagen!
Welche Noth ist da?
Welcher Feind ist nah'?
Wer giebt uns Streit?
Ist Gunther in Noth?

HAGEN: (von der Anhöhe herab.) Rüstet euch wohl
und rastet nicht;
Gunther sollt ihr empfah'n:
ein Weib hat der gefreit.

DIE MANNEN: Drohet ihm Noth? drängt ihn der Feind?

HAGEN: Ein freisliches Weib führt er heim!

DIE MANNEN: Ihm folgen der Magen feindliche Mannen?

HAGEN: Einsam fährt er:
keiner folgt.

DIE MANNEN: So bestand er die Noth, bestand den Kampf?

HAGEN: Der Wurmtödter
wehrte der Noth:
Siegfried, der Held,
der schur' ihm Heil.

DIE MANNEN: Was soll ihm das Heer nun noch helfen?

HAGEN: Starke Stiere
sollt ihr schlachten:
am Weihstein fliesse Wotan ihr Blut.

SIEGFRIED: It gives me rest helping you.
(He follows her. Exeunt both into the hall.)

HAGEN: (standing on the height, turns landwards and blows with all his strength a great cattle-horn.) Hoiho! Hoiho! Hoiho!
You men of Gibich gather yourselves!
Waken!
waken!
Weapons! weapons!
weapons are out!
Goodly weapons, sturdy weapons
sharp for strife.
Woe!
woe is here!
Woe!
Waken!
Waken!
Hoiho!
Hoiho!
Hoiho!
(He continues to blow his cattle-horn. Other horns answer it from different directions in the land. From the heights and valleys armed men rush hastily on.)

THE VASSALS: (first a few at a time, then more together.) Why brays the horn?
What summons the hosts?
We come with all ward—
we come with all weapons—Hagen!
Hagen!
Hoiho!
Hoiho!
What's the peril here?
Will the foe appear?
Who gives us fight?
Is Gunther in need?

HAGEN: (from the heights.) Trim yourselves up and tarry not;
greet your chief to the full;
Gunther has found a wife.

THE VASSALS: What is his need?
where is his foe?

HAGEN: A fiery wife fares at his heels.

THE VASSALS: By furious mass of foes is menaced?

HAGEN: No one follows:
he fares alone,

THE VASSALS: Has he triumphed over ill?
Has he triumphed in war?

HAGEN: The Worm-killer was his defense!
Siegfried the hero held his safety.

THE VASSALS: Then how should our host further help him?

HAGEN: Bulls full sturdy shall you slaughter, and wash the altar of Wotan in blood.

DIE MANNEN: Was, Hagen, was heisst du uns dann?

HAGEN: Einen Eber fällen sollt ihr für Froh;
einen stämmigen Bock stechen für Donner; Schafe aber
schlachtet für Fricka, Dass gute Ehe sie gebe!

DIE MANNEN: (mit immer mehr ausbrechender Heiterkeit.) Schlugen wir Thiere, was schaffen wir dann?

HAGEN: Das Trinkhorn nehm't von trauten Frau'n, mit Meth und Wein
wonnig gefüllt.

DIE MANNEN: Das Horn in der Hand,
Wie halten wir es dann?

HAGEN: Rüstig gezecht bis der Rausch euch zähmt alles den Göttern zu Ehren, dass gute Ehe sie geben!

DIE MANNEN: (in ein schallendes Gelächter ausbrechend.) Gross Glück und Heil
lacht nun dem Rhein, da der grimme Hagen
so lustig mag sein!
Der Hage-Dorn
sticht nun nicht mehr:
zum Hochzeitrufer
ward er bestellt.

HAGEN: (der immer sehr ernst geblieben.) Nun lasst das Lachen, müth'ge Mannen!
Empfangt Gunther's Braut:
Brünnhilde naht dort mit ihm.
(Er ist herabgestiegen und unter die Mannen getreten.) Hold seid der Herrin, helfet ihr treu:
traf sie ein Leid,
rasch seid zur Rache!
(Gunther und Brunnhilde sind im Nachen angekommen Einige der Mannen springen in den Fluss, und ziehen den Kahn an das Land. Während Gunther Brünnhilde an das Ufer geleitet, schlagen die Mannen jauchzend an die Waffen. Hagen steht zur Seite im Hintergrunde.)

DIE MANNEN: Heil! Heil!
Willkommen! Willkommen!
Heil dir, Gunther!
Heil deiner Braut!

GUNTHER: (Brünnhilde an der Hand aus dem Kahn geleitend.) Brünnhilde, die hehrste Frau, bring' ich euch her zum Rhein:
ein edleres Weib
ward nie gewonnen!
Der Gibichungen Geschlecht, gaben die Götter ihm Gunst, zum höchsten Ruhm rag' es nun auf!

THE VASSALS: Why, Hagen, what do you bid us then?

HAGEN: Be a boar then further struck down for Froh, and a stalwart he-goat smitten for Donner;
sheep, moreover,
slaughter for Fricka,
that well she may aid in the wedding.

THE VASSALS: (with continually increasing mirth.) When we have done it, then what else is there?

HAGEN: Take the drink-horn from fair damsels, with wine and mead mirthfully filled.

THE VASSALS: The drink-horn in hand, what have we then to do?

HAGEN: Revel away
till you wreck your wits:
All for goodwill of the AEsir, to win their aid for the wedding.

THE VASSALS: (bursting out into a ringing peal of laughter.) Good gain and hap lights on the Rhine, if Hagen the grim one to laughter incline.
The Hardy Thorn
pricks now no more;
to help at weddings
henceforth is his part.

HAGEN: (who has remained quite serious.) Now leave off laughter, valiant vassals,
Receive Gunther's bride:
Brünnhilde approaches with him.
(He has descended and joined the vassels.) Love well your lady;
lend her your aid:
if she is wrong
quickly requite it, (Gunther and Brünnhilde arrive in the boat. Some of the men spring into the water and drag the boat ashore. While Gunther conducts Brünnhilde ashore the vassals shout and clash their weapons. Hagen stands aside at back.)

THE VASSALS: Hail! hail!
Welcome! welcome!
Hail, O Gunther!
Hail to your bride!

GUNTHER: (leading Brünnhilde by the hand from the boat.) Brünnhilde, the rarest dame borne by the Rhine to you.
There never was won a nobler woman.
The Gibichungs as a race gained often goods from the gods; to high renown
now will they rise.

DIE MANNEN: (an die Waffen schlagend.) Heil! Heil dir, Gunther!
Glücklicher Gibichung!
(Brünnhilde bleich, und mit zu Boden gesenktem Blicke, folgt Gunther, der sie zur Halle führt, aus welcher jetzt Siegfried und Gutrune, von Frauen begleitet, heraustreten.)

GUNTHER: (mit Brünnhilde vor der Halle anhaltend.) Gegrüsst sei, theurer Held!
gegrüsst, holde Schwester!
Dich seh' ich froh zur Seite ihm, der zum Weib dich gewann.
Zwei selige Paare
seh' ich hier prangen:
Brünnhilde—und Gunther, Gutrune—und Siegfried!
(Brünnhilde erschrickt, schlägt die Augen auf, und erblickt Siegfried; sie lässt Gunther's Hand fahren, geht heftig bewegt einen Schritt auf Siegfried zu, weicht entsetzt zurück, und heftet starr den Blick auf ihn.—Alle sind sehr betroffen.)

MANNEN UND FRAUEN: Was ist ihr?

SIEGFRIED: (geht ruhig einige Schritte auf Brünnhilde zu.) Was müh't Brünnhilde's Blick?

BRÜNNHILDE: (kaum ihrer mächtig). Siegfried . . . hier . . . !
Gutrune!

SIEGFRIED: Gunther's milde Schwester,
mir vermählt,
wie Gunther du.

BRÜNNHILDE:
Ich . . . Gunther . . . ? du lüg'st!—
Mir schwindet das Licht.
(Sie droht umzusinken: Siegfried, ihr zunächst stüzt sie.)

BRÜNNHILDE: (matt und leise in Siegfried's Arme.) Siegfried . . .
kennt mich nicht?

SIEGFRIED: Gunther, deinem
Weib ist übel!
(Gunther tritt hinau.) Erwache, Frau!
hier ist dein Gatte (Indem Siegfried auf Gunther mit dem Finger deutet erkennt an diesem Brünnhilde den Ring.)

BRÜNNHILDE: (mit furchtbarer Heftigkeit aufschreckend.) Ha!— der Ring . . .
an seiner Hand!
Er . . . Siegfried?

MANNEN UND FRAUEN: Was ist?

HAGEN: (aus dem Hintergrunde unter die Mannen tretend.) Jetzt merket klug, was die Frau euch klagt!

BRÜNNHILDE: (sich ermannend, indem sie die schrecklichste Aufregung gewaltsam zurückhält.)
Einen Ring sah ich

THE VASSALS: (clashing their weapons.) Hail to you, glorious Gibichung!
(Brünnhilde, pale and with eyes fixed on the ground, follows Gunther, who leads her towards the hall, from which issue forth Siegfried and Gutrune attended by a train of women.)

GUNTHER: (pausing with Brünnhilde before the hall.) All hail, my hero bold!
All hail, beauteous sister!
I see you gladly beside him by whom as wife you're won.
Two happy couples
here have encountered;
Brünnhilde and Gunther, Gutrune and Siegfried!
(Brünnhilde, startled, raises her eyes and perceives Siegfried; she drops Gunther's hand, advances one step towards Siegfried, then recoils in horror and fixes her eyes glaring upon him.—All the others are wonderstruck.)

MEN AND WOMEN: What ails her?
Is she distraught?

SIEGFRIED: (goes a few steps nearer to Brünnhilde.) What clouds Brünnhilde's brow?

BRÜNNHILDE: (almost fainting.)
Siegfried . . . here? . . . Gutrune!

SIEGFRIED: Gunther's mild-eyed sister, mate to me as you to him.

BRÜNNHILDE: I? . . .
Gunther? . . . you lie!
I see not the light
(She is about to fall: Siegfried, who is nearest, supports her.)

BRÜNNHILDE: (faintly and softly, in Siegfried's arms.) Siegfried . . . knows me not!

SIEGFRIED: Gunther, see, your wife is fainting.
(Gunther approaches.)
Awaken, dame!
Here stands your husband.
(As Siegfried points to Gunther, Brünnhilde perceives the ring on his finger.)

BRÜNNHILDE: (starting with fearful impetuosity.) Ha! That Ring
upon his hand!
His—? Siegfried's—?

THE VASSALS: What is it?

HAGEN: (advancing from the back among the men.) Now well attend to the woman's tale.

BRÜNNHILDE: (struggling to command herself and repressing with great effort her terrific storm of emotion.) On your hand there an deiner Hand:—

nicht dir gehört er, ihn entriss mir (auf Gunther deutend)
—dieser Mann!
Wie mochtest von ihm den Ring du empfah'n?

SIEGFRIED: (aufmerksam den Ring an seiner Hand betrachtend.) Den Ring empfing ich nicht von ihm.

BRÜNNHILDE: (zu Gunther.) Nahm'st du von mir den Ring, durch den ich dir vermählt;
so melde ihm dein Recht, ford're zurück das Pfand!

GUNTHER: (in grosser Verwirrung.) Den Ring?—ich gab ihm keinen:
doch kennst du ihn auch gut?

BRÜNNHILDE: Wo bärgest du den Ring, den du von mir erbeutet?
(Gunther schweigt in höchster Betroffenheit.)

BRÜNNHILDE: (wüthend auffahrend.) Ha!—Dieser war es, der mir den Ring entriss:
Siegfried, der trugvolle Dieb!

SIEGFRIED: (der über der Betrachtung des Ringes in fernes Sinnen entruckt war.) Von keinem Weib kam mir der Reif;
noch war's ein Weib,
dem ich ihn abgewann:
genau erkenn' ich
des Kampfes Lohn, den vor Neidhöhl' einst ich bestand, als den starken Wurm ich erschlug

HAGEN: (zwischen sie tretend.) Brünnhilde, kühne Frau!
kennst du genau den Ring?
Ist's der, den du Gunther'n gab'st, so ist er sein,— und Siegfried gewann ihn durch Trug den der Treulose büssen sollt'!

BRÜNNHILDE: (in furchtbarstem Schmerz aufschreiend.) Betrug!
Betrug!
Schändlichster Betrug!
Verrath! Verrath—
Wie noch nie er gerächt!

GUTRUNE: Betrug?

MANNEN UND FRAUEN: An wem Verrath?

BRÜNNHILDE: Heilige Götter!
himmlische Lenker!
Rauntet ihr diess
in eurem Rath?
Lehrt ihr mich Leiden
Wie keiner sie litt?
Schuft ihr mir Schmach
wie nie sie geschmerzt?
Rathet nun Rache
wie nie sie geras't!
Zündet mir Zorn
wie nie er gezähmt!

I saw the ring:
you hold it wrong.
It was ravished
(Pointing to Gunther.)
—by this man.
What means did you use to gain the ring?

SIEGFRIED: (attentively inspecting the ring on his finger.) That ring I gained,
but not from him.

BRÜNNHILDE: (to Gunther.) You tore the ring from me with which you wed me, then make him feel your power:
get back the pledge again.

GUNTHER: (greatly perplexed.)
The ring? I gave him nothing:
but do you know our guest?

BRÜNNHILDE: Where do you guard the ring that you made me give you?
(Gunther, much puzzled, remains silent.)

BRÜNNHILDE: (bursting out frantically.) Ha! it was this one that wrenched the ring from me Siegfried, the treacherous thief.

SIEGFRIED: (who is quite absorbed in contemplating the ring.) No girl, I believe, gave me that ring;
Nor woman it was from whom I won the prize.
This hoop I bear
as the battle prize, when at Hate Cave once I did strive and destroyed the dragon so strong.

HAGEN: (coming between them.)
Brünnhilde, noble dame,
Do you know this ring full well?
If it is that that Gunther gained, he owns it still,— and Siegfried has won it by trick, which the traitor should pay for straight.

BRÜNNHILDE: (screaming out in the most terrible anguish.) By trick!
By trick!
Shamefullest of tricks!
Deceit!
deceit!
Worse than thought can conceive!

GUTRUNE: Deceit!

THE VASSALS: What was the trick?

BRÜNNHILDE: Holy gods!
Heavenly guardians!
Was this indeed your whispered will?
Grief you give such as none ever grasped, shape me a shame
no mortal has shared?
Vouchsafe revenge then like none ever viewed, rouse me to wrath
such as none can arrest!

Heisset Brünnhilde
ihr Herz zu zerbrechen, den zu zertrümmern,
der sie betrog!

GUNTHER: Brünnhilde, Gemahlin!
Mäss'ge dich!

BRÜNNHILDE: Weich' fern, Verräther!
Selbst-verrath'ner!
Wisset denn Alle!
nicht—ihm—dem Manne dort bin ich vermählt.

MANNEN UND FRAUEN: Siegfried? Gutrune's Gemahl?

BRÜNNHILDE: Er zwang mir Lust und Liebe ab.

SIEGFRIED: Achtest du so der eig'nen Ehre?
Die Zunge, die sie lästert, muss ich der Lüge sie zeihen?—
Hört, ob ich Treue brach!
Blutbrüderschaft
hab' ich Gunther geschworen: Nothung, mein werthes Schwert, wahrte der Treue Eid;
mich trennte seine Schärfe von diesem traurigen Weib.

BRÜNNHILDE: Du listiger Held, sieh' wie du lüg'st!
wie auf dein Schwert du schlecht dich beruf'st!
Wohl kenn' ich die Schärfe, doch kenn' auch die Scheide, darin so wonnig
ruht' an der Wand Nothung, der treue Freund, als die Traute sein Herr sich gewann.

DIE MANNEN: (in lebhafter Entrüstung zusammentretend.)
Wie? brach er die Treue! trübte er Gunther's Ehre?

GUNTHER: Geschändet wär' ich, schmählich bewahrt, gäb'st du die Rede
nicht ihr zurück!

GUTRUNE: Treulos, Siegfried, sannest du Trug?
Bezeuge, dass falsch
Jene dich zeiht!

DIE MANNEN: Reinige dich, bist du im Recht:
schweige die Klage, schwöre den Eid!

SIEGFRIED: Schweig' ich die Klage, schwör' ich den Eid:
wer von euch wagt
seine Waffe daran?

HAGEN: Meines Speeres Spitze wag' ich daran:
sie wahr' in Ehren den Eid!
(Die Mannen schliessen einen Ring um Siegfried; Hagen hält diesem die Spitze seines Speeres hin: Siegfried legt zwei Finger seiner rechten Hand darauf.) Animato

Here let Brünnhilde's heart straight be broken if he who wronged her may be wrecked.

GUNTHER: Brünnhilde!
my consort,
calm yourself!

BRÜNNHILDE: Away, traitor!
You've betrayed too.
People all, hearken:
Not—he—that man yonder was wed to me.

THE VASSALS: Siegfried? Gutrune's mate?

BRÜNNHILDE: He forced delights of love from me.

SIEGFRIED: Are you so careless of your honor?
The lips, then, that revile it—must I convict them of lying?
Hear whether I broke truth!
I and Gunther have sworn to blood-brotherhood:
"Needful," my good sword, guarded the oath intact:
its edge did keep me sundered from this ill-omened bride.

BRÜNNHILDE: You lord of deceit, see how you lie!
Your sword will serve little as a proof!
Its sharpness is well known to me,
but known too its scabbard, encased in which reposed on the wall
"Needful," the trusty friend, when his master did win a true love.

THE VASSALS: (crowding together in quick anger.) What! Has he been traitor?
Trifled with Gunther's honor?

GUNTHER: Disgrace overtakes me, grossest contempt,
if you do not reply to her plea.

GUTRUNE: Faithless—Siegfried, say, are you false?
Attest as untrue
what she has told.

THE VASSALS: Right yourself straight,
if you have been wronged.
Stay her upbraidings!
Swear us the oath.

SIEGFRIED: Should I refute her, Swearing the oath,
which of you war-men will lend his weapon?

HAGEN: My unsullied spear-point well will I lend to ward in honor the oath.
(The Vassals make a ring around Siegfried and Hagen. Hagen holds out his spear; Siegfried lays two fingers of his right hand on its point.)

SIEGFRIED: Helle Wehr! Heilige Waffe!
Hilf meinem ewigen Eide!
Beides Speeres Spitze sprech' ich den Eid: Spitze, achte des Spruchs!
Wo Scharfe mich schneidet, schneide du mich, wo der Tod mich soll treffen, treffe du mich:
klagte das Weib dort wahr, brach ich dem Bruder den Eid!

BRÜNNHILDE: Helle Wehr!
Heilige Waffe!
Hilf meinem ewigen Eide!
Bei des Speeres Spitze sprech ich dem Eid:
Spitze achte des Spruchs!
Ich weihe deine Wucht dass sie ihn werfe!
Deine Schärfe segne ich, dass sie ihn schneide!
Denn brach seine Eide er all, schwur Meineid jetzt dieser Mann.

DIE MANNEN: (im höbsten Aufruhr.) Hilf, Donner! tose dein Wetter,
zu schweigen die wüthende Schmach!

SIEGFRIED: Gunther, wehr' deinem Weibe, das schamlos Schande dir lügt!
Gönn't ihr Weil' und Ruh', der wilden Felsen-Frau, dass ihre freche Wuth sich lege, die eines Unhold's arge List wider uns Alle erregt!— Ihr Mannen, kehret euch ab, lasst das Weiber-Gekeif'!
Als Zage weichen wir gern, gilt es mit Zungen dem Streit.
(Dicht zu Gunther tretend.)
Glaub,' mehr zürnt es mich als dich, Dass schlecht ich sie getäuscht:
der Tarnhelm, dünkt mich fast, hat halb mich nur gehehlt.
Doch Frauengroll
friedet sich bald:
dass dir ich es gewann
dankt gewiss noch das Weib.
(Er wendet sich wieder zu den Mannen.) Munter, ihr Mannen!
folgt mir zum Mahl!
Froh zur Hochzeit helfet, ihr Frau'n!—
Wonnige Lust
lache nun auf:
in Hof und Hain heiter vor Allen
sollt ihr heute mich seh'n.
Wen die Minne freut, meinem frohen Muthe
thu' es der Glückliche gleich!
(Er schlingt in ausgelassenem Uebermuthe seinen Arm um Gutrune, und zieht sie mit sich in die Halle; die Mannen und Frauen folgen ihm nach.) (Brünnhilde, Gunther, und Hagen bleiben zurück. Gunther hat sich, in tiefer Scham und furchtbarer Verstimmung, mit verhülltem Gesicht abseits niedergesetzt.)

BRÜNNHILDE: (im Vordergrunde stehend und vor sich hin starrend.) Welches Unhold's List liegt hier verhohlen?
Welches Zaubrer's Rath
regte diess auf?
Wo ist nun mein Wissen
gegen dieses Wirrsal?
Wo sind meine Runen?
gegen diess Räthsel?
Ach Jammer! Jammer!
Weh'! ach Weh'!
All mein Wissen
wies ich ihm zu:
In seiner Macht
hält er die Magd;
in seiner Banden
hält er die Beute, die, jamme und ob ihrer Schmach, jauchzend der Reiche verschenkt!—
Wer biete mir nun das Schwert, mit dem ich die Bande zerschnitt'?

HAGEN: (dicht an sie horantretend.) Vertraue mir betrog'ne Frau!
Wer dich verrieth,
das räche ich.

BRÜNNHILDE: An wem?

HAGEN: An Siegfried, der dich betrog.

BRÜNNHILDE: An Siegfried? .. du?
(Sie lacht bitter) Ein einz'ger Blick
seines blitzenden Auges
—das selbst durch die Lügengestalt leuchtend strahlte zu mir—deinen besten Muth machte erbangen!

HAGEN: Doch meinem Speere spart' ihn sein Meineid?

BRÜNNHILDE: Eid und Meineid—müss'ge Acht!
Nach Stärk'rem späh', deinen Speer zu waffnen, willst du den Stärksten besteh'n!

HAGEN: Wohl kenn' ich Siegfried's siegende Kraft,
wie schwer im Kampf er zu fällen;
d'rum raune nun du mir guten Rath, wie doch der Recke mir wich'?

BRÜNNHILDE: O Undank;
schändlichster Lohn!
Nicht eine Kunst war mir bekannt, die zum Heil nicht half seinem Leib'!
Unwissend zähmt' ihn mein Zauberspiel, das ihn nun vor Wunden gewahrt.

SIEGFRIED: Spear of war, hallowed weapon!
Protect my oath from dishonor!
On this spotless spearhead is my oath
Spearpoint, aid my speech!
Where steel can strike me, strike at me; wherever death can be dealt me, deal it to me if she is really wronged, if I have injured my friend!

BRÜNNHILDE: Spear of war!
Hallowed weapon!
Protect my oath from dishonor!
On this spotless spearhead I speak an oath: Spearpoint, aid my speech!
I sanctify your strength to his destruction!
And I bless your blade withal that it may blight him!
For broken are all of his oaths, and now he proves perjured.

THE VASSALS: (in the greatest commotion.) Help, Donner!
down with your tempest,
to silence this terrible shame.

SIEGFRIED: Gunther, look to your lady, who shapes shame with her lies.
Give her time and rest,
the tameless mountain maid, until her mind's disturbance slackens which by some demon's deadly spite has been drawn down on us all.
You vassals, scatter yourselves,
leave the women to scold!
As cowards well will we act
if it is a contest of words.
(He goes close up to Gunther.) Troth! it cuts me more than you, that ill I did the trick;
the Tarnhelm, I suspect, has hid me only half.
But woman's ire
wanes apace:
that I won her for you,
one day she'll thank you, I think.
(Turning again to the men.)
Frolic, good fellows!
move to the feast!
Make the marriage
merry, maidens!
Filled with delight,
laugh as you may.
In fort and field
I am foremost among you in the frolic.
He whom love has blessed,
let my blythesome laughter move him to join in my joy.
(In exuberant joy he puts his arm round Gutrune and draws her into the hall with him. The Men and Women follow.)
(Brünnhilde, Gunther, and Hagen remain behind.—Gunther has seated himself apart, with covered face in deep shame and depression.)

BRÜNNHILDE: (standing in the foreground, gazes vacantly before her.) What infernal craft can be hidden here?
What magician's rod raised up this storm?
Where now my wisdom against this bewitchment?
What can all my runes do against this riddle?
Ah sorrow!
sorrow!
Woe's me!
Woe's me!
He has won
all wisdom from me!
I am his maid,
held by his might;
I am his booty,
held in his bondage,
and, languished with shame and woe,
lightly he gives me away.
Whose sword shall I have to beg,
with which I may sever my bonds?

HAGEN: (coming close up to her.)
Have trust in me,
betrayed dame:
and I'll wreak revenge for your wrongs.

BRÜNNHILDE: On whom?

HAGEN: On Siegfried, who has betrayed.

BRÜNNHILDE: On Siegfried? you?
(She laughs bitterly.)
One angry glance of his glittering eyeball—that, even through his fraudulent shape fell unshadowed on me, would subdue your most mettlesome daring!

HAGEN: His falsehood speeds
my spear to his felling.

BRÜNNHILDE: Oath and falsehood, futile to aid!
Find stronger spells
to inspire your weapon, when it would strike at such strength!

HAGEN: I mind well Siegfried's sovereign might,
he scarce were mastered in battle;
but whisper to me
some cunning way to make him weak in my hands.

BRÜNNHILDE: O thankless!
shameful return!
Each single art that I once owned did I lend, his life to protect.
Unwitting, magical means I used,
which safely ward him now from wounds.

HAGEN: So kann keine Wehr ihm schaden?

BRÜNNHILDE: Im Kampfe nicht:—doch—träf'st du im Rücken ihn.
Niemals—das wusst' ich—wich' er dem Feind, nie reicht' er ihm fliehend den Rücken an ihm d'rum spart' ich den Segen.

HAGEN: Und dort trifft ihn mein Speer! (Er wendet sich rasch zu Gunther um.) Auf, Gunther!
edler Gibichung!
Hier steht dein starkes Weib:
was häng'st du dort in Harm?

GUNTHER: (leidenschaftlich auffahrend.) O Schmach!
O Schande!
Wehe mir
dem jammervollsten Manne!

HAGEN: In Schande liegst du—läugn' ich das?

BRÜNNHILDE: O feiger Mann!
falscher Genoss!
Hinter dem Helden
hehltest du dich, dass Preise des Ruhmes
er dir erränge!
Tief wohl sank das theure Geschlecht, das solche Zagen erzeugt!

GUNTHER: (ausser sich.) Betrüger ich—und betrogen!
Verräther ich—und verrathen!— Zermalmt mir das Mark, zerbrecht mir die Brust!
Hilf, Hagen!
hilf meiner Ehr'!
hilf deiner Mutter,
die dich auch ja gebar!

HAGEN: Dir hilft kein Hirn, dir hilft keine Hand:
dir hilft nur—Siegfried's Tod!

GUNTHER: Siegfried's Tod!

HAGEN: Nur der sühnt deine Schmach.

GUNTHER: (von Grausen gepackt, vor sich hin starrend) Blutbrüderschaft schwuren wir uns!

HAGEN: Des Bundes Bruch
sühne nun Blut!

GUNTHER: Brach er den Bund?

HAGEN: Da er dich verrieth!

GUNTHER: Verrieth er mich?

BRÜNNHILDE: Dich verrieth er, und mich verriethet ihr Alle!
Wär' ich gerecht, alles Blut der Welt büsste mir nicht eure Schuld!
Doch des Einen Tod
taugt mir für Alle:
Siegfried falle—
zur Sühne für sich und euch!

HAGEN: No blade borne in war can harm him?

BRÜNNHILDE: In battle, none—yet—
if you strike at his back:—
Never, I well knew would he retreat and, flying, turn it to the foeman;
and so no spell did I set there.

HAGEN: And there he shall be speared!
(He turns quickly from Brünnhilde to Gunther.) Up, Gunther, honored Gibichung!
Here stands your stalwart wife:
why hangs your head in grief!

GUNTHER: (rising sorrowfully.)
O shame!
O sorrow!
Woe to me,
the most distressed of mortals!

HAGEN: That shame overwhelms you well I grant.

BRÜNNHILDE: O timid spouse!
treacherous friend!
You were hidden behind
the hero, that valor's reward
his courage should win!
Your lordliest race had sunk
Low when such a faint-heart was formed.

GUNTHER: (bursting out into rage.) I am betrayed—the betrayer!
I am deceived—the deceiver!
It cuts to my core!
It harrows my heart!
Help, Hagen!
Help for my honor!
help for my mother,
who you also did bear.

HAGEN: No head can help, no hand can help:—nothing helps but—Siegfried's death!

GUNTHER: Siegfried's death!—

HAGEN: Nothing else saves you from shame!

GUNTHER: (staring before him horror-struck.) We swore bloodbrotherhood!

HAGEN: The broken bond calls for his blood!

GUNTHER: He broke the bond?

HAGEN: When you were betrayed!

GUNTHER: Was I betrayed?

BRÜNNHILDE: He betrayed you;
and I'm betrayed too on all sides!
Barely, in truth, could a world of blood wipe from my mind your offense.
But the death of one well will condone all.
Siegfried falls
for sins of himself and you.

HAGEN: (nahe zu Gunther gewendet). Er falle—dir zum Heile!
Ungeheure Macht wird dir, gewinn'st du von ihm den Ring,
den der Tod ihm nur entreisst.

GUNTHER: Brünnhilde's Ring?

HAGEN: Des Niblungen Reif.

GUNTHER: (schwer scufzend). So wär' es Siegfried's Ende!

HAGEN: Uns allen frommt sein Tod.

GUNTHER: Doch Gutrune, ach!
der ich ihn gönnte:
straften den Gatten wir so,
wie bestünden wir vor ihr?

BRÜNNHILDE: (wild auffahrend.) Was rieth mir mein Wissen?
was wiesen mich Runen?
Im hiflosen Elend
ahnet mir's hell:
Gutrune heisst der Zauber,
der mir den Gatten entzückt!
Angst treffe sie!

HAGEN: (zu Gunther) Muss sein Tod sie betrüben, verhehlt sei ihr die That.
Auf munt'res Jagen
ziehen wir morgen:
der Edle braus't uns voran—ein Eber bracht' ihn da um.

GUNTHER UND BRÜNNHILDE:
So soll es sein!
Siegfried falle:
sühn' er die Schmach die er mir schuf!
Eid-Treue hat er getrogen:
mit seinem Blute
büss' er die Schuld!
Allrauner!
rächender Gott!
Schwurwissender
Eideshort!
Wotan! Wotan!
wende dich her!
weise dich schrecklich heilige Schaar, hieher zu horchen dem Racheschwur!

HAGEN: So soll es sein!
Siegfried falle:
sterb' er dahin,
der strahlende Held!
Mein ist der Hort, mir muss er gehören:
entrissen d'rum
sei ihm der Ring!
Alben-Vater!
gefallener Fürst!
Nacht-Hüter!
Niblungen-Herr!
Alberich! Alberich!
achte auf mich!
Weise von neuem
der Niblungen Schaar, dir zu gehorchen,
des Ringes Herrn!
(Gunther und Brünnhilde wen-

HAGEN: (turning close to Gunther.) His falling brings you gain!
Might gigantic would be yours
by merely getting his Ring which only death can make him surrender.

GUNTHER: Brünnhilde's Ring?

HAGEN: By Nibelungs it was wrought.

GUNTHER: (sighing deeply.) Shall this be Siegfried's end then?

HAGEN: Aye, all demands his death.

GUNTHER: But Gutrune, alas!— unto him given!—
We slew her glorious spouse, could we stand before her face?

BRÜNNHILDE: (furiously.) What gain was my wisdom?
What were my runes good for?
Now hapless and anguished all I behold!
Gutrune holds the charm that has beguiled from me my lord Ill light on her!

HAGEN: (to Gunther.) Lest his death grieve her deeply we'll hide from her the deed.
We go tomorrow merrily hunting:
he'll boldly stray from our band—
and be brought home struck by a boar.

BRÜNNHILDE AND GUNTHER: It shall be so!
Siegfried falls!
Soothed be the shame which he has shaped!
He has broken the oath of brotherhood:
so let his blood
blot out guilt.
All-guiding
god of revenge!
You witness and lord of oaths!
Wotan!
Wotan!
will you listen?
Was now your awful hosts unto us, here let them hark
to our vengeful oath!

HAGEN: Thus it shall be!
Siegfried must die:
so perish he
the spirit so high!
Mine is the hoard,
my might shall soon hold it:
so we must rob him of the ring Elfin parent,
you deposed prince!
Night-keeper
Nibelung king,
Alberic!
Alberic!
Up to my aid!
Warn all the Nib'lungs anew of the might:
you are their leader,
the Ring's true lord.

den sich heftig zur Halle. Siegfried und Gutrune (Siegfried mit einen Eichenkranz, Gutrune bunte Blumen auf dem Haupte) treten ihnen, zur Nachfolge auffordernd, am Eingange entgegen. Gunther fasst Brünnhilde bei der Hand, und folgt mit ihr schnell. Hagen bleibt allein zurück.)

(Der Vorhang fällt.)

DRITTER AUFZUG

Erste Scene

WOGLINDA, WELLGUNDA UND FLOSSHILDE: Frau Sonne sendet lichte Strahlen, Nacht liegt in der Tiefe.
Einst war sie hell da heil und hehr des Vaters, Gold noch in ihr glänzte Rheingold, klares Gold!
wie hell du einstens strahltest
Einst war sie hell da heil und klares Gold!

Weialala, weialala, leialeia, walla la, la lei, la la la lei la la la la leila la lei, walla la la la weia la walla la weiala la la wallala la la leia leia leia leila la la la

ECHO: (Sie schlagen jauchzend das Wasser) Frau Sonne, sende uns den Helden, der das Gold uns wieder gäbe!
Liess' er es uns dein lichtes Auge neideten dann wir nicht länger!
Rheingold!
Klares Gold, wie froh du dann strahltest, freier Stern der Tiefe!
froh du dann strahltest, freier Stern der Tiefe!
(Man hört Siegfried's Horn von der Höhe her.)

WOGLINDA: Ich höre sein Horn.

WELLGUNDA: Der Helde naht.

FLOSSHILDE: Lasst uns berathen!
(Sie tauchen schnell in die Fluth.)
(Siegfried erscheint auf dem Abhange in vollen Waffen.)

SIEGFRIED: Ein Albe führte mich irr, dass ich die Fährte verlor:—
He, Schelm! in welchem Berg barg'st du so schnell das Wild?

DIE DREI RHEINTÖCHTER: (wieder auftauschend.) Siegfried!

FLOSSHILDE: Was schilt'st du in den Grund?

WELLGUNDA: Welchem Alben bist du gram?

WOGLINDA: Hat dich ein Nicker geneckt?

ALLE DRIE: Sag' es uns, Siegfried! sag' es uns!

(Gunther and Brünnhilde turn hastily towards the hall. Siegfried and Gutrune (Siegfried wearing a wreath of oak leaves, Gutrune crowned with flowers) meet them at the entrance with their followers. Gunther grasps Brünnhilde by the hand and follows with her. Hagen alone remains behind.)

(The curtain falls.)

ACT III

Scene I

WOGLINDA, WELLGUNDA and FLOSSHILDE: The sungod sends rays of splendor; Night reigns in the waters.
Once did they beam when brave and bright our father's gold yet glittered in them. Rhinegold, clearest gold!
how brightly once your streamed,
Once did they beam when brave and clearest gold!
how brightly once you streamed,
beauteous star of waters!
beauteous star of waters!
Weialala, weialala, leialeia, walla la, la lei, la la la lei la la la la leila la lei, walla la la la weia la walla la weiala la la wallala la la leia leia leia leila la la la

ECHO: (They joyously splash the water)
Fair sungod, send to us the hero, who again our gold will give us!
If it were ours, your ardent eye no more should we look on with envy!
Rhinegold!
Clearest gold, how gladly would stream then, glorious star of waters!
gladly would stream then, glorious star of waters!
(Siegfried's horn is heard on the heights)

WOGLINDA: I hear his horn!

WELLGUNDA: The hero comes.

FLOSSHILDE: Let us take counsel.
(they all dive quickly down. Siegfried appears on the cliff in full armor.)

SIEGFRIED: Some imp has tempted me on until the track I have lost.—
Hey, rogue! what gulf in a hillside have you then rent for my game?

THE THREE RHINE-NYMPHS: (rising again.) Siegfried!

FLOSSHILDE: Why do scold you so at the ground?

WELLGUNDA: With what imp are you aggrieved?

WOGLINDA: Are you annoyed by a gnome?

THE THREE: Speak then, Siegfried; speak to us!

SIEGFRIED: (sie lächelnd betrachtend.) Entzücktet ihr zu euch den zottigen Gesellen, der mir verschwand?
Ist's euer Friedel, euch lustigen Frauen
lass' ich ihn gern.
(Die Mädchen lachen laut auf.)

WOGLINDA: Siegfried, was giebst du uns, wenn wir das Wild dir gönnen?

SIEGFRIED: Noch bin ich beutelos:
d'rum bittet, was ihr begehrt.

WELLGUNDA: Ein gold'ner Ring
ragt dir am Finger—

DIE DREI MÄDCHEN: (zusammen.) den gieb uns!

SIEGFRIED: Einen Riesenwurm erschlug' ich um den Ring.
für des schlechten Bären Tatzen böt' ich ihn nun zum Tausch?

WOGLINDA: Bist du so karg?

WELLGUNDA: So geizig beim Kauf?

FLOSSHILDE: Freigebig
solltest Frauen du sein.

SIEGFRIED: Verzehrt' ich an euch mein Gut, ders' zürnte mir wohl mein Weib.

FLOSSHILDE: Sie ist wohl schlimm?

WELLGUNDA: Sie schlägt dich wohl?

WOGLINDA: Ihre Hand fühlt schon der Held!
(Sie lachen.)

SIEGFRIED: Nun lacht nur lustig zu!
in Harm lass' ich euch doch:
denn giert ihr nach dem Ring euch Neckern geb' ich ihn nie.

FLOSSHILDE: So schön!

WELLGUNDA: So stark!

WOGLINDA: So gehrenswerth!

DIE DREI: (zusammen.) Wie Schade, dass er geizig ist!
(Sie lachen und tauchen unter.)

SIEGFRIED: (tiefer in den Grund hinabsteigend.) Was leid' ich doch das karge Lob?
Lass' ich so mich schmäh'n?—
Kämen sie wieder zum Wasserrand, den Ring könnten sie haben.—
He he! ihr munt'ren Wasserminnen!
kommt rasch: ich schenk' euch den Ring!

DIE DREI RHEINTÖCHTER: (tauchen wieder auf, und zeigen sich ernst und feierlich.) Behalt' ihn, Held,
und wahr' ihn wohl,

SIEGFRIED: (looking smilingly at them.) My friend with hairy hide has fled, perchance enticed away by your tricks?
If he's your lover
I'll willingly leave him, wenches, with you.
(The Nymphs laugh loudly.)

WOGLINDA: Siegfried, what boon will you grant
if we give up the booty?

SIEGFRIED: Still I have empty hands.
What is it then you would beg?

WELLGUNDA: A golden ring
gleams on your finger.

THE THREE NYMPHS: (together.) Give us that.

SIEGFRIED: A terrific worm
I slew to gain that ring;
and shall it slip my palm to buy the paws of a sorry bear?

WOGLINDA: Are you so mean?

WELLGUNDA: So higgling a man?

FLOSSHILDE: Free-handed mortals fare best with maids.

SIEGFRIED: For wasting my goods on you my wife would be rightly wroth.

FLOSSHILDE: Is she so strict?

WELLGUNDA: She strikes you perhaps?

WOGLINDA: He has felt already her fist! (They laugh.)

SIEGFRIED: Well, make your merry jest!
you must be left in grief:
fair Nymphs,
I'll never yield up the yearned for Ring to you!

FLOSSHILDE: So fair!

WELLGUNDA: So fierce!

WOGLINDA: So meet for love!

THE THREE: (together.) It unfortunate that he's miserly!
(They laugh and dive down.)

SIEGFRIED: (descending more towards the ground.) Is it meet to bear their idle mocks?
Must I thus be shamed?
If they would show near the shore again
I would relinquish the Ring.
Hey, hey, merry water-maidens:
Arise!
I'll give you the Ring!

THE THREE RHINE-NYMPHS: (diving up again now solemn and grave.) Preserve it still and ward it well until the illhap is read bis du das Unheil räth'st, das in dem Ring du heg'st.

Froh fühl'st du dich dann, befrei'n wir dich von dem Fluch.

SIEGFRIED: (gelassen den Ring wieder ansteckend.) Nun singet was ihr wisst!

DIE RHEINTÖCHTER: (einzeln und zusammen.) Siegfried! Siegfried! Siegfried!
Schlimmes wissen wir dir.
Zu deinem Unheil wahr'st du den Ring!
Aus des Rheines Gold ist der Ring geglüht:
der ihn listig geschmiedet und schmählich verlor, der verfluchte ihn,
in fernster Zeit zu zeugen den Tod dem, der ihn trüg'.
Wie den Wurm du fälltest, so fällst auch du,
und heute noch
so heissen wir dir's;
tauschest den Ring du uns nicht,
im tiefen Rhein ihn zu bergen.
Nur seine Fluth
sühnet den Fluch!

SIEGFRIED: Ihr listigen Frauen
lass't das sein!
Traut' ich kaum eurem Schmeicheln, euer Schrecken trügt mich noch minder

DIE RHEINTÖCHTER.: Siegfried! Siegfred! Wir weisen dich wahr:
weiche! weiche dem Fluch!
Ihn flochten nächtlich webende Nornen in des Urgesetzes ewiges Seil.

SIEGFRIED: Mein Schwert zerschwang einen Speer: des Urgesetzes
ewiges Seil,
flochten sie wilde
Flüche hinein,
Nothung zerhaut es den Nornen!
Wohl warnte mich einst
vor dem Fluch ein Wurm, doch das Fürchten lehrt' er mich nicht!—
der Welt Erbe gewann mir ein Ring:
für der Minne Gunst
miss' ich ihn gern—
ich geb' ihn euch, gönnt ihr mir Gunst, Doch bedroh't ihr mir Leben und Leib:
fasste er nicht
eines Finger's Werth—den Reif entringt ihr mir nicht!
Denn Leben und Leib
—sollt' ohne Lieb'
in der Furcht Bande bang ich sie fesseln—Leben und Lieb—seht!—so werf' ich sie weit von mir!

that in your Ring lies hid;
full fain then you'll be if you are freed from the ban.

SIEGFRIED: (quietly replacing the ring on his finger.) Then sing me what you wish.

THE RHINE-NYMPHS: (severally and together.) Siegfried! Siegfried! Siegfried!
Sorrow awaits you we know.
To nothing but ill
you ward the Ring.
It was wrought from gold that once glowed in Rhine:
he who shaped it with labor and lost it in shame, laid a curse on it,
to cause that to all time its possesser should be slain.
As the Worm has fallen, you'll fall yourself,
this very day
—we vouch it to you if you refuse us the Ring that in the flood we may hide it.
Nothing but this stream breaks the spell!

SIEGFRIED: Untrustworthy sisters, talk no more!
Scarce I trust your allurements;
and your threats still less can disturb me.

THE RHINE-NYMPHS: Siegfried! Siegfried!
It is truth that we tell—Turn!
turn from the ban!
The braiding Nornir wove it by night-time in their endless rope of wonderful runes.

SIEGFRIED: My sword once splintered a spear:
this woven rope
of wonderful runes,
if they have bound within it a curse,
"Needful" shall cut for the Nornir!
The Worm of this danger did tell me once, but he taught me not how to fear.
The world's wealth should be won me by a ring:
for a gaze of love
gladly I'd leave it,
I'd let you have it lightly for love.
If you threaten my limbs, though,
and life,
hardly you'll win
from my hand the ring, even were it not worth a rush.
For limbs and life —should without love they be fettered in fear's strong bonds,
My limbs and my life see!—so freely I'd fling away!
(He has picked up a clod of earth, which he holds up and with the

(Er hat eine Erdscholle vom Boden aufgehoben und mit den letzten Worten sie über sein Haupt hinter sich geworfen.)

DIE RHEINTÖCHTER: Kommt, Schwestern! schwindet dem Thoren!
So stark und weise
wähnt er sich,
als gebunden und blind er ist.
Eide schwur er—
und achtet sie nicht; Runen weiss er—
und räth sie nicht;
ein hehrstes Gut ward ihm gegönnt—dass er's verworfen
weiss er nicht:
nur den Ring, der zum Tod ihm taugt—den Reif nur will er sich wahren!
Leb' wohl, Siegfried!
Ein stolzes Weib
wird heut' noch dich Argen beerben:
sie beut uns bess'res Gehör Zu ihr! Zu ihr! Zu ihr!
(Sie schwimmen singend davon.)

SIEGFRIED: (sieht ihnen lächelnd nach.) Im Wasser wie am Lande lernt' ich nun Weiberart:
wer nicht ihrem Schmeicheln traut, den schrecken sie mit Drohen;
wer dem nun kühnlich trotzt,
dem kommt dann ihr Keifen d'ran.
Und doch—trüg' ich nicht Gutrun' Treu', der zieren Frauen eine hätt' ich mir frisch gezähmt!
(Jagdhornrufe kommen von der Höhe näher: Siegfried antwortet lustig auf seinem Horne.)
(Gunther, Hagen und Mannen kommen während des Folgenden von der Höhe herab.)

HAGEN: (noch auf der Höhe.) Hoiho!

SIEGFRIED: Hoiho!

DIE MANNEN: Hoiho! Hoiho!

HAGEN: Finden wir endlich wohin du flog'st?

SIEGFRIED: Kommt herab! hier ist's frisch und kühl.

HAGEN: Hier rasten wir und rüsten das Mahl.
Lasst ruh'n die Beute
und bietet die Schläuche!
(Jagdbeute wird zu Hauf gelegt; Trinkhörner und Schläuche werden hervorgeholt. Dann lagert sich alles.)

HAGEN: Der uns das Wild verscheucht, nun sollt' ihr Wunder hören was Siegfried sich erjagt.

SIEGFRIED: (lachend.) Schlimm steht's um mein Mahl:
von eurer Beute
bitt' ich für mich.

HAGEN: Du beutelos?

last words, flings behind him.)

THE RHINE-NYMPHS: Come, sisters, speed from this dullard!
He fancies himself as fearless and wise
as he truly is trammelled and blind.
He has sworn oaths and not heeded them; Runes he knows well
and reads them not.
A noble gift
once did he gain, that it is wasted
knows he not.
But the ring, which will deal him death, that ring he wishes to ward still.
Farewell, Siegfried!
A stately woman today will inherit your hoop.
Our bidding better she'll do:
to her! to her! to her!
(They swim away singing.)

SIEGFRIED: (looks after them smiling.) Alike on land and water, women's ways I've learned to know.
The man who resists their smiles they seek by threats to frighten.
And when these both are scorned they bait him with bitter words.
And yet—
were Gutrune not my wife,
I must have promptly captured one of those pretty maids.
(Calls of hunting horns approaching are heard on the hills. Siegfried answers gaily on his own horn.)
(Gunther, Hagen and Vassels come down the hills during the following.)

HAGEN: (still on the heights.) Hoiho!

SIEGFRIED: Hoiho!

VASSALS: Hoiho! Hoiho!

HAGEN: Have we at last then found where you hide?

SIEGFRIED: Come below! Here it is fresh and cool.

HAGEN: It will do to rest and dress us a meal.
Lay down your booty
and bring out the wine-skins.
(Game is stacked, skins of wine and drinking horns are produced. All encamp themselves.)

HAGEN: You drove away our quarry, let's see the wondrous prize then that Siegfried seized upon.

SIEGFRIED: (laughing.) It is ill with my meal;
I must beg your bags to furnish me,

HAGEN: You are bootyless?

SIEGFRIED: Auf Waldjagd zog ich aus, doch Wasserwild zeigte sich nur;
war ich dazu recht berathen, drei wilde Wasservögel,
hätt' ich euch gefangen, die dort auf dem Rhein mir sangen, erschlagen würd' ich noch heut'.

GUNTHER: (erschrickt und blickt düster auf Hagen.)

HAGEN: Das wäre böse Jagd, wenn den Beutelosen selbst ein lauernd Wild erlegte!

SIEGFRIED: Mich dürstet!
(Er hat sich zwischen Hagen und Gunther gelagert; gofüllte Trinkhörner werden ihnen gereicht.)

HAGEN: Ich hörte sagen, Siegfried, der Vögel Sanges-Sprache verstündest du wohl:
so wär' das wahr?

SIEGFRIED: Seit lange acht' ich des Lallens nicht mehr.
(Er trinkt und reicht dann sein Horn Gunther.) Trink', Gunther! trink'!
dein Bruder bringt es dir.

GUNTHER: (gedankenvoll und schwermüthig in das Horn blickend.) Du mischtest matt und bleich:—
dein Blut allein darin!

SIEGFRIED: (lachend.) So misch' es mit dem deinen!
(Er giesst aus Gunther's Horn in das seine, so dass es überläuft.) Nun floss gemischtes über:
der Mutter Erde
lass' das ein Labsal sein!

GUNTHER: (seufzend.) Du überfroher Held!

SIEGFRIED: (leise zu Hagen.) Ihm macht Brünnhilde Müh?

HAGEN: Verstünd' er sie so gut, wie du der Vögel Sang!

SIEGFRIED: Seit Frauen ich singen hörte, vergass ich der Vöglein ganz.

HAGEN: Doch einst vernahmst du sie?

SIEGFRIED: Hei! Gunther! grämlicher Mann!
Dank'st du es mir,
so sing' ich dir Mären aus meinen jungen Tagen.

GUNTHER: Die hör' ich gern.

HAGEN: So singe, Held!
(Alle lagern sich nahe um Siegfried, welcher allein aufrecht sitzt, während die andern tiefer gestruckt liegen.)

SIEGFRIED: Mime hiess ein mürrischer Zwerg;
in des Neides Zwang
zog er mich auf,
dass einst das Kind,

SIEGFRIED: I went forth to wood-hunt, but water-fowl only could find:
had I only reckoned rightly, three wild young water-maids
I well might have won this morning, who sang in the Rhine their warning,
before wane of day I should die.

GUNTHER: (starts and looks gloomily at Hagen.)

HAGEN: A dismal chase were that, if the hunter, luckless still,
by lurking beasts were laid low.

SIEGFRIED: I'm thirsty.
(He has seated himself between Hagen and Gunther. Filled drinking-horns are handed to them.)

HAGEN: I've heard asserted, Siegfried, that what the song-birds speak of you straightly can tell.
Is truth in the tale?

SIEGFRIED: Their prattle long
I have put from my mind.
(He drinks and then offers his horn to Gunther.) Drink, Gunther, drink:
your brother brings it to you.

GUNTHER: (gazing thoughtfully and gloomily into the horn.) The wine is weak and blanched:
Your blood alone is here!

SIEGFRIED: (laughing.) Let mine mingle with yours then.
(He pours out of Gunther's horn into his own, so that it overflows.)
Now flows the mixture over: to mother Earth
let it be an offering!

GUNTHER: (sighing.) You overjoyous heart!

SIEGFRIED: (softly to Hagen.) He feels Brünnhilde's frown.

HAGEN: His spouse he scarce can read as you the wood-bird's song.

SIEGFRIED: Since hearing the songs of women
I heed not the birds overhead.

HAGEN: They once were known to you?

SIEGFRIED: Hey, Gunther, gloom-ridden man!
If it will amuse
I'll sing some marvellous matters of my boyhood.

GUNTHER: With all my heart.

HAGEN: So sing to us!
(All ensconce themselves on the ground about Siegfried who alone sits upright while the others recline more.)

SIEGFRIED: Mimi hight
a mannikin grim, who in nothing but greed granted me care,
to count on me,

wann kühn es erwuchs,
einen Wurm ihm fällt im Wald, der lang' schon hütet' einen Hort.
Er lehrte mich schmieden und Erze schmelzen:
doch was der Künstler
selbst nicht konnte, des Lehrling's Muthe
musst' es gelingen—eines zerschlag'nen Stahles Stücken
neu zu schweissen zum Schwert.
Des Vater's Wehr
fügt' ich mir neu;
nagelfest
schuf ich mir Nothung, tüchtig zum Kampf
dünkt' er dem Zwerg:
der führte mich nun zum Wald;
dort fäll't ich Fafner, den Wurm.
Jetzt aber merkt
wohl auf die Mär':
Wunder muss ich euch melden.
Von des Wurmes Blut mir brannten die Finger;
sie führt' ich kühlend zum Mund:
kaum netzt' ein wenig die Zunge das Nass, was da die Vöglein sangen das konnt' ich flugs versteh'n:
Auf Aesten sass es und sang—
"Hei, Siegfried gehört nun
der Niblungen Hort:
o fänd' in der Höhle
den Hort er jetzt!
Wollt' er den Tarnhelm gewinnen,
der taugt' ihm zu wonniger That:
doch möcht' er den Ring sich errathen.
der macht' ihn zum Walter der Welt."

HAGEN: Ring und Tarnhelm trug'st du nun fort?

DIE MANNEN: Das Vöglein hörtet du wieder?

SIEGFRIED: Ring und Helm
hatt' ich gerafft;
da lauscht' ich wieder dem wonnigen Laller;
der sass im Wipfel und sang:
"Hei, Siegfried gehört nun
der Niblungen Hort:
o traute er Mime,
dem treulosen, nicht!
Ihm sollt' er den Hort nur erheben;
nun lauert er listig am Weg:
nach dem Leben trachtet er Siegfried:
o traute Siegfried nicht Mime!"

HAGEN: Es mahnte dich gut?

DIE MANNEN: Vergaltest du
Mime?

SIEGFRIED: Mit tödtlichem Tranke trat er zu mir;
bang und stotternd
gestand er mir Böses: Nothung streckte den Strolch.

when manful I'd waxed,
in the wood to slay a worm, which long had hidden there a hoard.
He trained me to smith's work and metal smelting;
but what the teacher could not attempt the pupil did
by daring and patience, so that from shattered steely splinters whole I smithied a sword.
My father's blade
freshly I knit.
Now a fair weapon was "Needful!"
meet it was for fight, Mimi declared, and fared with me toward the wood;
I felled there Fafnir, the Worm.
Pray now attend
well to my tale;
I tell of wonders truly.
When his welling blood
did blister my finger;
the flesh I cooled in my mouth:
scarce touched the wet to the tip of my tongue when what the birds were singing at once my brain perceived.
On a branch one settled and sang:
"Hey! Siegfried shall hold now
the Nibelung's hoard;
he'll find in the hollow
the hoard anon!
Were he the Tarnhelm to win,
it would tide him through the wonderful tasks;
but were he the Ring too to ravish it would give him the ward of the world."

HAGEN: Ring and Tarnhelm you took away!

ONE VASSAL: And what else did the bird sing to you?

SIEGFRIED: Ring and Tarnhelm holding in reach,
I once more harked
to the heavenly warbler, who sat on high there and sang:
"Hey! Siegfried now holds the helm and the ring:
O trust not in Mimi,
the treacherous elf!
Himself would have handled the
hoard,
so below there he lies in wait;
for your life he's trying, O Siegfried—then trust not, Siegfried, in Mimi!"

HAGEN: Admonished it well?

THE VASSALS: And what did you do to Mimi?

SIEGFRIED: With death-dealing drink
he drew to my side, pale and stammering,
he showed his vile purpose:
"Needful" settled the scamp.

HAGEN: (lachend.) Was nicht er geschmiedet schmeckte doch Mime!

DIE MANNEN: Was wies das Vöglein dich wieder?

HAGEN: (nachdem er den Saft eines Krautes in das Trinkhorn ausgerdruckt.) Trink' erst, Held, aus meinem Horn:
ich würzte dir holden Trank.
die Erinnerung hell dir zu wecken, dass Fernes nicht dir entfalle!

SIEGFRIED: (nachdem er getrunken.) In Lied zum Wipfel lauscht' ich hinauf;
da sass es noch und sang:
"Hei, Siegfried erschlug nun den schlimmen Zwerg!
Jetzt wüsst' ich ihm noch
das herrlichste Weib:—
auf hohem Felsen sie schläft,
ein Feuer umbrennt ihren Saal;
durchschritt' er die Brunst,
erweckt' er die Braut,
Brünnhilde wäre dann sein!"
(Gunther hort mit wachsendem Erstaunen zu.)

HAGEN: Und folgtest du des Vögleins Rath?

SIEGFRIED: Rasch ohne Zögern zog ich da aus, bis den feurigen Fels ich traf;
die Lohe durchschritt ich, und fand zum Lohn—schlafend ein wonniges Weib in lichter Waffen Gewand.
Den Helm löst' ich der herrlichen Maid;
mein Kuss erwachte sie kühn!—
o wie mich brunstig da umschlang der schönen Brünnhilde Arm!

GUNTHER: Was hör' ich!
(Zwei Raben fliegen aus einem Busche auf, kreisen über Siegfried, und fliegen davon.)

HAGEN: Erräth'st du auch dieser Raben Geraun'?
(Siegfried fährt heftig auf, und blickt, Hagen den Rücken wendend, den Raben nach.)

HAGEN: Rache riethen sie mir!
(Er stösst seinen Speer in Siegfried's Rücken: Gunther fällt ihm—zu spät—in den Arm.)

GUNTHER UND DIE MANNEN:
Hagen! was thu'st du?
(Siegfried schwingt mit beiden Händen seinen Schild hoch empor, Hagen damit zu zerschmettern: die Kraft verlässt ihn, der Schild entsinkt seiner Hand; er selbst stürzt krachend über ihm zusammen.)

HAGEN: (auf den zu Boden gestreckten deutend.) Meineid rächt' ich!
(Er wendet sich ruhig zur Seite ab, und verliert sich dann einsam uber die Höhe, wo man ihn langsam von dannen schreiten sieht.—Gunther beugt sich schmerzergriffen zu Siegfried's Seite nieder. Die Mannen umstehen theilnahmvoll den Sterbenden. Lange Stille der tiefsten Erschütterung.)
(Dämmerung ist bereits mit der Erscheinung der Raben eingebrochen.)

SIEGFRIED: (noch einmal die Augen glanzvoll aufschlagend, mit feierlicher Stimme beginnend.) Brünnhilde!
heilige Braut!
wach' auf! öffne dein Auge!
Wer verschloss dich wieder in Schlaf?
wer band dich in Schlummer so bang?
Der Wecker kam;
er küsst dich wach,
und aber der Braut
bricht er die Bande:—
da lacht ihm Brünnhilde's Lust!— Ach, dieses Auge, ewig nun offen!
ach, dieses Athems wonniges Wehen!
Süsses Vergehen—seliges Grauen!
Brünnhild' bietet mir Gruss!
(Er stirbt.)
(Die Mannen erheben die Leiche auf den Schild, und geleiten sie in feierlichem Zuge über die Felsenhöhe langsam von dannen. Günther folgt der Leiche zunächst.—) (Der Mond bricht durch die Wolken hervor, und beleuchtet auf der Höhe den Trauerzug.—Dann steigen Nebel aus dem Rheine auf, und erfüllt allmälig die ganze Bühne bis nach vornen.—Sobald sich dann die Nebel wieder zertheilen, ist die Scene verwandelt).

Dritte Scene

(Die Halle der Gibichungen mit dem Uferraume, wie im ersten Aufzuge.—Nacht. Mondschein spiegelt sich im Rhein.)
(Gutrune tritt aus ihrem Gemach in die Halle heraus.)

GUTRUNE: War das sein Horn? (Sie lauscht.) Nein!—noch
kehrt er nicht heim.—
Schlimme Träume
störten mir den Schlaf!—
Wild hört ich wiehern sein Ross:—
Lachen Brünnhilde's weckte mich auf.—
Wer war das Weib, das zum Rhein ich schreiten sah?—
Ich fürchte Brünnhild'!— ist sie daheim?
(Sie lauscht an einer Thüre rechts, und ruft dann leise.) Brünnhild'! Brünnhild'!
bist du wach?—

HAGEN: (laughing.) The blade he could not forge fell upon Mimi!

THE VASSALS: And told the birds other tidings?

HAGEN: (who has squeezed the juice of an herb into the horn.) Drink first, hero,
from my horn:
I mingled a herb with the draught to awaken and hold your remembrance, that past things may be apparent!

SIEGFRIED: (after he has drunk.)
In grief through the boughs
I gazed up aloft,
where still he sat and sang;
"Hey! Siegfried has slain now the sinister dwarf!
I know he may gain
the loveliest wife;
in loftly fastness she sleeps,
fire emborders the spot;
overstepped he the blaze—
wakened the bride—Brünnhilde were then his own!"

HAGEN: Did you obey the bird's instruction?

SIEGFRIED: Straight without pause
I passed on my way,
and I fared to the fire-girt rock.
The furnace was stepped through,
the prize was found:
sleeping, a marvellous maid in suit of mirror-like mail.
The helm soon
from her head I unloosed, she quickly waked to my kiss;
O then how Brünnhilde's glorious arm glowingly embraced me!

GUNTHER: What are you saying?
(Two ravens fly from a bush, circle over Siegfried and fly away over the Rhine).

HAGEN: Can you read the speech of those ravens aright?
(Siegfried starts up quickly and looks after the ravens, turning his back towards Hagen.)

HAGEN: Revenge they rouse in me!
(He thrusts his spear into Siegfried's back, Gunther catches his arm, too late)

GUNTHER AND THE MEN: Hagen
what deed is this?
(Siegfried swings his shield aloft with both hands to crush Hagen with it; his strength leaves him; the shield falls back and he himself falls upon it).

(He turns coolly away and gradually disappears over the hills where his retreating form is for some time visible. Gunther seized with anguish, bends down by Siegfried's side. The Men gather in sympathy round the dying man.)
(Dusk commences to fall with the apparition of the ravens.)

SIEGFRIED: (once more opens his glaring eyes and begins with solemn voice.) Brünnhilde!
Heavenly bride!
Look up!
Open your eyelids!
What has sunk you
once more in sleep?
Who drowns in slumber so drear?
The wakener came,
his kiss awoke;
again now the bride's bonds he has broken;
enchant him Brünnhilde's charms!
Ah! now for ever open her eyelids!
Ah! and what odorous breeze is her breath!
Thrice blessed ending—thrill that dismays not!
Brünnhilde beckons to me!
(He dies.)
(The Vassals raise Siegfried's body on his shield and bear it away over the height in mournful procession. Gunther follows at a little distance.)
(The moon breaks through the clouds and illuminates with increasing brightness the distant train.—Mists rise up from the Rhine and gradually fill the whole stage up to the front. When after a while they again disperse, the scene is changed.)

Scene III

(The Hall of the Gibichungs with the river bank, as in the first Act.—Night. Moonlight glittering on the Rhine.) (Gutrune enters the Hall from her chamber.)

GUTRUNE: Was that his horn?
(Listens.)
No!—not yet is he home.—
Somber visions
startled me from sleep.
His horse
I heard wildly neigh:
Brünnhilde's laughter awakened my sense.
What woman was it
I saw descend the bank but now?
I fear this Brünnhilde!
Is she still here?
(Listens at the door at right and calls softly.)
Brünnhilde!
Brünnhilde!

(Sie öffnet schüchtern und blickt hinein.) Leer das Gemach!
so war es sie,
die zum Rhein ich schreiten sah?
(Sie erschrickt und lauscht nach der Ferne.) Hört' ich sein Horn?
Nein!—
Oede alles!—
Säh' ich Siegfried nur bald!
(Sie will sich wieder ihrem Gemache zuwenden, als sie jedoch Hagen's Stimme vernimmt, hält sie an, und bleibt, von Furcht gefesselt, eine Zeit lang unbeweglich stehen.)

HAGEN'S: (Stimme von aussen sich nähernd.) Hoiho! Hoiho!
Wacht auf! wacht auf!
Lichte! Lichte!
helle Brände!
Jagdbeute
bringen wir heim.
Hoiho! Hoiho!
(Licht und wachsender Feuerschein von aussen.)

HAGEN: (in die Halle tretend.) Auf! Gutrun'!
begrüsse Siegfried!
Der starke Held,
er kehret heim.
(Mannen und Frauen begleiten, mit Lichtern und Feuerbränden, in grosser Verwirrung den Zug der mit Siegfried's Leiche Heimkehrenden, unter denen Gunther.)

GUTRUNE: (in grosser Angst.) Was geschah', Hagen? nicht hört' ich sein Horn!

HAGEN: Der bleiche Held, nicht bläs't er's mehr;
nicht stürmt er zum Jagen, zum Streit nicht mehr, noch wirbt er um wonnige Frauen!

GUTRUNE: (mit wachsendem Entsetzen). Was bringen die?

HAGEN: Eines wilden Ebers Beute:
Siegfried: deinen todten Mann!
(Gutrune schreit auf, und stürtz über die Leich hin, welche in der Mitte der Halle niedergesetzt ist—Allgemeine Erschütterung und Trauer.)

GUNTHER: (indem er die Ohnmächtige aufzurichten sucht.) Gutrune! holde Schwester!
Hebe dein Aug'!
schweige mir nicht!

GUTRUNE: (weider zu sich kommend.) Siegfried!—Siegfried erschlagen!
(Sie stösst Gunther heftig zurück.) Fort! treuloser Bruder! du Mörder meines Mannes!
O Hilfe! Hilfe!
Wehe! Wehe!
Sie haben Siegfried erschlagen!

are you awake?
(Opens the door tremblingly and looks in.) Bare is the room.
It was then she that to the Rhine I saw descend?
(She starts and listens to a distant sound.)
Was that his horn?
Nay!
Nothing nears!—
If he only would come!
(She is about to return to her room, but hears Hagen's voice, pauses, and remains awhile motionless, transfixed by fear.)

HAGEN'S: (voice without approaching). Hoiho! Hoiho!
Wake up! wake up!
Torches! torches!
Lighted brands here!
Fair booty
bring we along.
Hoiho! Hoiho!
(Lights and increasing glow of fires without.)

HAGEN: (entering the hall.) Up!
Gutrune,
and greet your Siegfried!
the stalwart hero is coming home.
(Men and Women with lights and firebrands conduct, in great confusion, the train with Siegfried's body. Gunther is among them.)

GUTRUNE: (in great terror.)
What is this, Hagen?
I heard not his horn!

HAGEN: The bloodless hero blows it no more;
he'll bound to the chase or battle no more,
nor fight for the fairest of women!

GUTRUNE: (with increasing dread.) What do they bring?

HAGEN: A wild boar's ill-fated victim:
Siegfried—it is your husband's corpse.
(Gutrune starts up and precipitates herself upon the body which has been set down in the middle of the hall. General emotion and grief.)

GUNTHER: (bending over her senseless form and striving to raise her). Gutrune lovely sister!
lift up your eyes—
speak to me!

GUTRUNE: (reviving.) Siegfried!
Siegfried is slaughtered!
(Thrusts Gunther away)
Hence, treacherous brother!
Assassin of my Siegfried!
O help me! help me!
Horror! Horror!
My husband's murdered among you!

GUNTHER: Nicht klage wider mich!
dort klage wider Hagen:
er ist der verfluchte Eber, der diesen Edlen zerfleischt.

HAGEN: Bist du mir gram darum?

GUNTHER: Angst und Unheil greife dich immer!

HAGEN: (mit furchtbarem Trotze herantretend.) Ja denn! ich hab' ihn erschlagen ich—Hagen—schlug ihn zu todt!
Meinem Speer war er gespart, bei dem er Meineid sprach.
Heiliges Beute-Recht
hab' ich mir nun errungen:
d'rum fordr' ich hier diesen Ring.

GUNTHER: Zurück! was mir verfiel sollst du nimmer empfah'n.

HAGEN: Ihr Mannen, richtet mein Recht!

GUNTHER: Rühr'st du an Gutrun's Erbe, schamloser Albensohn?

HAGEN: (sein Schwert ziehend.)
Des Alben Erbe
fordert so sein Sohn!
(Er dringt auf Gunther ein; dieser wehrt sich: sie fechten. Die Mannen werfen sich dazwischen, Gunther fällt von einen Streiche Hagen's todt darnieder.)

HAGEN: Her den Ring!
(Er greift nach Siegfried's Hand; diese hebt sich drohend empor. Allgemeines Entsetzen. Gutrune und die Frauen schreien laut auf.)
(Vom Hintergrunde her schreitet Brünnhilde fest und feierlich dem Vordergrunde zu)

BRÜNNHILDE: (noch im Hintergrunde.) Schweigt eures Jammers jauchzenden Schwall!
Das ihr alle verriethet, zur Rache schreitet sein Weib.
(Sie schreitet ruhig weiter vor.) Kinder hört' ich greinen nach der Mutter, da süsse Milch sie verschüttet:
doch nicht erklang mir
würdige Klage, des höehsten Helden werth.

GUTRUNE: Brünnhilde! Neid-erbos'te!
du brachtest uns diese Noth!
Die du ihm die Männer verhetztest, weh', dass dem Haus du genah't!

BRÜNNHILDE: Armselige, schweig'!
Sein Eheweib warst du nie:
als Buhlerin nur bandest du ihn.
Sein Mannes-Gemahl bin ich,
der er ewige Eide schwur, eh' Siegfried je dich ersah.

GUNTHER: Give no reproach to me!
reproach you rather Hagen.
He is the wild boar so hateful by whom our hero has bled.

HAGEN: Are you then wroth with me?

GUNTHER: Ill and anguish
rend you forever!

HAGEN: (stepping forward in terrible defiance.) Well then! it is I that have slain him!
I—Hagen—
smote him to death!
He was spoil to my spear,
on which false oath he spake.
Holiest booty right here to me should be rendered:
I claim to have then this Ring.

GUNTHER: Aroint! you never shalt clutch
what I for mine declare.

HAGEN: You vassals, speak on my side!

GUNTHER: You seek for Gutrune's dowry, spawn of the dwarfish stock?

HAGEN: (drawing his sword.)
The dwarf's own dower thus—his son assumes (He rushes on Gunther who defends himself: they fight. The Men throw themselves between. Gunther falls dead by a stroke of Hagen.)

HAGEN: Now the ring!
(He snatches at Siegfried's hand. It raises itself threateningly. General terror. Gutrune and Women shriek aloud.)
(From the back appears Brünnhilde, who advances with firm and solemn tread to the front.)

BRÜNNHILDE: (still at the back.) Peace with your surge of sorrow that peals.
You betrayed his wife vilely:
now she comes for revenge
(She quietly advances.) Children I heard crying to their mother, to say that milk has been spilled:
but I marked nothing a fitting lament for the highest hero's fate.

GUTRUNE: (raising herself suddenly.) Brünnhilde, hurt by baseness, you brought this harm on us:
you did stir the men to kill him.
Woe the day you came here!

BRÜNNHILDE: No, poor soul, peace!
You never were wife of his:
you owned him
only in name.
I was his honored spouse.
The oath of our union was sworn,
before Siegfried had seen your face!

GUTRUNE: (in heftigster Verzweiflung). Verfluchter Hagen!
Weh! ach weh!
dass du das Gift mir riethest, das ihr den Gatten entrückt!
O Jammer! Jammer!
wie jäh nun weiss ich,
dass Brünnhild' die Traute war, die durch den Trank er vergass!
(Sie wendet sich voll Scheu von Siegfried ab, und beugt sich in Schmerz aufgelös't über Gunther's Leiche: so verbleibt sie regungslos bis an das Ende.—Langes Schweigen.)
(Hagen steht, auf Speer und Schild gelehnt, in finsteres Sinnen versunken, trotzig auf der aussersten anderen Seite.)

BRÜNNHILDE: (allein in der Mitte: nachdem sie lange, zuerst mit tiefer Erschötterung, dann mit fast überwältigender Wehmuth das Angesicht Siegfried's betrachtet, wendet sie sich mit feierlicher Erhebung an die Männer und Frauen.) Starke Scheite schichtet mir dort am Rande des Rhein's zu auf:
hoch und hell
lod're die Gluth, die den edlen Leib des hehrsten Helden verzehrt!—
Sein Ross führet daher, dass mit mir dem Recken es folge:
denn des Helden heiligste Ehre zu theilen verlangt mein eig'ner Leib.— Vollbringt Brünnhilde's Wort!
(Die jüngeren Männer errichten während des Folgenden vor der Halle nahe am Rheinufer, einen mächtigenScheithaufen. Frauen schmücken ihn mit Decken: auf die sie Kräuter und Blumen streuen)

BRÜNNHILDE: (von neuem in den Anblick der Leich eversunken.) Wie Sonne lauter strahlt mir sein Licht;
der Reinste war er,
der Mich verrieth!
Die Gattin trügend
—treu dem Freunde—
von der eig'nen Trauten
—einzig ihm theuer—schied er sich durch sein
Schwert.—
Aechter als er
schwur keiner Eide;
treuer als er
hielt keiner Verträge:
laut'rer als er
liebte kein And'rer:
und doch alle Eide,
alle Verträge, die treueste Liebe—trog keiner wie er!—
Wisst ihr wie das ward!
O ihr, der Eide ewige Hüter!
lenkt eu'ren Blick
auf mein blühendes Leid:
erschaut eu're ewige Schuld!

GUTRUNE: (in an outburst of poignant despair.) Accursed Hagen!
Woe's me!
woe's me!
You gave the hateful philter to make her husband play false!
O sorrow!
sorrow!
I see it all now!
Brünnhilde was his true-love, whom he betrayed by that drink.
(Filled with shame, she turns from the body Siegfried and bends almost dying over Gunther's body; she remains thus motionless to the end. Long silence.)
(Hagen stands leaning defiantly on his spear and shield, sunk in gloomy meditation, at the extreme opposite side.)

BRÜNNHILDE: (alone in the center: after remaining long absorbed in the contemplation of Siegfried, first convulsed with horror, then overpowered by grief, she turns with solemn exultation to the people.) Friends, let fitting funeral pyre be reared by the river here.
Hot and high kindle the flames, to consume the corpse of him who was hero over all!— Bring his steed to me here;
to its master straight it shall bear me:
for my body burns to share in the honor that here we show to him.
Obey Brünnhilde's will.
(The young men erect, during the following, a huge funeral pyre before the Hall on the bank of the Rhine; women adorn it with drapery, on which they strewn flowers and herbs.)

BRÜNNHILDE: (again becoming absorbed in gazing on Siegfried's dead face.) What sunny light outstreams from his look!
The truest was he,
yet could betray!
His wife deluding
—leal to friendship—
from his own true lady,
—only beloved—he shut himself with his sword.— Nobler than he swore fealty never;
prouder than he held no man a promise;
love pure as his lived not in hero;
and yet every oath made,
every assurance,
the sheerest affection,— sure none broke like he!—
Know why that was!
You gods who guard
our gages for ever,
Do not turn away
from my waxing distress, but gaze on our endless disgrace!
Hear my wild lament,

Meine Klage hör', du hehrster Gott!
Durch seine tapferste That,
dir so tauglich erwünscht,
weihtest du den,
der sie gewirkt,
dem Fluche, dem du verfielest, mich musste
der Reinste verrathen, dass wissend würde ein Weib!—
Weiss ich nun was dir frommt?—
Alles! Alles!
Alles weiss ich:
ales ward mir nun frei!
Auch deine Raben
hör' ich rauschen:
mit bang ersehnter Botschaft sen'd ich die beiden nun heim.
Ruhe! ruhe, du Gott!
(Sie winkt den Mannen, Siegfried's Leiche aufzuheben, und auf das Scheitgerüste zu tragen; zugleich zieht sie von Siegfrieds' Finger den Ring).
Mein Erbe nun
nehm' ich zu eigen.
Verfluchter Reif! furchtbarer Ring!
dein Gold fass' ich,
und geb' es nun fort.
Der Wassertiefe
weise Schwestern, des Rheines schwimmende Töchter,
euch dank' ich redlichen Rath!
Was ihr begehrt,
geb' ich euch:
aus meiner Asche
nehmt es zu eigen!
Das Feuer, das mich verbrennt, rein'ge den Ring vom Fluch:
ihr in der Fluth
löset ihn auf, und lauter bewahrt
das lichte Gold,
den strahlenden Stern des Rhein's, der zum Unheil euch geraubt.
(Sie wendet sich nach hinten, wo Siegfrieds' Leichte bereits auf dem Gerüste ausgestreckt liegt, und entreiss einem Manne den mächtigen Feuerbrand.) Fliegt heim, ihr Raben!
raun't es eurem Herrn.
was hier am Rhein ihr gehört!
An Brünnhild's Felsen
fahret vorbei:
der dort noch lodert, weiset Loge nach Walhall!
Denn der Götter Ende dämmert nun auf;
so werf' ich den Brand in Walhall's prangende Burg.

(Sie schleudert den Brand in den Holzstoss, der sich schnell hell entzündet. Zwei Raben sind vom Ufer aufgeflogen, und verschwinden nach dem Hintergrunde zu.)
(Zwei junge Männer führen das Ross herein; Brünnhilde fasst es, und entzäumt es schnell.) Grane, mein Ross, sei mir gegrüsst!
Weisst du, Freund,

you mightiest god!
Because he dared a great deed, which was dear to your hopes,
how could you thus throw upon him
the curse to which you succumb?
Ought I
to be harmed by my hero, that wise a woman should wax?—
Do I know now what you want?
All things, all things,
all I know now:
all at once is made clear!
Even your ravens
I hear rustling:
to tell the longed-for tidings, let them return to their home.
Rest!
Rest,
O God!
(She signs to the men to take up Siegfried's body and place it on the funeral pyre; then she takes from his finger the Ring.)
Redeemed, my hand holds my dower.
You fatal round!
fearful Ring!
my hand folds you
to hurl you afar, Water-dwelling wary sisters,
the Rhine's fair sinuous daughters, reap my thanks for your story.
What you would gain
I give to you;
out from my ashes
take it forever!
The red flame that burns me cleanses the Ring from its curse:
you in the Rhine melt it away and merely preserve
the metal bright,
whose theft has thrown you in grief.
(She turns to the back, where Siegfried's body lies already on the pyre, and takes a huge firebrand from a man.)
Fly home, ravens!
Repeat in Vallhalla
what you have heard here on the Rhine!
To Brünnhilde's rock go round about,
Yet Loki burns there:
Vallhall' bid him revisit!
Draws near in gloom
the Dusk of the gods.
Thus, casting my torch,
I kindle Vallhalla's towers.

(She thrusts the torch into the pile, which rapidly kindles. Two ravens fly up from the rocks on the bank and disappear at the back.)
(Two young men bring in the horse; Brünnhilde takes it and quickly unbridles it.) Grani, my horse, greet you again!
Would you know, dear friend, what journey we follow?

wohin ich dich führe?
Im Feuer, leuchtend, liegt dort dein Herr,
Siegfried, mein seliger Held.
dem Freunde zu folgen wieherst du freudig?
Lockt dich zu ihm die lachende Lohe?
Fühl' meine Brust auch,
wie sie entbrennt:
helles Feuer
das Herz mir erfasst, ihn zu umschlingen,
umschlossen von ihm,
in mächtigster Minne vermählt ihm zu sein!—
Heiajaho! Grane!
grüsse deinen Herrn!
Siegfried! Siegfried! Sieh!
Selig grüsst dich dein Weib!

(Sie hat sich stürmisch auf das Ross geschwungen, und sprengt es mit einen Satze in den brennenden Scheithaufen. Sogleich steigt prasselnd der Brand hoch auf so dass das Feuer den ganzen Raum vor der Halle erfüllt, und diese selbst schon zu ergreifen scheint. Entsetzt drängen sich die Frauen nach dem Vordergrunde. Plötzlich bricht das Feuer zusammen, so dass nur noch eine düstere Gluthwolke über der Stätte schwebt; diese steigt auf und zertheilt sich ganz, der Rhein ist vom Ufer her mächtig angeschwollen, und wälzt seine Fluth über die Brandstätte bis an die Schwelle der Halle. Auf den Wogen sind die drei Rheintöchter herbeigeschwommen.—Hagen, der seit dem Vorgange mit dem Ringe in wachsender Angst Brünnhilden's Benehmen beobachet hat, geräth beim Anblicke der Rheintöchter in höchsten Schreck; er wirft hastig Speer, Schild und Helm von sich ab, und stürzt wie wahnsinnig mit dem Rufe:)
Zurück vom Ringe!
(sich in die Fluth. Woglinda und Wellgunda umschlingen mit ihren Armen seinen Nacken, und ziehen ihn so zurückschwimmend mit sich in die Tiefe; Flosshilde, ihnen voran, hält jubelnd den gewonnenen Ring in die Höhe.—Am Himmel bricht zugleich von fern her eine, dem Nordlicht ähnliche röthliche Gluth aus, die sich immer weiter und stärker verbreitet. Die Männer und Frauen schauen in sprachloser Erschütterung dem Vorgange und der Erscheinung zu.)
(Der Vorhang fällt.)

ENDE.

By flame illumined lies there your lord, Siegfried, the star of my life.
To meet with your master
You neigh merrily?
Lo! how the flame
leaps and allures you!
Feel how my breast too hotly burns;
sparkling fireflame
enfolds my spirit.
O, but to clasp him—
recline in his arms!
in maddening emotion once more to be his!
Heiajaho!
Grani!
Greet we our hero!
Siegfried!
Siegfried!
see!
sweetly greet your wife!

(She leaps wildly on to the horse and takes it with one bound into the burning pyre. The flames instantly blaze up and fill the entire space before the hall, seeming even to seize on the building. In terror the women cower towards the front. Suddenly the fire falls together, leaving only a mass of smoke which collects at back and forms a cloud bank on the horizon. The Rhine swells up mightily and sweeps over the fire. On the surface appear the three Rhine-daughters, swimming close to the fire-embers. Hagen who has watched Brünnhilde's proceedings with increasing anxiety, is much alarmed on the appearance of the Rhine-daughters. He flings away hastily his spear, shield and helmet, and madly plunges into the flood crying:)
The ring's my right!
(Woglinda and Wellgunda twine their arms round his neck and draw him thus down below. Flosshilde swimming before the others to the back, holds the recovered ring joyously up.)
(Through the cloud-bank on the horizon breaks an increasing red glow. In its light the Rhine is seen to have returned to its bed and the nymphs are circling and playing with the ring on the calm waters.)
(From the ruins of the half-burnt hall the men and women perceive with awe the light in the sky, in which now appears the hall of Vallhalla, where the gods and heroes are seen sitting together, as described by Valtrauta in the first Act. Bright flames seize on the abode of the gods; and when this is completely enveloped by them, the curtain falls.)

THE END.

Parsifal (1882)

MUSIC & LIBRETTO BY RICHARD WAGNER

This three-act sacred festival drama, set to a libretto by Wagner himself, premiered at the Festspielhaus in Bayreuth on July 26, 1882. On the mountain of Montsalvat in Spain, Titurel's castle guards the Grail (Christ's sacred goblet from the Last Supper) and the Holy Spear (used by the Centurion to wound Christ on the cross). Titurel, now very old, has passed on his crown to Amfortas, his son. Amfortas sets off, armed with the Holy Spear, to destroy the castle of Klingsor, an evil magician. Amfortas, overcome by Klingsor's spells, drops the spear, and Klingsor wounds him with it. Only the touch of the spear, which must be recovered by a "pure fool," can heal his wound. Gurnemanz carries Amfortas to a nearby lake in search of a cure. Kundry, a sometime servant to Klingsor, soothes Amfortas with an ointment. Parsifal, a young man who has shot a sacred swan of the mountain, enters. Naive about life, Parsifal is contrite about his action, but he has no knowledge of his father or of his mother's death from grief after having lost her child. Gurnemanz has an inkling that Parsifal may be the "pure fool" he is looking for. In the Great Hall, Amfortas takes comfort in his father's voice and the boys' chorus and performs the sacred rite. The chalice glows in the light. Amfortas, in grave pain, blesses the bread and wine. Parsifal, unmoved, understands nothing. Gurnemanz sends him away. But Klingsor, watching in his enchanted mirror, knows for certain that Parsifal is the "pure fool." He commands Kundry to seduce Parsifal, changing the castle into a beautiful garden full of flower-maidens who call out to Parsifal. As Kundry kisses him, Parsifal feels Amfortas' pain and cries out in understanding. Klingsor throws the Holy Spear at Parsifal, but the spear stops in mid-air. Parsifal grabs it, makes the sign of the cross, and the castle and garden disappear. Kundry collapses, unconscious.

Years later, Kundry is taking care of Gurnemanz, now a hermit. A knight in black armor approaches, removes his helmut and breastplate, sets down the Holy Spear and prays. Gurnemanz recognizes Parsifal, the "pure fool." He tells him of Titurel's death and performs the ordination that makes him king of the Grial. Parsifal baptizes Kundry, showing her the wonderful and grievous events of the Crucifixion and the Resurrection. Gurnemanz, Parsifal, and Kundry approach the castle of the Grail, accompanied by the sound of the bells of Montsalvat. The knights keep vigil over the body of Titurel in the Great Hall. Amfortas' pain has become intolerable; Parsifal touches him with the spear, and heals the wound, uncovering the glowing Grail while heavenly voices sing of salvation. Kundry dies, and a white dove flies over the knights, who kneel in adoration.

■ ERSTER AUFZUG.

Wald, schattig und ernst, doch nicht duster.
Felsiger Boden. Eine Lichtung in der Mitte. Links aufsteigend wird der Weg zur Gralsburg angenommen. Der Mitte des Hintergrundes zu senkt sich der Boden zu einem tiefer gelegenen Waldsee hinab.—Tagesanbruch.—Gurnemanz (rüstig greisenhaft) und zwei Knappen (von zartem Jünglingsalter) sind schlafend unter einem Baume gelagert.—Von der linken Seite, wie von der Gralsburg her, ertönt der feierliche Morgenweckruf der Posaunen.

GURNEMANZ: (erwachend und die Knappen rüttelnd). He! Ho!
Waldhüter ihr!
Schlafhüter mitsammen!
So wacht doch mindest am Morgen!
(Die beiden Knappen springen auf, und senken sich, beschämt, sogleich wieder auf die Knie.) Hört ihr den Ruf? Nun danket Gott, dass ihr berufen ihn zu hören!
(Er senkt sich zu ihnen ebenfalls nieder; gemeinschaftlich verrichten sie stumm ihr Morgengebet; sobald die Posaunen schweigen, erheben sie sich dann.)
Jetzt auf, ihr Knaben; seht nach dem Bad;
Zeit ist's, des Königs dort zu harren:
dem Siechbett, das ihn trägt, voraus
seh' ich die Boten vor uns nah'n.
(Zwei Ritter treten, von der Burg her, auf.) Heil euch! Wie geht's Amfortas heut'?
Wohl früh verlangt er nach dem
Bade: das Heilkraut, das Gawan mit List und Kühnheit ihm gewann, ich wähne, dass es Lind'rung schuf?

DER ERSTE RITTER: Das wähn'st du, der doch Alles weiss? Ihm kehrten sehrender nur die Schmerzen bald zurück: schlaflos von starkem Bresten befahl er eifrig uns das Bad.

GURNEMANZ: (das Haupt traurig senkend). Thoren wir, auf Lind'rung da zu hoffen, wo einzig Heilung lindert!
Nach allen Kräutern, allen Tränken forscht und jagt weit durch die Welt: ihm hilft nur Eines — nur der Eine.

■ ACT I.

A Forest, shadowy and impressive, but not gloomy. Rock-strewn grounds. A glade in the middle. L, rises the way to the Grail's castle. The ground sinks in the middle at back to a low-lying forest lake.—Day dawn— Gurnemanz (an old but vigorous man) and two Esquires (tender youths) are ensconced asleep under a tree. From L., as if from the castle, rises the solemn morning reveille of trombones.

GURNEMANZ: (waking, and shaking the Esquires). Hey! Ho!
Wood-keepers! I deem you Sleep-keepers!
At least be moving with morning!
(The two Esquires spring up, and then immediately sink on their knees again, ashamed.)
Do you hear the call? Now thank the Lord
That you are called in time to hear it.
(He also falls on his knees with them; they offer up a silent morning prayer together; when the trombones have ceased, they rise again.)
Now up, young vassals; see to the bath;
It is time to wait there for our monarch:
Already I see
Runners before his litter bed.
(Two Knights enter from the castle.)
Hail! How's Amfortas' health?
He craves his bath right early today,
The simple that Gawaine won for him, with bravest craft
I hope it has brought relief?

FIRST KNIGHT: You know all and still can hope? With keener smart than before Full soon his pain returned: Sleepless from strong oppression,
He bade us to prepare his bath.

GURNEMANZ: (drooping his head sorrowfully). Fools we are, seeking alleviation, When but one salve relieves him!
For every simple, every herb we search And hunt wide through the world, When only one thing helps and only one man.

ERSTER RITTER: So nenn' uns den?	FIRST KNIGHT: Expound us that?
GURNEMANZ: (ausweichend). Sorgt für das Bad!	GURNEMANZ: (evasively). See to the bath!
DER ERSTE KNAPPE: (als er sich mit dem zweiten Knappen dem Hinter grund zuwendet, nach rechts blickend). Seht dort die wilde Reiterin!	FIRST ESQUIRE: (as he turns away towards the back with the second Esquire, looking off R.) Behold that frenzied horsewoman!
ZWEITER KNAPPE: Hei! Wie fliegen der Teufelsmähre der Mähnen!	SECOND ESQUIRE: Hey! The mane of the devil's mare flyeth madley!
ERSTER RITTER: Ja! Kundry dort.	FIRST KNIGHT: Aye! Kundry 'tis.
ZWEITER RITTER: Die bringt wohl wicht'ge Kunde?	SECOND KNIGHT: She surely comes with news.
ERSTER KNAPPE: Die Mähre taumelt.	FIRST ESQUIRE: The mare is tottering.
ZWEITER KNAPPE: Flog sie durch die Luft?	SECOND ESQUIRE: Did she fly through air?
ERSTER KNAPPE: Jetzt kriecht sie am Boden.	FIRST ESQUIRE: No wowly she grovels.
ZWEITER KNAPPE: Mit den Mähnen fegt sie das Moos.	SECOND ESQUIRE: Mark her mane that brushes the moss.
ERSTER RITTER: Da schwang sich die Wilde herab. (Kundry stürzt hastig, fast taumelnd herein. Wilde Kleidung, hoch geschürzt; Gürtel von Schlangenhäuten lang herabhängend; schwarzes, in losen Zöpfen flatterndes Haar; tief braun-röthliche Gesichtsfarbe stechende schwarze Augen, zuweilen wild aufblitzend, ofters wie todesstarr und unbeweglich — Sie eilt auf Gurnemanz zu und dringt ihm ein kleines Krystallgefass auf.)	FIRST KNIGHT: The wild witch has swung herself off. (Kundry rushes in hastily, almost reeling. Wild garb fastened up high; girdle of snakeskin hanging long; black hair flowing in loose locks; dark brownish red complexion, piercing black eyes, sometimes wild and blazing, but usually fixed and glassy. She hurries to Gurnemanz and presses upon him a small crystal flask.)
KUNDRY: Hier nimm du! — Balsam!	KUNDRY: Here, take it! — Balsam!
GURNEMANZ: Woher brachtest du dies?	GURNEMANZ: From where have you brought this?
KUNDRY: Von weiter her, als du denken kannst Hilft der Balsam nicht, Arabien birgt nichts mehr dann zu seinem Heil. — Frag' nicht weiter! — Ich bin müde. (Sie wirft sich auf den Boden.) (Ein Zug von Knappen und Rittern, die Sänfte tragend und geleitend, in welcher Amfortas ausgestreckt liegt, gelangt, von links her, auf die Bühne. — Gurnemans von Kundry ab, sogleich den Ankommenden.)	KUNDRY: From farther away than your thought can guess; If this balsam fails, Arabia bears Nothing else that can give him ease. — Ask no more! — I am weary. (she throws herself on the ground.) (A train of Esquire and Knights appears L., bearing and attending the litter in which Amfortas lies stretched out. — Gurnemanz immediately turns away from Kundry towards the newcomers.)
GURNEMANZ: (während der Zug auf die Bühne gelangt). Er naht: sie bringen ihn getragen. — O weh'! Wie trag' ich's im Gemüthe, in seiner Mannheit stolzer Blüthe des siegreichsten Geschlechtes Herrn als seines Siechthums Knecht zu seh'n! (Zu den Knappen.) Behatsam! Hört, der König stöhnt. (Jene halten ein und stellen das Siechbett nieder.)	GURNEMANZ: (while the procession is entering). He comes: carried by faithful servants. — Alas! How can my eyes have power To see, in manhood's stately flower, This sovereign of the staunchest race made a slave to stubborn sickness! (To the Esquires.) Be heedful! Hark, your master groans. (They stop and set down the litter.)
AMFORTAS: (der sich ein wenig erhoben). So recht!—Habt Dank!—Ein wenig Rast. Nach wilder Schmersensnacht nun Waldes-Morgenpracht; im heil'gen See wohl labt mich auch die Welle: es staunt das Weh', die Schmersensnacht wird helle.— Gawan!	AMFORTAS: (raising himself slightly). It is well! My thanks! Remain awhile. — From maddening tortured nights fair morn to woods invites: I'm sure The lake's pure wave will freshen even me; My pain will flee And tortured nights' oppression. — Gawaine!
ERSTER RITTER: Herr, Gawan weilte nicht Da seines Krautes Kraft, wie schwer er's auch errungen, doch deine Hoffnung trog, hat er auf neue Sucht sich fortgeschwungen.	FIRST KNIGHT: Sire, Gawaine waited not: For, when the healing herb, Whose gain such toil has needed, Did disappoint your hopes, He in haste proceeded to another search.
AMFORTAS: Ohn' Urlaub? — Möge das er sühnen, dass schlecht er Gralsgebote hält! O wehe ihm, dem trotzig Kühnen, wenn er in Klingsor's Schlingen fällt! So breche Keiner mir den Frieden: ich harre dess', der mir beschieden. "Durch Mitleid wissend"—war's nicht so?	AMFORTAS: Unordered?—May he be requited For slighting the Grail's commands! O woe to him who foes never frighted, If he should fall in Klingsor's hands! Let none henceforth harry my feelings. For him, the promised one, I wait "By pity 'lightened" — Was it not so—?
GURNEMANZ: Uns sagtest du es so.	GURNEMANZ: You said it was so to us.
AMFORTAS: "der reine Thor" - - : mich dünkt, ihn zu erkennen: dürft' ich den Tod ihn nennen!	AMFORTAS: "The guileless Fool—" He unveils him to me,— Might I as Death but hail him!
GURNEMANZ: Doch hier zuvor: versuch' es noch mit diesem! (Er reicht ihm das Fläschchen.)	GURNEMANZ: But first behold: accord to this a trial. (He hands him the flask.)
AMFORTAS: (es betrachtend). Woher dies heimliche Gefäss?	AMFORTAS: From where comes this wondrous looking flask?
GURNEMANZ: Dir ward es aus Arabia hergeführt.	GURNEMANZ: It was brought for you from Araby afar.
AMFORTAS: Und wer gewann es?	AMFORTAS: Who went to win it?
GURNEMANZ: Da liegt's, das wilde Weib. Auf, Kundry! komm! (Sie weigert sich.)	GURNEMANZ: It was she, that woman wild. Up, Kundry! Come! (She refuses.)
AMFORTAS: Du, Kundry! Muss ich dir nochmals danken, du rastlos scheue Magd?—Wohl denn! Den Balsam nun versuch' ich noch; es sei aus Dank für deine Treu'!	AMFORTAS: You, Kundry? You make me again your debtor, You restless, fearful maid?— Well then! I will even try your balsam, In gratitude for your good service.
KUNDRY: (unruhig am Boden liegend). Nicht Dank!—Ha ha! Was wird es helfen? Nicht Dank! Fort, fort! Zum Bad! (Amfortas giebt das Zeichen zum Aufbruch; der Zug entfernt sich nach dem tieferen Hintergrunde zu Gurnemanz, schwermüthig nachblickend, und Kundry fortwährend auf dem Boden gelagert, sind zurückgeblieben.—Knappen gehen ab und zu.)	KUNDRY: (moving uneasily on the ground). No thanks!—Ha ha! What will it help you? No thanks!—Go, go! Your bath! (Amfortas gives the sign to proceed; the procession disappears towards the valley.— Gurnemanz, sadly looking after, and Kundry still crouching on the ground, remain—Esquires pass to and fro.°)
DRITTER KNAPPE: (junger Mann). He! Du da!— Was liegst du dort wie ein wildes Thier?	THIRD ESQUIRE: (a young man). Hey! You there!— Why do you lie there like a savage beast?
KUNDRY: Sind die Thiere hier nicht heilig?	KUNDRY: Are not beasts here safe and sacred?

DRITTER KNAPPE: Ja! doch ob heilig du, das wissen wir grad' noch nicht.

VIERTER KNAPPE: (ebenfalls junger Mann). Mit ihrem Zaubersafte, wähn' ich, wird sie den Meister vollends verderben.

GURNEMANZ: Hm!—Schuf sie euch Schaden je?—Wann Alles rathlos steht wie kämpfenden Brüdern in fernste Länder Kunde sei zo entsenden, und kaum ihr nur wisst, wohin?
Wer, ehe ihr euch nur besinnt, stürmt und fliegt da hin und zurück,
der Botschaft pflegend mit Treu' und Glück?
Ihr nährt sie nicht, sie naht euch nie, nichts hat sie mit euch gemein;
doch wann's in Gefahr der Hilfe gilt, der Eifer führt sie schier durch die Luft, die nie euch dann zum Danke ruft.
Ich wähne, ist dies Schaden, so thät' er euch gut gerathen?

DRITTER KNAPPE: Doch hasst sie uns.—
Sieh'nur, wie hämisch sie dort nach uns blickt!

VIERTER KNAPPE: Eine Heidin ist's, ein Zauberweib.

GURNEMANZ: Ja, eine Verwünschte mag sie sein: hier lebt sie heut',—vielleicht erneu't, zu büssen Schuld aus früher'm Leben, die dorten ihr noch nicht vergeben.
Uebt sie nun Buss' in solchen Thaten, die uns Ritterschaft zum Heil gerathen, gut thut sie dann ganz sicherlich, dienet uns, und hilft auch sich.

DRITTER KNAPPE: Dann ist's wohl auch jen' ihre Schuld, was uns so manche Noth gebracht?

GURNEMANZ: Ja, wann sie oft uns lange ferne blieb, dann brach ein Unglück wohl herein. Und lang' schon kenn' ich sie:
noch länger kennt sie Titurel:
der fand, als er die Burg dort weih'te, sie schlafend hier im Waldgestrüpp', erstarrt, leblos, wie todt.
So fand ich selbst sie letzlich wieder, als uns das Unheil kaum, gescheh'n, das jener Böse dort über'm Berge
So schmählich über uns gebracht.—
(Zu Kundry.)
He! Du!—Hör' mich, und sag':

THIRD ESQUIRE: Yes; but we know not for certain yet if you are so.

FOURTH ESQUIRE: (also a young man). With her enchanted drugs, I expect She'll bring destruction soon to our Master.

GURNEMANZ: Hm!—Has she done harm to you? When all are sore perplext
For ways to send tidings to distant lands,
Where warrior brethren are battling,
Their whereabouts scarcely known—
Who, before you are even resolved,
Starts and dashes there and back,
Fulfilling the charge with faith and skill?
She needs you not, she's never with you,
She has nothing in common with you;
But when you need help in danger
She breathes the breath of zeal through your ranks,
And never wants a word of thanks.
If she harms you only in this way,
It need not so much alarm you.

THIRD ESQUIRE: She hates us, though.—
See there, how hellishly she looks at us!

FOURTH ESQUIRE: 'Tis a Pagan, sure; a sorceress.

GURNEMANZ: Yea, under a curse she may have been: Here now's her home,— Renewed become, That she may be absolved of her sins
From former life yet unforgiven,
Seeking her shrift by such good actions
As advantage all our knightly factions.
Sure she does well in working this way:
Serves herself and also us.

THIRD ESQUIRE: Then is it not surely her fault
So much distress has come on us?

GURNEMANZ: Yes, when she often stayed away from us
Then misfortune broke in. I have known her a longtime, But Titurel knew her longer:
When he consecrated, your castle
He found her sleeping in this wood,
All stiff, rigid, like death.
I myself did find her lately, this way,
Just when the trouble came on us
Which yonder miscreant beyond the mountain
So shamefully did bring about.—
(To Kundry.)
Hey, you!—Listen and say:
Where were you wandering around When our commander lost his wo schweiftest damals du umher, als unser Herr den Speer verlor?—

(Kundry schweigt.)
Warum halfst du uns damals nicht?

KUNDRY: Ich helfe nie.

VIERTER KNAPPE: Sie sagt's da selbst.

DRITTER KNAPPE: Ist sie so treu und kühn in Wehr, so sende sie nach dam verlor'nen Speer!

GURNEMANZ: (düster). Das ist ein And'res:—
jedem its's verwehrt.—
(Mit grosser Ergriffenheit.)
Oh, wunden-wundervoller heiliger Speer! Dich sah ich schwingen von unheiligster Hand!—
(In Erinnerung sich verlierend.)
Mit ihm bewehrt, Amfortas, allzukühner, wer mochte dir es wehren den Zaub'rer zu beheeren!—
Schon nah' dem Schloss, wird uns der Held entrückt:
ein furchtbar schönes Weib hat ihn entzückt:
in seinen Armen liegt er trunken, der Speer ist ihm entsunken:—
ein Todesschrei!—ich stürm' herbei;
von dannen Klingsor lachend schwand den heil'gen Speer hat er entwandt.
Des Königs Flucht gab kämpfend ich Geleite;
doch eine wunde brannt' ihm in der Seite die Wunde ist's, die nie sich schliessen will.

DRITTER KNAPPE: So kanntest du Klingsor?

GURNEMANZ: (zu dem ersten und zweiten Knappen, welche vom see her kommen). Wie geht's dem könig?

ZWEITER KNAPPE: Ihn frischt das Bad.

ERSTER KNAPPE: Dem Balsam wich der Schmerz.

GURNEMANZ: (nach einem Schweigen). Die Wunde ist's, die nie sich schliessen will!—

DRITTER KNAPPE: Doch, Väterchen, sag' und lehr' uns fein:
du kanntest Klingsor,—wie mag das sein?
(Der dritte und der vierte Knappe hatten sich zuletzt schon zu Gurnemanz' Füssen niedergesetzt; die bieden anderen gesellen sich jetzt gleicher Weise zu ihnen.)

GURNEMANZ: Titurel, der fromme Held, der kannt' ihn wohl.
Denn ihm, da wilder Feinde List und Macht des reinen Glauben's Reich bedrohten, ihm neigten sich in heilig ernster Nacht dereinst des Heiland's sel'ge Boten:
daraus er trank beim letzten Liebesmahle,

spear?
(Kundry is silent.)
Why did you not help us then?

KUNDRY: I never help.

FOURTH ESQUIRE: She says it herself.

THIRD ESQUIRE: If she's so true and void of fear,
The send her to search for the missing spear.

GURNEMANZ: (gloomily). That is quite different!—
It's denied to all.—
(With deep emotion.)
Oh, wounding, wonderful and hallowéd spear! I saw you swayed by the unholiest hand!—
(Becoming lost in remembrance.)
When thus equipped, Amfortas, all too bold one,
Who could be staying your arm from essaying the enchanter?
While near the walls, from us the king was taken;
A maid of fearful beauty turned his brain.
He lay bewitched, her form enfolding,
The spear no longer holding:—
A deathly cry!—I rushed to it—
But laughing, Klingsor fled before;
He bore the sacred spear away
I fought to aid the flying king's returning;
A fatal wound, though, was burning in his side.
That wound it is which none may try to close.

THIRD ESQUIRE: You knew Klingsor?

GURNEMANZ: (To the First and Second Esquires, who come from the lake). How fares the king now?

SECOND ESQUIRE: Refreshed by his bath.

FIRST ESQUIRE: The balsam soothes the smart.

GURNEMANZ: (after some silence). That wound it is which none may try to close.

THIRD ESQUIRE: But look now, father, I'd like to know:—
You knew Klingsor: how was that so?
(The Third and Fourth Esquires have now seated themselves at Gurnemanz' feet; the other two do likewise.)

GURNEMANZ: Titurel, the pious lord,
He knew him well;
For, when the savage foe with craft and might rended the true believers' kingdom,
Anon to him, in midst of holy night
The Savior's messengers descended.
The sacred Cup, the vessel pure, das Weihgefäss, die heilig edle Schale, darein am Kreuz sein göttlich Blut auch floss, zugleich den Lanzenspeer, der dies ver goss,— der Zeugengüter höchstes Wundergut,— das gaben sie in unsres Königs Hut.

Dem Heilthum baute er das Heiligthum. Die seinem Dienst ihr zugesindet auf Pfaden, die kein Sünder findet, ihr wisst, dass nur dem Reinen vergönnt ist sich zu einen den Brüdern, die zu höchsten Rettungs-werken des Grales heil' ge Wunderkräfte stärken:
d'rum blieb es dem, nach dem ihr fragt, verwehrt,
Klingsor'n, so hart ihn Müh' auch drob beschwert.
Jenseits im Thale war er eingesiedelt;
darüber hin liegt üpp'ges Heidenland:
unkund blieb mir, was dorten er gesündigt;
doch büssen wollt' er nun, ja heilig werden.
Ohnmächtig, in sich selbst die Sünde zu ertödten, an sich legt er die Frevlerhand, die nun, dem Grale zugewandt, verachtungsvoll dess' Hüter von sich stiess;
darob die Wuth nun Klingsor'n unterwies, wie seines schmählichen Opfers That ihm gäbe zu bösem Zauber Rath;
den fand er jetzt:—
die Wüste schuf er sich zum Wonnegarten d'rinn wachsen teuflisch holde Frauen;
dort will des Grales Ritter er erwarten zu böser Lust und Höllengrauen:
wen er verlockt, hat er erworben;
schon Viele hat er uns verdorben.—
Da Titurel, in hohen Alter's Mühen, dem Sohne nun die Herrschaft hier verliehen, Amfortas' liess es da nicht ruh'n der Zauberplag' Einhalt zu thun;
das wisst ihr, wie es da sich fand:
der Speer ist nun in Klingsor's Hand;
kann er selbst Heilige mit dem verwunden, den Gral auch wähnt er fest schon uns entwunden.
(Kundry hat sich, in wüthender Unruhe, oft heftig umgewendet.)

VIERTER KNAPPE: Vor Allem nun: der Speer kehr' uns zurück!

unstainéd,
Which at the Last Passover Feast He drainéd,— Which at the Cross received His holy blood,
With the Spear that shed the sacred flood,—
These signs and tokens of a worth untold
The angels gave into our monarch's hold.
A house he built for the holy things.
You, who their service have attained to
By paths no sinners ever took,
Yet know it is only for
The pure to be admitted
Mid those the Grail's divinely magic power
With strength for high salvation's work dowers.
He whom you named had therefore been denied :—
Klingsor—however long and hard he tried.
Then he found asylum far in yon valley,
For over there it is rankest Pagan land.
I ne'er found out what sin he had committed;
He now would be absolved, yea even holy.
Unable in himself to stifle thoughts of evil,
He set to work with guilty hand,
Resolved to gain the Grail's command;
But it was spurned with contempt by its guardian
Where in rage has Klingsor learn'd surely How he wrought by the damnable act
An infamous magic might be taught;
Which now he's found :—
He has transformed the waste to wondrous gardens
Where women bide, of infernal charms,
There he seeks to draw the Grail's true wardens
To wicked joys and pain eternal.
Those who are lured find him their master:
To many happens such disaster.—
When Titurel decayed in manhood's power.
And with the regal might his son dowered.
Amfortas gave himself no rest,
But sought to quell this magic pest;
You have all been told the sequel.
The spear is now in Klingsor's hold.
Even the holy it can cleave asunder:
The Grail already he counts as his plunder.
(During the above Kundry has several times turned round quickly in angry unrest.)

FOURTH ESQUIRE: It behoves us then soon to reclaim that spear.

DRITTER KNAPPE: Ha! wer ihn brächt', ihm wär's zu Ruhm und Glück!

GURNEMANZ: (nach einem Schweigen). lem verwaisten Heiligthum
'gem Beten lag Amfortas, ein Rettungszeichen heiss erflehend:
ein sel'ger Schimmer da entfloss der Grale;
ein heilig' Traumgesicht nun deutlich zu ihm spricht durch hell erschauter Wortezeiche Male:— durch Mitleid wissend
"der reine Thor, harre sein",
den ich erkor."
(Die vier Knappen wiederholen, in grosser Ergriffenheit, den Spruch.) (Vom See her hört man Geschrei und das Rufen der)

RITTER UND KNAPPEN: Weh'! Wehe!—Hoho!
Auf!—Wer ist der Frevler?
(Gurnemanz und die vier Knappen fahren auf und wenden sich erschrocken um,—Ein wilder Schwan flattert matten Fluges vom See daher; er ist ver wundet erhält sich mühsam und sinkt endlich sterbend zu Boden.—Während dem.)

GURNEMANZ: Was giebt's?

ERSTER KNAPPE: Dort!

ZWEITER KNAPPE: Hier! Ein Schwan.

DRITTER KNAPPE: Ein wilder Schwan!

VIERTER KNAPPE: Er ist verwundet.

ANDERE KNAPPEN: (vom See her stürmend). Ha! Wehe! Weh'!

GURNEMANZ: Wer schoss den Schwan?

DER ZWEITE RITTER: (hervorkommend). Der König grüsst' ihn als gutes Zeichen.
als über dem See dort kreis'te der Schwan: da flog ein Pfeil.—

NEUE KANPPEN: (Parsifal vorführend). Der war's! Der schoss! Dies der Bogen!—
Hier der Pfeil, den seinen gleich.

GURNEMANZ: (zu Parsifal). Bist du's, der diesen Schwan erlegte?

PARSIFAL: Gewiss! Im Fluge treff' ich was fliegt.

GURNEMANZ: Du thatest das? Und bangt' es dich nicht vor der That?

DIE KNAPPEN: Strafe den Frevler!

GURNEMANZ: Unerhörtes Werk! Du konntest morden? Hier im heil' gen Walde, dess' stiller Frieden dich umfing!
Des Haines Thiere nahten dir nicht

THIRD ESQUIRE: Ha! he who could would get both joy and fame.

GURNEMANZ: (after a silence). Before the plundered sanctuary
Amfortas knelt in prayer impassioned,
Imploring for a sign of safety:
A heavenly radiance from the Grail then floated;
A sacred phantom face
From lips divine did chase
These words, whose purport clearly could be noted :—
"Enlightened by pity
A guileless Fool;—
Wait for him
My chosen tool."
(The four Esquires with deep awe repeat the oracular words.)
(From the lake come cries and exclamations of the)

KNIGHTS AND ESQUIRES: Woe! Horror!—Hoho!
Up! Who is the culprit?
(Gurnemanz and the four Esquires start up and turn around in alarm. A wild swan flutters feebly from over the lake, strives to keep up, and finally sinks dying to the ground.)

GURNEMANZ: What is it?

FIRST ESQUIRE: There!

SECOND ESQUIRE: Here—a swan!

THIRD ESQUIRE: A poor wild swan!

FOURTH ESQUIRE: It has been wounded.

OTHER ESQUIRES: (rushing on from the lake). Ha! Horror! Woe!

GURNEMANZ: Who shot the swan?

SECOND KNIGHT: (advancing). The king esteemed it a happy token,
When it circled aloft over the lake:
Then flew a dart.—

MORE ESQUIRES: (bringing forward Parsifal). It was Him! He shot! Here's the weapon.
See this arrow, like his own.

GURNEMANZ: (to Parsifal). Is it you, that dealt this swan its death blow?

PARSIFAL: For sure; in flight I hit all that flies.

GURNEMANZ: You have done this? And have no sorrow for your deed?

THE ESQUIRES: Punish the culprit!

GURNEMANZ: Unconceived of fact!
Could you do murder? Here in holy forests, Whose quiet peace overspreads zahm, grüssten dich freundlich und fromm?

Aus den Zweigen, was sangen die Vöglein dir?
Was that dir der treue Schwan?
Sein Weibchen zu suchen flog der auf, mit ihm zu kreisen über dem See;
den so er herrlich weih'te zum heilenden Bad:
dem stauntest du nicht, dich lockt' es nur zu wild kindischem Bogengeschoss?—
Er war uns hold: was ist er nun dir?
Hier—schau' her!—hier traf'st du ihn:
da starrt noch das Blut, matt hängen die Flügel;
das Schneegefieder dunkel befleckt,— gebrochen das Aug', siehst du den Blick?
Wirst deiner Sündenthat du inne?—
(Parsifal hat ihm mit wachsender Ergriffenheit zugehört: jetzt zerbricht er seinen Bogen und schleudert die Pfeile von sich.)
Sag', Knab'! Erkennst du deine grosse Schuld?
(Parsifal führt die Hand über die Augen.)
Wie konntest du sie begeh'n?

PARSIFAL: Ich wusste sie nicht.

GURNEMANZ: Wo bist du her?

PARSIFAL: Das weiss ich nicht

GURNEMANZ: Wer ist dein Vater?

PARSIFAL: Das weiss ich nicht.

GURNEMANZ: Wer sandte dich dieses Weg's?

PARSIFAL: Ich weiss nicht.

GURNEMANZ: Dein Name dann?

PARSIFAL: Ich hatte viele, doch weiss ich ihrer keinen mehr.

GURNEMANZ: das weisst du Alles nicht?
(Für sich:)
So dumm wie den erfand ich bisher Kundry nur.—
(Zu den Knappen, deren sich immer mehre versammen haben) Jetzt geht!
Versäumt den König im Bade nicht!- Helft!
(Die Knappen haben den Schwan ehrerbietig aufgenommen, und entfernen sich mit ihm jetzt nach dem See zu) GURNEMANZ: (sich wieder zu Parsifal wendend). Nun sag'!

Nichts weisst du, was ich dich frage:
jetzt melde, was du weisst!
denn etwas musst du doch wissen.

your path?
The beasts around, did you not find them tame?
Were they not friendly and fond?
From the branches what warbled the birds to you?
How harmed you that good swan?
He flew aloft, to look for his mate.
With her to hover over the lake,
Thus consecrating the health-giving bath for us.
You did not revere, but lusted for
A wild puerile shot of the bow.
He was our joy: what is he to you?
Here—behold!—your arrow struck;—
There stiffens his blood; hang powerless the pinions,
The snowy plumage darkly besplashed,— Extinguished his eye—do you notice its look?
Are you conscious of your trespass?
(Parsifal has listened to his words with increasing attention; he now breaks his bow and casts his arrows away.)
Say, boy? Do you perceive your heinous sin?
(Parsifal draws his hand across his eyes.)
How could you have acted this way?

PARSIFAL: I did not know this was wrong.

GURNEMANZ: Where do you come from?

PARSIFAL: I do not know.

GURNEMANZ: Who is your father?

PARSIFAL: I do not know.

GURNEMANZ: Who bade you to wander this way?

PARSIFAL: I know not.

GURNEMANZ: Your name then?

PARSIFAL: I once had many,
But now I know not one of them.

GURNEMANZ: You don't know anything
(aside)
I never found a dolt so dull, save Kundry here.
(To the Esquires who have assembled in still greater numbers.)
Now go;
Nor leave the king in his bath alone!—Help.
(The Esquires lift up the swan reverently and bear it away towards the lake.)

GURNEMANZ: (turning again to Parsifal). Now say! I know nothing of all I have asked you:
Declare then what you know:
You must have knowledge of something.

PARSIFAL: Ich hab' eine Mutter; Herzeleide sie heisst:
im Wald und auf wilder Aue waren wir heim.

GURNEMANZ: Wer gab dir den Bogen?

PARSIFAL: Den schuf ich mir selbst, vom Forst die rauhen Adler zu scheuchen.

GURNEMANZ: Doch adelig scheinst du selbst und hoch geboren:
warum nicht liess deine Mutter bessere Waffen dich lehren?
(Parsifal schweigt.)

KUNDRY: (welche, in der Waldecke gelagert, den Blick scharf am Parsifal gerichtet hat, ruft mit rauher Stimme hinein) Den Vaterlosen gebar die Mutter, als im Kampf erschlagen Gamuret;
vor gleichem frühen Heldentod den Sohn zu wahren, waffenfremd in Oeden erzog sie ihn zum Thorendie Thörin!
(Sie lacht.)

PARSIFAL: (der mit jäher Aufmerksamkeit zugehört). Ja! Und einst am Waldessaume vorbei, auf schönen Thieren sitzend, kamen glänzende Männer:
ihnen wollt' ich gleichen;
sie lachten und jagten davon.
Nun lief ich nach, doch konnte sie nicht erreichen:
durch Wildnisse kam ich, bergauf, thalab;
oft ward es Nacht; dann wieder Tag:
mein Bogen musste mir frommen gegen Wild und grosse Männer.

KUNDRY: (eifrig). Ja, Schächer und Riesen traf seine Kraft:
den freislichen Knaben fürchten sie Alle.

PARSIFAL: Wer fürchtet mich? Sag'!

KUNDRY: Die Bösen.

PARSIFAL: Die mich bedrohten, waren sie bös'?
(Gurnemanz lacht.)
Wer ist gut?

GURNEMANZ: (ernst). Deihe Mutter, der du entlaufen, und die um dich sich nun härmt und grämt.

KUNDRY: Zu End' ihr Gram: seine Mutter ist todt.

PARSIFAL: (in furchtbarem Schrecken). Todt?—Meine Mutter?—Wer sagt' es?

PARSIFAL: I have a mother;
Heart's Affliction she's hight:
The woods and the waste of moorlands were our abode.

GURNEMANZ: Who gave you that weapon?

PARSIFAL: I made it myself,
To drive the savage eagles from the forest.

GURNEMANZ: But eagle-like you seem yourself, and well descended:
Why did your mother not teach you
To handle manlier weapons?
(Parsifal remains silent.)

KUNDRY: (who, still crouching by the wood, has glanced sharply at Parsifal, now breaks in with hoarse tones). Bereft of father his mother bore him,
For in battle perished Gamuret:
From like untimely hero's death
To save her offspring, strange to arms
She reared him a witless fool in deserts.—
What folly!
(She laughs.)

PARSIFAL: (who has listened with sharp attention). Yes, and once along the hem of the wood,
Most noble beasts bestriding,
Passed by men all a-glitter;
Fain had I been like them;
With laughter they galloped away.
Now I pursue, but cannot as yet overtake them;
Through deserts I've wandered, over hill and dale;
Often fell the night, then followed day:
My bow was forced to defend me
Against the wolves and mighty peoples.

KUNDRY: (warmly). Yes caitiffs and giants fell to his might;
The fierce-striking boy brings fear to spirits.

PARSIFAL: Who fears me, say?

KUNDRY: The wicked.

PARSIFAL: Those who attacked me, were they then bad?
(Gurnemanz laughs.)
Who is good?

GURNEMANZ: (earnestly). Your dear mother, whom you have forsaken,
And who must now mourn and grieve for you.

KUNDRY: She grieves no more; for his mother is dead.

PARSIFAL: (in fearful alarm). Dead?—What, my mother?—who says so?

KUNDRY: Ich ritt vorbei, und sah sie sterben:
dich Thoren hiess sie mich grüssen.
(Parsifal springt wüthend auf Kundry zu und fasst sie bei der Kehle.)

GURNEMANZ: (ihn zurückhaltend). Verrückter Knabe! Wieder Gewalt?
Was that dir das Weib? Es sagte wahr.
Denn nie lügt Kundry, doch sah sie viel.
(Nachdem Gurnemanz Kundry befreit, steht Parsifal lange wie erstarrt; dann geräth er in ein heftiges Zittern.)

PARSIFAL: Ich—verschmachte!—
(Kundry ist hastig an einen Waldquell gesprungen, bringt jetzt Wasser in einem Horne, besprengt damit zunächst Parsifal, und reicht ihm dann zu trinken.)

GURNEMANZ: So recht! So nach des Grales Gnade: das Böse bannt, wer's mit Gutem vergilt.

KUNDRY: (traurig sich abwendend). Nie thu' ich Gutes;—nur Ruhe will ich.
(Während Gurnemanz sich väterlich um Parsifal bemüht, schleppt sich Kundry, von Beiden unbeachtet, einem Waldgebüsche zu.)
Nur Ruhe! Ruhe, ach, der Müden!—
Schlafen!—Oh, dass mich keiner wecke!
(Scheu auffahrend.)
Nein! Nicht schlafen!—Grausen fasst mich!
(Nach einem dumpfen Schrei verfällte sie in heftiges Zittern; dann lässt sie die Arme matt sinken, neight das Haupt tief, und schwankt matt weiter.) Machtlose Wehr! Die Zeit ist da.
Schlafen—schlafen—: ich muss.
(Sie sinkt hinter dem Gebüsch zusammen, und bleibt von jetzt an unbemerkt.—Vom See her vernimmt man Bewegung, und gewahrt den im Hintergrunde sich heimwärts wendenden Zug der Ritter und Knappen mit der Sänfte.)

GURNEMANZ: Vom Bade kehrt der König heim; hoch steht die Sonne:
nun lass' mich zum frommen Mahl dich geleiten;
denn,—bist du rein,
wird nun der Gral dich tränken und speisen.
(Er hat Parsifal's Arm sich sanft um den Nacken gelegt, und hält dessen Leib mit seinem eigenen Arme umschlungen; so geleitet er ihn bei sehr allmählichem Schreiten.)

PARSIFAL: Wer ist der Gral?

KUNDRY: I rode along and saw her dying;
Poor fool, she sent you her blessing.
(Parsifal springs upon Kundry, raging, and seizes her by the throat.)

GURNEMANZ: (holding him back). Insensate stripling! Outrage again?—
What harm has she done? She speaks the truth.
For Kundry lies not, and has seen much.
(After Gurnemanz has released Kundry, Parsifal stands awhile as if turned to stone; then he is seized with a violent trembling.)

PARSIFAL: I—am fainting!
(Kundry has hastily sprung to a brook, brings water now in a horn, sprinkles Parsifal with some and then gives him to drink.)

GURNEMANZ: It is well! Thus has the Grail directed:
He ousts ill who gives for it good.

KUNDRY: (sadly turning away). I do no good thing;—but I long for rest.
(While Gurnemanz is attending to Parsifal with fatherly care, Kundry, unperceived by them, crawls towards a thicket.)
But rest, but rest! Alas, I'm weary!— Slumber!—Oh, would that none might wake me!
(Starting timidly.)
No! I'll sleep not!—Terror grips me.
(She gives a suppressed cry and falls into a violent trembling: then she lets her arms drop powerless, and her head sink low, and staggers a little farther.)
Vain to resist! The time has come.
Slumber-slumber-: I must.
(She sinks down behind the thicket and is seen no more. A stir is perceived down by the lake, and the train of Knights and Esquires with the litter passes back homewards at back.)

GURNEMANZ: From bathing comes the king again;
High stands the sun now;
Let me then conduct you to the holy Feast;
For—an you're pure,
Surely the Grail will feed and refresh you.
(He has gently laid Parsifal's arm on his own neck, and, supporting his body with his arm, leads him slowly along.)

PARSIFAL: What is the Grail?

GURNEMANZ: Das sagt sich nicht:
doch bist du selbst zu ihm erkoren, bleibt dir die Kunde unverloren.—
Und sieh'!—
Mich dünkt, dass ich dich recht erkannt:
kein Weg führt zu ihm durch das Land,
und Niemand könnte ihn beschreiten, den er nicht selber möcht' geleiten.

PARSIFAL: Ich schreite kaum,— doch wähn' ich mich schon weit.

GURNEMANZ: Du siehst, mein Sohn, zum Raum wird hier die Zeit.
(Allmählich, während Gurnemanz und Parsifal za schreiten scheinen, verwandelt sich die Bühne, von links nach rechts hin, in unmerklicher Weise: es verschwindet so der Wald; in Felsenwänden öffnet sich ein Thor, welches num die Bieden einschliesst; dann wieder werden sie in aufsteigenden Gängen sichtbar, welche sie zu durchschreiten scheinen.—Lang gehaltene Posaunentöne schwellen sanft an: näher kommendes Glockengeläute.—Endlich sind sie in einem mächtigen Saale angekommen, welcher nach oben in eine hochgewölbte Kuppel, durch die einzig das Licht hereindringt, sich verliert.—Von der Höhe über der Kuppel her vernimmt man wachsendes Geläute.)

GURNEMANZ: (sich zu Parsifal wendend, der wie verzaubert steht). Jetzt achte wohl; und lass' mich seh'n, bist du ein Thor und rein, welch Wissen dir auch mag beschieden sein.—
(Auf beiden Seiten des Hintergrundes wird je eine grosse Thür geöffnet. Von rechts schreiten die Ritter des Grales, in feierlichem Zuge, herein, und reihen sich unter dem folgenden Gesange, nach und nach an zwei überdeckten langen Speisetafeln, welche so gestellt sind, dass sie, von hinten nach vorn parallel laufend. die Mitte des Saales frei lassen: nur Becher, keine Gerichte stehen darauf.)

DIE GRALSRITTER: Zum letzten Liebesmahle gerüstet Tag für Tag, gleich ob zum letzten Male es heut' ims letzen mag, wer guter That sich freu't, ihm sei das Mahl erneu't:
der Labung darf er nah'n, die hehrste Gab' empfah'n.

JUNGERE MANNERSTIMMEN: (von der mittleren Höhe des Saales her vernehmbar). Den sündigen Welten mit tausend Schmerzen wie einst sein Blut geflossen, dem Erlösungs-Helden

GURNEMANZ: I may not say:
But if you're bidden to serve it,
Knowledge of it will not be hidden.—
And lo!—
I think I know you now indeed:
No earthly road leads to it,
It can be detected by no one
Who by itself is not elected.

PARSIFAL: I scarcely move,—
Yet swiftly seem to run,

GURNEMANZ: My son, you see Here Space and Time are one.
(Gradually, while Parsifal and Gurnemanz appear to walk, the scene changes imperceptibly from L. to R. The forest disappears; a door opens in rocky cliffs and conceals the two; they are then seen again in sloping passages which they appear to ascend.—Long sustained trombone notes softly swell, approaching peals of bells are heard.—At last they arrive at a mighty hall, which loses itself overhead in a high vaulted dome, down from which alone the light streams in. From the heights above the dome comes the increasing sound of chimes.)

GURNEMANZ: (turning to Parsifal, who stands spell bound). Now give good heed, and let me see,
If you're a Fool and pure,
What wisdom you presently can secure.—
(At each side in the background a large door opens From the R. enter slowly the Knights of the Grail in solemn procession, and range themselves, during the following chorus, by degrees at two long covered tables which are placed endways towards the audience, one on each side, leaving the middle of the stage free. Only cups-no dishes-stand on them.)

THE KNIGHTS OF THE GRAIL:
The Holy Supper duly Prepare we day by day,
As on that last time truly
The soul it still may stay.
Who lives to do good deeds.
This Meal for ever feeds;
The Cup his hand may lift
And claim the purest gift.

VOICES OF YOUNGER MEN: (coming from the mid-height of the hall). As anguished and lowly
His life stream's spilling
For sinners He did offer,
For the Savior holy With heart free and willing mit freudigem Herzen sie nun mein Blut vergossen.

Den Leib, den er zur Sühn' uns bot, er leb' in uns durch seinen Tod.

KNABENSTIMMEN: (aus der äussersten Höhe der Kuppel). Der Glaube lebt; Die Taube schwebt, des Heiland's holder Bote.
Der für euch fliesst, des Wein's geniesst, und nehmt vom Lebensbrode!
(Durch die entgegengesetzte Thüre wird von Knappen und dienenden Brüdern auf einer Tragsänfte Amfortas hereiugetragen: vor ihm schreiten Knaben, welche einen mit einer purpurrothen Decke überhängten Schrein tragen. Dieser Zug begiebt sich nach der Mitte des Hintergrundes, wo, von einem Baldachin überdeckt, ein ernöhetes Ruhebett aufgerichtet steht, auf welches Amfortas von der Sänfte herab niedergelassen wird; hiervor steht ein Altar-ähnlicher länglicher Marmortisch, auf welchen die Knaben den verhängten Schrein hinstellen.—)
(Als der Gesang beendet ist, und alle Ritter an den Tafeln ihre Sitze eingenommen haben, tritt ein längeres Stillschweigen ein.— Vom tiefsten Hintergunde her vernimmt man, aus einer gewölbten Nische hinter dem Ruhebette des Amfortas, wie aus einem Grabe die Stimme des alten.)

TITUREL: Mein Sohn Amfortas!
Bist du am Amt?
(Schweigen.)
Soll ich den Gral heut' noch erschau'n und leben?
(Schweigen.)
Muss ich sterben, vom Retter ungeleitet?

AMFORTAS: (im Ausbruche qualvoller Verzweifelung). Wehe!
Wehe mir del Qual!—
Mein Vater, oh! noch einmal verrichte du das Amt!
Lebe! Leb' und lass' mich sterben!

TITUREL: Im Grabe leb' ich durch des Heiland's Huld;
zu schwach doch bin ich, ihm zu dienen:
du büss' im Dienste deine Schuld!— Enthüllet den Gral!

AMFORTAS: (den Knaben wehrend). Nein! Lasst ihn unenthüllt!—Oh!—
Dass Keiner, Keiner diese Qual ermisst, die mir der Anblick weckt, der euch entzückt!— was ist die Wunde, ihrer Schmerzen Wuth, gegen die Noth, die Höllenpein, zu diesem Amt—verdammt zu sein!—
Wehvolles Erbe, dem ich verfallen, ich, einziger Sünder unter Allen,

My blood I now will proffer.
His body, given our sins to shrive,
Through death becomes in us alive.

BOYS' VOICES: (from the summit of the dome). His love endures,
The dove upsoars,
The Savior's sacred token.
Take the wine red,
For you it was shed;
Let Bread of Life be broken.
(Through the opposite door Amfortas is brought in on his litter by Esquires and serving brethren; before him march boys who bear a shrine draped in a purple-red cloth. This procession wends to the center of the background, where, overhung by a canopy, stands a raised couch. On this Amfortas is placed; before it stands an altar-like, longish marble table, on which the boys place the shrine, still covered.— When the song is ended and the Knights have all taken their seats there is a long pause and silence. From the distant back is heard, from an arched niche behind Amfortas' throne, as from a grave, the voice of old.)

TITUREL: My son Amfortas! Are you at your post?
(silence.)
Shall I again look on the Grail and quicken?
(silence.)
Must I perish, unguided by my Savier?

AMFORTAS: (in an outburst of painful desperation). Woe's me!
Woe, alas, the pain!—
My father, oh once again
Assume the office!
Live on! Live and let me perish.

TITUREL: Entombed I live still, by the Grace of God;
Too feeble am I now to serve Him:
In works for Him efface your guilt!—
Uncover the Grail!

AMFORTAS: (restraining the boys). No! Leave it unrevealed!—Oh!—
May no one, no one know the anguish dire Awaked in me by that which raptures you!
What is the wound and its torture wild,
Against the distress, the pangs of hell,
In this high post—accurst to dwell!—
Woeful inheritance on me presséd, des höchsten Heiligthum's zu pflegen, auf Reine herabzuflehen seinen Segen!—

Oh, Strafe! Strafe ohne Gleichen des—ach!—gekräukten Gnadenreichen!—
Nach Ihm, nach Seinem Weihegrusse muss sehnlich mich's verlangen;
aus tiefster Seele Heilesbusse zu Ihn muss ich gelangen—die Stunde naht:—
der Lichstrahl senkt sich auf das heilige Werk; die Hülle sinkt:
des Weihgefässes göttlicher Gehalt erglüht mit leuchtender Gewalt;—
durchzückt von seligsten Genusses Schmerz, des heiligsten Blutes Quell fühl' ich sich giessen in mein Herz:
des eig'nen sündigen Blutes Gewell' in wahnsinniger Flucht muss mir zurück dann fliessen, in die Welt der Sündenzucht mit wilder Scheu sich ergiessen:— von Neuem sprengt er das Thor, daraus es nun strömt hervor, hier durch die Wunde, der Seinen gleich, geschlagen von desselben Speeres Streich, der dort dem Erlöser die Wunde stach, aus der mit blutigen Thränen der Göttliche weint' ob der Menschheit Schmach in Mitleid's heiligem Sehnen,— und aus der nun mir, an heiligster Stelle, dem Pfleger göttlichster Güter, des Erlösungsbalsam's Hüter, das heisse Süundenblut entquillt, ewig erneu't aus des Sehnen's Quelle, das, ach! keine Büssung je mir stillt!
Erbarmen! Erbarmen!
Allerbarmer, arch! Erbarmen!
Nimm mir mein Erbe, schliesse die Wunde,
dass heilig ich sterbe,
rein Dir gesunde!
(Er sinkt wie bewusstlos zurück.)

I, only sinner amid the Blesséd,
The holy house to guard for others
And pray for blessings upon my purer brothers!—
Oh chastening—chastening dire! descended From-ah! the Almighty One offended.
For grace and for compassion yearning
My panting heart is riven;
In deepest soul's repentance burning
By Him to be forgiven.
the hour is near—
The ray descends upon the vessel divine
The veil is raised,
The sacred stream that in the crystal flows
With strength and radiant luster glows;—
By this delight but filled with anguish sore,
I feel to pour the heavenly fount of blood
Into my heart
My own life current's iniquitous flood
In delirious flight
Backward within me rushes:
Toward the world where sin has might
With wildest dread it gushes.—
Again it forces the door
From which now the stream pours,
Here through the wound,—like His it is here,
Inflicted by a stroke of that same spear.—
As in our Redeemer, the selfsame place,
From which with tears of blood burning.
The Son of Man wept over man's disgrace
With sacred pity yearning;
And from which in me, in this sacred mountain,
While holding high gifts beyond measure,
—Our redemption's healing treasure—
The hot and sinful blood surges,
Ever renewed from my yearnings' fountain,
Which no expiation yet can purge.
Have mercy! Have mercy!
God of pity, oh! have mercy!
Take all I cherish,
Give me healing,
That I may perish pure Holiness feeling.
(He sinks back as if unconscious.)

KNABENSTIMMEN: (aus der Kuppel). "Durch Mitleid wissend, der reine Thor: harre sein',
den ich erkor."

DIE RITTER: (leise). So ward es dir verkündet, Harre getrost;
des Amtes walte heut'!

BOYS' VOICES: (from the dome). "By pity lightened,
The guileless Fool—
Wait for him,
My chosen tool."

KNIGHTS: (softly). Thus came to you the fiat Wait on in hope:—
Fulfill your duty now!

TITUREL'S (Stimme). Enthüllet den Gral !
(Amfortas hat sich schweigend wieder erhoben. Die Knaben entkleiden den goldenen Schrein, entnehmen ihm den "Gral" (eine antike Krystallschale), von welchem sie ebenfalls eine Verhüllung abnehmen, und setzen ihn vor Amfortas hin.)

TITUREL'S: (Stimme). Der Segen !
(Während Amfortas andachtsvoll in stummem Gebete sich zu dem Kelche neigt, verbreitet sich eine immer dichtere Dämmerung im Saale.)

KNABEN: (aus der Kuppel).
"Nehmet hin mein Blut um unsrer Liebe Willen !
Nehmet hin meinen Leib
auf dass ihr mein' gedenkt.
(Ein blendender Lichstrahl dringt von oben auf die Schale herab, diese erglüht immer stärker in leuchtender Purpurfarbe. Amfortas, mit verklärter Miene, erhebt den "Gral" hoch und schwenkt ihn sanft nach allen Seiten hin. Alles ist bereits bei dem Eintritte der Dämmerung auf die Knie gesunken, und erhebt jetzt die Blicke andächtig zum "Grale.")

TITUREL'S: (Stimme). Oh ! Heilige Wonne !
Wie hell grüsst uns heute der Herr !
(Amfortas setzt den "Gral" wieder nieder, welcher nun, während die tiefe Dämmerung wieder entweicht, immer mehr erblasst : hierauf schliessen die Knaben das Gefäss wieder in den Schrein, und bedecken diesen, wie zuvor.- Mit dem Wiedereintritte der vorigen Tageshelle sind auf den Speisetafeln die Becher jetzt mit Wein gefüllt, wieder deutlich geworden, neben jedem liegt ein Brot. Alles lässt sich zum Mahle nieder, so auch Gurnemanz welcher einen Platz neben sich leer hält und Parsifal durch ein Zeichen zur Theilnehmung am Mahle enlädt Parsifal bleibt aber starr und stumm wie gänzlich entrükt zur Seite stehen.)
(Wechselgesang wahrand des Mahles.)

Knabenstimmen: (aus der Höhe).
Wein und Brod des letzten Mahles wandelt' einst der Herr des Grales, durch des Mitleid's Liebesmacht, in das Blut, das er vergoss, in den Leib, den dar er bracht'.

JUNGLINGSSTIMMEN: (aus der mittleren Höhe). Blut und Leib der Opfergabe wandelt heut' zu eurer Labe der Erlöser, den ihr preis't, in den Wein, der nun euch floss,
in das Brod, das heut' euch speis't.

TITUREL'S: (voice). Uncover the Grail !
(Amfortas has again raised himself in silence. The boys uncover the golden shrine, take out of it the "Grail" (an antique crystal cup), from which they also take a covering, and set it before Amfortas.)

TITUREL'S: (voice), The Blessing!
(While Amfortas devoutly bows himself in silent prayer before the cup, an increasing gloom spreads in the room.)

BOYS: (from the dome). "Take and drink my blood;
Thus be our love remembered!
Take my body and eat:
Do this and think of me!"
(A blinding ray of light shoots down from above upon the cup, which glows with increasing purple lustre. Amfortas, with brightened mien, raises the "Grail" aloit and waves it gently about on all sides. Since the coming of the dusk all have sunk upon their knees, and now cast their eyes reverently towards the "Grail.")

TITUREL'S (voice). Celestial rapture!
How light now the looks of the Lord!
(Amfortas sets down the "Grail" again, which now, while the deep gloom wanes, grows paler: the boys cover it as before and return it to the shrine.—As the original light returns to the hall the cups on the table are seen to be filled with wine, and by each is a piece of bread. All sit down to the repast, including Gurnemanz, who keeps a place by him for Parsifal, whom he invites with a sign to come and partake. Parsifal, however, remains silent and motionless at the side, as if quite dumbfounded.)
(Allernative, during the Supper.)

BOYS' VOICES: (from the height).
Wine and Bread the Grail's Lord changéd
Which at that Last Meal were rangéd,
Through his pity's loving tide
When He shed for you His gore
And His Body crucifed.

YOUTHS' VOICES: (from the middle height) Blood and Body which he offered Changed to food for you are proffered
By the Savior you revere
In the Wine which now you pour
And the Bread you eat of here.

DIE RITTER: (erste Hälfte). Nehmet vom Brod, wandelt es kühn
zu Leibes Kraft und Stärke; treu bis zum Tod,
fest in Müh'n,
zu wirken des Heiland's Werke.
(Zweite Hälfte.)
Nehmet vom Wein, Wandelt ihn neu
zu Lebens feurigem Blute, froh im Verein,
brüdertreu
zu kämpfen mit seligem Muthe.
(Sie erheben sich feierlich und reichen einander die Hände.)

ALLE RITTER: Selig im Glauben !
Selig in Liebe !

JUNGLINGE: (aus mittler Höhe).
Selig in Liebe !

KNABEN: (aus oberster Höhe).
Selig im Glauben !
(Während des Mahles, an welchem er nicht theilnahm ist Amfortas aus seiner begeisterungsvollen Erhebung allmählich wieder herabgesunken : er neight das Haupt und hält die Hand auf die Wunde. Die Knaben nähern sich ihm; ihre Bewegungen deuten auf das erneuerte Bluten der Wunde : sie pflegen Amfortas, geleiten ihn wieder auf die Sänfte, und, während Alle sich zum Aufbruch rüsten, tragen sie, in der Ordnung wie sie Kamen, Amfortas und den heiligen Schrein wieder von dannen. Die Ritter und Knappen reihen sich ebenfalls wieder zum feierlichen Zuge, und verlassen langsam den Saal, aus welchem die vorherige Tageshelle allmählich weicht. Die Glocken haben wieder geläutet.— Parsifal hatte bei dem vorangegangenen stärksten Klagerufe des Amfortas eine heftige Bewegung nach dem Herzen gemacht, welches er krampfhatt eine Zeit lang gefasst heilt ; jetzt steht er noch wie erstarrt gungslos da. - Als die Letzen den Saal verlassen und die Thüren wieder geschlossen sind. Tritt Gurnemanz missmüthig an Parsifal heran, und rüttelt ihn am Arme.)

GURNEMANZ: Was stehst du noch da?
Weisst du, was du sah'st?
(Parsifal schüttelt ein wenig sein Haupt.)

GURNEMANZ: Du bist doch eben nur ein Thor' (Er öffnet eine schmale Seitenthüre.)
Dort hinaus, deinem Wege zu !
Doch räth dir Gurnemanz, lass' du hier künftig die Schwäne in Ruh' und suche dir Gänser die Gans !
(Er stösst Parsifal hinaus und

THE KNIGHTS: (first half). Take of this Bread, Change it again,
Your powers of body firing;
Living and dead
Strive amain to work out the Lord's desiring.
(second half).
Take of this Wine,
Change it anew
To life's impetuous torrent;
Gladly combine,
Brothers true,
To fight as duty shall warrant.
(They rise solemnly and all join hands.)

ALL THE KNIGHTS: Blesséd Believing !
Blesséd in Loving !

YOUTHS: (from the mid height).
Blessed in Loving !

BOYS: (from the utmost height).
Blessed Believing!
(During the repast Amfortas, who has not partaken, has gradually relapsed from his state of exaltation: he bows his head and presses his hand to the wound. The pages approach him; his wound has burst out afresh: they tend him and assist him to his litter; then, while all prepare to break up, they bear off Amfortas and the shrine in the order in which they came. The Knights and Esquires fall in and slowly leave the hall in solemn procession, while the daylight gradually wanes. The bells are heard pealing again.— Parsifal, on hearing Amfortas' cry of agony, has clutched his heart and remained in that position for some time; he now stands as if petrified, motionless. When the last knight has left the hall and the doors are again closed Gurnemanz in ill humor comes up to Parsifal and shakes him by the arm.)

GURNEMANZ: Why do you stand there ?
Do you know what you saw?
(Parsifal shakes his head slightly.)

GURNEMANZ: You are then nothing but a Fool!
(He opens a small side door.)
Come away, be gone on your road
And put my advise to use:
Leave all our swans for the future alone
And seek yourself, gander, a goose.
(He pushes Parsifal out and slams the door angrily on him. As he fol- schlägt, ärgerlich, hinter ihm die Thüre stark zu. Während er dann den Rittern folgt, schliesst sich der Bühnenvorhang.)

ZWEITER AUFZUG.

KLINGSOR'S ZAUBERSCHLOSS. Im inneren Verliesse eines nach oben offenen Thurmes; Steinstufen führen nach dem Zinnenrande der Thurmmauer; Finsterniss in der Tiefe, nach welcher es von dem Mauervorsprunge, den der Bühnenboden darstellt, hinabführt. Zauberwerkzeuge und nekromantische Vorrichtungen.—Klingsor auf dem Mauervorsprunge zur Seite, vor einem Metallspiegel sitzend.

KLINGSOR: Die Zeit ist da,— Schon lockt mein Zauberschloss den Thoren, den, kindisch jauchzend, fern ich nahen seh'.—
Im Todesschlafe hält der Fluch sie fest, der ich den Krampf zu lösen weiss.—
Auf denn! An's Werk!
(Er steigt, der Mitte zu, etwas tiefer hinab, und entzündet dort Räucherwerk, welches alsbald einen Theil des Hintergrundes mit einem bläulichen Dampfe erfüllt. Dann setzt er sich wieder an die vorige Stelle, und ruft, mit geheimnissvollen Gebärden, nach dem Abgrunde:)
Herauf! Hieher! zu mir!
Dein Meister ruft dich Namenlose:
Ur-Teufelin! Höllen-Rose!
Herodias war'st du, und was noch?
Gundryggia dort, Kundry hier:
Hierher! Hieher denn, Kundry!
Zu deinem Meister, herauf! (In dem bläulichen Lichte steigh Kundry's Gestalt herauf. Man hört sie einen grässlichen Schrei ausslossen, wie eine aus tiefstem Schlafe aufgeschreckte Halbwache.)

KLINGSOR:
Erwach'st du? Ha!
Meinem Banne wieder verfiel'st du heut' zur rechten Zeit.
(Kundry's Gestalt lässt ein Klagegeheul, von grösster Heftigkeit bis zu bangem Wimmern sich abstufend, vernehmen.)
Sag', wo trieb'st du dich wieder umher?
Pfui! Dort, bei dem Ritter-Gesipp', wo wie ein Vieh du dich halten lässt?
Gefällt's dir bei mir nicht besser?
Als ihren Meister du mir gefangen—ha ha!—den reinen Hüter des Gral's,— was jagte dich da wieder fort?

lows the knights, the curtain closes.)

ACT II.

Klingsor's magic Castle.—In the inner keep of a tower open above; stone steps lead up to the battlemented summit and down into darkness below the stage, which represents the rampart. Magical implements and necromantic appliances.—Klingsor sits at one side on the rampart before a metal mirror.

KLINGSOR: The time has come!—
Lo! how my magic tower entices
That Fool who nears, shouting like a child.
A deadly slumber lays its hold on her Whose anguish I can chase away.—
Up then! To work!
(He descends somewhat lower, and lights incense, which immediately fills part of the background with a bluish vapor. He then reseats himself in his former place, and calls towards the depth with mysterious gestures:)
Arise! Draw near to me!
Your Master calls you nameless woman:
She-Lucifer! Rose of Hades!
Herodias were you, and what else?
Gundryggia there, Kundry here:—
Approach! Approach, then, Kundry!
Your Master calls-appear!
(In the bluish light rises the form of Kundry. She is heard to utter a dreadful cry, as if half awakened from a deep sleep.)

KLINGSOR: You Awake? Ha!
To my spell again
You succumb now the time befits.
(The figure of Kundry gives forth a sudden shriek of anguish, sinking to a frightened wail.)
Say, where have you been roving again?
Fie! There with the knights and their crew,
Where as a brute they regarded you?
With me are you not far better?
When once their chieftain you had allured me—
Ha ha!—the spotless knight of the Grail—
What drove you again from my side?

KUNDRY: (rauh und abgebrochen, wie im Versuche, wieder Sprache zu gewinnen.) Ach!—Ach!
Tiefe Nacht—
Wahnsinn!—Oh!—Wuth!—
Oh! Jammer!—
Schlaf—Schlaff—tiefer Schlaf!—Tod!

KLINGSOR: Da weckte dich ein And'rer? He?

KUNDRY: (wie zuvor). Ja!—Mein Fluch!—
Oh!—Sehnen—Sehnen!—

KLINGSOR: Ha ha!—dort nach den keuschen Rittern?

KUNDRY: Da—da—dient' ich.

KLINGSOR: Ja, ja!—den Schaden zu vergüten, den du ihnen böslich gebracht?
Sie helfen dir nicht:
feil sind sie Alle, biet' ich den rechten Preis;
der festeste fällt,
sinkt er dir in die Arme:
und so verfällt er dem Speer, den ihrem Meister selbst ich entwandt.—
Den Gafährlichsten gilt's nun heut' zu besteh'n:
ihn schirmt der Thorheit Schild.

KUNDRY: Ich—will nicht!—Oh!—Oh!

KLINGSOR: Wohl willst du, denn du musst.

KUNDRY: Du—kannst mich—nicht—halten.

KLINGSOR: Aber dich fassen.

KUNDRY: Du?

KLINGSOR: Dein Meister.

KUNDRY: Aus welcher Macht?

KLINGSOR: Ha! Weil einzig an mir deine Macht—nichts vermag.

KUNDRY: (grell lachend). Ha! Ha!—Bist du keusch?

KLINGSOR: (wüthend). Was fräg'st du das, verfluchtes Weib?—
(Er versinkt in finst'res Brüten.)
Furchtbare Noth!—
So lacht nun der Teufel mein', dass ich einst nach dem Heiligen rang!
Furchtbare Noth!
Ungebändigten Sehnens Pein!
Schrecklichster Triebe Höllendrang, den ich zu Todesschweigen mir zwang,— lacht und höhnt er nun laut durch dich, des Teufels Braut?—
Hüte dich!
Hohn und Verachtung büsste schon Einer:
der Stolze, stark in Heiligkeit, der einst mich von sich stiess, sein Stamm verfiel mir, unerlös't
soll der Heiligen Hüter mir schma-

KUNDRY: (hoarsely and in broken accents, as if striving to regain speech.) Ah!—Ah!
Dismal night—
Frenzy—Oh!—Fear!—
Oh anguish!—
Sleep, sleep—
Deepest sleep!—Death!

KLINGSOR: Some other there has waked you? Hey?

KUNDRY: (as before). Yes!—My curse—
Oh! Yearning—yearning!

KLINGSOR: Ha ha!—there with the knights unsullied?

KUNDRY: I—I—served them.

KLINGSOR: Aye, aye!—To make some reparation
For the arrant wrong you have wrought.
They give you no help;
All may be purchased,
When I but bid their price;
The firmest one fails,
When your arms are around him:
And so he falls by the spear,
Which from their chief himself I purloined.—
The most dangerous must today be with-stood Whom sheer Folly shields.

KUNDRY: —will not!—Oh!—Oh!

KLINGSOR: Well will you, for you must.

KUNDRY: You—never—can—hold me.

KLINGSOR: But I can force you.

KUNDRY: You?

KLINGSOR: Your Master.

KUNDRY: And by what power?

KLINGSOR: Ha! Because against me
Your own power—cannot move.

KLUNDRY: (laughing harshly.)
Ha, ha! Are you chaste?

KLINGSOR: (wrathfully). Why ask that, you outcast wretch?
(he sinks into gloomy brooding).
Awfulest strait!—
So laughs now the Fiend below,
That once I sought the holier life!
Awfulest strait!
Irrepressible yearning woe!
Terrible lust in me once rife,
Which I had quenched with devilish strife;—
It mocks and laughs at me,
You devil's bride, through you?—
Take care!
One his contempt and scorn hath repented;
The stern one, strong in holiness,
By whom I once was spurned
His stock I've ruined:
Unredeemed
Shall the Relics' curator soon languish;
And soon—I feel it—

chten;
und bald—so wähn'ich—hüt' ich mir selbst den Gral.——
Ha! Ha!
Gefiel er dir wohl, Amfortas, der Held,
den ich dir zur Wonne gesellt?

KUNDRY: Oh!—Jammer!—Jammer!
Schwach auch Er! Schwach—Alle!
Meinem Fluche mit mir
Alle verfallen!—
Oh, ewiger Schlaf, einziges Heil,
wie,—wie dich gewinnen?

KLINGSOR: Ha! Wer dir trotzte, löste dich frei: versuch's mit dem Knaben, der nah't!

KUNDRY: Ich—will nicht!

KLINGSOR: Jetzt schon erklimmt er die Burg.

KUNDRY: Oh Wehe! Wehe!
Erwachte ich darum?
Muss ich?—Muss?

KLINGSOR: (ist auf die Thurmmauer gestiegen). Ha!—Er ist schön, der Knabe!

KUNDRY: Oh!—Oh!—Wehe
mir!—

KLINGSOR: (stösst nach Aussen in ein Horn). Ho! Ho!—Ihr Wächter! Ritter!
Helden!—Auf!—Feinde nah'!
(Aussen wachsendes Getöse und Waffengeräusch).
Hei!—Wie zur Mauer sie stürmen, die bethörten Eigenholde, zum Schutz ihres schönen Geteufel's!—
So!—Muthig! Muthig!— Haha!—Der fürchtet sich nicht:— dem Helden Ferris entwand er die Waffe;
die Führt er nun freislich wider den Schwarm.— (Kundry beginnt unheimlich zu lachen).
Wie übel den Tölpeln der Eifer gedeih't!
Dem schlug er den Arm,—Jenem den Schenkel.
Haha!—Sie weichen,—sie fliehen: seine Wunde trägt Jeder nach heim!—
Wie das ich euch gönne!—.
Möge denn so das ganze Rittergeschlecht unter sich selber sich würgen!—
Ha! Wie stolz er nun steht auf der Zinne
Wie lachen ihm die Rosen der Wangen, da kindisch erstaunt in den einsamen Garten er blickt!—
He! Kundry!
(Er wendet sich um. Kundry war in ein immer extatischeres Lachen gerathen, welches endlich in ein krampfhaftes Wehgeschrei überging; jetzt ist ihre Gestalt plötzlich verschwunden; das

I shall possess the Grail.—
Ha! ha!
How suited your taste Amfortas the brave, Whom to you in rapture I gave?

KUNDRY: Oh!—Misery—Misery!
Weak even he!
Weak—all men!
By my curse and with me
All of them perish!—
Oh, unending sleep,
Only release,
When—when shall I win you?

KLINGSOR: Ha! He who spurns you sets you free;
So try it with that boy who draws near!

KUNDRY: I—will not!

KLINGSOR: Lo, where he climbs to the tower!

KUNDRY: Oh woe's me! woe's me!
Awakened I for this?
Must I—must?

KLINGSOR: (who has ascended to the wall) Ha!—He is fair, the stripling.

KUNDRY: Oh!—Oh!—Woe is me!—

KLINGSOR: (winding a horn towards the outside). Ho! ho!—
My watchmen! Soldiers!
Heroes!—Up!—Foes are near!
(Increasing clash of weapons heard without.)
Hey!—How they haste to the ramparts,
The deluded garrisoners,
To guard their engaging she-devils!—
So!— Courage, courage!
Ha ha!—He is not afraid:—
From bold Sir Ferris he's wrested his weapons;
And flashes them fiercely now at the swarm.— (Kundry begins to laugh gloomily.) How ill doth his zeal agree with those sots!
That one's lost an arm—that one his ankle.
Ha ha! They waver—they're routed:
With their wounds they are all running home!—
What welcome I'll give them!—
Truly I wish
That all the rabble of knights
So might destroy one another!— Ha! How proudly he stands on the rampart!
His countenance how smiling and rosy,
As childlike, surprised
On the desolate garden he looks!—
Hey! Kundry!
(He turns round. Kundry, who has gone off into more and more ecstatic laughter, which at last culminates in a spasmodic cry of anguish, now suddenly vanishes:

bläuliche Licht ist erloschen: volle Finsterniss in der Tiefe.)
Wie? Schon am Werk?— Haha! Den Zauber kannt' ich wohl, der immer dich wieder zum Dienst mir gesellt.—
Du dort, kindischer Spross!
Was—auch Weissagung dir wies,— zu jung and dumm fiel'st du in meine Gewalt:—
die Reinheit dir entrissen, bleib'st mir du zugewiesen!
(*Er versinkt langsam mit dem ganzen Thurme; zugleich steigt der Zaubergarten auf und erfüllt die Bühne völlig. Tropische Vegetation, üppigste Blumenpracht; nach dem Hintergrunde zu Abgrenzung durch die Zinne der Burgmauer, an welche sich seitwärts Vorsprünge des Schlossbaues selbst (arabischen reichen Styles) mit Terrassen anlehnen.
Auf der Mauer steht Parsifal, staunend in den Garten hinabblickend.—Von allen Seiten her, aus dem Garten wie aus dem Palaste, stürzen, wirr durch einander, einzeln, dann zugleich immer mehre, schöne Madchen herein:
sie sind in flüchtig übergeworfener Kleidung, wie soeben aus dem Schlaf aufgeschreckt.*

MADCHEN: (vom Garten kommend). Hier war das Tosen, Waffen, wilde Rüfe!

MADCHEN: (vom Schlosse heraus). Wehe! Rache! Auf!
Wo ist der Frevler?

EINZELNE: Mein Geliebter verwundet.

ANDERE: Wo ist der Meine?

ANDERE: Ich erwachte allein, wohin entfloh er?

IMMER ANDERE: Drinnen im Saale! - Sie bluten! Wehe!
Wer ist der Feind?—
Da steh't er! Seht!—
Meines Ferris Schwert?—
Ich sah's, er stürmte die Burg.—
Ich hörte des Meisters Horn.
Mein Held lief herzu, sie Alle kamen, doch Jeden empfing er mit blutiger Wehr.
Der Kühne! Der Feindliche!
Alle sie flohen ihm.—
Du dort! Du dort!
Was schuf'st du uns solche Noth?
Verwünscht verwünscht sollst du sein!
(Parsifal springt etwas tiefer in den Garten nerab).

DIE MADCHEN: Ha! Kühner!
Wag'st du zu trotzen?
Was schlug'st du uns're Geliebten?

the bluish light is extinguished; complete darkness reigns in the depths.)
What! Gone to work?
Ha ha! the charm I know full well,
Which ever compels you to do my behest.—
Thou there, babyish sprig!
What—though
Wise redes you have won—
Too young and dull,
Into my power you'll fall:—
When pureness has departed,
You'll be devoted to me.
(*He sinks slowly with the whole tower; at the same time the garden rises and fills the entire stage.
Tropical vegetation; most luxuriant wealth of flowers; at the back it is bounded by the battlements of the castle wall on to which give sideways abutments of the castle itself (florid Arabian style) with terraces.*
(*On the wall stands Parsifal looking down on the garden in astonishment.—From all sides, from the garden and from the palace rush in mazy courses lovely damsels, first singly, then in numbers:
their dress is hastily thrown about them, as if they had been suddenly startled from sleep.*)

DAMSELS: (coming from the garden). Here was the tumult;—
Weapons, wild exclaimings!

DAMSELS: (from the castle). Horror! Vengeance! Up!
Where is the culprit?

SEVERAL: My beloved is wounded!

OTHERS: Where is my lover?

OTHERS: I wakened alone!—
Where has he fled to?

STILL OTHERS: There in the palace?—
They're bleeding! Horror!
Where is the foe?—
There he stands! See—
It is my Ferris' sword.—
I saw it, he took us by storm.—
I heard too the master's horn.
My hero rushed on:
They all assailed him, but each one Encountered a bloody repulse.
What boldness! what virulence!
All of them fled from him.—
You there! You there!
Why shape us for such distress?
Accurst, accurst may you be!
(Parsifal leaps somewhat lower toward the garden.)

DAMSELS: Ha! bold one. Dare you approach us?
Why have you slaughtered our lovers?

PARSIFAL: (in höchster Verwunderung). Ihr schönen Kinder, musst' ich sie nicht schlagen?
Zu euch Holden ja wehrten sie mir den Weg.

MADCHEN: Zu uns wolltest du?
Sah'st du uns schon?

PARSIFAL: Noch nie sah ich solch' zieres Geschlecht, nenn' ich euch schön, dünkt euch das recht?

DIE MADCHEN: (von Verwunderung in Heitrekeit übergehend). So willst du uns wohl nicht schlagen?

PARSIFAL: Das möcht ich nicht.

MADCHEN: Doch Schaden
schuf'st du uns grossen und vielen;
du schlugest uns're Gespielen;
wer spielt nun mit uns?

PARSIFAL: Das thu' ich gern.

DIE MADCHEN: (lachend). Bist du uns hold, so bleib' nicht fern;
und willst du uns nicht schelten, wir werden dir's entgelten:
wir spielen nicht um Gold,
wir spielen um Minne's Sold:
willst du auf Trost uns sinnen, sollst den du uns abgewinnen.
(Einzelne sind in die Lauben getreten, und kommen jetzt, ganz wie in Blumengewändern, selbst Blumen erscheimend, wieder zurück).

DIE GESCHMUCKTEN MADCHEN: (einzeln). Lasset den Knaben!—Er gehöret mir.— Nein!—Nein!—Mir!—Mir!

DIE ANDERN MADCHEN: Ah, die Schlimmen!—Sie schmücken sich heimlich.
(Diese entfernen sich ebenfalls, und kehren alsbald in gleichem Blumenschmucke zurück).

DIE MADCHEN: (während sie, wie in ammuthigem Kinderspiele, in abwechselndem Reigen um Parsifal sich drehen, und sanft ihm Wange und Kinn streicheln).
Komm'! Komm'!
Holder Knabe,
lass mich dir blühen!
Dir zu wonniger Labe gilt mein minniges Mühen.

PARSIFAL: (mit heit'rer Ruhe in der Mitte stehend). Wie duftet ihr hold!
Seid ihr denn Blumen?

DIE MADCHEN: (immer bald einzeln, bald mehre zugleich). Des Gartens Zier und duftende Geister im Lenz pflückt uns der Meister;
wir wachsen hier
in Sommer und Sonne, für dich blühend in Wonne.
Nun sei uns freund und hold,
nicht karge den Blumen den Sold:

PARSIFAL: (in great astonishment.) You lovely maidens, had I not to slay them,
When they endeavored to check approach to your charms?

DAMSELS: You came to us?
You saw us?

PARSIFAL: I've seen nowwhere beings so bright:
If I said fair, would it seem right?

DAMSELS: (changing from surprise to merriment). Then will you not treat us badly?

PARSIFAL: I could not so.

DAMSELS: But sadly
What you have done has annoyed us;
Our playmates you have destroyed us:
Who'll sport with us now?

PARSIFAL: That well will I.

DAMSELS: (laughing). If you are friendly come more near.
Let kindness be accorded,
And you shall be rewarded;
For gold we do not play,
But only for love's sweet pay.
Would you console us rightly
Then win it from us, and lightly.
(Some have gone into the groves and now return in flower dresses, appearing like flowers themselves.)

THE ADORNED DAMSELS: (severally). Touch not the stripling!—
He's for none but me.—
No!—No! Me!—Me!

THE OTHER DAMSELS: Ah, the minxes!—They've slyly adorned them.
(They also withdraw and return similarly dressed.)

THE DAMSELS: (while, as if in merry childish gambols they press round Parsifal in mazy figures and softly stroke his face). Come!
Come!
Handsome stripling, I'll be your flower!
Sweetly dancing and rippling
Bliss unshadowed I'll shower.

PARSIFAL: (standing in their midst in quiet enjoyment). How sweet is your scent!
Are you then flowers?

THE DAMSELS: (still sometimes severally, sometimes together).
The garden's pride
And odor we've given.
In spring time we were riven;
We here abide,
Through sunlight and summer,
To bloom still on each comer,
Oh be but kind and true,
And grudge not the flowers their kannst du uns nicht lieben und minnen, wir welken und sterben dahinnen.

ERSTES MADCHEN: An dienen Busen nimm mich!

ZWEITES: Die Stirn lass' mich dir Kühlen!

DRITTES: Lass mich die Wange dir fühlen!

VIERTES: Den Mund lass' mich dir küssen!

FUNFTES: Nien, mich! Die Schönste bin ich.

SECHSTES: Nein ich! Duft' ich doch süsser.

PARSIFAL: (ihrer anmuthigen Zudringlichkeit sanft wehrend).
Ihr wild holdes Blumengerdränge, soll ich mit euch spielen, entlasst mich der Enge!

MADCHEN: Was zank'st du?

PARSIFAL: Weil ihr streitet.

MADCHEN: Wir streiten um dich.

PARSIFAL: Das meidet!

ERSTES MADCHEN: (zu dem zweiten). Weiche du! Sieh', er will mich.

ZWEITES MADCHEN: Nein, mich!

DRILLES: Mich lieber!

VIERTES: Nein, mich!

ERSTES MADCHEN: (zu Parsifal). Du wehrest mir?

ZWEITES: Scheuchest mich?

ERSTES: Bist du feige vor Frauen?

ZWEITES: Magst nicht dich getrauen?

MEHRE MADCHEN: Wie schlimm bist du, Zager und Kalter!

ANDERE MADCHEN: Die Blumen lässt du umbuhlen den Falter?

ERSTE HALFTE: Weichet dem Thoren!

EIN MADCHEN: Ich geb' ihn verloren.

ANDERE: Uns sei er erkoren!

ANDERE: Nein, uns!—Nein, mir!—
Auch mir!—Hier, hier!—

PARSIFAL: (halb ärgerlich sie von sich abscheuchend, will fliehen).
Lass't ab! Ihr fangt mich nicht!
(Aus einem Blumenhage zur Seite vernimmt man)

KUNDRY'S: (Stimme) Parsifal—Bleibe!
(Die Mädehen erschreckn und halten sogleich ein.—Parsifal steht betroffen still).

PARSIFAL: Parsifal . . . ?
So nannte träumend mich einst die Mutter.—

due;
If you will not fondle and cherish,
We swiftly must wither and perish.

FIRST DAMSEL: Take me to your bosom

SECOND: Your hot brow, let me soothe it!

THIRD: Turn your fair cheek that I smooth it!

FOURTH: Give your mouth to my kisses!

FIFTH: No, here! It is I am the best.

SIXTH: No, I! I am the sweeter.

PARSIFAL: (gently repulsing their eager advances). You wild crowd of beautiful flowers.
If I am to play, you must widen your bowers.

DAMSELS: Why quarrel?

PARSIFAL: It is your riot.

DAMSELS: We quarrel for you.

PARSIFAL: Then quiet.

FIRST DAMSEL: (to the Second). Back with you! See, he wants me.

SECOND DAMSEL: No, me!

THIRD: Me, rather:

FOURTH: No, me!

FIRST DAMSEL: (to Parsifal). You shun me?

SECOND: Fly me?

FIRST: Are you so wary with women?

SECOND: Of your favor chary?

SEVERAL DAMSELS: The cold trembler! see how he cowers!

OTHERS: Would you see the butterfly wooed by the flowers?

FIRST HALF: Fool! we refuse him!

ONE DAMSEL: I'm willing to lose him.

OTHERS: We others will choose him.

OTHERS: No, we!—draw near!—
No, I—here, here!—

PARSIFAL: (half angry, turns away and seeks to fly). No more!
You'll not catch me!
(From a flowery arbor at side is heard)

KUNDRY'S: (voice). Parsifal!— tarry!
(The Damsels are startled and pause—Parsifal stands arrested.)

PARSIFAL: Parsifal . . .?
So once, when dreaming, my mother called me.—

KUNDRY'S: (Stimme). Hier weile, Parsifal!—
Dich grüsset Wonne und Heil zumal.—— Ihr kindischen Buhlen, weich't von ihm:
früh welkende Blumen,
nicht euch ward er zum Spiel bestellt!
Geht heim, pflegt der Wunden:
einsam erharrt euch mancher Held.

DIE MADCHEN: (zaghaft und widerstrebend sich von Parsifal entfernend). Dich zu lassen, dich zu meiden,— O weh'! O weh' der Pein!
Von Allen möchten gern wir scheiden, mit dir allein zu sein.—
Leb' wohl! Leb' wohl!
Du Holder! Du Stolzer!
Du—Thor!
(Mit dem Letzten sind sie, unter leisem Gelächter, nach dem Schlosse zu verschwunden).

PARSIFAL: Dies Alles—hab' ich nun geträumt?
(Er sieht sich schüchtern nach der seite hin um, von welcher die Stimme kam. Dort ist jetzt, durch Enthüllung des Hages, ein jugendliches Weib von höchster Schönheit—Kundry, in durchaus verwandelter Gestalt—auf einem Blumenlager, in leicht verhüllender, phantastischer Kleidung—annähernd arabischen Styles—sichtbar geworden).

PARSIFAL: (noch ferne stehend). Riefest du mich Namenlosen?

KUNDRY: Dich nannt' ich, thör'ger Reiner,
"Fal parsi",—
Dich, reinen Thoren: "Parsifal".
So rief, da in arab'schem Land er verschied, dein Vater Gamuret dem Sohne zu, den er, im Mutterschooss verschlossen, mit diesem Namen sterbend grüsste.
Dir ihn zu künden, harrt' ich deiner hier:
was zog dich her, wenn nicht der Kunde Wunsch?

PARSIFAL: Nie sah' ich, nie träumte mir, was jetzt ich schau', und was mit Bangen mich erfüllt.—
Entblühtest du auch diesem Blumenhaine?

KUNDRY: Nein, Parsifal, du thör'ger Reiner!
Fern—fern—ist meine Heimath:—
dass du mich fändest, weilte ich nur hier.
Von weither kam ich, wo ich viel ersah'.
Ich sah' das Kind an seiner Mutter Brust, sein erstes Lallen lacht mir noch im Ohr;

KUNDRY'S: (voice). Bide Here, Parsifal!—
Where joy and gladness shall fall on you
You frivolous wantons, leave him in peace:
Flowers soon to be faded,
He came not here for your delight!
Go home, tend the wounded:
Lonely awaits you many a knight.

DAMSELS: (tremblingly and resistingly departing from Parsifal). Thus to leave you, thus to sever—Alas! alas, what pain!
From all we'd gladly part for ever,
but to remain with you—Farewell! farewell!
You fair one, you proud one!
You—Fool!
(With the last words they disappear into the castle gently laughing.)

PARSIFAL: Was all this—nothing but a dream?
(He looks timidly to the side from whence Kundry's voice came. There is now visible, the branches being withdrawn, a youthful female of exquisite beauty—Kundry, in entirely altered form—on a flowery couch and in light drapery of fantastic, somewhat Arabian style.

PARSIFAL: (still standing aloof). You Called me, who am nameless?

KUNDRY: I named you, foolish pure one,
"Fal parsi,"
You, guileless Fool, are "Parsifal."
So cried, when in Arabia's land he expired,
Your father Gamuret to his son,
Who then the daylight had not greeted:
It was by this name he, dying, called you.
Here have I tarried this but to disclose:
What drew you here, if not desire to know?

PARSIFAL: I saw never, I pictured never what here
I see, and which impresses me with awe.—
And you bloom too in this flower-garden?

KUNDRY: No, Parsifal, you foolish pure one!
Far—my home is far from here
For you to find me, I but tarried here.
I come from far lands, where I've noted much.
I saw the child upon its mother's breast;
Its infant lisping laughs yet in my ear:
Though filled with sadness,

das Leid im Herzen, wie lachte da auch Herzeleide.
als ihren Schmerzen zujauchzte ihrer Augen Weide!
Gebettet sanft auf weichen Moosen, den hold geschläfert sie mit Kosen,
dem, bang' in Sorgen, den Schlaf bewacht der Mutter Sehnen, ihn weckt' am Morgen der heisse Thau der Mutter-Thränen.
Nur Weinen war sie, Schmerz-Gebahren um deines Vaters Leib' und Tod; vor gleicher Noth dich zu bewahren, galt ihr als höchster Pflicht Gebot:
den Waffen fern, den Männer Kampf und Wüthen, wollte sie still dich bergen und behüten.
Nur Sorgen war sie, ach! und Bangen:
nie sollte Kunde zu dir hergelangen.
Hör'st du nicht noch ihrer Klagen Ruf, wann fern und spät du geweilt?
Hei! Was ihr das Lust und Lachen schuf, wann suchend sie dann dich ereilt!
Wann dann ihr Arm dich wüthend umschlang, ward dir es wohl gar bei'm Küssen bang?—
Ihr Wehe doch du nicht vernahm'st, nicht ihrer Schmerzen Toben, als endlich du nicht wieder kam'st,
und deine Spur verstoben:
sie harrte Nächt' und Tage, bis ihr verstummt die Klage, der Gram ihr zehrte den Schmerz, um stillen Tod sie warb:
ihr brach das Leid das Herz, und—Herzeleide—starb.

PARSIFAL: (immer ernsthafter, endlich furchtbar betroffen, sinkt, schmerzlich überwältigt, bei Kundry's Füssen nieder).
Wehe! Wehe! Was that ich? Wo war ich?
Mutter! Süsse, holde Mutter!
Dein Sohn, dein Sohn musste dich morden
O Thor! Blöder, taumelnder Thor!
Wo irrtest du hin, ihrer vergessend?
Deiner, deiner vergessend, traute, theuerste Mutter?

KUNDRY: (immer noch in liegender Stellung ausgestreckt, beug sich über Parsifal's Haupt, fasst sanft seine Stirne, und schlingt traulich ihren Arm um seinen Nacken). War dir fremd noch der Schmerz, des Trostes Süsse labte nie auch dein Herz:
das Wehe, das dich reu't, die Noth nun büsse, im Trost, den Liebe beut!

How laughed then even Heart's Affliction.
When, shouting gladness,
It gave her sorrows contradiction!
In beds of moss it was softly nested,
She kissed it till in sleep it rested:
With care and sorrow
The timid mother watched it sleeping;
It waked the morrow
Beneath the dew of mother's weeping.
All tears was she, encased in anguish,
Caused by your father's death and love:
That through like hap you should not languish,
Became her care all else above,
Afar from arms, from mortal strife and riot,
She sought to hide away with you in quiet.
All care was she, alas! and fearing:
Never should anything of knowledge reach your hearing.
Do you know still her lamenting voice,
When far and late you owned?
Ah! how she did laughingly rejoice
To welcome you hastening home!
When her wild arm was laid around you,
Were you of kisses so much afraid?—
But you did not behold her pain,
Her features anguish ridden,
When you returned not again,
And every trace was hidden.
For days and nights she waited,
And then her cries abated;
Her pain was dulled of its smart,
And gently ebbed life's tide;
The anguish broke her heart,
And—Heart's Affliction—died.—

PARSIFAL: (always earnestly, finally terribly affected, sinks down at Kundry's feet, painfully overpowered). Woe's me! Woe's me!
What did I?
Where was I?
Mother! Sweetest, dearest mother!
Your son, your son must be thy murderer?
Oh Fool! Thoughtless, shallow-brained Fool!
Where could you have roved, thus to forget her?
Thus, oh thus to forget you,
Faithful, fondest of mothers!

KUNDRY: (still reclining, bends over Parsifal's head, gently touches his forehead and wreathes her arms confidingly round his neck). Had you never been distrest,
Then consolation
Could not have cheered your breast.
Let now your bitter woe
Find mitigation
In joys that love can show!

PARSIFAL: (trübe). Die Mutter, die Mutter konnt' ich vergessen!
Ha! Was Alles vergass ich wohl noch?
Wess' war ich je noch eingedenk?
Nur dumpfe Thorheit lebt in mir!
(Er lässt sich immer tiefer sinken.)

KUNDRY: Bekenntniss
wird Schuld und Reue enden, Erkenntniss
in Sinn die Thorheit wenden:
die Liebe lerne kennen, die Gamuret umschloss.
als Herzeleid's Entbrennen ihn sengend überfloss:
die Leib und Leben
einst dir gegeben, der Tod und Thorheit welchen muss, sie beut'
dir heut'— als Muttersegens letzten Gruss der Liebe—ersten Kuss.
(Sie hat ihr Haupt völlig über das seinige geneigt, und heftet nun ihre Lippen zu einem langen Kasse auf seinen Mund).

PARSIFAL: (fährt plötzlich mit einer Gebärde des höchsten Schreckens auf: seine Haltung drückt eine Veränderung aus: er stemmt seine Hände gewaltsam gegen sein Herz, wir um einen zerreissenden Schmerz an bewältigen; endlich bricht er aus). Amfortas!—
Die Wunde!—Die Wunde!
Sie brennt in meinem Herzen.—
Oh, Klage! Klage!
Furchtbare Klage!
Aus tiefstem Inner'n schreit sie mir auf.
Oh!—Oh!—
Elender!
Jammervollster!—
Die Wunde sah' ich bluten:
nun blutet sie mir selbst—hier—hier!
(Während Kundry in Schrecken und Verwunderung auf ihn hinstarrt, fährt Parsifal in gänzlicher Entrücktheit fort.) Nein, nein! Nicht ist es die Wunde: fliesse ihr Blut in Strömen dahin!
Hier! Hier im Herzen der Brand!
Das Sehnen, das furchtbare Sehnea, das alle Sinne mir fasst und zwingt!
Oh!— Qual der Liebe!— Wie Alles schauert, bebt und zukt in sündigem Verlangen! . . .
(Schauerlich leise.)
Es starrt der Blick dumpf auf das Heils gefäss:
das heilige Blut erglüh't;—
Erlösungswonne, göttlich mild', durchzittert weithin alle Seelen;
nur hier, im Herzen, will die Qual nicht weichen.
Des Heiland's Klage da vernehm' ich die Klage, ach! die Klage um das verrath' ne Heiligthum:
„erlöse, rette mich
aus schuldbefleckten Händen!"

PARSIFAL: (sadly). My mother, my mother! Could I forget her?
Ah! must all be forgotten by me?
What have I ever remembered yet?
But senseless Folly dwells in me!
(He droops still lower).

KUNDRY: Trangression
When owned is quickly ended!
Confession
Hath Folly often mended.
Oh learn the fashion of love
Which Gamuret once knew,
When Heart's Affliction's passion
Had fired his bosom through.
The life your mother Gave you can smother
Even death, and dullness, too, remove.
To you Now she Sends benediction from above
In this first—kiss of Love.
(She has bowed her head quite over his, and now presses her lips on his in a long kiss).

PARSIFAL: (starts up suddenly with a gesture of intense terror: his looks alter fearfully. he presses his hands tightly against his heart, as if to repress an agonizing pain; finally he bursts out). Amfortas!—
The spearwound!—The spearwound!—
I feel it burning in me.
Oh, horror! horror!
direfulest horror!
It shrieks from out the depth of my soul.
Oh!—Oh!—
Misery!—
Lamentation!
I saw your wound a-bleeding:—
It bleeds now in myself—
Here—here!
(While Kundry stares at him in wonder and alarm, he continues madly).
No, no! This is not the spearwound:
Let it gush blood in streams if it list!
Here!—here! My heart is ablaze!
The passion, the terrible passion,
That all my senses seize and sway!
Oh!—Love's delirium!—
How all things tremble, heave and quake
With longings that are sinful!..
(terribly quiet).
My frozen glance stares on the sacred Cup:—
The Holy One's blood glows;—
Redemption's rapture, sweet and mild,
Is trembling far through every spirit;
But in this heart will the pangs not lessen.
The Savior's wailing I distinguished.
The wailing—the wailing
For His polluted sanctuary:—
"Recover, save me from

So—rief die Gottesklage furchtbar laut mir in die Seele.
Und ich? Der Thor, der Feige?
Zu wilden Knabenthaten floh' ich hin!
(Er stürzt verzweiflungsvoll auf die Knie.) Erlöser! Heiland! Herr der Huld!
Wie büss' ich Sünder solche Schuld?

KUNDRY: (deren Erstaunen in leidenschaftliche Bewunderung übergeht, sucht schüchtern sich Parsifal zu nähern). Gelobter Held! Entflieh' dem Wahn!
Blick' auf! Sei hold der Huldin Nah'n!

PARSIFAL: (immer in gebeugter Stellung, starr zu Kundry aufblickend, während diese sich zu neight und die lieb-kosenden Bewegungen ausführt,, die er mit dem Folgenden bezeichmer). Ja!
Diese Stimme! So rief sie ihm;—
und diesen Blick, deutlich erkenn' ich ihn,— auch diesen, der ihm so friedlos lachte.
Die Lippe,—ja—so zuckte sie ihm;—
so neigte sich der Nacken,— so hob sich kühn das Haupt;—
so flatterten lachend die Locken,— so schlang um den Hals sich der Arm—so schmeichelte weich die Wange—!
Mit aller Schmerzen Qual im Bund, das Heil der Seele
entküsste ihm ihr Mund!—
Ha!—dieser Kuss!—
(Eh hat sich mit dem Letzten allmählich erhoben, springt jetzt vollends auf, und stösst Kundry heftig von sich.) Verderberin! Weiche von mir!
Ewig—ewig—von mir!

KUNDRY: (in höchster Leidenschaft). Grausamer!—Ha!— Fühlst du im Herzen, nur Anderer Schmerzen,
so fühle jetzt auch die meinen!
Bist du Erlöser, was bannt dich, Böser,
nicht mir auch zum Heil dich zu einen?
Seit Ewigkeiten— harre ich deiner, des Heiland's ach! so spät, den einst ich kühn verschmäht.—
Oh!—
Kenntest du den Fluch, der mich durch Schlaf und Wachen, durch Tod und Leben, Pein und Lachen, zu neuem Leiden neu gestählt, endlos durch das Dasein quält!—
ich sah—Ihn—Ihn—und—lachte . . .
da traf mich sein Blick.,—

The hands that guilt has sullied!"
Thus—rang the lamentation
Through my soul with fearful loudness:
And I—oh, Fool!—oh, coward! To wild and childish exploits fled here (He throws himself despairingly on his knees).
Redeemer! Savior! Gracious Lord!
What can retrieve my abhorred crime?

KUNDRY: (whose astonishment has changed to sorrowful wonder, tries tremblingly to approach Parsifal). My noble Knight! fling off this spell!
Look up! nor repel Love's delight!

PARSIFAL: (still in a kneeling posture, gazing blankly up at Kundry, while she stoops over him with the embracing movements which he describes in the following).
Ah! Thus it call him! This voice it was;—
And this the glance; surely I know it well,—
The eyeglance which smiled away his quiet.—
These lips, too, — aye—they tempted him thus;—
So bowed this neck above him,—
So high was raised this head;—
So fluttered these locks as though laughing,
So circled this arm round his neck—
So softened each feature in fondness,—
In league with Sorrow's dismal weight,
This mouth took from him
His soul's salvation straight!—Ha! with this kiss—
(With the last words he has gradually risen, and now springs completely up and spurns Kundry from him).
Pernicious one! Get away from me!
Leave me—leave me—forever!

KUNDRY: (in intense grief). Cruel one!—Ha!—
Felt ever your nature
For one fellow creature,
Then feel now my desolation!
Were you the Saver
You would not waver,
But unite with me for salvation!
Through endless ages for you I've waited,
The Savior—ah, so late!
At whom I scoffed in hate.—
Oh!—
Could you know the curse
Which through me, waking, sleeping,
Through death and lifetime,
Joy or weeping,
While ever steeled to bear fresh woes, Endless flows through my being!—
I saw Him—Him—
And—mocked Him! . . .

Nun such' ich ihn von Welt zu Welt ihm wieder zu begegnen:
in höchster Noth—
wähn' ich sein Auge schon nah', den Biick schon auf mir ruh'n:—
da kehrt mir das verfluchte Lachen wieder,— ein Sünder sinkt mir in die Arme!
Da lach' ich—lache—, kann nicht weinen: nur schreien, wüthen, toben, rasen
in stets erneu'ten Wahnsinn's Nacht.
aus der ich büssend kaum erwacht.—
Den ich ersehnt in Todesschmachten, den ich erkannt, den blöd Verlachten, last' mich an seinem Busen weinen,
nur eine Stunde dir vereinen, und, ob mich Gott und Welt vertöss't!
in dir entsündig't sein und erlös't!

PARSIFAL: In Ewigkeit
wärst du verdammt mit mir für eine Stunde Vergessen's meiner Sendung, in deines Arm's Umfangen!— Auch dir bin ich zum Heil gesandt, bleib'st du dem Sehnen abgewandt.
Die Labung, die dein Leiden endet, beut nicht der Quell, aus dem es fliesst:
das Heil wird nimmer dir gespendet,
wenn jener Quell sich dir nich schliesst.
Ein andre ist's,—ein andres, ach!
nach dem ich jammernd schmachten sah die Brüder dort in grausen Nöthen den leib sich quälen und ertödten.
Doch wer erkennt ihn klar und hell,
des einz'gen Heiles wahren Quell?
Oh, Elend! Aller Rettung Flucht!
Oh, Weltenwahns Umnachten:
in höchsten Heiles heisser Sucht nach der Verdammniss Quell zu schmachdannten!

KUNDRY: So war es mein Kuss, der Welt-hellsichtig dich machte?
Mein volles Liebes-Umfangen lässt dich dann Gottheit erlangen:
Die Welt erlöse, ist dies dein Amt:
schuf dich zum Gott die Stunde, für sie lasse mich ewig verdammt,
nie heile mir die Wunde.

PARSIFAL: Erlösung, Frevlerin, biet' ich auch dir.

KUNDRY: Lass' mich dich Göttlichen lieben,
Erlösung gabst du dann mir.

I caught then his glance,—
I seek him now from world to world,
Once more to stand before Him:
In deepest woe—
Sometimes His eye seems near.
His glance resting on me,— Returns then the accursed laughter on me,—
A sinner sinks in my embraces!
Then laughter—laughter—,
I cannot weep;
But only shriek
And rage and wallow
In night and madness never slaked,
From which, repentant, scarce I'd waked.—
You for whom shamed to death I've bided,
You whom I knew and, fool, derided,
Let me upon your breast lie sobbing,
But for one hour together throbbing;
Though forced from God and man to flee,
Be yet redeemed and pardoned by you!

PARSIFAL: Eternally
Should I be damned with you
If for one hour
I forgot my holy mission, Within your arm's embracing!—
To your help also am I sent,
If of your cravings you repent.
The solace, which shall end your sorrow,
Yields not that spring from which it flows:
You can never borrow salvation,
Till that same spring in you shall close.
Far other it is—far other!
For which I saw, with pitying eyes,
That brotherhood distrest and pining,
Their lives tormented and declining.
But who with certain clearness knows
The source whence true salvation flows;
Oh misery! What a course is this!
Oh wild hallucination!
In such a search for sacred bliss
Thus to desire the soul's damnation!

KUNDRY: And was it my kiss
This great knowledge conveyed you?
If in my arms I might take you,
It would then surely make you a god!
Redeem the world then, if it is your aim:—
Stand as a god revealed;
For this hour let me perish in flame,
Leave the wound unhealed.

PARSIFAL: Redemption, sinner, I offer even you—

KUNDRY: Let me, divine one, but love you;
Redemption then should I see.

PARSIFAL: Lieb' und Erlösung soll dir lohnen,— zeigest du zu Amfortas mir den Weg.

KUNDRY: (in Wuth ausbrechend). Nie—sollst du ihn finden!
Den Verfall'nen, lass' ihn verderben,— den Un-seligen, Schmach—lüsternen,
den ich verlachte—lachte—lachte!
Haha! Ihn traf ja der eig'ne Speer?

PARSIFAL: Wer durft' ihn verwunden mit heil'get Wehr?

KUNDRY: Er—Er—,
der einst mein Lachen bestraft:
sein Fluch—ha!—mir giebt er Kraft;
gegen dich selbst ruf' ich die Wehr, gieb'st du dem Sünder des Mitleid's Ehr'!—
Ha! Wahnsinn!—
Mitleid! Mitleid mit mir!
Nur eine Stunde mein,— nur eine Stunde dein—:
und des Weges—
sollst du geleitet sein!
(Sie will ihn umarmen. Er stösst sie heftig von sich.)

PARSIFAL: Vergeh', unseliges Weib!

KUNDRY: (zerschlägt sich die Brust, und ruft in wildem Rasen). Hilfe! Hilfe! Herbei!
Haltet den Frechen! Herbei!
Wehr't ihm die Wege!
Wehr't ihm die Pfade!—
Und flěh'st du von hier, und fändest all Wege der Welt,
den Weg, den du such'st, dess' Pfade sollst du nicht finden!
Denn Pfad und Wege, die mir dich entführen,
so—verwünsch' ich sie dir:
Irre! Irre,— mir so vertraut—
dich weih' ich ihm zum Geleit'!
(Klingsor ist auf der Burgmauer heraus getreten; die Madchen stürzen ebenfalls aus dem Schlosse und wollen auf Kundry zueilen.)

KLINGSOR: (eine Lauze schwigend). Halt da! dich bann' ich mit der rechten Wehr:
den Thoren stell' mir seines Meisters Speer!
(Er schleudert auf Parsifal den Speer, welcher über dessen Haupte schweben bleibt; Parsifal erfasst ihn mit der hand und schwingt ihn, mit einer Gebärde höchster Entzückung, die Gestalt des Kreuzes bezeichnend.)

PARSIFAL: Mit diesem Zeichen bann' ich deinen Zauber:
wie die Wunde er schliesse,
die mit ihm du schlugest, in Trauer und Trümmer stürze die trügende Pracht!
(Wie durch ein Erdbeben versinkt

PARSIFAL: Love and Redemption you shall not lack,—
If you will show the way to Amfortas.

KUNDRY: (breaking into a rage).
You—never shall find it!
Let the doomed one perish forever.—
The shame seeker,
Joy-destitute,
Whom I have laughed at—laughed at—laughed at!
Ha ha! He fell by his own good spear?

PARSIFAL: Who dared raise against him the holy gear?

KUNDRY: He—he—,
Who puts my laughter to flight:
His curse—ha!—lends me might:
For you the Spear waits
If you pity the sinner's fate!
Ha! madness!
Pity! pity me, pray!
One single hour with me—
One single hour with you
Then you shall straightway see the wished-for path.
(She seeks to embrace him; he thrusts her from him).

PARSIFAL: Begone, detestable wretch!

KUNDRY: (beats her breast and shrieks in wild frenzy). Oh help!
Seize on the caitiff! Oh help!
Ward all the ways there!
Ward every passage!—
For, you fled from here, and found
All the ways of the world,
The one that you seek
That pathway never shall you pass through!
All paths and courses,
Which from me would part,
Here—I curse them to you:
Wander—wander,—
You whom I trust—
You will I give as his guide!
(Kingsor has appeared upon the castle wall; the Damsels also rush out of the castle and seek to hasten toward Kundry).

KLINGSOR: (poising a lance).
Halt there! I'll ban you with befitting gear:
The Fool shall perish by his Master's spear!
(He flings the spear at Parsifal; it remains floating over his head: Parsifal grasps it with his hand and brandishes it with a gesture of exalted rapture, making the sign of the Cross with it.)

PARSIFAL: This sign I make, and ban your cursed magic:
As the wound shall be closed,
Which you with this once cloved,—your unreal display falls to wrack and to ruin!
(As with an earthquake the castle

das Schloss; der Garden verdorrt zur Einöde; die Madchen liegen als verwelkte Blumen am Boden umher gestreut.-Kundry ist schreiend zusammen gesunken. Zu ihr wendet sich noch einmal, von der Höhe einer Mauertrümmer herab, der enteilende.

PARSIFAL: Du weisst—wo du mich wieder finden kannst!
(Er verschwindet. Der Vorhang schliesst sich schnell.)

DRITTER AUGZUG.

Im Gebiete des Grales.

Freie, anmuthige Frühlingsgegend mit nach dem Hintergrunde zu sanft ansteigender Blumenaue. Den Vordergrund nimmt der Saum des Waldes ein, der sich nach rechts zu ausdehnt. Im Vordergrunde, an der Waldseite, ein Quell; ihm gegenüber, etwas tiefer, eine schlichte Einsiedlerhütte, an einen Felsen gelehnt. Frühester Morgen.—

Gurnemanz, zum hohen Greise gealtert, als Einsiedler. nur in das Hemd des Gralsritters dürftig gekleidet, tritt aus der Hütte und lauscht.

GURNEMANZ: Von dorther kam das Stöhnen.—
So jammervoll klagt kein Wild, und gewiss gar nicht am heiligsten Morgen heut'.—
Mich dünkt, ich kenne diesen Klageruf?
(Ein dumpfes Stöhnen, wie von einer im tiefen Schlafe durch Träume Geängstigten, wird vernommen.—Gurnemanz schreitet entschlossen einer Dornenhecke auf der Seite zu: diese ist gänzlich überwachsen: er reisst mit Gewalt das Gestrüpp auseinander: dann hält er plötzlich an.) Ha! Sie—wieder da?
Das winterlich rauhe Gedörn' hielt sie verdeckt: wie lang' schon?—
Auf!—Kundry!—Auf!
Der Winter floh, und Lenz ist da!
Erwach', erwache dem Lenz!—
kalt—und starr!—
Diesmal hielt' ich sie wohl für todt;—
doch war's ihr Stöhnen. vas ich vernahm?
(Er zieht Kundry, ganz erstarrt und leblos, aus dem Gebüsche hervor, trägt sie auf einen nahen Rasenhügel, reibt ihr stark die Hände und Schläfe, haucht sie an, und bemüht sich in Allem, um die Erstarrung weichen zu machen. Endlich erwacht sie. Sie ist, gänzlich wie im ersten Aufzuge, im wilden Gewande der Gralsbotin; nur ist ihre Gesichtsfarbe bleicher, aus Miene und Haltung ist die Wildheit gewichen.— Sie starrt lange Gurnemanz an. Dann erhebt sich, ordnet sich Kleidung und Haar, und geht sofort wie eine Magd an die Bedienung.)

GURNEMANZ: Du tolles Weib!
Hast du kein Wort für mich?
Ist dies der Dank, dass dem Todesschlafe noch einmal ich dich entweckt?

KUNDRY: (neigt langsam das Haupt; dann bringt sie, rauh und abgebrochen, hervor): Dienen.. dienen!—

GURNEMANZ: (schüttelt den Kopf). Das wird dich wenig müh'n!
Auf Botschaft sendet sich's nicht mehr: Kräuter und Wurzeln findet ein Jeder sich selbst, wir lernen's im Walde vom Thier.
(Kundry ha sich während dem umgesehen, gewahrt die Hütte, und geht hinein.)

GURNEMANZ: (verwundert ihr nachblickend). Wie anders schreitet sie als sonst!
Wirkte das der heilige Tag?
Oh! Tag der Gnade ohne Gleichen!
Gewiss zu ihrem Heile durft' ich der Armèn heut' den Todesschlaf verscheuchen.
(Kundry kommt wieder aus der Hütte; sie trägt einen Wasserkrug und geht damit zum Quelle. Während sie auf die Füllung wartet, blickt sie in den Wald, und bemerkt dort in der Ferne einen Kommenden; sie wen. det sich zu Gurnemanz, um ihn darauf hinzudeuten.)

GURNEMANZ: (in den wald spähend). Wer nahet dort dem heiligen Quell?
Im düst'ren Waffenschmucke, das ist der Brüder keiner.
(Kundry entfernt sich mit dem gefüllten Kruge langsam nach der Hütte, in welcher sie sich zu schaffen macht.—Gurnemanz tritt staunend etwas bei Seite, um den Ankommenden zu beobachten.—Parsifal tritt aus dem Walde auf. Er ist ganz in schwarzer Waffenrüstung: mit geschlossenem Helme und gesenktein Speer, schreitet er, gebeugten Hauptes, träumerisch zögernd, langsam daher, und setzt sich auf dem kleinen Rasenhügel am Quelle nieder.)

GURNEMANZ: (betrachtet ihn lange, und tritt dann etwas näher). Heil dir, mein Gast!
Bist du verirrt, und soll ich dich weisen?
(Parsifal schüttelt sanft das Haupt.) falls to ruins: the garden withers up to a desert: the Damsels lie like shriveled flowers strewn around on the ground.—Kundry has sunk down with a cry. To her turns once more from the summit of the ruined wall the departing)

PARSIFAL: You know—
Where only we shall meet again!
(He disappears. The curtain closes quickly).

ACT III.

In the Grail's domain.

Open, pleasant spring landscape, with flowery meadows rising towards the back. At the front is the border of a wood, which extends away R. A spring, in the foreground, by the wood; opposite, higher up, a narrow hermitage, built against a rock. Daybreak.—

Gurnemanz, now extremely aged, meanly dressed as a hermit, but with the tunic of a Knight of the Grail, emerges from the hut and listens.

GURNEMANZ: From where the groaning comes!
No animal grieves like that; And on this, besides,—the holiest day we have.—
I think I recognize those rueful tones.
(A low moaning is heard as a sleeper terrified by dreams.—Gurnemanz strides resolutely to a thicket at one side which has overgrown itself; he forcible tears the brambles asunder, then pauses suddenly).
Ha! She—here again?
The hedge overgrown with its thorns
Has been her grave for how long?—
Up—Kundry!—Up!
The winter's fled, and Spring is here!
Awake, awake to the Spring!—
Cold—and stiff!—
This time truly I deem she's dead:—
Yet was it her groaning I heard just now?
(He drags Kundry, quite rigid and lifeless, out of the bushes, bears her to a grassy mound near, chafes her hands and temples, breathes on them and does his utmost to relax her stiffness. At last she revives, She is, just as in the first Act, dressed in the wild garb of a servant of the Grail; only her complexion is paler, and the wildness has faded from her mien and bearing.—She stares awhile at Gurnemanz. Then she rises, settles her hair and dress, and goes immediately like a serving maid to her work.)

GURNEMANZ: Crazy wench!
Do you not have a word for me?
Are these your thanks,
When from deathly slumber
I have waked you yet again?

KUNDRY: (bows her head slowly; then in hoarse and broken accents murmurs). Service . . . service!—

GURNEMANZ: (shaking his head). Now will your work be light!
We send no errands out since long:
Simples and herbs
Every one must find for himself:
It is learned in the woods from the beasts.
(Kundry has meanwhile looked about her, and now perceives the hut, and goes within.)

GURNEMANZ: (looking after her in surprise). How unlike her step of yore!
In this Holy morning the cause!
Oh, day of mercy unimagined!
No doubt for her salvation
Heaven through me revived
This wretch from deathly slumber.
(Kundry comes from the hut again; she bears a water pot, which she takes to the spring. While she waits for it to fill, she looks into the wood, and perceives some one approaching in the distance; she turns to Gurnemanz to point him out.)

GURNEMANZ: (peering into the woods). Who comes toward the sanctified stream?
In gloomy war apparel he is not one of our brethren. (Kundry withdraws, with the filled pitcher, to the hut, where she busies herself.— Gurnemanz steps aside in surprise, to observe the newcomer.— Parsifal enters from the wood. He is in complete black armor; with closed helmet and lowered spear he walks slowly forward, his head drooping, dreamily vacillating—he seats himself on the little knoll by the spring.)

GURNEMANZ: (observes him a long while and then approaches somewhat). Greetings, my friend!
Are you astray, and shall I direct you?
(Parsifal shakes his head softly.)

GURNEMANZ: Entbietest du mir keinen Gruss?
(Parsifal neigt das Haupt.)

GURNEMANZ: Hei!—Was?— Wenn dein Gelübde dich bindet mir zu schweigen, so mahnt das meine mich,
dass ich dir sage, was sich ziemt.—
Hier bist du an geweihtem Ort:
da zieht man nicht mit Waffen her, geschloss'nen Helmes, Schild und Speer.
Und heute gar! Weisst du denn nicht, welch' heil'ger Tag heut' ist?
(Parsifal schüttelt mit dem Kopfe.)
Ja! Woher komm'st du denn?
Bei welchen Heiden weiltest du,
zu wissen nicht, dass heute, der allerheiligste Char-Freitag sei?
(Parsifal senkt das Haupt noch tiefer.) Schnell ab die Waffen!
Kränke nicht den Herrn, der heute, bar jeder Wehr, sein heilig Blut der sündigen Welt zur Sühne bot!
(Parsifal erhebt sich, nach einem abermaligen Schweigen, stösst den Speer vor sich in den Boden, legt Schild und Schwert davor nieder, öffnet den Helm, mimmt ihn vom Haupte und legt ihn zu den anderen Waffen, worauf er dann zu stummem Gebete vor dem Speer niederkniet. Gurnemanz betrachtet ihn mit Erstaunen und Rührung. Er winkt Kundry herbei, welche soeben aus der Hütte getreten ist.—Parsifal erhebt jetzt in brünstigem Gebete seinen Blick andachtvoll zu der Lanzenspitze auf.)

GURNEMANZ: (leise zu Kundry.)
Erkenn'st du ihn? ..
Der ist's, der einst den Schwan erlegt.
(Kundry bestätigt mit einem leisen Kopfnicken).
Gewiss 's ist Er!
Der Thor, den ich zürnend von uns wies?
Ha! Welche Pfade fand er?
Der Speer,—ich kenne ihn.
(In grosser Ergriffenheit)
Oh!— Heiligster Tag, zu dem ich heut' erwachen sollt'!—
(Kundry hat ihr Gesicht abgewendet.)

PARSIFAL: (erhebt sich langsam vom Gebete, blicktruhig um sich, erkennt Gurnemanz, und reicht diesem sanft die Hand zum Gruss). Heil mir, dass ich dich wieder finde!

GURNEMANZ: And have you no greeting for me?
(Parsifal bows his head.)

GURNEMANZ: Hey—what?—
If by your vow
You are bound to perfect silence,
So mine reminds me
Straight to inform you what is due.—
Here you are in a holy place;
No man with weapons comes here,
With shut up helmet, shield and spear.
This day, besides! Do you not know What holy day has dawned?
(Parsifal shakes his head.)
No? From where have you come, then?
What heathen darkness have you left
To hear not that today is
The ever hallowed Good-Friday morn?
(Parsifal droops his head still lower.)
Quick, doff your weapons!
Trouble not this morn the Master,
Who once did free all men from hell,
When bare of defense He bled for us.
(Parsifal rises after a further silence, thrusts the spear into the ground before him, lays down his sword and shield before it, opens his helmet and, taking it from his head, lays it with the other arms, and then kneels down in silent prayer before the spear. Gurnemanz observes him with surprise and emotion. He beckons Kundry, who has now come out of the hut.—Parsifal raises his eyes, in ardent prayer, towards the spear's head.)

GURNEMANZ: (softly to Kundry). Do you know who it is?..
He who, long since, laid low the swan.
(Kundry confirms him by a slight nod.)
For sure it is he!
The Fool whom I dismissed in anger?
Ha! by what pathway came he?
That Spear—I recognize!
(in great emotion).
Oh!—holiest day,
To which my happy soul awakes!—
(Kundry has turned away her face.)

PARSIFAL:
(rises slowly from his prayer, gazes calmly around, recognizes Gurnemantz, and stretches out his hand to him in greeting).
Thank Heaven that I again have found you!

GURNEMANZ: So kenn'st auch du mich noch?
Erkenn'st mich wieder, den Gram und Noth so tief gebeugt?
Wie kam't du heut'? Woher?

PARSIFAL: der Irrniss und der Leiden Pfade kam ich;
soll ich mich denen jetzt entwunden wähnen, da dieses Waldes Rauschen wieder ich vernehme, dich guten Alten neu begrüsse?
Oder—irr' ich weider?
Verwandelt dünkt mich Alles.

GURNEMANZ: So sag', zu wemden Weg du suchtest?

PARSIFAL: Zu ihm, dess' tiefe Klagen ich thörig staunend einst vernahm, dem nun ich Heil zu bringen mich auserlesen wähnen darf.
Doch—ach!—
den Weg des Heiles nie zu finden, in pfadlosen Irren jagt' ein wilder Fluch mich umher:
zahllose Nöthen, Kämpfe und Streite
zwangen mich ab vom Pfade, wähnt' ich ihn recht schon erkannt.
Da musste Verzweiflung mich fassen, das Heilthum heil mir zu bergen, um das zu hüten, das zu wahren ich Wunden jeder Wehr' mir gewann.
Denn nicht ihn selber durft' ich führen im Streite;
unentweih't
führt' ich ihn mir zur Seite, den ich nun heim geleite, der dort dir schimmert heil und hehr,— des Grales heil'gen Speer.

GURNEMANZ: O Gnade! Höchtes Heil!
O Wunder! Heilig hehrstes Wunder!— (Nachdem er sich etwas gefasst.)
O Herr! War es ein Fluch, der dich vom rechten Pfad vertrieb,
so glaub', er ist gewichen.
Hier bist du; dies des Gral's Gebiet, dein' harret seine Ritterschaft.
Ach, sie bedarf des Heiles, des Heiles, das du bring'st!—
Seit jenem Tage, den du hier geweilt, die Trauer, so da kund dir ward, das Bangen—wuchs zur höchsten Noth Amfortas, gegen seiner Wunde, seiner Seele Qual sich wehrend, begehrt' in wildem Trotze nun den Tod;
kein Fleh'n, kein Elend seiner Ritter bewog ihn mehr des heil'gen Amt's zu walten.
Im Schrein verschlossen bleibt seit lang' der Gral:
so hofft sein sündenreu'ger Hüter, da er nicht sterben kann,
wann je er ihn erschau't,

GURNEMANZ: And do you know me too?
Do you recognize me,
So lowly bent by grief and care?
How have you come here? From where?

PARSIFAL: Through error and through suffering lay my pathway;
May I believe that I have freed me from it,
Now that this forest's murmur
Falls upon my senses,
And worthy voice of age welcomes?
Or yet—is it new error?
All's altered here, it seems.

GURNEMANZ: But say, where points the path you seek?

PARSIFAL: To him, whose dire complainings
Once came to me, an awestruck Fool,
And for whose healing surely
I must believe myself ordained.
But ah!—
The wished for path denied me,
I wandered at random,
Driven ever on by a curse:
Countless distresses,
Battles and conflicts
Drove me far from the pathway;
Well though I knew it, I thought.
Then hopeless despair overtook me
To hold the holy Thing safely.
In its behalf, in its safe warding
I won from every weapon a wound;
For it was forbidden I bore it
That in battle:
Undefiled
Ever at my side I wore it,
And now I home resore it.
It is this that gleaming hails you here,—
The Grail's most holy spear.

GURNEMANZ: Oh Glory, Bounteous bliss!
Oh marvel! Beauteous, boundless marvel!
(After he has somewhat collected himself.)
Great knight! If it were a curse
Which drove you from your proper path,
Be sure it has departed.
Here you are, in Grail's domain;
Here waits for you the knightly band.
Ah! how they need the blessing,
The blessing that you bring!
Since that first day in which you came here,
The mourning which you heard then—
The anguish—sorely has increased.
Amfortas, struggling with his torture,
With the wound that tore his spirit,
Desired with reckless daring then his death:
No prayers, no sorrow of his comrades
Could move him to fulfill his holy office.

sein Ende zu erzwingen, und mit dem Leben seine Qual zu enden.
Die heil’ge Speisung bleibt uns nun versagt, gemeine Atzung muss uns nähren;
darob versiechte unsrer Helden Kraft:
nie kommt uns Botschaft mehr, noch Ruf zu heil’gen Kämpfen aus der Ferne;
bleich und elend wankt umher die Muth- und Führer-lose Ritterschaft, Hier in der Waldek’ barg ich einsam mich,
des Todes still gewärtig, dem schon mein alter Waffenherr verfiel, denn Titurel, mein heil’ger Held,
den nun des Grales Anblick nicht mehr labte, er starb,—ein Mensch wie Alle!

PARSIFAL: (vor grossem Schmerz zich aufbäumend). Und ich—ich bin’s der all’ dies Elend schuf!
Ha! Welcher Sünden, welcher Frevel Schuld muss dieses Thoren-Haupt seit Ewigkeit belasten, da keine Busse, keine Sühne der Blindheit mich entwindet mir, selbst zur Rettung auserkoren, in Irrniss wild verloren der Rettung letzter Pfad verschwindet!
(Er droht ohnmächtig umzusinken. Gurnemanz hält ihn aufrecht, und senkt ihn zum Sitze auf den Rasenhügel nieder.—Kundry hat ein Becken mit Wasser herbeigeholt, um Parsifal zu besprengen.)

GURNEMANZ: (Kundry abweizend).
Nicht so!—
Die heil’ge Quelle selbst erquicke uns’res Pilgers Bad.
Mir ahnt, ein hohes Werk hat er noch heut’ zu wirken, zu walten eines heil’gen Amtes:
so sei er fleckenrein,
und langer Irrfahrt Staub soll jetzt von ihm gewaschen sein.
(Parsifal wird von den Beiden sanft zum Rande des Quelles gewendet. Während Kundry ihm die Beinschrenen lös’t und dann die Füsse badet, Gurnemanz ihm aber den Brustharnisch entnimmt, frägt.)

PARSIFAL: (sanft und matt).
Werd’ heut’ ich zu Amfortas noch geleitet?

GURNEMANZ: (während der Beschäftigung). Gewisslich, uns’rer harrt die hehre Burg:
die Todtenfeier meines lieben Herrn,

In shrouded shrine the Grail has long remained;
Its sin-repentant warder wishing,
Since he could perish not,
While he beheld its light,
To speed his dissolution,
And with his life to end his bitter sorrows.
The Holy Meal is now denied us,
And common viands must content us;
Thereby has withered all our heroes’ strength:
Messages never come now,
Nor call to holy warfare from far countries;
Pale, dejected, strays around
The crushed and leader-lacking band of knights.
Here on the lone woodside I hid myself,
For death with calmness waiting,
To which my old commander has succumbed;
For Titurel, my cherished chief,
When he no more beheld the Grail’s refulgence, Expired,—a man like others!

PARSIFAL:
(flinging up his arms in intense grief). And I—it is I, who has wrought
All this woe!
Ha! what a grievous,
What a heinous guilt
Must then my foolish head
For ever be oppressed with
If no atonement, expiation,
My blindness ever can banish!
I, who was selected to save men,
Must wander undirected;
All paths of safety vanish from me!
(He is on the point of falling, helplessly. Gurnemanz supports him, and allows him to sink down on the grassy knoll.— Kundry has brought a basin of water to sprinkle Parsifal with.)

GURNEMANZ: (waving her off).
Not so!
The holy font itself
Befits more our pilgrim’s bath.
I believe a mighty feat
Must be this morning finish, Fulfil a sacred, mystic duty:
He should be pure as day;
So let his travel stains
Be now completely washed away.
(They both turn Parsifal gently to the edge of the spring. Whilst Kundry removes the greaves from his legs, and then bathes his feet, Gurnemanz meanwhile removing his corslet,—)

PARSIFAL: (asks gently and wearily). Shall I straight be guided to Amfortas?

GURNEMANZ: (busying himself).
Most surely; there the Court our coming waits.
The obsequies of my belovéd chief,
Have even summoned me.

sie ruft mich selbst dahin.
Den Gral noch einmal uns da zu enthüllen, des lang’ versäumten Amtes noch einmal heut’ zu walten—zur Heiligung des hehren Vaters, der seines Sohnes Schuld erlag, die Der nun also büssen will,— gelobt’ Amfortas uns.

PARSIFAL: (mit Verwunderung Kundry zusehend). Du wuschest mir die Füsse :—
nun netze mir das Haupt der Freund.

GURNEMANZ: (mit der Hand aus dem Quell schöpfend und Parsifal Haupt besprengend). Gesegnet sei, du Reiner, durch das Reine
So weiche jeder Schuld Bekümmerniss von dir!
(Während dem hat Kundry ein goldenes Fläschchen, aus dem Busen gezogen, und von seinem Inhalte auf Parsifal’s Füsse ausgegossen, jetzt trocknet sie diese mit schnell aufgelösten Haaren).

PARSIFAL: (nimmt ihr das Fläschchen ab). Salbtest du mir auch die Füsse, das Haupt nun salbe Titurel’s Genoss’, dass heute noch als König er mich grüsse.

GURNEMANZ: (das Fläschchen vollends auf Parsifal Haupt aus, reibt dieses sanft, und faltet dann die Hände darüber). So ward es uns verhiessen, so segne ich dein Haupt, als König dich zu grüssen.
Du—Reiner,— mitleidvoll Duldender, heilthatvoll Wissender!
Wie des Erlös’ten Leiden du gelitten, die letzte Last entnimm nun seinem Haupt.

PARSIFAL: (schöpft unvermerkt Wasser aus der Quelle, neigt sich zu der vor ihm noch knienden Kundry, und netzt ihr das Haupt), Mein erstes Amt verricht’ ich so:— die Taufe nimm, und glaub’ an den Erlöser!
(Kundry senkt das Haupt tief zur Erde und scheint heftig zu weinen.)

PARSIFAL: (wendet sich um, und blickt mit sanfter Entzückung auf Wald und Wiese). Wie dünkt mich doch die Aue heut’ so schön!—
Wohl traf ich Wunderblumen an, die bis zum Haupte süchtig mich umrankten;
doch sah’ ich nie so mild und zart die Halmen, Blüthen und Blumen, noch duftete All’ so kindisch hold

The Grail will once more be uncovered to us,
The long neglected office
Once more performed before us—
To sanctify the sovereign father
Who through his son’s great sin has died,
Which he now fain would expiate.—
It is thus Amfortas wills.

PARSIFAL: (observing Kundry with wonder). You’ve washed my feet so humbly;—
This friend besprinkles now my head.

GURNEMANZ: (taking water from the spring in the hollow of his hand, and sprinkling Parsifal’s head). Now be blessed, pure one, through pure water!
So may all care and sin be driven far from you
(Meanwhile Kundry has taken a golden flask from her bosom and poured some of the contents upon Parsifal’s feet, which she now dries on her hair, quickly unbound for the purpose.)

PARSIFAL: (taking the flask from her).
Now that you anointed my feet,
My head the friend of Titurel must lave;
For I today shall be appointed as king.

GURNEMANZ: (empties the flask completely over Parsifal’s head, rubs it gently, and folds his hands over it). Aye, thus it was foretold me,
My blessing on your head:
Our king indeed behold we.
You—pure one—
Allpitying sufferer, Allknowing rescuer!
You who the sinner’s sorrows have suffered,
Assist his soul to cast one burden more.

PARSIFAL: (scoops up some water from the spring unperceived, bends down to the kneeling Kundry and sprinkles her head). I first fulfil my duty this way
Be baptized,
And trust in the Redeemer!
(Kundry bows her head to the earth and appears to weep bitterly.)

PARSIFAL: (Turns round and gazes with gentle rapture on the woods and meadows).
How fair the fields and meadows seem to-day!—
Many a magic flower I’ve seen, which sought to clasp me in its baneful twinings;
But none I’ve seen so sweet as here,
These tendrils bursting with blosund sprach so lieblich traut zu mir?

GURNEMANZ: Das ist Char-Freitags-Zauber, Herr!

PARSIFAL: O weh', des höchsten Schmerzentag's!
Da sollte, wähn' ich, was da blüh't was athmet, lebt und wieder lebt, nur trauern, ach! und wienen?

GURNEMANZ: Du sieh'st, das ist nicht so.
Des Sünders Reuethränen sind es, die heut' mir heil'gem Thau beträufet Flur and Au':
der liess sie so gedeihen.
Nun freu't sich alle Kreatur, auf des Erlösers holder Spur will ihr Gebet ihm weihen.
Ihn selbst am Kreuze kann sie nicht erschauen:
da blickt sie zum erlös'ten Menschen auf;
der fühlt sich frei von Sünden-Angst und Grauen, durch Gottes Leibesopfer rein und heil:
das merkt nun Halm und Blume auf den Auen, dass heut' des Menschen Fuss sie nicht zertritt, doch wohl, wie Gott mit himmlischer Geduld sich sein' erbarmt und für ihn litt, der Mensch auch heut' in frommer Huld sie schont mit sanftem Schritt.
Das dankt dann alle Kreatur, was all' da blüht und bald erstirbt, da die entsündigte Natur heut' ihren Unschulds-Tag erwirbt.
(Kundry hat langsam wieder das Haupt erhoben, und blickt, feuchten Auges, ernst und ruhig bittend zu Parsifal auf.)

PARSIFAL: Ich sah' sie welken, die mir lachten:
ob heut' sie nach Erlösung schmachten?—
Auch deine Thräne wird zum Segensthaue:
du weinest—sieh! es lacht die Aue.
(Er küsst sie sanft auf die Stirne.)
(Fernes Glockengeläute, sehr allmählich anschwellend.)

GURNEMANZ: Mittag.—
Die Stund' ist da:—
gestatte, Herr, dass dich dein Knecht geleite!— (Gurnemanz hat Waffenrock und Mantel des Grals-ritters herbeigeholt; er und Kundry bekleiden Parsifal damit. Die Gegend verwandelt sich sehr allmählich, ähnlicher Weise wie im ersten Aufzuge, nur von rechts nach links. Parsifal fergreift feierlich den Speer und folgt mit Kundry langsam dem geleitenden Gurnemanz.—Nachdem der Wald som,

Whose scent recalls my childhood's days
And speaks of loving trust to me.

GURNEMANZ: That is Good-Friday's spell, my lord!

PARSIFAL: Alas, that day of agony!
Now surely everything that thrives,
That breathes and lives and lives again
Should only mourn and sorrow?

GURNEMANZ: You see, that is not so.
The sad repentant tears of sinners
Have here with holy rain
Besprinkled field and plain,
And made them glow with beauty.
All earthly creatures in delight
At the Redeemer's trace so bright Uplift their prayers of duty.
To see Him on the Cross they have no power:
And so they smile upon redeeméd man,
Who, feeling freed, with dread no more does cower,
Through God's love-sacrifice made clean and pure:
And now perceives each blade and meadow flower
That mortal foot today it need not dread;
For, as the Lord in pity man did spare,
And in His mercy for him bled,
All men will keep, with pious care,
Today a tender tread
Then thanks the whole creation makes,
With all that flowers and fast goes away,
That trespass-pardoned Nature wakes
Now to her day of Innocence.
(Kundry has slowly raised her head again, and gazes with moist eyes, earnestly and calmly beseeching, up at Parsifal.)

PARSIFAL: I saw my scornful mockers wither:
Now look they for forgiveness hither?—
Like blessed sweet dew a tear from you too flows?
You weep—see! the landscape glows.
(He kisses her softly on the brow.)
(Distant bells are heard pealing, very gradually swelling.)

GURNEMANZ: Mid-day.—
The hour has come:—
Permit, my lord to teach your servant here!
(Gurnemanz has brought out a coat of mail and mantle of the knights of the Grail, which he and Kundry put on Parsifal. The landscape changes very gradually, as in (the 1st Act, but from R. to L. Parsifal solemnly grasps the Spear and, with Kundry, follows the conducting Gurnemanz.—When the wood has disappeared, and gänzlich verschwunden ist, und Felsenthore sich aufgethan haben, in welchen die Drei unsichtbar geworden sind, gewahrt man, bei fortdauerend anwachsendem Geläute, in gewölbten Gängen Züge von Rittern in Trauergewändern. —Endlich stellt sich der ganze grosse Saal, wie im ersten Aufzuge (nur ohne die Speisetafeln) wieder dar. Düstere Beleuchtung. Die Thüren öffnen sich wieder. Von einer Seite ziehen die Ritter, Titurel's Leiche im Sarge geleitend, herein. Auf der andern Seite wird Amfortas im Siechbette, vor ihm der verhüllte Schrein mit dem ,,Grale'', getragen. In der Mitte ist der Katafalk errichtet, dahinter der Hochsitz mit dem Baldachin, auf welchen Amfortas wieder niedergelassen wird.)

(Gesang der Ritter während des Einzuges.)

ERSTER ZUG: (mit dem ,,Gral'' und Amfortas). Geleiten wir im bergenden Schrein, den Gral zum heiligen Amte, wen berget ihr im düst'ren Schrein und führt ihn trauernd daher?

ZWEITER ZUG: (mit Titurel's Sarge). Es birgt den Helden der Trauerschrein, er birgt die heilige Kraft;
der Gott selbst einst zur Pflege sich gab:
Titurel führen wir her.

ERSTER ZUG: Wer hat ihn gefällt, der in Gottes Hut
Gott selbst einst beschirmte?

ZWEITER ZUG: Ihn fällte des Alters tödtende Last, da den Gral er nicht mehr erschaute.

ERSTER ZUG: Wer wehrt' ihm des Grales Huld zu erschauen?

ZWEITER ZUG: Den dort ihr geleitet, der sündige Hüter.

ERSTER ZUG: Wir geleiten ihn heut', denn heut' noch einmal
—zum letzten Male:—
will des Amtes er walten.

ZWEITER ZUG: Wehe! Wehe! Du Hüter des Heil's!
Zum letzten Male
sei deines Amts gemahnt!
(Der Sarg ist auf dem Katafalk niedergesetzt, Amfortas auf das Ruhebett gelegt.)

AMFORTAS: Ja, Wehe! Wehe! Weh'über mich!—
So ruf' ich willig mit euch:
williger nähm' ich von euch den Tod, der Sünde mildeste Sühne!
(Der Sarg ist geöffnet worden. Beim Anblick der Leiche Titurel's bricht Alles in einen jähen Wehruf aus.)

rocky entrances have presented themselves in which the three become invisible, processions of knights in mourning garb are perceived in the arched passages; the pealing of bells ever increasing.—At last the whole immense Hall becomes visible just as the 1st Act, only without the tables. Faint light. The doors open again. From one side the knights bear in Titurel's corpse in a coffin. From the other Amfortas is carried on in his litter, preceded by the covered shrine of the Grail. The bier is erected in the middle; behind it the throne with canopy where Amfortas is set down.)
(song of the knights during the procesion.)

FIRST TRAIN: (with the "Grail" and Amfortas).
To sacred place in sheltering shrine
The Holy Grail do we carry;
What hides there in gloomy shrine,
Which mourning you bear here?

SECOND TRAIN: (with Titurel's coffin). A hero lies in this dismal shrine with all this heavenly strength, to whom all things once God did entrust:
Titurel we bear here.

FIRST TRAIN: By whom was he slain, who by God himself
Once was ever sheltered?

SECOND TRAIN: He sank beneath the mortal burden of years,
When he might look on the Grail no more.

FIRST TRAIN: Who veiled then the Grail's delights from his vision?

SECOND TRAIN: He whom you are bearing: its criminal guardian.

FIRST TRAIN: We conduct him today, for here once again,
—and once more only—
He fulfills his office.

SECOND TRAIN: Sorrow! Sorrow! guard of the Grail!
Be once more only Warned of your duty to all. (The coffin is set down on the bier, Amfortas placed on the couch,)

AMFORTAS: Yes, sorrow! Sorrow! Sorrow for me!—
With you I willingly cry; Liefer yet
I'd rather give me death, light Atonement for my trespass?
(The coffin is opened. At the sight of Titurel's body all burst into a poignant cry to distress.)

AMFORTAS: (vom seinem Lager sich hoch aufrichtend, zu der Leiche gewandt). Mein Vater!
Hochgesegneter der Helden!
Du Reinster, dem einst die Engel sich neigten!
Der einzig ich sterben wollte, dir—gab ich den Tod!
Oh! der du jetzt in göttlichem Glanz den Erlöser selbst erschau'st, erflehe von ihm, dass sein heiliges Blut, wenn noch einmal jetzt sein Segen die Brüder soll erquicken, wie ihnen neues Leben, mir endlich spende—den Tod!
Tod!—Sterben!
Einzige Gnade!
Die schreckliche Wunde, das Gift ersterbe, das es zernagt, erstarre das Herz!
Mein Vater! Dich—ruf' ich, rufe du ihm es zu:
Erlöser, gieb meinem Sohne Ruh'!

DIE RITTER: (sich näher an Amfortas drängend, durch einander). Enthüllet den Schrein!
Walte des Amtes!
Dich mahnet der Vater:
du musst, du musst!

AMFORTAS: (in wüthender Verzweiflung aufspringend, und unter die zurückweichenden Ritter sich stürzend). Nein!—Nicht mehr!—Ha!—
Schon fühl' ich den Tod mich umnachten, und noch einmal sollt' ich in's Leben zurück?
Wahnsinnige!
Wer will mich zwingen zu leben?
Könnt ihr doch Tod nur mir geben!
(Er reisst sich das Gewand auf.)
Hier bin ich,—die off'ne Wunde hier!
Das mich vergiftet, hier fliesst mein Blut.
Heraus die Waffe! Taucht eure Schwerte tief—tief hinein, bis an's Heft!
Ihr Helden, auf!
Tödtet den Sünder mit seiner Qual,
von selbst dann leuchtet euch wohl der Gral!
(Alle sind scheu vor ihm gewichen, Amfortas steht, is furchtbarer Extase, einsam.—Parsifal ist von Gurnemanz und Kundry begleitet, unvermerkt unter den Rittern erschienen, tritt jetzt hervor, und streckt den Speer aus, mit dessen Spitze er Amfortas, Seite berührt.)

AMFORTAS: (raising himself high on his couch and turning to the body). My father!
Highest venerated hero!
You purest, to whom once even angels bended!
I only desired to perish,
Yet—gave you death!
Oh! You who now in heavenly heights beholds the Savior's self,
Implore him to grant that his hallowed blood,
(If once again here his blessing
He pour upon these brothers)
To them new life while giving,
To me may offer—but Death!
Death—darkness!
Solitary mercy!
Take from me the horrible wound, the poison,
Stiffen the heart so tortured and rent!
My father! I—call you;
Cry my words to Him:
"Redeemer! give my son release!"

THE KNIGHTS: (severally, pressing towards Amfortas). Uncover the shrine!—
Do now your office!
Your father demands it;—
You must, you must!

AMFORTAS: (in a paroxysm of despair springs up and throws himself amid the knights, who draw back). No!—No more!—Ha!
Already death is glooming round me,—
And shall I yet again return to life?
Insanity!
What one in life can yet hold me?
Rather I bid you to slay me!
(tears open his dress).
Behold me!—behold the open wound!
Here is my poison—my streaming blood.
Take up your weapons! Bury your sword-blades Deep—deep in me, to the hilts! heroes, up!
Kill both the sinner and all his pain:
you will then regain The Grail's delight!
(All have shrunk back in awe. Amfortas stands alone in fearful ecstacy.-Parsifal, accompanied by Gurnemanz and Kundry, has entered unperceived, and now advancing stretches out the Spear, touching Amfortas' side with the point.)

PARSIFAL: Nur eine Waffe taugt:— die Wunde schliesst der Speer nur, der sie schlug.
(AMFORTAS' Miene leuchtet in heiliger Entzückung auf; er scheinen vor grosser Ergriffenheit zu schwanken; GURNEMANZ stützt ihn.)

PARSIFAL: Sei heil, entsündigt und gesühnt!
Denn ich verwalte nun dein Amt.
Gesegnet sei kein Leiden, das Mitleid's höchste Kraft und reinsten Wissens Macht dem zagen Thoren gab.
Den heil'gen Speer—ich bring' ihn euch zurück.—
(Alles blickt in höchster Entzückung auf den emporgehaltenen speer zu dessen Spitze aufschauend PARSIFAL in Begeisterung fortfährt.)
Oh! Welchen Wunders höchstes Glück!—
Die deine Wunde durfte schliessen, ihm seh' ich heil'ges Blut entfliessen in Sehnsucht dem verwandten Quelle, der dort fliesst in des Grales Welle!
Nicht soll der mehr verchlossen sein:
enthüllt den Gral! Oeffnet den Schrein!
(Die KNAPPEN öftnen den Schrein: PARSIFAL entnimmt diesem den ,,Gral,°° und versenkt sich, unter stummen Gebete, in seinem Anblick. Der ,,Gral°° erglüht: eine Glorienbeleuchtung ergiesst sich über Alle.—TITUREL, für diesen Augenblick wieder belebt erhebt sich segnend im Sarge.—Aus der Kuppel schwebt eine weisse Taube herab und verweilt über PARSIFAL'S Haupte. Dieser schwenkt den ,,Gral°° sanft vor der aufblickenden Ritterschaft.—KUNDRY sinkt, mit dem Blicke zu ihm auf, langsam vor PARSIFAL entseelt zu Boden. AMFORTAS und GURNEMANZ huldigen kniend PARSIFAL.)

ALLE: (mit Stimmen aus der mittleren, so wie der obersten Höhe, kaum hörbar leise). Höchsten Heiles Wunder: Erlösung dem Erlöser!
(Der Vorhang schliesst sich.)

The end

PARSIFAL: One weapon only serves:—
The one that struck
Can staunch your wounded side.
(AMFORTAS' countenance is irradiated with holy rapture; he totters with emotion; GURNEMANZ supports him.)

PARSIFAL: Be whole, unsullied and absolved!
For I now govren in your place.
Oh, blessed be your sorrows,
For Pity's potent might
And Knowledge' purest power
They taught a timid Fool.
The holy Spear—
Once more behold in this.—
(All gaze with intense rapture on the spear which PARSIFAL holds aloft, while he continues in inspiration as he looks at its point.)
Oh, mighty miracle of bliss!—
This that through me your wound restores.
With holy blood behold it pours.
Which yearns to join the fountain glowing,
Whose pure tide in the Grail is flowing!
Hid be no more that shape divine:
Uncover the Grail! Open the shrine!
(The boys open the shrine; PARSIFAL takes from it the "Grail" and kneels, absorbed in its contemplation, silently praying. The "Grail" glows with light; a halo of glory pours down over all.—TITUREL, for the moment reanimated, raises himself in benediction in his coffin.—From the dome descends a white dove and hovers over PARSIFAL'S head. He waves the "Grail" gently to and fro before the upgazing knights. KUNDRY, looking up at PARSIFAL, sinks slowly to the ground, dead. AMFORTAS and GURNEMANZ do homage on their knees to PARSIFAL.)

ALL: (with voices from the middle and extreme heights, so soft as to be scarcely audible). Wondrous work of mercy:
Salvation to the Savior!
(The Curtain closes.)

The end

Der Freischütz (1821)

Music by Carl Maria von Weber ■ Libretto by Friedrich Kind

This romantic three-act opera, set to a libretto by Friedrich Kind (based upon the Gespensterbuch by Johann August Apel and Friedrich Laun), was first performed at the Schauspielhaus in Berlin on June 18, 1821. The opera takes place in Bohemia around 1650. In a rifle contest against Kilian, Max, a young forester, has missed every target. Cuno, Chief Ranger of Prince Ottokar, stops a fight from ensuing between the two, but he tells Max that he will not be allowed to marry Agathe, the daughter of the Prince, unless he wins the next day's shooting competition. Max, no longer confident of victory, is given a magic potion by Caspar, another forester, who encourages him to use enchantment. Samiel, the devil, looks on while Caspar gives Max a gun and tells him to shoot an eagle which can hardly be seen. Max, to his surprise, shoots the bird down; Caspar says that the bullets are magic and that, in order to obtain more, he must go to the Wolf's Glen at midnight. At the exact moment that Max shot the eagle, a portrait of Cuno falls down at his house. Agathe has terrible premonitions about what is to happen. Max shows her the dead eagle and is adamant that he must go to the Wolf's Glen in order to retrieve a dead deer. Once there, Caspar offers Max's soul in exchange for his own, and Samiel accepts the bargain. Caspar says that Samiel should use the seventh bullet, the one which remains in his possession, to kill Agathe. Max helps Caspar to mould the metal which will be used for the magic bullets. While they pronounce the spells upon the bullets, a violent storm rages and a vision of the Wild Hunt appears across the sky. When the seventh bullet is cast, Samiel appears. The next day, Max is winning the contest, but he has one bullet left—the one belonging to Samiel. Agathe, who has dreamt that she was a dove shot by Max and that her wedding bouquet became a funeral wreath, is comforted by friends who tell her that Max will win. Wearing her wedding dress, she watches the contest in Prince Ottokar's presence, accompanied by a Hermit. The Prince sets the target, which is a dove way up in the trees. Agathe tries to stop Max from shooting, but the Hermit disturbs the bird and it flies to another tree where Caspar is hiding. Max fires as ordered by the Prince and Caspar dies, cursing God and Samiel. The pact between Max and Samiel is then revealed, and the Prince plans to banish Max in punishment. However, the Hermit pleads for him, suggesting that if Max behaves piously for one year he may marry Agathe. The Prince agrees to this, and the chorus sings praises, ending the opera.

ERSTER AKT

ERSTE SCENE

(Platz vor einer Waldschenke. Max sitz allein im Vorgrunde. In dem Augenblicke, als die Gardine aufgeht, fallen Schüsse. CHOR der Landleute, indem die Scheibe herabgebracht wird.)

Viktoria! Viktoria! der Meister soll leben, Der wacker dem Sternlein den Rest hat gegeben! Ihm gleichet kein Schütz' von fern und von nah' Viktoria! Viktoria! Viktoria!

MAX: Immer frisch ! Schreit! schreit! (Stampft und legt seine Büchse an den baum.) War ich denn blind? Sind die Sehnen dieser Faust erschlafft?
Es hat sich ein Zug von Bauern geordnet, welche Kilian im Triumph vor Max bringen.

KILIAN: Schau' der Herr mich an als König!
Dünkt ihm meine Macht zu wenig?
Gleich zieh' er den Hut, Mosje!
Wird er? frag' ich — He? He? He?
(Chor wiederholt die letzte Zeile.)

ACT I

SCENE I

(Open place before an inn. MAX seated alone in the foreground Some shots are fired as the curtain rises. CHORUS of Peasants as the target is brought down.)

Victoria, Victoria! All honor and fame. To him, who with true and steady good aim. Hit the white. Let his glory be sounded afar. Victoria, Victoria, Victoria!

MAX: Yes, yes! cry and shout! (stamps and leans his rifle against a tree.) Was I blind? Or are the sinews of this hand relaxed? (March of the peasants, who bring Killian in triumph before Max.)

KILLIAN: Look at me now, as your king, Sir!
Seems my power still too small, Sir!
Doff your hat. Sir, doff to me,
Will you, will you? Hi! hi! hi!
(Chorus repeats the last line.)

KILIAN: Stern und Strauss trag' ich vor'm Leibe, Cantors Sepherl trägt die Scheibe;
Hat er Augen nun, Mosje?
Was traf er denn? — He? He? He?
(Chor wie oben.)

KILIAN: Darf ich etwa Eure Gnaden
's nächste Mal zum Schiessen laden?
Er gönnt Andern was, Mosje!
Nun, er kommt doch? — He? He? He? (Chor, wie oben.)

MAX: (Springt auf, zieht den Hirschfänger und fasst Kilian bei der Brust.) Lasst mich zufrieden, oder — !
(Getümmel, auf Max eindringend.)

ZWEITE SCENE

Cuno, Caspar und mehrere Jäger mit Büchsen und Jagdspiessen.

CUNO: Was gibt's hier? Pfui, dreissig über einen! Wer untersteht sich, meinen Burschen anzutasten?

KILIAN: (von Max losgelassen.) Alles in Güte und Liebe, werther Herr Erbförster! Gar nicht böse gemeint! Es ist Herkommen bei uns, KILLIAN: You see I've gained the band and favor.

You gained nothing by your labor,
You had eyes, but could not see,
Behold the target! Hi! hi! hi!

KILLIAN: Perhaps, since this time you are beaten.
You'd like to have another meeting?
I'm at your service, as you see,
You dare not, dare not! Hi! hi! hi!
(Chorus, as above.)

MAX: (Start up, draws his woodman's knife furiously at Killian). Let me alone, or — (The peasants interfere.)

SCENE II

(CUNO, CASPAR, and several foresters, enter with rifles and hunting spears.)

CUNO: What is the matter here? For shame, thirty to one! Who dares to attack my forester?

KILLLIAN: (whom Max had relinquished). All in kindness and love, your Worship! No harm was intended! It is an old custom with us, to dass, wer stets gefehlt hat, vom Königschusse ausgeschlossen und dann ein wenig gehänselt wird — alles in Güte und Liebe.

CUNO: (heftig.) Stets gefehlt? Wer? wer hat das?

MAX: (beschämt und verzweifelnd.) Ich kann's nicht leugnen; ich habe nie getroffen.

CASPAR: vor sich. Dank, Samiel! (Zu Max.) Glaube mir, Kamerad, es ist wie ich gesagt habe. Es hat dir Jemand einen Waidmann gesetzt, und den musst du lösen, oder du triffst keine Klaue. Geh' nächsten Freitag auf einen Kreuzweg, zieh' mit dem Ladestock older einem blutigen Degen einen Kreis um dich und rufe dreimal den grossen Jäger —

KILIAN: Gott bewahr' uns! Einen von des Teufels Heerschaaren!

CUNO: zu Caspar. Schweig', vorlauter Bube! Ich kenne dich längst. Du bist ein Tagedieb, ein Schlemmer, ein falscher Würfler — hüte dich, dass ich nicht noch Aergeres von dir denke. (Caspar macht eine kriechende Bewegung, als wolle er sich entschuldigen.) Kein Wort, oder du hast auf der Stelle den Abschied! — Aber auch du, Max, siehe dich vor! Ich bin dir wie ein Vater gewogen; es freut mich, dass der Herr Fürst Sohnesrecht auf den Eidam übertragen will — aber — wenn du morgen beim Probeschusse fehltest, müsst' ich dir doch das Mädchen versagen.

MAX: Morgen! morgen schon!

KILIAN: Was ist eigentlich mit dem Probeschuss? Schon oft haben wir davon gehört. —

ANDERE: O, erzähl's uns, Herr Cuno!

CUNO: Meinetwegen! (Setzt sich.) Mein Ureltervater, der noch im Forsthause abgebildet steht, hiess Cuno, wie ich, und war fürstlicher Leibschütz. Einst trieben die Hunde einen Hirsch heran, auf dem ein Mensch angeschmiedet war; so bestrafte man in alten Zeiten die Waldfrevler. Dieser Anblick erregte das Mitleid des damaligen Fürsten. Er versprach demjenigen, welcher den Hirsch erlege, ohne den Missethäter zu verwunden, eine Erbförsterei, und zur Wohnung das nahgelegene Waldschlösschen. Der wackere Leibschütz, mehr aus eigenem Erbarmen, als wegen der grossen Verheissung, besann sich nicht lange. Er legte an und befahl die Kugel den heiligen Engeln. Der Hirsch stürzte, und der Wilddieb war, obwohl im Gesicht vom Dorngebüsch derb zerkratzt, doch im Uebrigen unversehrt.

mock him a little who has missed every shot at our prize shooting; but all in kindness and love.

CUNO: (passionately). Missed every shot? Who?
Who missed always?

MAX: (ashamed and despairingly). I cannot deny it; I have not hit the mark.

CASPAR: (aside). Thanks Zamiel! (To Max.) Believe me, comrade, it is as I have told you. Somebody has bewitched you, and you must relieve the domon, ere you can hit any mark. Go next Friday to a cross road; with thy ramrod or a bloodstained sword draw a circle around thee, and call thrice upon the Black Forester — KILLIAN: Heaven forefend us! One of the Devil's legions.

CUNO: (to Caspar). Silence, sir! I know you will. You are a wretch, a drunkard, a false player — beware, else I mistake you for something even worse (Caspar crouches, and by his gestures attempts to excuse himself.) No words, or you leave me this instant! — But you, too, Max, be careful! if tomorrow you fail in the trial shot. I should be compelled to refuse the girl to you.

MAX: What! Tomorrow already?

KILLIAN: What is this about the trial shot! We have often heard it mentioned.

PEASANTS: Please tell us, Master Cuno.

CUNO: Be it so. (Seats himself.) My great-grand father, whose portrait still hangs in the forester's house, was called Cuno like myself, and was head ranger to the duke. Once as they were in the forest, the dogs started a stag, upon whose back a man was bound. such was in those days the punishment of poachers. The prince was moved to pity at this sight, and promised him who should kill the stag without wounding the man, the situation of head ranger, with the small hunting castle in this neighborhood for his residence. One brave forester, more from pity he felt for the culprit than the hope of reward, did not hesitate a moment. He raised his rifle, commended the ball to the guardianship of the angels, and shot. The stag fell, and the poacher, though much torn and wounded by briars and thorns, was saved.

MÄNNER: Brav! brav! — das war ein Meisterschuss.

CUNO: Hört noch das Ende! Es ging damals wie jetzt — (mit einem Blick auf Caspar) — dass der böse Feind immer Unkraut unter den Weizen säet. Cuno's Neider wussten es an den Fürsten zu bringen, der Schuss sei mit Zauberei geschehen, Cuno habe nicht gezielt, sondern eine Freikugel geladen.

CASPAR: Dacht' ich's doch! (Vor sich.) Hilf zu, Samiel!

KILIAN: Zu einigen Bauern. Eine Freikugel! — das sind Schlingen des bösen Feinds; meine Grossmutter hat mir's einmal erklärt. Sechse treffen, aber die siebente gehört dem Bösen: der kann sie hinführen, wohin ihm's beliebt.

CASPAR: Alfanzerei! Nichts als Naturkräfte!

CUNO: Aus diesem Grunde machte der Fürst bei der Stiftung den Zusatz, dass jeder von Cuno's Nachfolgern zuvor einen Probeschuss ablege, schwer oder leicht. Du, Max, magst noch einmal zu Hause nachsehen, ob sämmtliche Treibleute angelangt sind. Nimm dich zusammen! — der Waidmann, der dir gesetzt ist, mag die Liebe sein. — Noch vor Sonnenaufgang erwarte ich dich beim Hoflager.

MAX: der erst aus seiner Zerstreuung zurückgekommen ist. O! diese Sonne, Furchtbar steigt sie mir empor!

CUNO: Leid oder Wonne, Beides ruht in deinem Rohr!

MAX: Ach, ich muss verzagen, Dass der Schuss gelingt!

CUNO: Dann musst Du entsagen —

CASPAR: zu Max, mit bedeutungsvoller Heimlichkeit. Nur ein keckes Wagen Ist's, was Glück erringt!

MAX: Agathen entsagen,
Wie könnt' ich's ertragen?
Doch verfolgt mich Missgeschick —

CHOR: Seht, wie düster ist sein Blick!
Ahnung scheint ihn zu durchbeben — (Zu Max.)
O lass Hoffnung dich beleben, Und vertraue dem Geschick!

MAX: Weh' mir! Mich verliess das Glück,
Unsichtbare Mächte grollen, Bange Ahnung füllt die Brust!

CASPAR: Mag Fortuna's Kugel rollen;
Wer sich höh'rer Kraft bewusst, Trotzt dem Wechsel und Verlust;

CUNO: So's des Himmels Mächte wollen,
Dann — trag' männlich den Verlust!

PEASANTS: Bravo! That was a master shot.

CUNO: Now listen to the end? Then, as now, (he cast a look at Caspar) the foul fiend was in the habit of casting evil seed among the good. The rivals of Cuno persuaded the Prince that the shot had been accomplished by witchcraft, and that Cuno had taken no aim, but had loaden his rifle with a charmed ball.

CASPAR: So I thought. (Aside.) Help Zamiel.

KILLIAN: (to peasants). A charmed ball! — Those are the snares of the fiend, my grandmother has often told me. Six will hit the mark, but the seventh belongs to the demon; he can guide it wherever he likes.

CASPAR: Stuff and nonsense! men laugh at it

CUNO: For this reason the Prince has instituted this trial shot, which each of Cuno's successors must gain. Max, you may now go home, and see if all the foresters have arrived. — Be careful? — The witchery that is upon you, may be love. — Before sunrise I shall look for you at the appointed place.

MAX: (just recovering from his thoughtfulness). Oh, sadly to me Rises dread tomorrow's sun.

CUNO: All that's dear to you,
Must indeed be lost or won!

MAX: Alas the hope is slender,
My fears I can't repress.

CUNO: And your bride so tender —

CASPAR: (to Max significantly).
Her you may surrender
Unless you force success.

MAX: My love to relinquish,
Oh terror and anguish,
I cannot endure this woe —

CHORUS: Behold how sad is his brow.
How lost to all hope of success. (To Max.)
Let faith encourage you now,
And Heaven will aid your distress.

MAX: Ah, who could repress this fear!
Dark and unseen powers assail me.
Fearful anguish fills my heart!

CASPAR: What will silly sighs avail you?
He who takes a manly part
May thwart the frowns of fortune.

CUNO: Son, let not thy courage fail you.
Shrink not — still be stout of heart.

CHOR: Nein, er trüg' nicht den Verlust!

CUNO: (fasst Max bei der Hand.) Mein Sohn, nur Muth!
Wer Gott vertraut, baut gut.
(Zu den Jägern.) Jetzt auf! In Bergen und Klüften
Tobt morgen der freudige Krieg.

CHOR DER JÄGER: Das Wild in Fluren und Triften, Der Aar in Wolken und Lüften
Ist unser, und unser der Sieg!

CHOR DER LANDLEUTE: Lasst lustig die Hörner erschallen —

CHOR DER JÄGER: Wir lassen die Hörner erschallen —

ALLE, ausser MAX: Wenn wiederum Abend ergraut, Soll Echo und Felsenwand hallen:
Sa! Hussah, dem Bräut'gam! der Braut!
Cuno mit Caspar und dem Jägern ab. Dämmerung fängt an.

DRITTE SCENE

Die Vorigen, ohne Cuno und sein Gefolge.

KILIAN: Ein braver Mann, der Herr Förster! Aber nun kommt auch in den Schenkgiebel; es wird schon recht dämmrig und schaurig. (Zu Max.) Wir wollen gute Freunde bleiben, wackerer Bursch! Ich gönne ihm morgen das beste Glück! Jetzt schlag' er sich die Grillen aus dem Kopfe, nehm' er ein Mädchen und tanze er mit hinein!

MAX: Ja, es wär' mir, wie tanzen!

KILIAN: Nun, wie's beliebt! Tanzt, Kinder.
(Er nimmt eine der Frauen; die Andern ebenso. Böhmischer Walzer.)

VIERTE SCENE

Max, allein. Späterhin Samiel.

MAX: Nein, länger trag' ich nicht die Qualen, Die Angst, die jede Hoffnung raubt!
Für welche Schuld muss ich bezahlen?
Was weiht dem falschen Glück mein Haupt?
Durch die Wälder, durch die Auen
Zog' ich leichten Muths dahin;
Alles, was ich konnt' erschauen,
War des sichern Rohr's Gewinn.
Abends bracht' ich reiche Beute,
Und als über eig'nes Glück,
Drohend wohl dem Mörder, freute Sich Agathe's Liebesblick.—
Hat denn der Himmel mich verlassen?

CHORUS: Oh this loss would break his heart.

CUNO: (taking Max's hand). Take heart, my son
In Heaven who trusts, has won.
(To the Foresters.)
Now Huzza! through valley and mountain,
Tomorrow shall sound the gay chase.

CHORUS OF FORESTERS: The stag who rests near the fountain,
The eagle who soars high over mountain
Is ours — and ours the race.

CHORUS OF PEASANTS: Sound bugles the hunters' rejoicing —

CHORUS OF FORESTERS: Our horns sound the hunters' rejoicing —

ALL: (except Max). When evening's shades shall subside, Sounds echo with thousands of voices,
Huzza for the bridegroom and bride!
(Exit Cuno, Caspar and Foresters.) (Evening gradually set in.)

SCENE III

(The same, without Cuno, etc.)

KILLIAN: An excellent man, our head ranger. But now let us go in; begins to grow dark and gloomy. (to Max.) Let us remain freinds, my good fellow! I hope you may have the best luck tomorrow! But now, cheer up, take a lass and have a dance with us.

MAX: Pshaw! I don't feel like dancing.

KILLIAN: Well, as you like! Come let us dance. (He takes one of the women, the others do likewise. Bohemian Waltz.)

SCENE IV

(MAX alone, afterwards ZAMIEL.)

MAX: No, I can bear this fate no longer
This fear which tortures thus my soul.
Ah! for what guilt am I atoning.
Which over my heart holds it control?
Through the forests, through the meadows,
Joy was wont with me to stray.
While my rifle, never failing
Made each bird and beast my prey.
And when evening decked the mountain,
Veiling earth in twilight's gloom,
Chiding, yet my deeds recounting,

(Samiel erscheint.)
Die Vorsicht ganz ihr Aug' gewandt?
Soll das Verderben mich erfassen?
Verfiel ich in des Zufalls Hand?
Jetzt ist wohl ihr Fenster offen,
Und sie horcht auf meinen Schritt,
Lässt nicht ab vom treuen Hoffen:
Max bringt gute Zeichen mit!
Wenn sich rauschend Blätter regen,
Wähnt sie wohl, es sei mein Fuss;
Hüpft vor Freuden, winkt entgegen—
Nur dem Laub'—den Liebesgruss.—
Doch mich umgarnen finst're Mächte;
(Samiel schreitet über die Bühne.)
Mich fasst Verzweiflung, foltert Spott!
O, dringt kein Strahl durch diese Nächte?
Herrscht blind das Schicksal? Lebt kein Gott?
(Samiel verschwindet bei dem letzten Worte.)

FÜNFTE SCENE

Max. Caspar, herbeischleichend. Samiel. Ein Schenkmädchen.

CASPAR: Da bist du immer noch, Kamerad. Gut dass ich dich finde.

MAX: Horchst du schon wieder herum?

CASPAR: Ist das mein Dank? Ich kann's, kann's nicht verschmerzen, dass du hier zum Spott der Bauern worden bist. Teufel! die mögen gelacht haben! ha, ha ha! (Greift nach dem Kruge.) Wie? was? Bier hast du? Das taugt nicht zum Sorgenbrecher! (In den Schenkgiebel rufend:) Wein! Wein! Zwei Passgläser!—Kamerad! und koste es mich den letzten Heller, ich kann dich nicht so traurig sehen! So, Freundchen! da brauch'st du wenig! (Giesst schnell Wein ein.) Hilf, Samiel! (Samiel erscheint. Caspar erschrocken.) Du da? (Samiel verschwindet.)

MAX: Mit wem sprachst du?

CASPAR: Ich?—mit Niemand. Ich sagte: ,,So, Freundchen!'' weil ich dir einschenkte.

MAX: Ich mag aber nichts.

CASPAR: Der Herr Förster soll leben! Die Gesundheit deines Lehrherrn wirst du doch mittrinken?

MAX: So sei's.
(Sie trinken.)

CASPAR: Hier im ird'schen Jammerthal
Wär' doch nichts, als Plack and Qual,
Trüg' der Stock nicht Trauben;
Darum, bis zum letzten Hauch,

Sweet Agath' said—welcome home.
And am I wholly left by heaven?
(Zamiel appears.)
And will my prayers no more avail?
Am I to wild destruction given
And shall the powers of night prevail?
From her lattice window gazing
Now her eye is seeking me.
While her heart is fondly beating
Max, bring happy signs to me!
Now she fondly waves a welcome,
Fancy's eye her lover sees
But her signal—gains no answer—
Save the sigh of whispering trees.—
But fearful powers are ruling, over me.
(Zamiel crosses the stage.)
To dark perdition I am driven.
With nothing but despair before me.
Does chance rule blindly—aid me Heaven.
(Zamiel disappears at the last word.)

SCENE V

(Max, Caspar approaching slowly. Zamiel. A Barmaid.)

CASPAR: So you are still here. Comrade.
It is well I find you,

MAX: Why are you eaves-dropping about thus?

CASPAR: Are these all the thanks I get? I cannot well forget it, that you should have become a subject of merriment to these boors here. How they must have laughed? ha! ha! ha! (Takes the can from the table.) How is this? beer? Pshaw! that never will kill care! (Calling unto the house.) Wine! hollo! wine! Yes, Comrade, and if it costs my last penny, I cannot see you so mournful. (Aside.) You'll not require much! (Filling a cup.) Help Zamiel! (Zamiel appears, Caspar frightened.) You here? (Zamiel disappears.)

MAX: With whom have you spoken?

CASPAR: I? with no one. I merely said "Good luck." as I filled your cup.

MAX: But I will not drink.

CASPAR: Long life to the head rangers—You certainly will not refuse to drink to our master's health.

MAX: Be it so. (They drink.)

CASPAR: Here is this dull vale below,
Nothing's found but care and woe,
Except the joys of drinking!
Therefore to the latest hour.
Put your faith in Bacchus' power,

Setz' ich auf Gott Bacchus Bauch Meinen festen Glauben!
Ei, du musst auch mitsingen!
(Trinkt.)

MAX: Lass mich!

CASPAR: Jungfer Agathe soll leben! Wer die Gesundheit seiner Braut ausschlüg', wär' doch wahrlich ein Schuft.

MAX: Du wirst unverschämt. (Sie trinken.)

CASPAR: Eins ist Eins und Drei sind Drei!
D'rum addirt noch zweierlei
Zu dem Saft der Reben;
Kartenspiel und Würfellust
Und ein Kind mit runder Brust Hilft zum ew'gen Leben!
Mit dir ist aber auch gar nichts anzufangen! (Trinkt.) Unser Herr Fürst soll leben! Wer nicht dabei ist, ist ein Judas!

MAX; Nun denn, aber dann auch keinen Tropfen mehr! (Sie trinken.)

CASPAR: Ohne dies Trifolium
Gibt's kein wahres Gaudium Seit dem ersten Uebel.
Fläschchen, sei mein A-B-C, Mein Gebetbuch, Catherle, Karte, meine Bibel!
(Die Dorfuhr schlägt, Max steht auf.)
Willst du schon nach Hause?

MAX: Ja, es wird Zeit. Das schlug Sieben!

CASPAR: Bleib' noch und lass dir rathen! Deshalb hab' ich dich eigentlich aufgesucht. Dir könnte gar wohl geholfen werden!

MAX: Mir geholfen?

CASPAR: geheimmissvoll. Um dir ganz meine Freundschaft zu beweisen, könnte ich dir unter vier Augen — — Diese Nacht, wo sich die Mondscheibe verfinstert, ist zu grossen Dingen geschickt! — Man sieht Samiel von Zeit zu Zeit lauschen.

CASPAR: Wie wär's, Kamerad, wenn ich dir noch heute zu einem recht glücklichen Schusse verhülfe, der Agathen beruhigte und zugleich euer morgendes Glück verbürgte?

MAX: Du fragst wunderbar. Ist das möglich?

CASPAR: Da nimm meine Büchse!

MAX: Was soll ich damit?

CASPAR: Geduld! Er sieht nach dem Himmel. Zeigt sich denn nichts? Indem er ihm das Gewehr gibt. Da! Da! Siehst du den Stösser dort! Schiess!

MAX: Es ist ganz düster, der Vogel schwebt wie ein schwarzer Punkt in der Luft, wolkenhoch über der Schussweite!

And set sorrow winking.
But you must sing with me!
(Drinks)

MAX: Let me alone!

CASPAR: Here's to Miss Agathe's health! You would certainly be a scamp, if you refused to drink the health of your bride.

MAX: You are getting rude. (Drinks.)

CASPAR: One is one, and three are three;
Therefore to complete the glee,
Add two more to it.
With card and die to gamble bold,
A pretty girl—but not too old,
Those are things will do it.
But I can do nothing with thee. (Drinks.) Here's our Prince's health!
A Judas he who refuses the toast!

MAX: Be it so, but not another drop afterwards! (They drink.)

CASPAR: Without this Trifolium,
There is no true Gaudium:
Since the first transgression
My alphabet a bottle is,
My daily prayer—a girl to kiss,
Such is my profession.
(Clock strikes, Max rises.)
Will you already go home?

MAX: Yes, it is time, it struck seven!

CASPAR: Stay yet, and let me advise you. It is for this, I have sought you; I may be able to help you.

MAX: Help me?

CASPAR: (mysteriously.) To prove my friendship to you I might in confidence tell you—This night, when the moon is eclipsed, is suited to great purposes!
(Zamiel appears occasionally and listens.)

CASPAR: How comrade, if I should help thee to a most fortunate shot! a shot which would quiet the fears of Agathe, and at the same time secure success for tomorrow?

MAX: You speak strangely. How is that possible?

CASPAR: There, take my rifle.

MAX: For what purpose?

CASPAR: Patience? (he looks up) Can I see nothing? (giving him the rifle) There! there! see the eagle yonder? Shoot!

MAX: It is almost dark. The bird appears but a black spot. It soars far beyond the reach of the rifle.

CASPAR: Schiess in's T — Schellobers Namen! Ha, ha!
Max (berührt den Stecher: das Gewehr geht los. In demselben Augenblick hört man ein gellendes Gelächter, so dass sich Max erschrocken nach Caspar umsieht). Was ist das?

CASPAR: Viktoria! Das wird dich bei den Bauern in Respect setzen! das wird Agathen erfreuen! (Rauft einige der grössten Federn aus und steckt sie auf Maxens Hut.) So Kamerad! dies als Siegeszeichen.

MAX: Träum' ich denn, order bin ich berauscht? So etwas ist mir noch nie begegnet! — Caspar! ich bitte dich, ich beschwöre dich — (Fasst ihn) — Caspar! ich bringe dich um! — Sag, was war das für eine Kugel?

CASPAR: Nun, wenn du Vernunft annimmst — — so sag' mir — du, der wackerste Jäger, bist du, oder stellst du dich so unerfahren? Wüsstest du wirklich nicht, was eine Freikugel sagen will?

MAX: Der Schuss ist unglaublich — in trüber Dämmerung — aus den Wolken herabgeholt! So wäre es doch wahr? Hast du noch mehr solche Kugeln?

CASPAR: Es war die letzte — sie haben gerade ausgereicht.

MAX: Bist du doch auf einmal so wortkarg! — Ausgereicht! Wie verstehst du das?

CASPAR: Weil sie in dieser Nacht zu bekommen sind.

MAX: In dieser Nacht?

CASPAR: Ja doch! Max! Kamerad! Dein Schicksal steht unter dem Einflusse günstiger Gestirne! Du bist zu hohen Dingen ersehen! Heute, gerade in der Nacht zuvor, ehe du den Probeschuss thun, Amt und Braut dir gewinnen sollst, wo du der Hülfe unsichtbarer Mächte so sehr bedarfst, beut die Natur sich selbst zu deinem Dienste!

MAX: Wohl! Mein Geschick will's — Schaff' mir so eine Kugel! —

CASPAR: Sei punkt zwölf Uhr in der Wolfsschlucht!

MAX: Um Mitternacht — in der Wolfsschlucht! — Nein! die Schlucht ist verrufen, und um Mitternacht öffnen sich die Pforten der Hölle, nein, ich komme nicht.

CASPAR: Feigling! Glaubst du, dieser Adler sei dir geschenkt? Doch Undank ist der Welt Lohn. Drollig! um Agathen zu trösten, wagtest du den Schuss; sie zu erwerben, fehlt es dir an Muth. Das würde sich das Wachspüppchen, das mich um deinetwillen verwarf, schwerlich einbilden! (Vor sich.) Es soll gerochen werden.

CASPAR: Shoot, in the devil's name! shoot! Ha! ha!
(Max touches the trigger and discharges the rifle. At the same moment fiendish laughter is heard. Max, frightened, looks at Caspar, as an immense eagle falls dead at his feet).
What is this?

CASPAR: Victoria! Now the boors will respect you! and how Agathe will rejoice!

MAX: Am I dreaming or awake? Never did I meet the like—Caspar! I pray, I entreat you—(grasps him.) Caspar, I'll murder you—say, what bullet was that?

CASPAR: Well, if you will be reasonable.—tell me—you, a brave hunter,—are you or would you seem so very ignorant? Do you really not know what a charmed bullet is?

MAX: That shot is incredible—at twilight—to bring the bird down from the very clouds! Can such things be? Have you more of these balls?

CASPAR: It was the only one left—they have just lasted out.

MAX: You are very silent of a sudden! lasted out! what mean you by that?

CASPAR: They may be obtained again this very night.

MAX: This night?

CASPAR: Even so, Max comrade! Thy fate is cast beneath the influence of a favorable constellation. Thou art born to great fortunes. Tonight, even in the night before your trial shot, which is to gain you bride and fortune, when you must need the assistance of superior powers, this very night, nature herself offers her assistance to you.

MAX: Be it so! it is my fate? — obtain for me such a bullet!

CASPAR: Be in the wolf's glen at midnight!

MAX: At midnight—in the wolf's glen? No! that glen is in ill report, and at midnight the gates of hell are open there! No! I shall not come.

CASPAR: Coward! Think you that this eagle was obtained for nothing? But ingratitude is the world's reward. This is droll! to console Agathe, you undertook this shot; to gain her, you lack the courage. That sweet child who dotes on you would scarcely believe this.
(Aside.) I shall be avenged.

MAX: Elender! Muth hab' ich —

CASPAR: So bewähr' ihn! Brauchtest du schon eine Freikugel, so ist's ja ein Kinderspiel, welche zu giessen. Was dir bevorsteht ohne diese Hülfe, kannst du aus deinen bisherigen Fehlschüssen leicht abnehmen. Das Mädchen ist auf dich versessen, kann nicht ohne dich leben; sie wird verzweifeln! Du wirst allen Menschen ein Spott, herumschleichen, vielleicht aus Verzweiflung — (Drückt sich die Faust in die Augen, als träte das Wasser hinein.) Schäme dich, rauher Waidmann, dass du ihn mehr liebst, als er sich selbst! (Vor sich.) Hilf zu, Samiel!

MAX: Agathe sterben! Ich in einen abgrund springen! Ja, das wär' das Ende! — (Giebt Caspar die Hand.) Bei Agathe's Leben! ich komme!
Samiel, der bei den letzten Worten hervorgelauscht hat, nickt und verschwindet.

CASPER: Schweig gegen Jedermann! Es könnte dir und mir Gefahr bringen. Ich erwarte dich! Glock zwölf!

MAX: Ich dich verrathen? — Glock zwölf! Ich komme! (Schnell ab.)

SECHSTE SCENE

CASPAR allein: Schweig, schweig — damit dich niemand warnt!
Der Hölle Netz hat dich umgarnt, Nichts kann vom tiefen Fall dich retten!
Umgebt ihn, ihr Geister mit Dunkel beschwingt!
Schon trägt er knirschend eure Ketten!
Triumph! die Rache, die Rache gelingt!

ZWEITER AKT

ERSTE SCENE

Vorsaal im Forsthause. Annchen steht auf einer Leiter, hat das Bild des ersten Cuno wieder aufgehängt. Agathe bindet einen Verband von der Stirn.

ANNCHEN: Schelm! halt fest!
Ich will dir's lehren,
Spukerei'n kann man entbehren
In solch altem Eulennest.

AGATHE: Lass das Ahnebild in Ehren!

ANNCHEN: Ei, dem alten Herrn Zoll' ich Achtung gern;
Doch dem Knechte Sitte lehren, Kann Respect nicht wehren —

AGATHE: Sprich, wen meinst du? welchen Knecht?

MAX: Wretch! I have the courage—

CASPAR: Then prove it. As you have already used a charmed ball, it is mere child's play to make more. Your fortune hitherto, may plainly show you, what you may expect without such aid. The girl is madly in love with you, and cannot live without you; she will despair! You will become the scorn of all mankind, perhaps in your despair you'll—(presses his hand before his eyes, as if weeping.) Pshaw! that I should love you more than you do yourself! (Aside.) Help Zamiel!

MAX: Agathe—die? I—kill myself? Yes, yes, such would be the end!—(gives his hand of Caspar.) On my life, I'll come! (Zamiel, who had been visible during the last few sentences, nods and disappears.)

CASPAR: Not a word to any one! It might bring danger to us both. I shall expect you precisely at twelve!

MAX: I'll not betray you!—At twelve, I will be there! (Exit.)

SCENE VI

CASPAR: (alone) Hush! hush! that no one may alarm thee!
Hellish lures now soon will charm thee;
Nothing can save thee from the chain.
Surround him, ye imps in darkness still fly.
Already fallen he strives in vain,
Revenge, revenge. thy triumph is nigh.

ACT II

SCENE I

(Chamber in the head ranger's house. ANNCHEN on a ladder, hanging up the portrait of the first CUNO. AGATHE tying a handkerchief around her forehead.)

ANNCHEN: Come be at rest!
Keep in your own sphere!
Of specters there's no need here
In this old crow's nest.

AGATHE: Respect the portrait of our sire!

ANNCHEN: To Cuno it is true,
All homage is due;
But the slave whom I require,
Must obey my desire.

AGATHE: Slave! What mean you? say what slave?

ANNCHEN: Nun, den Nagel!
Kannst du fragen?
Sollt' er seinen Herrn nicht tragen,
Liess ihn fallen, war das nicht schlecht?

AGATHE UND ANNCHEN, ZUGLEICH: Ja, gewiss, das war nicht recht.
Das war wahrlich mehr, als schlecht.
Steigt herunter und setzt die Leiter weg.

AGATHE: Alles wird dir zum Feste, Alles beut dir Lachen und Scherz
— O wie anders fühlt mein Herz!

ANNCHEN: Grillen sind mir böse Gäste.
Immer mit leichtem Sinn Tanzen durch's Leben hin,
Das nur ist Hochgewinn —
Sorg' und Gram muss man versagen!

AGATHE: Wer bezwingt des Busens Schlagen?
Wer der Liebe süssen Schmerz?

ANNCHEN: Die bezwingen Lust und Scherz!

AGATHE: Stets um den Geliebten zagen
Muss dies ahnungsvolle Herz!

ANNCHEN: besieht sich das Bild. So! nun wird der Altvater wohl wieder ein Jahrhundertchen festhängen.

AGATHIE: Es ist recht still und einsam hier —

ANNCHEN: Unangenehm ist's freilich, in einem solchen verwünschten Schlosse am Polterabende fast mutterseelen allein zu sein, zumal — wenn sich so ehrwürdige, längst vermoderte Herrschaften mir nichts, dir nichts von den Wänden herabbemühen. Da lob' ich mir die Lebendigen und Jungen!
Kommt ein schlanker Bursch gegangen,
Blond von Locken oder braun,
Hell von Aug und roth or Vaugen?
Ei, nach dem Kana main bischau
Zwar schlägt man das Aug' auf's Mieder, Tief verschämt, nach Mädchen-Art;
Doch verstohlen hebt man's wieder,
Wenn's das Bürschchen nicht gewahrt.
Sollten ja sich Blicke finden,
Nun, was hat auch das für Noth?
Man wird drum nicht gleich erblinden,
Wird man auch ein wenig roth.
Blickchen hin und Blick herüber,
Bis der Mund sich auch was traut!
Er seufzt: Schönste! Sie spricht: Lieber!
Bald heisst's Bräutigam und Braut.
Immer näher, liebe Leutchen!

ANCHEN: Why this question? it is the nail there.
Should it not it master bear.
Yet it dropped him like a knave.

AGATHE AND ANNCHEN: (Together.) Certainly that was not brave.
Was it not a naughty slave?
(Descends from the ladder.)

AGATHE: Ever thus are you merry.
And constantly joyous and glad,
Whilst my poor heart is so sad.

ANNCHEN: Oh, do not let sorrow tarry.
Always be light and gay.
Dancing through life away:
Life is but one brief day,
Sorrow and care ever expelling.

AGATHE: Who can stop the bosom's swelling?
Who soothes hearts that mourn in love?

ANNCHEN: Laughter will victorious prove!

AGATHE: Oh! where grief once makes its dwelling,
Who can ever the inmate move?

ANNCHEN: (looks at the picture).Now our worthy ancestor will probably hang secure for another century.

AGATHE: How still and lonely it is here —

ANNCHEN: It certainly is disagreeable to be alone in such an old castle at night. especially when these old, dead and gone ancestors of ours, take it into their heads to descend from the wall of their own accord. For my part I prefer live men and younger ones.
If a youth should meet a maiden.
Need she run away with fright?
If his looks should win her favor?
Sure a girl may use her sight?
Tho' she must in maiden manner,
Seem to conceal her glances,
Where's the harm , if she unnoticed,
Strive to steal a sidelong look?
Should, perchance, their eyes encounter,
I can find no guilt therein;
Though her cheeks may blush a little,
Yet it will not strike her blind.
Glances this way—glances that way —
These are followed soon by sighs.
He sighs, Fairest! she says, Dearest!
He makes love, and gains the prize.
Wedlock's garland, I would wear it,
With my loved one at my side,—
Hear the village folks exclaiming, Gallant bridegroom — handsome bride.

Wollt ihr mich im Kranze seh'n?
Nicht, das ist ein nettes Bräutchen,
Und der Bursch nicht minder schön?

AGATHE: fällt mit ein. Und der Bursch nicht minder schön!

ANNCHEN: Aber, lass uns auch zu Bette geh'n!

AGATHE: Nicht eher, bis Max da ist!

ANNCHEN: Hat man nicht seine Noth mit euch Liebesleutchen! (Ab)

AGATHE: (joining in). Gallant bridgegroom — handsome bride.

ANNCHEN: But now let us go to bed.

AGATHE: Not until Max is back!

ANNCHEN: What troublesome people you lovers are. (Exit)

ZWEITE SCENE

AGATHE: allein. Wie naht mir der Schlummer, Bevor ich ihn geseh'n? —
Ja, Liebe pflegt mit Kummer Stets Hand in Hand zu geh'n!
Ob Mond auf seinem Pfad wohl lacht!
(Sie öffnet das Fenster.)
Welch' schöne Nacht!
(Betend.) Leise, leise, Fromme Weise!
Schwing' dich auf zum Sternenkreise.
Lied, erschalle!
Feiernd walle
Mein Gebet zur Himmelshalle! — (Hinausschauend.)
O wie hell die goldnen Sterne,
Mit wie reinem Glanz sie glüh'n!
Nur dort in der Berge Ferne, Scheint ein Wetter aufzuzieh'n.
Dort am Wald auch schwebt ein Heer Düst'rer Wolken dumpf und schwer,
Zu dir wende
Ich die Hände,
Herr ohn' Anfang und ohn' Ende!
Vor Gefahren
Uns zu wahren,
Sende deine Engelschaaren! — (Wieder hinausschauend.)
Alles pflegt schon längst der Ruh; Trauter Freund! was weilest du?
Ob mein Ohr auch ängstlich lauscht,
Nur der Tannen Wipfel rauscht,
Nur das Birkenlaub im Hain
Flüstert durch die bange Stille:
Nur die Nachtigall und Grille
Scheint der Nachtluft sich zu freu'n Doch wie? Trügt mich mein Ohr?
Dort klingt's wie Schritte —
Dort aus der Tannen Mitte
Kommt was hervor — —
Er ist's! er ist's!
Die Flagge der Liebe mag wehen?
(Sie winkt ihm mit einem weissen Tuche.)
Dein Mädchen wacht
Noch in der Nacht — Er scheint mich noch nicht zu sehen —
Gott! täuscht das Licht
Des Mondes nicht,
So schmückt ein Blumenstrauss den Hut —
Gewiss, er hat den besten Schuss gethan!
Das kündet Glück für morgen an!
O süsse Hoffnung! Neu belebter Muth! —
Alle meine Pulse schlagen,
Und das Herz wallt ungestüm, Süss entzückt entgegen ihm!
Konnt' ich das zu hoffen wagen? —
Ja, es wandte sich das Glück
Zu dem theuern Freund zurück,
Will sich morgen treu bewahren!
Ist's nicht Täuschung, ist's nicht Wahn? — Himmel, nimm des Dankes Zähren Für dies Pfand der Hoffnung an!

SCENE II

AGATHE: (alone). How sweetly was my slumber, Ere tasted love's first kiss,
Now, sorrows without number,
Go side by side with bliss.
Smiles now the moon's soft silvery light. (Opens the window.)
Oh, lovely night, (Praying.)
Softly, softly,
Still devoutly,
Let my voice reach realms of light.
Nature's sleeping,
See me weeping,
Father, hear my prayer tonight!
(Looking out.)
Now the distant west is clouded,
And the sky looks dark and pale,
And the mountain top is shrouded
With a dim and misty veil;
And along yon forest's side,
Clouds of darkness seem to ride.
To your power,
In this hour,
Heaven! I address my prayer.
Father! guide us,
And unite us
After life with Angel hosts. (Looking out again.)
Earth has lulled her cares to rest.
And all nature now seems blessed Where do you linger, love! oh, where?
Nothing but gently breathing air
Whispers in my anxious ear.
Or the nightgale's sweet calling
On the dry leaves gently falling;
But no step approaches near.
But hark! through the silent night
A horn is sounding!
And footsteps nearer bounding,
Quickly and light!
It is he! It is he!
Love's flag I'll wave for you!
(Waves a handkerchief.)
Still wakes the maid
In midnight shade —
The moonbeam is shining bright,
Heavens! does it mock my sight?
With flowery wreaths his hair is bound,
As conquering marksman he is crowned.
This tells of hope for coming day!
Sweet expectation! — all my fears away!
Ah! now each pulse is beating wildly
And my heart is throbbing high,
Each cold breeze now passing by,
Seems to whisper me more mildly
Every star that shines above,
Shines as a token of our love;
Yes, I hear his step approaching —
Is it fancy? now more near;
Heaven hear the grateful maiden,
Oh! accept the grateful tear.

DRITTE SCENE

Agathe, MAX. Gleich nach ihm ANNCHEN.

AGATHE: Bist du endlich da, lieber Max?

MAX: Meine Agathe! Sie umarmen sich. Verzeiht, wenn ihr meinetwegen aufgeblieben seid! Leider komm' ich nur auf wenig Augenblicke —

AGATHE: Du willst doch nicht wieder fort? Es sind Gewitter im Anzuge.

MAX: Ich muss!

AGATHE: Du scheinst übel gelaunt. Wieder unglücklich gewesen?

MAX: Nein! nein! Im Gegentheil!

AGATHE: Nicht? gewiss nicht?

ANNCHEN: (zu Max). Was hast du gewonnen? Wenn's ein Band ist, Vetter! musst du mir's schenken. Bitte, bitte! Agathe hat schon Bänderkram genug von dir!

AGATHE: Was hast du getroffen, Max? Heute ist mir's von Wichtigkeit.

MAX: (mit Verlegenheit). Ich habe — ich war gar nicht beim Sternschiessen!

AGATHE: Und sagst doch, du seist glücklich gewesen?

MAX: Ja doch! wunderbar, unglaublich glücklich. Sieh! (Zeigt ihr den Federbusch auf dem Hute.) Den grössten Raubvogel hab' ich aus den Wolken geholt! (Bemerkt Blut an ihrer Stirn.) Um aller Heiligen willen, was ist dir begegnet?

AGATHE: Nichts! soviel als nichts! Es heilt noch vor'm Brautgang. Du sollst dich d'rum deines Bräutchens nicht schämen!

MAX: Aber so sagt doch nur — —

ANNCHEN: Das Bild dort fiel herunter — —

MAX: Dort, der Urvater Cuno!

AGATHE: Wie bist du? Es ist sonst kein Bild hier.

MAX: Der wackere gottesfürchtige Cuno?

SCENE III

AGATHE, MAX, afterwards ANNCHEN.

AGATHE: Here at last, dear Max!

MAX: Dearest Agathe! (they embrace.) Pardon me, if you have remained up on my account! Sorry that I can only stay a few moments.

AGATHE: You will not go out again? A storm is approaching.

MAX: I must

AGATHE: (anxiously). You seem in evil humor.
Were you again unlucky?

MAX: No, no! Just the contrary!

AGATHE: Are you certain, dearest?

ANNCHEN: (to Max). What did you gain? If 'tis a ribbon, cousin, you must present it to me. Will you? Agathe has already ribbons enough from you.

AGATHE: What did you shoot, Max? Today, it is of importance to me.

MAX: (embarrassed). I have— but I was not at all at the target shooting!

AGATHE: And yet you say you were successful?

MAX: Yes, wonderfully successful. See! (points to the eagle feathers on his hat.) I brought the largest bird down from the clouds. (Observes her forehead.) For heaven's sake, what has happened to you?

AGATHE: Nothing! at least not much! It will all be well before our wedding day. You will not need to be ashamed of your little bride.

MAX: But tell me—

ANNCHEN: Yon portrait fell down.

MAX: What! The first Cuno!

AGATHE: How strange you speak! There is no other portrait here.

MAX: The brave and pious Cuno!

ANNCHEN: Halb und halb war Agathe selbst Schuld. Wer hiess ihr auch, schon nach sieben Uhr immer an's Fenster zu laufen!

MAX Um sieben Uhr?

ANNCHEN: Du hörst's ja! die Thurmuhr drüben im Dorfe hatte kaum ausgeschlagen.

MAX: Seltsam! (Vor sich.) Um diese Zeit schoss ich den Bergadler. (Max steht in Gedanken). Ich muss wieder fort!

AGATHE: Aber was treibt dich?

MAX: Ich habe — ich bin noch ein Mal glücklich gewesen —

AGATHE: Noch ein Mal?

MAX: Ja doch! ja! (Ohne Agathen ansehen zu können). Ich hab' in der Dämmerung einen Sechzehnender geschossen, der muss noch hereingeschafft werden, sonst stehlen ihn des Nachts die Bauern.

AGATHE: Wo liegt der Hirsch?

MAX: Ziemlich weit — im tiefen Walde — bei der Wolfsschlucht!

AGATHE: Wie? was? Entsetzen!
Dort in der Schreckensschlucht?

ANNCHEN: Der wilde Jäger soll dort hetzen,
Und wer ihn hört, ergreift die Flucht.

MAX: Darf Furcht im Hirn des Waidmanns hausen?

AGATHE: Doch sündigt der, wer Gott versucht.

MAX: Ich bin vertraut mit jenem Grausen,
Das Mitternacht im Walde weht,
Wenn sturmbewegt die Eichen sausen,
Der Häher krächzt, die Eule schwebt.
(Nimmt Hut und Büchse.)

AGATHE: Mir ist so bang, o bleibe!
O eile, eile nicht so schnell!

ANNCHEN: Ihr ist so bang, o bleibe!
O eile, eile nicht so schnell!

MAX: Noch birgt sich nicht die Mondenscheibe.
Noch strahlt ihr Schimmer dämmerhell;
Doch bald wird sie den Schein verlieren —

ANNCHEN: Willst du den Himmel observiren?
Das wär' nun meine Sache nicht!

AGATHE: O kann dich meine Angst nicht rühren?

MAX: Mich ruft von hinnen — Wort und Pflicht!

AGATHE, ANNCHEN, MAX: Leb wohl!
Er geht hastig fort und kehrt in der Thür noch einmal zurück. Mit Wehmuth.

ANNCHEN: Partly it was Agathe's own fault. Why should she, even at seven o'clock run every instant to the window, and look for you?

MAX: At seven o'clock?

ANNCHEN: As I tell you! the village clock had just struck the hour.

MAX: Strange! (Aside.) At that hour I shot the eagle. (Absorbed in thought.) I must again away.

AGATHE: But why this haste?

MAX: I have—I have been fortunate a second time—

AGATHE: A second time?

MAX: Yes, yes! (without looking at her.)
At twilight I shot a very large stag! I must bring it in, else the bears will steal it before morning.

AGATHE: Where lies the stag?

MAX: Far from here, in the deepest of the forest in the Wolf's glen.

AGATHE: Where? What? Oh terror!
In yonder gloomy glen?

ANNCHEN: The demon huntsman haunts its hollow,
And drags his victims to his den.

MAX: Should fables daunt the huntsman's mind!

AGATHE: He who scorns may find dangers!

MAX: I scorn those weak and childish terrors,
That haunt the wood at midnight hour,
When storms are blowing, oaks are cracking,
When owlets cry, and dark clouds lour. (Takes his hat and rifle.)

AGATHE: Oh! terror fills my bosom,
Then do not hurry away like this!

ANNCHEN: See! terror fills her bosom,
Oh then awhile delay!

MAX: Although the moon, as yet unclouded, Spreads around her silvery ray,
Too soon by darkness it will be shrouded.

ANNCHEN: Can neither love nor duty move thee,
A little moment yet to stay?

AGATHE: Do not these sighs, these tears, reprove you!

MAX: My duty calls — I must obey.

AGATHE, ANNCHEN, MAX: Farewell!
(Max hastily withdraws, but turns at the door.)

MAX: Doch hast du auch vergeben Den Vorwurf, den Verdacht?

AGATHE: Nichts fühlt mein Herz als Beben!
Nimm meiner Warnung Acht!

ANNCHEN: So ist das Jägerleben!
Nicht Ruh' bei Tag und Nacht!

AGATHE: Weh' mir! Ich muss dich lassen!

ANNCHEN: Such', Beste, dich zu fassen!

MAX: Bald wird der Mond erblassen —

AGATHE, ANNCHEN: Denk' an Agathe's Wort!

MAX: Mein Schicksal reisst mich fort!

VIERTE SCENE

Die Wolfsschlucht. Caspar ohne Hut und Oberkleid.

STIMMEN UNSICHTBARER GEISTER: Milch des Mondes fiel auf's Kraut — Uhui!
Spinnweb' ist mit Blut bethaut — Uhui!
Eh' noch wieder Abend grau't — Uhui!
Ist sie todt, die zarte Braut — Uhui!
Eh' noch wieder sinkt die Nacht,
Ist das Opfer dargebracht.
Uhui! Uhui! Uhui!

FÜNFTE SCENE

Die Uhr schlägt ganz in der Ferne dumpf Zwölf. Als der zwölfte Schlag fällt, reisst Caspar den Hirschfänger heftig heraus und stösst ihn in den Todtenschädel.

CASPER: (erhebt den Hirschfänger mit dem Todtenkopfe und ruft): Samiel! Samiel! erschein'!
Bei des Zaub'rers Hirngebein!
Samiel! Samiel! erschein'!
Ein Felsen spaltet sich. Samiel wird sichtbar. Caspar wirft sich vor ihm nieder.

SAMIEL: Was rufst du mich?

CASPAR: Du weisst, dass meine Frist Schier abgelaufen ist —

SAMIEL: Morgen!

CASPAR: Verlängere sie noch einmal mir —

SAMIEL: Nein!

CASPAR: Ich bringe neue Opfer dir —

SAMIEL: Welche?

CASPAR: Mein Jagdgesell', er naht —
Er, der noch nie dein dunkles Reich betrat!

SAMIEL: Was sein Begehr?

CASPAR: Freikugeln sind's, auf die er Hoffnung baut —

MAX: Oh! does your heart forgive
My hasty words tonight!

AGATHE: Oh yes! my heart forgives you,
Nor you my warning slight.

ANNCHEN: Such is the huntsman's fortune,
No rest, nor night nor day.

AGATHE: Ah then! and must I leave thee?

ANNCHEN: No, sweet, let that not grieve you

MAX: Soon will the moon too leave me.

AGATHE, ANNCHEN: Think of Agathe's word!

MAX: Fate calls, and will be heard.
(Exit.)

SCENE IV

(The Wolf's Glen, CASPAR without hat or coat.)

CHORUS OF INVISIBLE SPIRITS:
Milk of moon fell on the sod, Uhui!
Spiderwebs are stained with blood, Uhui!
Ere another eve is sped, Uhui!
A sweet, gentle bride is dead. Uhui!
Ere descends another sun. Uhui!
Our victim will be won, Uhui!

SCENE V

(A clock in the distance strikes twelve. At the last stroke, CASPAR draws his hanger, and strikes it into a skull.

CASPAR (raises his hanger with the skull). Zamiel, Zamiel, appear!
By the dark deeds doing here,
By the wizard's skull appear!
(A rock opens and Zamiel appears, Caspar prostrates himself.)

ZAMIEL: Why have you called me?

CASPAR: My course is almost done,
My race is nearly run.

ZAMIEL: Tomorrow!

CASPAR: Once more prolong this life to me —

ZAMIEL: No.

CASPAR: I'll give you another victim

ZAMIEL: Whom?

CASPAR: My comrade he is near,
Who never yet dared here appear.

ZAMIEL: What does he seek?

CASPAR: Those fatal balls, which you alone may guide.

SAMIEL: Sechse treffen, sieben äffen.

CASPAR: Die siebente sei dein!
Aus seinem Rohr lenk' sie nach seiner Braut.
Dies wird ihn der Verzweiflung weih'n;
Ihn und den Vater —

SAMIEL: Noch hab' ich keinen Theil an ihr!

CASPAR: Genügt er dir allein?

SAMIEL: Das findet sich!

CASPAR: Doch schenkst du Frist? und wieder auf drei Jahr, Bring' ich ihn dir zur Beute dar!

SAMIEL: Es sei. — Bei den Pforten der Hölle!
Morgen — er oder du!
(Samiel verschwindet.)

SECHSTE SCENE

CASPAR: (steht auf, als er sich umsieht und die Kohlen erblickt.) Trefflich bedient. (Thut einen Zug aus der Jagdflasche). Gesegn' es Samiel! Er hat mich warm gemacht! — Aber wo bleibt Max? Sollt' er wortbrüchig werden? — Samiel hilf! — Er geht im Kreise hin und her. Die Kohlen drohen zu verlöschen. Er kniet zu ihnen nieder, legt Reiss auf und bläst an. Die Eule und andere Vögel heben dabei die Flügel, als wollten sie anfachen.

MAX: (erscheint auf dem Felsen). Ha! — Furchtbar gähnt
Der düst're Abgrund! — welches Grau'n!
Das Auge wähnt
In einen Höllenpfuhl zu schau'n!
Wie dort sich Wetterwolken ballen!
Der Mond verliert von seinem Schein!
Gespenst'ge Nebelbilder wallen!
Belebt ist das Gestein!
Und hier — husch! husch!
Fliegt Nachtgevögel auf im Busch!
Rothgraue, narb'ge Zweige strecken Nach mir die Riesenfaust!
Nein, ob das Herz auch graust,
Ich muss! Ich trotze alle Schrecken!
(Er klettert einige Schritte herab.)

CASPAR: (richtet sich auf und erblickt ihn). Dank, Samiel! Die Frist ist gewonnen! (Zu Max.) Kommst du endlich, Kamerad? Ist das auch recht, mich allein zu lassen? Siehst du nicht, wie mir's sauer wird!
(Hat das Feuer mit dem Adlerflügel angefacht und erhebt dieses im Gespräch gegen Max.)

MAX: (nach dem Adlerflügel starrend) Ich schoss den Adler aus hoher Luft;
Ich kann nicht rückwärts — mein

ZAMIEL: Six will obey — the seventh betray.

CASPAR: Yours be the seventh ball
And from his rifle guide it to his bride.
Thus bringing deep despair on all;
Him and her father —

ZAMIEL: In her I have no share as yet —

CASPAR: Are you content with one!

ZAMIEL: We see when all is done.

CASPAR: Grant this delay, and before three years have passed
I'll bring you Max, whom death has won.

ZAMIEL: Be it so — By the gates of hell!
Tomorrow — he or you! (Zamiel disappears)

SCENE VI

CASPAR (rising wiping his forehead and looking at the coals) Well helped (drinks.) Bless you Zamiel! But his presence was hot! — Where can Max delay? Should he break his word? — Help Zamiel! — (Enters the magic circle, and kneels down to fan the coals. The owl and other birds raise their wings as if to fan also.)

MAX (appears on the rocks). Ha! sad and drear!
In yonder darkness horror dwells
And to listening fear
A fiendish tale of terror tells.
The distant thunder bursts yon clouds.
The moon with blood has stained her light.
What forms are those in misty shrouds
That stalk before my sight!
And here—hush! hush!
Night birds light on this bush,
And giant arms are reaching—bending
Through yonder oak at me;
Oh! shall I stay or flee?
I must! And if the world were ending.
(He descends a few steps.)

CASPAR: (rising, discovers him.) Thanks, Zamiel! the respite is gained. (To Max.) At last you come, comrade? Is that right, to have me alone? See how hard I am at work! (Fans the fire with an eagle's wing, and shows it to Max.)

MAX: (staring at the wing). I shot that bird of love on high, Return I cannot—cannot fly.
(Staring at the opposite rock.)

Schicksal ruft! —
(Blickt starr nach dem gegenüberstehenden Felsen.)
Wehe mir!

CASPAR: So komm' doch! die Zeit eilt — —

MAX: Ich kann nicht hinab!

CASPAR: Hasenherz! Klimmst ja sonst wie eine Gemse!

MAX: Sieh' dorthin! Sieh!
Er deutet nach dem Felsen, wo man eine weissverschleierte Gestalt erblickt.
Was dort sich weist,
Ist meiner Mutter Geist!
So lag sie im Sarg, so ruht sie im Grab!
Sie fleht mit warnendem Blick,
Sie winkt mir zurück.

CASPAR: (vor sich). Hilf, Samiel! (Laut.) Alberne Fratzen! Ho, hoho! Sieh' noch einmal hin, damit du die Folgen deiner feigen Thorheit erkennest.
Die verschleierte Gestalt ist verschwunden. Man erblickt Agathe's Gestalt. Sie gleicht völlig einer Wahnsinnigen, und scheint im Begriff, sich in den Wasserfall herunter zu stürzen.

MAX: Agathe! — Sie springt in den Fluss!
Hinab! ich muss!
(Die Gestalt ist verschwunden. Max klimmt vollends herab.)

CASPAR: Ich denke wohl auch!

MAX: Hier bin ich! Was hab' ich zu thun?

CASPAR: (wirft ihm die Jagdflasche zu.) Zuerst trink'! Die Nachtluft ist kühl und feucht. Willst du selbst giessen? Max! ich mag nicht.

MAX: Nein! das ist wider die Abrede.

CASPAR: Fasse Muth! Tritt in den Kreis! Er ist eine eherne Mauer gegen Geistergewalt. Was du auch hören und sehen magst, verhalte dich ruhig. Käm' vielleicht ein Unbekannter, uns zu helfen, wär' es auch ein schwarzer Reiter auf schwarzem, funkensprühendem Ross, was kümmert's dich? Kömmt And'res, was thut's! So etwas sieht ein Gescheidter gar nicht!

MAX: (tritt ein.) O wie wird das enden!

CASPAR: Umsonst ist der Tod! Nur wann du mich selbst zittern siehst, dann komm' mir zu Hülfe und rufe, was ich rufen werde. Sonst sind wir verloren. (Max macht eine Bewegung des Einwurfs.) Still! Die Augenblicke sind kostbar! — (Nimmt die Giesskelle.) Merk' auf, damit du die Kunst lernst. (Er nimmt die Ingredienzien aus der Jagdtasche und wirft sie nach und nach hinein.) Hier ist das Blei! — Etwas gestossenes Glas von zerbrochenen

Woe is me!

CASPAR: Come down then, time flies —

MAX: I cannot descend.

CASPAR: Coward! you can usually climb like a chamois.

MAX: See, Caspar, see!
(He points to a rock, where a ghost appears.)
By that oak tree,
It is my mother's shade!
Thus she looked, when she lay in death.
She fondly seems to pray,
And beacons me away.

CASPAR: (aside). Help, Zamiel! (Aloud.) Silly nonsense! Oh, ho, ho! Look again, and perceive the consequences of your foolish cowardice. (The mother's ghost has disappeared, and Agathe's figure is seen. She appears a maniac on the point of leaping over a precipice.)

MAX: Agathe! she plunges below!
Then, then I'll go!
(The figure has disappeared. Max descends.)

CASPAR: I thought so.

MAX: Here I am! What shall I do?

CASPAR: (offering his flask). Drink first; the night air is cold and damp.—Will you cast the balls yourself? I would rather not.

MAX: No! that is against our compact.

CASPAR: Take courage then! Enter the circle! This is an iron wall against the power of spirits. Whatever you may hear, or see, remain quiet. Should a stranger come, to assist us, even if it were a black horseman, on a fire-breathing horse, care not, and stir not. Wise men don't notice such things.

MAX: (enters the circle). Oh! How will this end?

CASPAR: Nothing is in vain. Only when you see me tremble, come to my assistance, and speak what I shall speak. Otherwise we are lost. (Max is about to interrupt him.) Silence! the moments are precious!— (he takes the crucible.) Observe me, that you may learn the art. (Takes the ingredients from his pouch, and throws them in.) First the lead.—A little glass of broken church-windows; easily found!—Some quicksilver!—

Kirchenfenstern; das findet sich! — Etwas Quecksilber! — Drei Kugeln, die schon einmal getroffen! — Das rechte Auge eines Wiedehopfs! Das linke eines Luchses! — Probatum est! Und nun den Kugelsegen.
(In drei Pausen sich mit dem Kopfe gegen die Erde neigend.) Schütze, der im Dunkeln wacht!
Samiel! Samiel! hab' Acht!
Steh mir bei in dieser Nacht,
Bis der Zauber ist vollbracht!
Salbe mir so Kraut als Blei,
Segn' es sieben, neun und drei,
Dass die Kugel tüchtig sei!
Samiel! Samiel! herbei!
(Die Masse in der Giesskelle fängt an zu kochen. Caspar giesst, lässt die Kugeln aus der Form fallen und ruft: Eins! Das Echo wiederholt: Eins! Caspar zählt Zwei! Echo wiederholt. Caspar zählt Drei! Echo wie oben. Caspar zählt ängstlich Vier! Echo wie oben. Caspar, immer ängstlicher, zählt Fünf! Echo wiederholt. Das wilde Heer.) Wehe! Das wilde Heer!

CHORUS: Durch Berg und Thal, durch Schlund und Schacht, Durch Thau und Wolken, Sturm und Nacht!
Durch Höhle, Sumpf und Erdenkluft!
Durch Feuer, Erde, See und Luft!
Jaho! Jaho! Wau! Wau!

CASPAR: Sechs! Wehe! Echo: Sechs! Wehe! (Caspar, zuckend und schreiend.) Samiel! Samiel! Samiel, hilf! — Sieben! — Samiel! (Echo: Sieben! — Samiel!) (Caspar wird zu Boden geworfen.)

MAX: (gleichfalls vom Sturme hinund hergeschleudert, springt aus dem Kreise, fasst einen Ast des verdorrten Baums und schreit): Samiel!
In demselben Augenblick fängt das Ungewitter an, sich zu beruhigen, an der Stelle des verdorrten Baums steht der schwarze Jäger, nach Maxens Hand fassend.

SAMIEL: Hier bin ich!
Max stürzt zu Boden. Es schlägt Eins. Plötzliche Stille. — Samiel ist verschwunden. Caspar liegt noch mit dem Gesicht zu Boden. Max richtet sich convulsivisch auf.

■ DRITTER AKT

ERSTE SCENE

MAX und CASPAR. Waldscene.

Three balls that have once hit before!—The right eye of a falcon!—The left eye of a lynx!—Probatum est, and now the charm! (Bending thrice to the ground.)
Huntsman of the midnight air,
Zamiel, Zamiel take care.
And assist me in this night,
That the charm may work aright!
Spirit of the evil dead,
Bless the lead in mystic numbers.
Bless the seven, nine and three,
Zamiel, hear me call on you!
(The lead boils up. Caspar casts a bullet and cries One! Echo repeats "One." Apparitions. Caspar counts Two. Echo as before. Apparitions. Caspar counts Three. Echo, etc., as before. Caspar counts Four. Echo and more Apparitions. Caspar fearfully counts Five. Echo as before, and the wild host rushes through the air.) Horror! the wild huntsman!

CHORUS: Through hill and dale, through rock and wood,
Through dew and clouds, through storm and flood,
Through glen and swamp and tempest light,
Through fire and earth, we fly by night,
Ya ho! Ya ho? Ho! ho!

CASPAR: Six! wo!—(Echo repeats.) Six! wo! (Terrible alarm, darkness and apparitions. Caspar cries:) Zamiel! Zamiel! Zamiel! help! Seven! Zamiel! (Echo "Seven! Zamiel!" Caspar is thrown to the ground.)

MAX: (jumping from the circle). Zamiel! (takes hold of a branch of a withered tree. At this moment the tempest subsides, and the Black Forester appears instead of the tree.)

ZAMIEL: Behold me! (Max sinks to the ground. The clock strikes one. Sudden silence. Zamiel has disappeared. Caspar remains on the ground, and Max slowly rises up.)

■ ACT III

SCENE I

(Scene in the forest, MAX and CASPAR.)

MAX: Gut, dass wir allein sind! — Hast du noch von den Glückskugeln? Gieb!

CASPAR: Das wär' mir! Bedenk! Drei nahm ich, vier für dich! Kann ein Bruder redlicher theilen?

MAX: Aber ich habe nur noch eine! Was hast du denn mit den Kugeln angefangen?

CASPAR: Da sieh, nach den Elstern hab' ich zwei verschossen.

MAX: So hast du noch eine; gieb mir sie!

CASPAR: Dass ich kein Narr wär'! Ich noch eine — du noch eine! Die heb' ich dir fein auf zu dem Probeschuss!

MAX: Gieb mir deine Dritte!

CASPAR: Ich mag nicht — —

DRITTER JAEGER: (tritt ein, zu Max): Der Fürst verlangt Euch; aber augenblicklich! Es ist ein Streit entstanden, wie weit Euer Gewehr trifft.
(Ab.)

MAX: Sogleich! (Zu Caspar.) Gieb mir die Dritte!

CASPAR: Nein, und wenn du mir zu Füssen fielst! —

MAX: Schuft! (Ab.)

CASPAR: Immerhin! — Jetzt geschwind die sechste Kugel verbraucht. (Er ladet.) Die siebente, die Teufelskugel, hebt er mir schon zum Probeschusse auf, Hahaha! Wohl bekomm's der schönen Braut! — dort läuft ein Füchslein; dem die sechste in den Pelz.
(Schiesst und ab.)

ZWEITE SCENE

Agathens Stübchen. Agathe allein.

Und ob die Wolke sie verhülle,
Die Sonne bleibt am Himmelszelt!
Es waltet dort ein heil'ger Wille;
Nicht lindem Zufall dient die Welt!
Das Auge, rein und ewig klar,
Nimmt aller Wesen liebend wahr.
Für mich auch wird der Höchste sorgen,
Dem kindlich Herz und Sinn vertraut!
Und wär' dies auch mein letzter Morgen, Rief mich sein Vaterwort als Braut.
Sein Auge, rein und ewig klar,
Nimmt aller seiner Kinder wahr!

DRITTE SCENE

AGATHE: Ich habe so quälende Träume gehabt.

MAX: Luckily we are alone! — Have you any more charmed bullets? Give them to me.

CASPAR: Not I. Consider! I took only three, and gave you four; could I divide more fairly?

MAX: But I have only one left. What did you do with your bullets?

CASPAR: Behold! I shot two of them at sparrows.

MAX: Then you have still one left; give it to me.

CASPAR: Indeed I shall not! I have still one — so have you! Therefore save that one for your trial shot.

MAX: Give me your last!

CASPAR: I will not.

FORESTER: (entering to Max). The Prince commands your presence immediately. A dispute has arisen as to the distance your rifle will carry a ball.
(Exit.)

MAX I come! (to Caspar) Give me the third.

CASPAR: No, and if you begged it on your knees.

MAX: Villain! (Exit.)

CASPAR: As you like! — now to shoot off the sixth (loads his rifle.) The seventh, the devil's ball, he will be sure to keep for the trial shot! Ha! ha! ha! May his fair bride enjoy it! — Yonder runs a little fox; let him have the sixth.
(Fires and exit.)

SCENE II

(Agathe's room. Agathe alone.)

The clouds by tempest may be driven Across the glorious throne of day;
The Sun that never sets in heaven,
Soon smiles the gathering clouds away;
For though over earth clouds may lower.
Over Heavens will they have no power.
And thus although the clouds of sorrow,
A shadow over the soul may throw;
Yet hope that dwells within the morrow,
Though hidden, will not cease to glow;
For Heaven's eye, which never sleeps,
A watch over all its children keeps.

SCENE III

AGATHE: I have had such fearful dreams.

ANNCHEN: Träume? Was träumtest du denn?

AGATHE: Es klingt wunderbar. Mich träumte, ich sei in eine weisse Taube verwandelt und fliehe von Ast zu Aste. Max zielte nach mir, ich stürzte; aber nun war die weisse Taube verschwunden, ich war wieder Agathe, und ein grosser Raubvogel wälzte sich im Blute.

ANNCHEN: (klatscht in die Hände.) Allerliebst! allerliebst!

AGATHE: Wie kannst du dich nur über so etwas freuen?

ANNCHEN: Nun, der schwarze Raubvogel — da hast du ja die ganze Bescheerung! Du arbeitest noch spät an dem weissen Brautkleide und dachtest gewiss vor dem Einschlafen an deinen heutigen Staat; da hast du die weisse Taube! Du erschräckst vor den Adlerfedern auf Maxens Hute, es schauert dir überhaupt vor Raubvögeln; da hast du den schwarzen Vogel! Bin ich nicht eine geschickte Traumdeuterin? Vor sich. Fällt mir denn nichts ein, sie zu zerstreuen? Laut, mit scheinbarer Ernsthaftigkeit und Furcht. Freilich, Alles kann man nicht verwerfen! Ich selbst weiss da ein grausenerregendes Beispiel.

Einst träumte meiner sel'gen Base,
Die Kammerthür eröffne sich,
Und — kreideweiss war ihre Nase;
Denn näher, furchtbar näher schlich
Ein Ungeheuer, Mit Augen, wie Feuer,
Mit klirrender Kette — —
Es nahte dem Bette,
In welchem sie schlief —
Ich meine die Base
Mit kreidiger Nase —
Und stöhnte, ach! so hohl! und ächzte, ach! so tief!
Sie kreuzte sich, rief!
Nach manchem Angst- und Stossgebet: Susanne! Margreth!
Und sie kamen mit Licht —
Und — denke nur? — Und — Erschrick mir nur nicht! —
Und graust mir doch! — und — Der Geist war Nero — der Kettenhund.
(Agathe wendet sich unwillig ab.)
Du zürnst mir? —
Doch kannst du wähnen,
Ich fühle nicht mit dir? —
Nur ziemen einer Braut nicht Thränen!
Trübe Augen,
Liebchen, taugen
Einem holden Bräutchen nicht.
Dass durch Blicke
Sie bestricke
Und erquicke,
Alles um sich her entzücke,
Das ist ihre schönste Pflicht. —
Lass in öden Mauern Büsserinnen trauern.
Dir winkt ros'ger Hoffnung Licht,

ANNCHEN: Dreams? Pray what did you dream?

AGATHE: It may sound strangely. I dreamed that I was changed to a white dove, and flying from tree to tree. Max aimed at me, and I fell; but now the white dove had disappeared, I was again Agathe, and a large black bird of prey was weltering in its blood.

ANNCHEN (clapping her hands). Beautiful! beautiful!

AGATHE: How can you rejoice at such a thing?

ANNACHEN: Well, well, the large black bird — cannot you understand the whole dream? Till late at night you worked at your white bridal dress, and before going to sleep you were surely thinking of your finery of today; that explains the white dove. You were frightened at the eagle plumes in Max's hat, and you always fear birds of prey; this explains the black bird! Do I not read dreams well! (Aside.) Can I not think of something to divert her? (Aloud.) Certainly, we should not leave all dreams unheeded, I know a fearful example myself.

Once dreamt my poor and dead old aunty,
The door flew open as she slept;
And blue her lips, her nose grew whiter,
For nearer, nearer, nearer, crept
A monster dire,
With bright eyes like fire,
His chains rattled loudly,
His tail curled more proudly,
As onward he stept;
His claws too grew longer,
Her terrors waxed stronger,
She groaned, ah! so long, and groaned, ah! so deep!
She crossed herself cries,
With many prayers, and many sighs, Susanna! Margaret!
And they rushed in with light,
And — only think — and —
Oh! terrible sight —
And — still I quake — and
The ghost was — Nero — the mastive cur.
(Agathe turns away in anger.)
No, do not frown;
You know your sorrow
Is all my own;
But tears suit not the bridal morrow.
Eyes of gladness,
Not of sadness,
Should shine on the bridal hour.
Tender fancies,
Heart that dances,
Smiles of pleasure,
Best become the bridal measure:
These should be the maiden's dowry
Let your old ones only Live in penance lonely;

Schon entzündet sind die Kerzen
Zum Verein getreuer Herzen — Holde Freundin zage nicht!
Nun muss ich aber auch geschwind den Kranz holen. Die alte Elsbeth hat ihn eben aus der Stadt mitgebracht und ich vergessliches Ding liess ihn unten. Horch, da kommen die Brautjungfern schon!

VIERTE SCENE

ANNCHEN: (im Abgehen.) Guten Tag, liebe Mädchen! Da, singt immer die Braut an. Ich komme gleich wieder (Ab.)

EINE BRAUTJUNGFER: Wir winden dir den Jungfernkranz Mit veilchenblauer Seide.
Wir führen dich zum Spiel und Tanz, Zu Glück und Liebesfreude.

ALLE: Schöner grüner Jungfernkranz!
Veilchenblaue Seide!

EINE BRAUTJUNGFER: Lavendel, Myrt' und Tymian,
Das wächst in meinem Garten;
Wie lang bleibt doch der Freiersmann?
Ich kann es kaum erwarten.

ALLE (wie oben.) Schöner, grüner Jungfernkranz etc.

EINE BRAUTJUNGFER: Sie hat gesponnen sieben Jahr
Den gold'nen Flachs am Rocken, Die Schleier sind wie Spinnweb' klar
Und grün der Kranz der Locken.

ALLE: Schöner, grüner Jungfernkranz etc.

EINE BRAUTJUNGFER: Und als der schmucke Freier kam, War'n sieben Jahr verronnen;
Und weil sie der Herzliebste nahm,
Hat sie den Kranz gewonnen.

ALLE: Schöner, grüner Jungfernkranz etc.

FÜNFTE SCENE

ANNCHEN: mit einer zugebundenen runden Schachtel eintretend, fällt mit ein. Schöner, grüner Jungfernkranz etc.
Nun, da bin ich wieder! Aber fast wär' ich auf die Nase gefallen. Kannst du dir's denken, Agathe? der alte Herr Cuno hat schon wieder gespukt.

AGATHE: (beklommen.) Fast könnt' es mir ängsten! Er war der Urvater unsers Stammes —

ANNCHEN: Du zitterst auch vor einer Spinne! Nun frisch! Noch einmal das Ende des Liedchens! Sie schneidet den Bindfaden entzwei, kniet tändelnd vor Agathen nider und überreicht ihr die Schachtel.

ALLE: ausser Agathen. Schöner, grüner Jungfernkranz etc.

Youth dwells in hope's rosy sphere.
Now the stars of love are beaming,
Now the nuptial torch is streaming;
Dearest cousin, banish fear!
But now I must quickly go and get your wreath. Old Elsbeth has just brought it home, but I have forgotten and left it below, Hark! the bridesmaids are already coming.

SCENE IV

ANNCHEN (going off.) Good morning, dear girls. There, sing, to the bride. I shall soon be with you again.
(Exit.)

A BRIDESMAID: We twine a bridal wreath for you
Of violet silk and flowers;
And all thy future life may be
But spent in joyous hours.

CHORUS: We twine a bridal wreath for you,
Of violet silk and flowers, etc.

A BRIDESMAID: Here's evergreen, and violets blue,
And roses all the rarest:
I'm sighing for my wooer true —
The dearest and the fairest.

CHORUS: A bridal wreath, etc.

A BRIDESMAID: For seven long years, the maiden dear
Spun golden flax so sprightly;
Her web then was crystal clear,
Her eyes they shone so brightly.

CHORUS: A bridal wreath , etc.

A BRIDESMAID: And when at last the wooer came,
Her single race was run then:
The maiden took her lover's name,
The wreath was won then.

CHORUS: A bridal wreath, etc.

SCENE V

ANNCHEN: (entering with a box and joins the strain). A bridal wreath, etc.
Well, here I am back again! But I came near having a fall. Just imagine, dear Agathe, the Good old Herr Cuno has walked down again.

AGATHE: This almost frightens me, He was the first of our race.

ANNCHEN: You tremble at a spider! Take courage! Let us once more repeat the last strain. (She cuts the string, and kneeling before Agathe presents her the box.)

CHORUS: A bridal wreath, etc.

AGATHE: öffnet und fährt zurück. Ach!
Alle, ausser Annchen, die noch kniet, fahren gleichfalls erblassend zurück.

ANNCHEN: Nun, was ist denn? Agathe nimmt den Kranz heraus; es ist ein silberner Todtenkranz.

ANNCHEN: sehr erschrocken. Eine Todtenkrone — Himmel, das ist — aufspringend und ihre Verlegenheit verbergend. Nein, das ist nicht zum Aushalten! da hat die alte halbblinde Frau gewiss die Schachteln vertauscht! Aber was fangen wir nun an? Verbirgt die Schachtel schnell. Weg damit! Einen Kranz müssen wir haben! Nimmt die Rosen schnell aus dem Blumentopfe, verschlingt sie zu einem Kranze und setzt ihn Agathen auf. Ein herrlicher Einfall! Sie verschlingen sich von selbst und stehen dir allerliebst. Doch nun lasst uns auch gehen. Unsere Begleiter werden sonst ungeduldig — Singt! singt!

CHOR: Schöner, grüner Jungfernkranz etc.

SECHSTE SCENE

Hoflager des Fürsten. — Ottokar, Cuno, Max, Caspar, Jäger. Nachher Agathe, Annchen, der Eremit, Brautjungfern und Landleute.

CHOR DER JÄGER: Was gleicht wohl auf Erden dem Jägervergnügen?
Wem sprudelt der Becher des Lebens so reich?
Beim Klange der Hörner im Grünen zu liegen,
Den Hirsch zu verfolgen durch Dickicht und Teich,
Ist fürstliche Freude, ist männlich Verlangen, Erstarket die Glieder und würzet das Mahl;
Wenn Wälder und Felsen uns hallend umfangen,
Tönt freier und freud'ger der volle Pokal.
Jo hoho! Drallara!
Diana ist kundig, die Nacht zu erhellen,
Wie labend am Tage ihr Dunkel uns kuhlt,
Den blutigen Wolf und den Eber zu fällen,
Der gierig die grünenden Saaten durchwühlt,
Ist fürstliche Freude, ist männlich Verlangen u. s. w.

OTTOKAR: Genug der Freuden des Mahls, werthe Freunde und Jagdgenossen! und nun noch zu etwas Ernstem. Ich genehmige sehr gern die Wahl, welche Ihr, mein alter wackerer Cuno, getroffen habt. Der von Euch erwählte Eidam gefällt mir.

AGATHE: (opens the box, and starts back). Alas!
(All the bridesmaids are equally frightened, except Annchen who still kneels.)

ANNCHEN: Well, what is the matter?
(Agathe produces the wreath from the box, which is a white death wreath.)

ANNCHEN: (also frightened). A death-wreath! Heavens, it is! (endeavoring to hide her embarrassment.) No, this is not to be endured! This old, half-blind woman has most probably exchanged the boxes. But what are we to do? (takes the box away.) Away with this! We must have a wreath. (Takes the roses from a flower-pot, and twining them into a wreath, puts it upon Agathe.) An excellent thought! They entwine naturally, and become you extremely well. Now let us go, else our companions will grow impatient. Sing girls, sing!

CHORUS: A bridal wreath, etc.

SCENE VI

(The Prince's Camp — OTTOCAR, CUNO, MAX, CASPAR, HUNTERS. Afterwards AGATHE, ANNCHEN, the HERMIT, BRIDESMAIDS and PEASANTS.)

CHORUS OF HUNTERS: What equals on earth the delight of the huntsman?
For whom does life's cup more enchantingly flow?
To follow the stag through the forests and meadows
When brightly the beams of the morning first glow.
O this is a pleasure that's worthy of princes!
And health in its wanderings, can ever be found;
More gaily the pledge of the goblet will sound.
Ho ho! ho! Drallara! etc.
The light of Diana illumines our forest.
The shades where in summer we often retreat;
Nor is the fell wolf in his covert securest.
The boar from his lair is laid at our feet.
O this is a pleasure that's worthy of princes, etc.

OTTOCAR: Enough my friends and companions, enough of pleasure! Let us proceed to something more serious. I willingly give my consent to your choice, my worthy Cuno. I am pleased with the successor and son-in-law you have chosen.

CUNO: Ich kann ihm in Allem das beste Zeugniss geben.

OTTOKAR: Wo ist die Braut?

MAX: hält die Kugel in der hohlen Hand und blickt starr auf sie hin. Dich sparte ich auf — Unfehlbare! Glückskugel! Aber du lastest jetzt zentnerschwer in meiner Hand.

CUNO: Der Zeit nach muss meine Tochter bald hier sein. Der gute Bursch hat seit einiger Zeit, wo freilich die Entscheidung seines Glücks immer mehr herannahte, ganz besondern Unstern gehabt. Ich fürchte, die Gegenwart der Braut könnte ihn in Verwirrung setzen.

OTTOKAR: Wohlauf, junger Schütz! einen Schuss, wie heut' früh deine drei ersten, und du bist geborgen! Siehst du dort auf dem Zweige die weisse Taube? Die Aufgabe ist leicht. Schiess!
Max legt an. In dem Augenblicke, da er losdrücken will, tritt Agathe mit den Uebrigen zwischen den Bäumen heraus und schreit:
Schiess nicht! Ich bin die Taube!
Der Schuss fällt. Sowohl Agathe als Caspar sinken. Hinter der Ersten tritt der Eremit hervor und fasst sie auf.

EINIGE: Schaut! o schaut!
Er traf die Braut!

ANDERE: Der Jäger stürzte vom Baum!

NOCH ANDERE: Wir wagen's kaum
Nur hinzuschau'n!
O furchtbar Schicksal, o Grau'n!

CHOR: Uns're Herzen beben, zagen!
Wär' die Schreckensthat gescheh'n?
Kaum will es das Auge wagen,
Wer das Opfer sei, zu seh'n.

AGATHE: (aus schwerer Ohnmacht erwachend.) Wo bin ich?
War's Traum nur, dass ich sank?

ANNCHEN: O fasse dich!

MAX, CUNO: Sie lebt.

EINIGE: Den Heil'gen Preis und Dank! —
Sie hat die Augen offen! —

EINIGE: Heir, dieser ist getroffen,
Der roth vom Blute liegt —

CASPAR: Ich sah den Klausner bei ihr steh'n;
Der Himmel siegt!
Es ist um mich gescheh'n!

AGATHE: (sich erholend.) Ich lebe noch; der Schreck nur warf mich nieder, Ich athme noch die liebliche Luft —

CUNO: Sie athmet frei!

MAX: Sie lächelt wieder.

AGATHE: Mein Max.

MAX: Die süsse Stimme ruft!

CUNO: I can well recommend him in every respect.

OTTOCAR: Where is the bride?

MAX: (looking at the bullet which he holds in the hollow of his hand). At least, I have saved you— you're infallible, you charmed ball! But now you lay heavily within my hand.

CUNO: It is almost time that my daughter were here. For some time past this good fellow has had especially ill luck. I almost fear that the presence of his bride may increase his confusion.

OTTOCAR: Well, then, young marksman? One shot like the three I saw this morning, and you are safe. See the white dove on yonder tree! That task is easy. Shoot.
(Max rasies his rifle. At the moment he is about to fire, Agathe appears among the trees, and cries:) Do not shoot! I am the dove.
(The shot falls. Agathe and Caspar sink. The Hermit appears behind the former, and raises her up.)

A FEW OF THE CHORUS: See!
Look! His shot has struck his bride!

OTHERS: A huntsman fell from yonder oak!

OTHERS AGAIN: We scarcely dare to look around
O scene of terror and fear!

CHORUS: Round the fearful scene of horror Dare we scarcely turn our eyes.
Who beneath this blow of terror,
Who has been the sacrifice?

AGATHE: (awaking from a swoon). Where am I?
And was it but a dream?

ANNCHEN:
Compose yourself!

MAX, CUNO: She lives!

SEVERAL: By hope's effulgent beam
Our hearts are yet surrounded!

OTHERS: See! here lies one all wounded,
Bathed in the purple tide—

CASPAR: I saw the hermit by her side;
Heaven conquers!
My life of sin is past!

AGATHE: (recovering). I live again; it was nothing but fear upon me;
I live again, to love and rejoice—

CUNO: She breathes again!

MAX: She smiles upon me.

AGATHE: My love.

MAX: It is her own loved voice!

CASPAR: (erblickt Samiel.) Du Samiel schon hier?
So hielst du dein Versprechen mir?
Nimm deinen Raub! Ich trotze dem Verderben!
Dem Himmel Fluch! — Fluch dir!
Stürzt und stirbt. Samiel ist verschwunden.

EINIGE: Ha! Das war sein Gebet im Sterben?

CUNO: Er war von je ein Bösewicht!
Ihn traf des Himmels Strafgericht!

ANDERE: Er hat dem Himmel selbst geflucht!

NOCH ANDERE: Vernahmt Ihr's nicht? Er rief den Bösen —

OTTOKAR: Fort! stürzt das Scheusal in die Wolfesschlucht!
Einige Jäger tragen den Leichnam fort. Zu Max.
Nun du kannst dieses Räthsel lösen.
Wohl schwere Unthat ist gescheh'n!
Weh'dir, wirst du nicht Alles treu gesteh'n.

MAX: Herr! unwerth bin ich Eurer Gnade;
Des Todten Trug verlockte mich,
Dass — voll Verzweiflung, ich vom Pfade
Der Frömmigkeit und Tugend wich;
Vier Kugeln, die ich heut'verschoss —
Freikugeln sind's, die ich mit Jenem goss.

OTTOKAR: So eile, mein Gebiet zu meiden,
Und kehre nimmer in dies Land!
Vom Himmel muss dei Hölle scheiden,
Nie, nie empfängst du diese reine Hand!

MAX: Ich darf nicht wagen,
Mich zu beklagen;
Denn schwach war ich, obwohl kein Bösewicht.

CUNO: Er war sonst stets getreu der Pflicht —

AGATHE: Reisst ihn nicht aus meinen Armen!

JAEGER: Er ist so brav, voll Kraft und Muth —

LANDLEUTE: O! er war immer brav und gut!

ANNCHEN: Gnäd'ger Herr! o habt Erbarmen!

OTTOKAR: Nein! —
Agathe ist so fromm, so rein — (Zu Max.)
Hinweg, hinweg aus meinem Blick!
Dein harrt der Kerker, kehrst du je zurück!

EREMIT: (tritt auf.) Wer legt auf ihn so strengen Bann?
Ein Fehltritt, ist er solcher Büssung werth?

CASPAR: (observing Zamiel).
You Zamiel, here now!
And is it thus you keep your vow?
Take then your prey! I dare you and your fiends.
Accursed by they!—and you.
(Falls and dies. Zamiel disappears.)

CHORUS: Hear! Listen to his dying prayer.

CUNO: His life was ever one of vice,
He therefore fell a fearful sacrifice.

SEVERAL: He fell a fearful sacrifice.

OTHERS: He called upon the evil spirit—

OTTOCAR: Hence! In the wolf's glen cast the wretch away!
(Several hunters carry off the corpse.)
(To Max.)
This mystery, you alone can clear it,
Reveal the cause of these strange scenes reveal,
And woe to you, if you conceal anything.

MAX: Sire, worthless do I kneel before you—
Oh let my grief assuage your wrath.
The clouds of woe were lowering over me.
I madly turned from virtue's path.
The bullets which I shot within your sight
Were charmed, and cast by him at dead of night,

OTTOCAR: Then haste, avoid my sight forever,
Nor dare return unto this land.
From heavenly virtue hell must sever,
You never shall receive this maiden's hand.

MAX: I dare not complain.
My prayer is vain;
For I was weak, although not bad at heart.

CUNO: From faith, he never did depart.

AGATHE: Oh! do not tear him from my side!

HUNTERS: His heart was never inclined to vice;

PEASANTS: But pure and pious was his mind—

ANNCHEN: Let mercy still your justice guide!

OTTOCAR: No!
Agathe is too good, too pure—
(To Max.)
Away, away, your prayers in vain.
The prison waits, if you return again.

HERMIT: (enters) Shall erring mortal here presume,
A sinful fellow mortal thus to doom?

OTTOKAR: Bist du es, heil'ger Mann!
Den weit und breit die Gegend ehrt?
Sei mir gegrüsst, Gesegneter des Herrn,
Dir bin auch ich gehorsam gern;
Sprich du sein Urtheil; deinen Willen
Will freudig ich erfüllen.

EREMIT: Es finde nie der Probeschuss mehr statt!
Ihm, Herr! (Zu Max) Du, der schwer gesündigt hat, Doch früher reines Herzens war,
Vergönnt dafür ein Probe-Jahr,
Und bleibt er dann, wie ich ihn stets erfand, Dann werde sein Agathe's Hand!

OTTOKAR: Dein Wort genüget mir!
Ein Höh'rer spricht aus dir.

ALLE: Heil unserm Herrn! Er widerstehet nicht
Dem, was der fromme Klausner spricht.

OTTOKAR: Bewährst du dich, wie dich der Greis erfand, Dann knüpf'ich selber Euer Eheband!

MAX: Die Zukunft soll mein Herz bewähren!
Stets heilig sei mir Recht und Pflicht!

AGATHE: O les't den Dank in diesen Zähren;
Das schwache Wort genügt ihm nicht!

EREMIT: Der über Sternen ist voll Gnade;
Drum ehrt es Fürsten, zu verzeih'n!

CUNO: Weicht nimmer von der Tugend Pfade, Um Eures Glückes werth zu sein!

ANNCHEN: O dann, geliebte Freundin, schmücke
Ich dich auf's Neu' zum Traualtar!

EREMIT: Doch jetzt erhebt noch Eure Blicke
Zu dem, der Schutz der Unschuld war!
Er kniet nieder und erhebt die Hände. Agathe, Cuno, Max, Annchen und mehrere des Volks folgen seinem Beispiel.

CHOR: Ja, lasst uns zum Himmel die Blicke erheben
Und fest auf die Lenkung des Ewigen bau'n;
Wer rein ist von Herzen, und schuldlos von Leben, Darf kindlich der Milde des Vaters vertrau'n.

ENDE.

OTTOCAR: And you here holy man,
Revered by high and low around
We bow to you—the blessed of the Lord.
Pay willingly obedience to your word!
Pronounce his doom; your just and pious will We'll cheerfully fulfill,

HERMIT: Let then such trials be annulled from here
And him (To Max) whose conscience once was free,
Let him pass an entire year,
In lowly penitence and prayer.
If he remains pure, as I hope he will,
Then let him be Agathe's still.

OTTOCAR: Your word suffices me
For Heaven speaks in you

CHORUS: Hail to our Prince! he willingly obeys
The pious man, in all he says.

OTTOCAR: To prove my pardon is sincere, my hand
Shall consecrate the marriage ban.

MAX: Oh! while possessed of this bright treasure,
No vicious thought shall dare intrude.

AGATHE: O! let these glowing tears of pleasure
Proclaim my bosom's gratitude.

HERMIT: As we do hope to be forgiven,
So should we others faults forgive.

CUNO: Any may the blessed award of heaven,
Decree that you may live in joy!

ANNCHEN: And oh! with what enraptured feeling Shall I now wreathe the bridal crown!

HERMIT: Now raise your hands, and humbly kneeling,
In tuneful songs your spirits breathe.
(Kneels, and others follow his example.)

CHORUS: Let us raise then our hearts and our voices to heaven
And firm on its guidance forever rely;
The penitent sinner will ever be forgiven.
To his prayer our father still will reply.

THE END

Euryanthe (1823)

MUSIC BY CARL MARIA WEBER ■ LIBRETTO BY HELMINA VON CHÉZY

This three-act grand heroic-romantic opera, set to a libretto by Helmina von Chézy (based on the medieval romance l'Histoire de Gérard de Nevers et de la très vertueuse et très chaste Euryanthe de Savoye), premiered at the Kärntnertor Theatre in Vienna on October 25, 1823. Louis VII celebrates the end of the war and Count Adolar sings the praises of his fiancé, Euryanthe of Savoy. Count Lysiart is jealous of Count Adolar and says that he doubts such virtuous women really exist. Adolar challenges him to a duel, but Lysiart suggests that if he fails to seduce Euryanthe he will give up all of his worldly possessions. The King tries to talk him out of this wager, but Adolar insists upon it, saying that he will also give up all of his worldly possessions if he loses. In the meantime, Euryanthe has been awaiting her beloved's return and confides in Eglantine, who is secretly in love with Adolar. Eglantine is the daughter of a dispossessed noble, and Adolar has been very kind to them. Eglantine learns a deep, dark family secret from Euryanthe—Emma, Adolar's sister, killed herself by drinking poison from a ring after her beloved died in battle, and her soul will not rest until a falsely accused person cries on the same ring. The keeping of this secret is a sacred trust between Euryanthe and Adolar. Lysiart is sure that he will fail in his wager until Eglantine tells him Adolar's secret and gives him the ring, taken from Emma's tomb. Having this ring in his possession and knowing the truth about Emma's death will show that Lysiart and Euryanthe share a close bond. Lysiart accuses Euryanthe before Adolar and the entire court of betraying Adolar's trust, and he shows the ring. Adolar assumes that she gave Lysiart Emma's ring as a token of her love. He gives his castle to Lysiart and takes Euryanthe into the wilderness, where he plans to kill her. He decides to spare her since she has shown that she would give up her own life for his, and he leaves her in the forest. She collapses in deep despair and is discovered by the King's hunting party. She tells them about Eglantine's plot against her; the King believes her story and promises that truth will win out. Adolar hears from his vassals that Lysiart and Eglantine are about to be married. The wedding procession passes by, and Eglantine, dreading this marriage as she is still in love with Adolar, carries on about the plot against Euryanthe. Adolar once again challenges Lysiart to a duel. The King enters and announces that Euryanthe has died of grief. Eglantine confesses her guilt, at which Lysiart kills her and is arrested. Euryanthe revives (she has been in a dead faint) and is reunited with her beloved. Emma is now finally at peace as Euryanthe has wept over the ring.

Kreise
Ein Minnelied zu Euryanthes Preise.
(Der König winkt. Zwei Damen reichen Adolar die Zither, die neben seinem Wappen hängt.)

ADOLAR: Unter blühenden Mandelbäumen,
An der Loire grünem Strand,
O wie selig ists zu träumen,
Wo ich meine Liebe fand!
Sie, die Reine,
Sie, die Meine,
Keusch wie Schnee, wie Rosen mild.
Unter blüh'nden Mantelbäumen Schwebt um mich ihr süsses Bild!
Bei dem goldnen Glanz der Sterne,
An der Loire Spiegelrand,
Gab der Liebe reinsten, gerne Augenstern ein Himmelspfand.
Träumend, sinnig,
Zart und minnig,
Aug' in Auge, Mund an Mund,
Bei dem Leuchten ew'ger Sterne Gab sich Herz dem Herzen kund!
Heil'ge Treue schönste Rose,
An der Loire Blumenrand,
Ob auch Sturm und Welle tose, Blühst du des Lenzes Pfand!
Zarte, Reine,
Süsse, Meine,
Du mit mir ganz Ein und Mein!
Heil'ger Treue schönste Rose
Blüht in deiner Brust allein.

CHOR: Heil Adolar, Heil Euryanth', des Schönen, Der Liebe Heil, in reiner Unschuld Glanz!
Dich, He'd und Sänger, muss der Ruhm bekronen, Doch Treue reicht den schönsten Lebenskranz.
(Während des Chors nahen sich paarweise die Damen und Jünglinge, Ede und Ritter, Adolar. Es wird ihm ein Kranz aufgesetzt. Jungfrauen nehmen ihm die Zither ab, umwinden sie mit Blumen, und hängen sie wieder auf).

LYSSIART: (für sich). Ich trag es nicht.
(Laut)
Hör an, Graf Adolar!
Du hast uns hoch ergötzt mit dem Gesang,
Wo alle danken, nimm auch meinen Dank;
Kein Sänger nimmt den Preis dir ab, fürwahr.
Vergüten könntest du getrost dein Erbe,
Die Zither sorgt, dass nicht ihr Held verderbe!

ADOLAR: Gern, Lyssiart, üb' ich mich in sanften Weisen
Für Misslaut taugt ein gut gestimmtes Eisen.

LYSSIART: Was zürnst du gleich? die Weise tadl' ich nicht, Doch wohl die Worte vom Gedicht!
Hör auf der Frauen Treu' so hoch zu preisen!

sound,
A minstrel's song in Euryanthe's praise.
(The King makes a signal. Two ladies reach Adolar the guitar, which hangs near his arms)

ADOLAR: Under blooming almond trees
On the green strand of the Loire,
Oh! how blessed is it to dream —
Where I found my love!
She, the pure one,
She, that's mine;
Chaste as snow, as roses gentle.
Under blooming almond trees,
Her sweet image floats around me.
Under the golden splendor of the stars,
On the mirror-border of the Loire,
Gave willing to purest love,
Her starry eyes a heavenly pledge.
Dreamy, thoughtful, Tender, loving,
Eye to eye, and lip to lip,
By the light of stars eternal Heart revealed itself to heart;
Sacred faith, divinest rose,
On the flowery border of the Loire,
Though storms and waves may rage.
You bloom still, the pledge of spring!
Tender, pure,
Sweet — my own —
You, quite one with me and mine!
Of sacred faith the loveliest rose Blooms in your breast alone.

CHORUS: Hail, Adolar! hail, Euryanthe the fair!
All hail to love, in the splendor of pure innocence!
Hero and singer, fame must crown you,
The loveliest wreath of life bestows fidelity!
(During the Chorus, the Ladies and Youths, Nobles and Knights, approach Adolar, two and two. A garland is placed on his head. Maids take from the guitar, wreathe it with flowers, and hang it up again).

LYSIART: (Aside). I cannot bear it.
(Aloud)
Hear me, Count Adolar
You have pleased us with the song,
And where all thank, take my thanks also;
No singer wrests the prize from you in truth,
You may squander unconcerned the wreath,
For your guitar will ever save its hero from distress.

ADOLAR: Gladly I practice, Lysiart, soft measures,
For discord best avails well-tempered iron.

LYSIART: Angered so soon? I censure not the measure;
But I do the meaning of your poem!
Cease woman's faith so high to prize!

Des Meeres Grund hegt Perlen makelrein, Des Weibes Brust schliesst keine Treue ein.
(Die Damnn gehen ab).
Schon athm' ich freier. — Was entgegnest du?

ADOLAR: Dies acht' ich keiner Antwort werth, Komm' in den Wald, dort schliesset dir mein Schwert, Mit Gott! die gift'ge Lippe zu.

LYSSIART: Um schnöden Anlass kämpfen! Nie!
Die Warnung gab ich, — nütze sie!
Mein junger Freund, wärst du der Preis der Ritter, Wär ich ein niedrer Knecht,
Ich schwör es dir,
Die Liebe deiner Braut gewönn ich mir;
Trotz deiner Rosenwang' und goldenen Zither!

ADOLAR: Erbärmlich eitler Prahler nenn' ich dich, Den Handschuh nimm! — Dich lehr' ich Frauen ehren!

LYSSIART: Ich nehm' ihn nicht! —
Besiegtest du gleich mich;
Doch unbesiegt noch meine Gründe wären.
Wag es getros, bekämpfe sie!
Du prüstest dein Schöne nie?

ADOLAR: Für Euryanthe bürgt der Glaube In meiner Brust.

LYSSIART: Du fromme Turteltaube, Dein Glück zu stören trüg ich Scheu!

DER KÖNIG: Mein Adolar lass ab von diesem Streite!

LYSSIART: Du hörst die Weisheit ist auf meiner Seite!

ADOLAR: Mein Gut und Blut an Euryanthens Treu!

LYSSIART: Wohlan! du kennst mein herrlich Eigenthum
Das Erbtheil meiner Väter, reich an Ruhm, Zum Pfande setz ich's: es sei dein,
Nenn' ich nicht die Gepries'ne mein.

ADOLAR: Es gilt!

CHOR: Vermessenes Beginnen!

ADOLAR: Kannst Euryanthes Liebe du gewinnen,
So nimm mein Gold, mein Gut und Land,
Zerrissen sei dann jedes süsse Band —
Die Heimath meid ich.

LYSSIART: Alles nach Gefallen —
Wie schön wilst du mit Kranz und Zither wallen.

The ocean's depth holds pure and spotless pearls,
But no truth dwells in the breast of woman.
(Exeunt the Ladies).
Already I breathe freer. How do you reply?

ADOLAR: This I esteem worthy of no reply;
Come to the wood; there my sword will close,
With (help of) God, your slanderous lips.

LYSIART: For a base motive, combat? Never!
I give the warning—use it!
My young friend, were you the pearl! of knights,
And I am abject serf,
I'd swear to you
The love of your betrothed I'd win for me.
Spite of your cheeks of rose and golden bright guitar.

ADOLAR: Contemptible, vain boaster, do I call you.
Take up my glove. I'll teach you to honor women!

LYSIART: I take it not. For you're conquered me now,
My reason still would remain undestroyed;
Venture it boldly—combat them!
Never have you tried your lady's love.

ADOLAR: For Euryanthe answers the firm faith Within my breast.

LYSIART: You gentle turtle-dove,
I almost dread to interrupt your joy!

KING: My Adolar, abandon this discussion!

LYSIART: You hear—on my side wisdom speaks.

ADOLAR: My life and fortune for Euryanthe's truth!

LYSIART: Well then, you knowest my noble property—
The heritage of my fathers rich in fame;
I set it as a stake!—let it be yours,
If I call not this lauded lady mine.

ADOLAR: So be it.

CHORUS: Presumptuous offer!

ADOLARD: If you can't win the love of Euryanthe,
Then take my gold, my fortune, and my lands;
Let then be rent asunder each sweet tie—
I'd fly my home.

LYSIART: Just as you please!
How nobly will you wander with garland and guitar.

ADOLAR: Vermessener! frohlocke nicht!
Schlägt es dir fehl, ruf' ich zum Gottgericht Dich Frevler auf!

LYSSIART: Wohl! dess seid ihr alle Zeugen. Es gilt!

CHOR: Kann nichts den starren Sinn euch beugen?
O geht zurück! zu viel habt ihr gewagt.

ADOLAR: Ich gab mein Wort!

DER KÖNIG: Ich mach es ungesagt.

ADOLAR: Des Edlen Wort kann nicht Gewalt vernichten.

DER KÖNIG: Du trotzest der schleichenden Gefahr.

ADOLAR: Mein König! Frauenehre schirmen, war
Die höchste stets von allen Ritterpflichten!
In Demuth fleh ich, nimm dieses Unterpfand.
(Er überreicht dem König seinen Ring).

LYSSIART: (Reicht dem König seinen Ring gleichfalls). Hier diesen Ring in deine Königshand!
Jetzt schleunig rüst' ich mich zur Reise,
Und siegreich kehr ich heim!

DER KÖNIG: Doch de Beweise?

LYSSIART: Ein Zeugniss ihrer Huld dir darzubringen Verpflicht ich mich!

CHOR: Mög es ihm nie gelingen!

ADOLAR: Ich bau auf Gatt und meine Euryanth'.

LYSSIART: Ich bringe dir ein sichres Unterpfand.

CHOR: Die Unschuld schütz, o Gott, mit starker Hand.
(Alle ab.)

SCENE II

Burggarten zu Nevers mit einem Gruftgewölbe. Abend.

EURYANTHE: Glöcklein im Thale Nieseln im Bach,
Säusseln in Lüften
Schmelzendes Ach!
Sterne in Wipfeln
Aeugelnd durch Laub,
Ach, und die Seele
Der Sehnsucht Raub!
Weilst du so ferne?
Langst wohl nach mir?
Bringen die Sterne
Grüsse von dir?
Alle so golden Selig und klar —
Ach doch dein Blick nicht
Mein Adolar!

ADOLAR: Insensate! triumph not!
If you fail—I summon you to the trial of battle.

LYSIART: Good! of this be all witness—
So be it.

CHORUS: Can nothing bend your stern resolve?
Recede! you venture too much!

ADOLAR: I gave my word.

KING: I recall it.

ADOLAR: The noble's word can destroy no power.

KING: You brave insidious danger.

ADOLAR: My prince! the honor of woman to protect was
The highest ever of all our knightly duties.
Humbly, I beg, receive this pledge.
(He gives to the King his ring).

LYSIART: (Delivers to the King his ring also). Here, this ring on your royal hand!
Now quickly prepare me for the journey,
And victoriously I shall return.

KING: But the proofs?

LYSIART: A testimony of her favor to present you,
I pledge myself.

CHORUS: May he never succeed!

ADOLOR: I trust in God and my Euryanthe!

LYSIART: A certain pledge I'll bring to you.

CHORUS: Innocence protect, O God! with your strong hand.
(Exeunt omnes)

SCENE II

Castle-garden at Nevers, with a vaulted grotto. Evening.

EURYANTHE: The bells of the valley,
The rivulet's murmur,
The rustling zephyrs
Melt into sighs!
The stars above the trees
Peep through the leaves.
Ah! my soul
Is a prey to its ardor!
Do you dwell so far?
Are you anxious for me?
Do the stars bring Greetings from you?
All are so golden,
Blessed, and clear,
But I so not see your eyes,
My Adolor!

SCENE III

Eglantine, Vorige.

EGLANTINE: So einsam bangend sind ich dich?

EURYANTHE: O nenne Bangen nicht mein einzig Glück, Dies Sehnen ist der Himmel unter Klagen.

EGLANTINE: Wie kannst du trauern? siegreich heimgekehrt Ist Adolar, erwartet
Im Königschlosse dich, die hohe Braut.

EURYANTHE: Mich locket nicht der Feste Glanz;
In diesem Blüthenparadiese hier,
Wo wir beseligt Hand in Hand gegangen
Ihn wiedersehen — stillweinend ihn umfangen!
Das wäre Seligkeit.

EGLANTINE: Dir? nimmer hast du mir Vertrauen gewährt, Dich drückt ein bang Geheimniss; leg es nieder
In diese Brust; dann kann ich ruhig sein.
Nur dann, sonst nie.

EURYANTHE: Verschone, lass mich schweigen.

EGLANTINE: Des Unglücks Blick ist scharf! — Um Mitternacht.
In dunkler Gruft, wenn du dich einsam wähnst, Wacht Liebe di zur Seite.

EURYANTHE: O verschweige
Dir selbst, was du gesehen,

EGLANTINE: Nichts sagst du mir?

O mein Leid ist unermessen,
Du kannst mir dein Herz entziehn.
Lass mich einsam und vergessen
In die fernste Wildniss fliehn!
Lass mich fort vom Sturm getrieben.
Irren, schwanken, untergehn!
Nein, dein Lieben war kein Lieben,
Nie sollst du mich wedersehen.
Doch wie könnt ich ie dich meiden?
Nein, verstoss mich nie von hier!
Dulden will ich, einsam leiden,
Sterben süss am Busen dir.

EURYANTHE: Freundin! Geliebte.
An meine Brust!
Wie konnt ich solche Lieb ermessen!
Vergieb!

EGLANTINE: Du liebst mich? Alles ist vergessen!

EURYANTHE: So treu hast du mit mir gewacht,
In dunkler Gruft, in dunkler Nacht?

EGLANTINE: Was störest du der Todten Ruh?

SCENE III

Eglantine. The same.

EGLANTINE: Sorrowing so lonely do I find you?

EURYANTHE: Oh! call not sorrow what's my only joy,
This longing is a heaven amid complaints.

EGLANTINE: How can you grieve? victoriously returned Is Adolar, and waits
In the royal castle you, the noble bride.

EURYANTHE: The splendor of no feast allures me;
Here in this blooming paradise,
Where blessed we have wandered hand in hand,
Again to see him — silent, weeping to embrace him!
That were blessedness.

EGLANTINE: To you Never have you confided in me:
A painful secret weights upon you — declare it
To this bosom, then I can be at rest —
Then only — or else never.

EURYANTHE: Spare me! let me be silent.

EGLANTINE: Misfortune's eyes are sharp! — At midnight,
In the dark vault, when you think your self alone,
Love watches at your side.

EURYANTHE: Oh! tell not
To yourself what you have seen.

EGLANTINE: You say nothing to me?

Oh! my sorrow is unmeasured!
Can you withdraw from me your heart?
Let me forgotten and forlorn Fly into the furthest desert.
Let me, driven forth by the storm,
Wander, faint, and perish.
No! your loving is no loving,
Never shall you see me again.
But how could I ever avoid you?
No! drive me never from here!
I will suffer — I will bear alone,
And sweetly die upon your breast.

EURYANTHE: Friend! Beloved!
To my breast!
How can I measure such affection?
Forgive me!

EGLANTINE: You love me? All's forgotten!

EURYANTHE: So faithfully have you watched with me,
In the dark vault, in the sombre night?

EGLANTINE: Why do you disturb the peace of death?

EURYANTHE: Ich flehe dort für Emmas Frieden,
Der Schwester Adolars, durch schnellen Tod Entrissen seiner Brudertreu — ihr Leid
Trug sie verschwiegen in die Gruft hinab.

EGLANTINE: Wer that es kund?

EURYANTHE: Ihr Geist!

EGLANTINE: Entsetzen! — Wie?

EURYANTHE: Am letzten Mai, in banger Trennung Stunde,
Bei Mondenlicht sahn wir, von Duft umwallt,
Der holden Emma Luftgestalt,
Und säuselnd tönts von ihrem bleichen Munde:
"Die ihr der Liebe Thränen, Herz an Herz,
So selig weinet — hört mich an — auch mir
Strahlt' einst dies goldene Licht.
Mein Udo liebte
Mich zart und treu! — er fiel in blut'ger Schlacht, Da war mein Leben kein Leben mehr, Verzweifungsnacht hüllt meine Liebe ein;
Aus gifterfülltem Ring sog ich den Tod!
Weh dieser That, die mich vom Heil geschieden!
Getrennt von Udo, irr' ich durch die Nächte;
O weint um mich! nicht eh' kann Ruh mir werden,
Bis diesen Ring, aus dem ich Tod gesogen,
Der Unschuld Thräne netzt im höchsten Leid, Und Treu dem Mörder Rettung beut für Word."

EGLANTINE: Gewicht'ge Kunde.

EURYANTHE: Was hab ich gethan?
Verrathen Adolars Geheimniss!
Gott! Gebrochen meinen Eid. —

EGLANTINE: Befürchte nichts!

EURYANTHE: Unter ist mein Stern gegangen, Bange Ahnung sagt es laut.

EGLANTINE: Kannst du zagen, kannst du bangen,
Holde, da du mir vertraut?

EURYANTHE: Weh! ich brach des Schweigens Treue.

EGLANTINE: Such an meinem Busen Ruh!

EURYANTHE: Trost der Liebe, süss bist du!
Ja, es wallt mein Herz aufs Neue Selig deinem Herzen zu.

EGLANTINE: Zweifle nie an meiner Treue, Du nur bist mein Alles, du!
(Euryanthe geht in die Gruft ab).

EURYANTHE: I implore for Emma's peace,
The sister of Adolar, by swift death
Torn from his brother-love: her grief
Silent she bore into the grave below.

EGLANTINE: Who made it known?

EURYANTHE: Her spirit.

EGLANTINE: Horror! How?

EURYANTHE: On the last of May, at the painful parting hour,
By moonlight saw we wrapped around with ether,
The aery form of the gracious Emma!
And her pale lips murmured these gentle sounds: —
"You, who heart to heart
So blessedly shed the tears of love, listen to me. On me also This golden light shone once. My Udo loved Me tenderly and truly! He fell in bloody strife!
Then was my life no longer life;
The blackness of despair shrouded my soul,
And from a poisoned ring I drew my death!
Woe to this deed that cut me off from hope;
Severed from Udo, I wander through the nights.
Oh! weep for me! I shall not rest before
This ring, from which I sucked my death
Has been wetted by the tear of innocence in utmost suffering,
And fidelity has rewarded evil with good."

EGLANTINE: Important tidings!

EURYANTHE: What have I done?
Betrayed Adolar's secret! God!
Broken my oath!

EGLANTINE: Fear nothing!

EURYANTHE: My star is set; Painful foreboding speaks it loud.

EGLANTINE Can you waver — can you tremble,
Dear one, since in me you trusted?

EURYANTHE: Woe! I've broken my secret faith.

EGLANTINE: On my bosom seek repose.

EURYANTHE: Love's consolation you are sweet
Yes, my heart yearns afresh
Blessedly to yours.

EGLANTINE: Doubt never of my truth,
You only are my all! you only!
(Exit Euryanthe into the vault).

SCENE IV

EGLANTINE: Bethörte! die an meine Liebe glaubt,
Du bist umgarnt, nu entrinnst nicht mehr!
Vor Allem nun durchsuch ich Emma's Gruft, Fur meinen Plan soll die Entdeckung nützen
Vielleicht sinkt Adolar
Noch reuevoll an diese glühende Brust;
O der Gedanke lösst mich auf in Lust,
In Ahnungswonnen schwelgt die Seele trunken.
Fänd' ich den Tod, an seine Brust gesunken,
Nur einen, einen Augenblick,
Ich wollt ihn mit Vernichtung zahlen.
Hinweg, wahnsinnige Hoffnung, Gauklerin, Erwecke nicht dies Herz zu neuen Qualen!
Ich weiss, dass ich ganz elend bin!
Er konnte mich um sie verschmähen,
Drum muss ich ewig klagen,
In herben Leid muss ich vergehn
In meinen Blüthentagen;
Er hörte kalt der Liebe Flehn,
Weh! weh!
Mein Herz, so bang, so todeswund,
Drum stürz auch all sein Glück zu Grund!
(Ab).

SCENE V

Chor der Burgbewohner und Landleute, angerführt von Bertha und Rudolph, die Ritter Lysiart bewillkommnend.

CHOR DER LANDLEUTE: Jubeltöne, Heldensöhne!
Fröhlich jauchzend euch empfangen;
Kühlt von edler Gluth die Wangen
Mit den Rosen dieser Flur.

CHOR DER RITTER: Sturm erfrischt das Herz des Kriegers, Kühne Wagniss beut ihm Wonne,
Selig, wem des Friedens Sonne
Unter diesen Blüthen strahlt.

CHOR DER LANDLEUTE: Seht,, entgegen lacht euch Segen, Schöner blühen die Gefilde,
Sel'gen Friedens Himmelsmilde
Gebt der Heimath ihr zurück.

CHOR DER RITTER: Selig in des Friedens Milde, Blüht der trauten Heimath Glück.

CHOR DER LANDLEUTE: Hirtenweisen
Hold euch preisen,
Berg und Thal von Lust ertönen, Lasst euch Dank und Liebe krönen;
In der Treue Heiligthum.

SCENE IV

EGLANTINE: Infatuated woman! that believes in my love;
You are ensnared; You escape no more! Now first I'll search through Emma's tomb,
And the discovery shall promote my plan.
Perhaps Adolar will sink
Repentant on this ardent bosom;
Oh! the thought dissolves me in felicity,
And my intoxicated soul luxuriates in dreams of bliss.
If I found death reposing on his breast,
Only one, one instant,
I would purchase it with annihilation,
Away, frantic hope, deluder,
Wake not this heart to torments new!
I know I am quite wretched.
He could despise me for her;
Therefore must I ever moan,
And perish, in rude suffering,
In my days of bloom.
Coldly he heard the prayer of love!
Woe! woe!
My heart, so pained so deadly wounded,
Shall destroy all his joy too! (Exit)

SCENE V

Chorus of the people of the Castle and of Peasants, headed by Bertha and Rudolph, welcoming the Knights and Lysiart.

CHORUS OF PEASANTS: Tones of rejoicing, sons of heroes!
Joyful sounding now receive;
Cool the noble heat of your cheeks
With the roses of this plain.

CHORUS OF KNIGHTS: Storm refreshes the heart of the warrior, Bold adventure gives joy;
Blessed he to whom the sun of peace
Beams amid these flowers:

CHORUS OF PEASANTS: See! blessings smile upon you;
Lovelier bloom the pastures;
The heavenly blessedness of gentle peace
You give to home again.

CHORUS OF KNIGHTS: Blessed, in the gentle peace,
Blooms the joy of our dear home.

CHORUS OF PEASANTS: Pastoral measures
Sweetly praise you;
Hill and dale resound with joy;
Let love and gratitude encrown you,
In the sanctuary of fidelity.

SCENE VI

Euryanthe erscheint an der Thür des Gruftgewölbes. Eglantine. Vorige.

CHOR DER RITTER: Heil der Lieblichsten der Schönen, Euryanthen Preis und Ruhm!

EURYANTHE: Graf Lyssiart, edle Ritter, seid willkommen.

EGLANTINE: (Für sich). O, möchte meiner Schwach ein Rächer kommen!

CHOR DER RITTER: (Gedämpft unter einander). Wie schön ist sie!

LYSSIART: Erhabne Euryanthe, Reicht mir zum Dank die Lilienhand;
Ich bringe Freude!

EURYANTHE: (für sich). Wie bin ich beklommen!
(Zu Lyssiart).
Mein tapferer Graf, wer hat euch hergesandt?

LYSSIART: Mich hat des Königs Huld erwählt, Dass ich euch zu Begleiter diene,
Da noch zum Fest die Krone fehlt.

EURYANTHE: Mit Wonnebeben ehr' ich dies Gebot
O, Wiedersehen! Eglantine!

EGLANTINE: Willkommene Kunde! (Für sich).
Meinem Herzen Tod.

EURYANTHE: Verschmäht nicht die prunklose Zelle
In Nevers Burg zu kurzer Rast.

LYSSIART: Wo du erscheinst, da wird die Wildniss helle Wie selig wäre deines Herzens Gast
Beneidenswerther Freund!

CHOR DER RITTER: O schwarzer Plan!

EURYANTHE: Wie spracht ihr?

LYSSIART: Ehrfurcht euch nur stammelnd nannte Die süsseste der Erde — Euryanthe!

EURYANTHE UND CHOR:
Fröhliche Klänge,
Tänze, Gesänge
Feiern, verschönern
Diesen Tag, wo noch ihr uns erfreut.
Ruhet nach Stürmen bei ländlichen Tönen,
Schmückt euch mit Blumen, die Liebe euch streut.

EURYANTHE: Sehnen, Verlangen, Schmachten und Bangen
Wandelt nun Hoffnung in himmlische Lust!
Wieder ihn sehen!
Wonnen und Wehen
Schwellen die Seele, durchwogen die Brust.

SCENE VI

Euryanthe appears at the door of the vault. Eglantine. The same.

CHORUS OF KNIGHTS: Hail to the loveliest of beauties,
To Euryanthe praise and fame!

EURYANTHE: Count Lysiart, noble knights, be welcome.

EGLANTINE: (Aside). O! that an avenger of my shame would come.

CHORUS OF KNIGHTS: (in a suppressed tone amongst themselves). How beautiful she is!

LYSIART: Sublime Euryanthe!
Reach me with thanks your lilyhand;
I bring you joy.

EURYANTHE: (Aside). How agiated I am!
(To Lysiart).
My gallant count, who has sent you here?

LYSIART: My Sovereign's grace has chosen me,
That I serve you as an escort,
Since still the crown of the feast is wanting.

EURYANTHE: With joyful palpitation I honor this command.
To see him again! O, Eglantine!

EGLANTINE: Welcome tidings!
(Aside)
Death to my heart.

EURYANTHE: Do not despise the modest cell,
In Nevers' castle for short rest.

LYSIART: Where you appear, there is the desert bright.
How blessed is your heart's guest
My envied friend.

CHORUS OF KNIGHTS: Oh! gloomy plan!

EURYANTHE: What did you say?

LYSIART: Reverence, faltering only, named you Earth's sweetest flower — Euryanthe.

EURYANTHE AND CHORUS: Joyful sounds, Dances, songs,
Embellish and celebrate
This day, when you delight us;
Repose after storms amid pastoral tones,
Adorn you with the flowers which love showers on you.

EURYANTHE: Ardor, desire,
Languor, alarm,
Hope now converts into heavenly pleasure!
To see him again!
Joys and pains
Swell the sound and flow through my breast.

LYSSIART: Stillt dies Verlangen
Süsses Umfangen,
Schwelg' ich in Wonnen an Lippen und Brust.
Werd ich ihn sehen,
Wüthend vergehen,
Marter des Feindes ist Krone der Lust!

EGLANTINE: Nun nicht mehr Bangen!
Was sie begangen,
Stürzet in Trümmer ihr Glück, ihre Lust!
Nicht mehr verschmähen
Wird er mein Flehen, Trunken vom Siege schon klopft meine Brust!

CHOR: Fröhliche Klänge,
Tänze, Fesänge
Feiern verschönen
Diesen Tag, wo ihr hoch uns erfreut.
Ruhet nach Stürmen bei ländlichen Tönen,
Schmückt euch mit Kränzen, die Liebe euch beut.

■ ZWEITER AUFZUG

SCENE I

Burggarten zu Nevers. Gewitter. Nacht. Lyssiart stürzt aus dem Schlosse.

LYSSIART: Wo berg' ich mich? Wo find' ich hier mich wieder?
Bethörtes Herz, du warst es ja,
Das sie als leichte Beute sah!
Ihr Felsen stürzt auf mich hernieder!
Du Wiederhall, ruf nicht das Ach!
Des hoffnungslosen Herzens nach.
Nie wird sie mein, o ew'ger Qualen Hyder!
Schweigt glüh'nden Sehnens wilde Triebe, Ihe Auge sucht den Himmel nur,
In ihr wont Unschuld, Anmuth, Liebe,
Ganz Wahrheit ist sie, ganz Natur.
Was soll mir ferner Gut und Land?
Die Welt ist arm und öde ohne sie,
Mein ihre Huld! — Mein wird sie nie! — Vergiss! Unseliger entflieh!
Sie liebt ihn! — Und er sollte leben?
Ich, schmachtend beben?
Im Staube Sieg ihm zugestehn?
O nein! er darf nicht leben;
Ich mord' ihn unter tausend Wehn!
Doch, Hölle, du kannst sie mir auch nicht geben,
Sie liebt ihn, ich muss untergehn.
So weih' ich mich den Rachgewalten, Sie locken mich zu schwarzer That!
Geworfen ist des Unheils Saat,
Der Todeskeim muss sie entfalten!
Zertrümmre schönes Bild,

LYSIART: If this desire's appeased
By a sweet embrace,
I shall revel with joy on her lips and breast.
I shall see him
Perish in rage —
The enemy's torture is our crown of delight.

EGLANTINE: Now no longer alarm!
What she has done
Hurls to ruin her joy, her delight!
He will no longer despise my prayers.
My bosom beats drunk with victory already.

CHORUS: Joyful sounds,
Dances, songs,
Celebrate and embellish
This day, when you delight us.
Repose after storm amid pastoral tones.
Adorn you with the garlands that love showers on you.

■ ACT II

SCENE I

Castle Garden at Nevers. Storm. Night. Lysiart rushes out of the castle.

LYSIART: Where to conceal myself? How to collect myself again?
Infatuated heart, you were it
That saw her an easy prey!
Rocks, fall down upon me!
Echo, answer not the sighs
Of my hopeless heart.
She'll never be mine! Oh! hydra of eternal pangs!
Be silent, wild impulse of glowing desire!
Her eye seeks heaven alone;
In her dwells innocence, grace, love, —
All truth is she, all nature,
What now are lands and riches to me?
The world is poor and wasted without her.
Mine, her favor! mine she'll never be.
Forget! unhappy man, escape!
She loves him and he should live?
And I in anguish tremble?
In the dust acknowledge his victory!
Oh! no — he must not live —
I'll murder him, amid thousand pangs.
But hell, you cannot give her to me;
She loves him — I must perish.
Thus I devote myself to revenge's powers,
They allure me to the dark deed!
Sown is the seed of mischief,
It must disclose the germ of death.

Fort, letzter, süsser Schmerz!
Nur Rache, Rache füllt Dies sturmbewegte Herz.

SCENE II

Eglantine stürst athemlos aus dem Gewölbe. Voriger. Ferner Donner.

EGLANTINE: Der Gruft entronnen, athm' ich wieder.
Ich halte dich, du unter Todesschauern Errungenes Unterpfand der süssen Rache!
Ich wand dich muthig von der Todten Hand, Verhängnissvoller Ring, bezeuge du,
Dass Euryanthe Liebe und Treue verrathen,
Und grässlich büsse, der mein Herz verwarf!

LYSSIART: Was hör' ich? — willkommne Höllenkunde!

EGLANTINE: Sie dürfen nie sich wiedersehen!
Der Schlag muss fallen wie aus heitrer Luft,
Zermalmen Liebe, Hoffnung, Glück,
In Ewigkeit von Adolar sie trennen,
Wie führ' ich diesen Schlag?
(Ein heller Blitz. Lyssiart tritt rasch auf sie zu).

LYSSIART: Durch meine Hand!
(Blitz und Donner durch die ganze Scene, doch mehr aus der Ferne).

EGLANTINE: Ich bin verloren!

LYSSIART: Ruhig, Bundesgenossin!

EGLANTINE: Was willst du mir?

LYSSIART: Dein finstres Werk vollziehn,
Noch heut' sollst du die Feindin elend sehn.
Und Adolar gestraft, der dich gekränkt.

EGLANTINE: Du hast mir mein Geheimniss abgelauscht!

LYSSIART: Zur Sühne beut dir Forest seine Hand.
Die Felsen wandl' ich ein Rosenband,
Beherrschen sollst du diese reiche Gauen.
Heil, ehre, Leben darfst du mir vertraun.

EGLANTINE: Und sprichst du wahr?

LYSSIART: Bei Rache, Wuth und Gluth, Des ew'gen Hasses, ja!

EGLANTINE: Ich glaube dir!

Fall in pieces, lovely image!
Hence, last and sweetest pain!
Revenge alone, revenge can fill
This storm-tossed heart.

SCENE II

Eglantine rushes breathless from the vault. The same. Distant thunder.

EGLANTINE: Escaped from the vault, I breathe again:
I hold you, that amidst death's terrors
Were won, the pledge of sweet revenge
I forced you boldly from the hand of the dead.
Oh! fated ring, witness
That love and faith has both betrayed Euryanthe.
And let him dreadfully atone, who rejected my heart,

LYSIART: What do I hear? welcome, infernal tidings!

EGLANTINE: They must never see each other more.
The bolt must fall as from the clear sky.
Crushing their love, their hope, their joy.
Must sever from her Adolar to all eternity —
How shall I guide this blow?
(A bright flash of lightning. Lysiart advances quickly towards her).

LYSIART: By my hand.
(Lightning and thunder throughout the entire scene; but more from the distance).

EGLANTINE: I am lost.

LYSIART: Confederate, — fear not!

EGLANTINE: What will you do with me?

LYSIART: The gloomy work accomplish:
Today even shall you see your wretched enemy,
And punish Adolar that injured you.

EGLANTINE: Listening, you have robbed me of my secret.

LYSIART: To make amends Forest gives you his hand,
I'll convert your fetters into a rosy garland.
You shall govern these rich plains
Weal, honor, life, then you may trust to me.

EGLANTINE: And do you speak truly?

LYSIART: By rage, revenge, and glow
Of hate eternal — yes!

EGLANTINE: I believe you.

EGLANTINE: Komm dann unser Leid zu rächen Enden soll der Seele Qual.

LYSSIART: Nimm mein feierlich Versprechen, Rächer werd' ich und Gemahl.

EGLANTINE: Trostlos muss sie untergehen,
Die mein Leben mir geraubt,

LYSSIART: In dem Staub muss ich ihn sehen,
Der zu Sternen hob sein Haupt.

BEIDE: Dunkle Nacht, du hörst den Schwur!
Sei mit unsrer That im Bunde.
Ja, es schlug der Rache Stunde, Rache, Rache athm' ich nur!
(Beide ab.)

SCENE III

Die Säulenhalle des Königschlosses festlich und hell erleuchtet. Adolar im reichsten Schmuck. Auf seinem Haupt den Juwelenkranz.

ADOLAR: Wehen mir Lüfte Ruh, Strömen mir Düfte zu Seliger Zeit.
Füllst du nach bangem Schmerz Wieder mein ganzes Herz, Süssestes Leid?
Liebe, wie lebst du neu,
Hoffnung, wie webst du treu Bilder der Lust!
Glaube, wie wankst du nicht,
Herz, we erbangst du nicht
In meiner Brust!
Sie ist mir nah, mein Bangen war ein Traum,
O Seligket, dich fass ich kaum!
Ihr Auge wird mir strahlen,
Ihr Himmelsreiz mir blühen!
O, wie Erwartungsqualen
Dies trunkene Herz durchglühn!

SCENE IV

Euryanthe. Gefolge. Voriger. Das Gefolge bleibt im Hintergrunde. Euryanthe eilt in Adolars Arme.

EURYANTHE UND ADOLAR: Hin nimm die Seele mein,
Athme mein Leben ein,
Lass mich ganz du nur sein,
Ganz bin ich dein!
Seufzer wie Flammen wehn,
Selig um Lindrung flehn,
Lass mich in Lust und Wehn
An deiner Brust vergehn!

SCENE V

Die Halle füllt sich mit Fürsten und Edlen: zuletzt der König und Lyssiart.

EGLANTINE: Come then to revenge our suffering!
The torments of the soul shall end.

LYSIART: Take my solemn promise, I will be Avenger and spouse.

EGLANTINE: Hopeless she
Who has robbed me of my life must perish.

LYSIART: In the dust I must see him
Who has raised his head to the stars.

BOTH: Gloomy night, you hear the oath!
Be in league with our deed —
Yes, revenge's hour has struck:
Revenge, revenge alone I breathe.
(Exeunt).

SCENE III

The pillared hall of the Royal Castle, gaily and brightly illuminated. Adolar in his richest dress. On his head a wreath of jewels.

ADOLAR: The airs breathe to me repose,
The odors stream towards me
Of a blessed time.
You fill after anxious pain
Again all my heart,
Sweetest of sorrows?
Love, how you live anew!
Hope how you faithfully weave Forms of pleasure!
Faith, how you waver not!
Heart, how you tremble not
In my breast!
She is near me; my alarm was but a dream!
Oh! blessedness! I scarcely can comprehend you!
Her eye will beam upon me,
Her charms divine bloom for me.
Oh, expectation's pangs
Rend my intoxicated heart.

SCENE IV

Euryanthe, Suite, The same The suite remains in the background. Euryanthe rushes into Adolar's arms.

EURYANTHE AND ADOLAR:
Hence take my soul!
Breathe with my life!
Let me be you altogether!
I am quite yours,
Sighs breathe like flames,
Pray to be assuaged;
Let me die away in joy and grief upon your breast.

SCENE V

The Hall fills with Princes and Nobles, At length, the King and Lysiart.

CHOR: Leuchtend füllt die Königshallen Euryanthens Wunderpracht, Stern der Anmuth, hold vor Allen, Blicke rein durch jede Nacht.	CHORUS: Beaming fills the royal halls Euryanthe's gorgeous splendor. Star of grace, loveliest of all, Glance pure through every night.

DER KÖNIG: Bald heissen se Euch alle Willkommen, freudig hoff ichs, hoff es fest.	KING: Soon will they bid you all Welcome — joyfully I hope it — firmly hope it.

EURYANTHE: Mich fasst ein Grauen.	EURYANTHE: A horror seizes me.
KÖNIG UND ADOLAR: Muth und Vertrauen.	KING AND ADOLAR: Courage and confidence!
LYSSIART: Vernimm, es muss ja sein, von meinem Munde Ein Glück, das ich so gern verschwieg — Leicht und entzückend war mein Sieg! Die Länder Adolars sind mein!	LYSIART: Hear — for it must be, and from my lips, I would so willingly conceal a happiness Easy and enchanting was my victory! The lands of Adolar are mine.
ADOLAR: Dies Engelantliz straft dich Lügen, Nein!	ADOLAR: This heavenly countenance proves you a liar. No!
DER KÖNIG: Es ist unmöglich!	KING: It is impossible.
EURYANTHE: Wie? mein Adolar, Was ist geschehen? löse dieses Bangen.	EURYANTHE: How? my Adolar, What has happened? — remove this fear.
ADOLAR: Komm an mein Herz, von deinem Arm umfangen, Der Hölle Trotz!	ADOLAR: Come to my heart — by this arm embraced — I defy hell.
LYSSIART: Beweise bring ich dar.	LYSIART: I have proofs to show.
CHOR: Weh, Euryanthe, was hast du begangen?	CHORUS: Woe! Euryanthe, what have you done?
LYSSIART: Bewundrungswürdig ist's gelungen, Dies stolze Herz im Sturm errungen!	LYSIART: Wondrously have I succeeded, This proud heart in storm subdued.
EURYANTHE: Was hör' ich? Lyssiart, errungen ihr Mein Herz? Den Blick erhobt ihr nicht zu mir.	EURYANTHE: What do I hear? Lysiart, you won My heart? You have not raised your eyes to me.
LYSSIART: So schnöde nun, so liebreich noch zur Stunde?	LYSIART: Now so contemptuous; before scarcely an hour so loving.
ADOLAR: Zur Fehde!	ADOLAR: To the fight!
DER KÖNIG: Nein, gebt klare Kunde, Zeigt den Beweis.	KING: No, give clear report — Show the proof.
LYSSIART: Dies Unterpfand Der Liebe reichte mir die schönste Hand Mit Trauer muss ich wieder geben, Was ich empfangen ohne Widerstand. (Reicht Euryanthen den Ring).	LYSIART: This pledge of love was reached me by the loveliest hand; With grief I must return What I received without resistance. (Gives to Euryanthe the ring).
EURYANTHE: (Auf die Knie sinkend, hält den Ring empor). Der du die Unschuld kennst, beschütz mein Leben; Und wollte mich ein Höllennetz um weben, Du rettest mich, wirst aus der Nacht mich heben.	EURYANTHE: (falls on her knees; holds up the ring). You who know innocence, protect my life; Even if the snares of hell encompass me, You'll save, and lift me from out the night!
ADOLAR: Nein, du errangst den Ring durch List! Mein reiner Engel, kannst du zagen?	ADOLAR: No, you gained the ring by cunning! My pure angel, can you waver?
LYSSIART: Wer sonst als Euryanth und du kann sagen, Was dieses Rings Bedeutung ist? Die Gruft nur kannte Emmas Thatten!	LYSIART: Who else but Euryanthe and you can say What is the meaning of this ring? The grave alone knew Emma's deeds.
ADOLAR: Sprich, Euryanthe! hast du mich verrathen?	ADOLAR: Speak, Euryanthe! have you betrayed me?
EURYANTHE: O Unglücksel'ge!	EURYANTHE: Oh! unhappy me!
ADOLAR: Brachst du deinen Eid?	ADOLAR: Your oath has been broken!
EURYANTHE: Ich that es!	EURYANTHE: I did it!
ADOLAR: Schlange!	ADOLAR: Serpent!
EURYANTHE: Unermesslich Leid, Doch treulos bin ich nicht —	EURYANTHE: Immeasurable suffering! But I am not faithless.
ADOLAR: Verworfene du! Verstumme!	ADOLAR: You outcast! Be dumb!
LYSSIART: Höre mir mit Fassung zu, Die Wahrheit sprech ich kühn und frei! In heller Mondennacht, am letzten Mai —	LYSIART: Listen to me calmly — The truth I speak boldly and freely! In the clear moonlight, on the last of May —
ADOLAR: Vollende nicht, nimm Alles, Alles hin, Mein Leben mit —	ADOLAR: Do not finish — take all — my all — And my life too.
CHOR: Ha die Verrätherin! O Unthat, grässlichste von allen, Die jemals auf der Welt erhört! Der Treue Bündniss frech zerstört, Von Himmelshöh'n in Staub gefallen.	CHORUS: Ha! the traitress! Oh! crime! most horrible of all, That ever the world has heard! The league of faith so shamelessly to break! From Heaven's heights to dust you're fallen.
EURYANTHE: Lass mich empor zum Lichte wallen, Du, der das Flehn der Unschuld hört.	EURYANTHE: Let me rise up to the light, You, that hears the prayers of innocence.
DER KÖNIG: Mein Glaub' an Tugend ist zerstört, Denn dieser Engel konnte fallen.	KING: My faith in virtue is destroyed, For even this angel here could fall.
LYSSIART: Triumph, mein Flehen ist erhört Und meinen Sieg sehn diese Hallen!	LYSIART: Triumph! my prayer is heard; And these halls see my victory.
ADOLAR: Fern in das Elend will ich wallen, Wo keiner meinen Namen hört.	ADOLAR: Far into misery will I wander, Where my name is never heard.
LYSSIART: Verleih mein Recht mir, grosser König, nun Als Graf zu Nevers huldigt dir dein Knecht. (Er kniet nieder).	LYSIART: Grant me my right, my sovereign; now As Count of the Nevers your servant does you homage. (He kneels).

DER KÖNIG: Nimm hin, das neue Lehn, üb' Treu und Recht, Dir möge Got nach deinen Werken thun.
(Lyssiart steht auf).

ADOLAR: Komm Euryanth!

EURYANTHE: Willkommens Gebot,
Ich folge dir in Noth und Tod!

CHOR: Wir Alle wollen mit dir gehen,
Wir All' sind dein mit Gut und Blut!

ADOLAR: Hinweg! kein Auge soll mich sehen!

DER KÖNIG: Mein Jüngling, du willst von mir gehen?

LYSSIART: (Für sich). Möcht ich erst ganz ihn elend sehen!
Wie schwelgt in seiner Qual die Wuth!

EURYANTHE: Verimm, O Gott, der Unschuld Fleh'n, Es wallt dein Kind in deiner Hut.

ALLE: Du gleissend Bild, du bist enthüllt.
Schnell folgte Strafe deinen Thaten.
Weh' dir! die Lieb und Treu verrathen;
Das Maass der Frevel ist gefüllt.

ENDE II. AUFZUGS

DRITTER AUFZUG

Oede Felsschlucht. Vollmond. Ein steiler Pfad führt von einer Anhöhe herab. Trauerweiden umschatten eine rieselnde Quelle im Vordergrunde.

SCENE I

Euryanthe

EURYANTHE: So bin ich nun verlassen,
So muss ich hier erblassen,
Im öden Felsenthal,
In Einsamkeit und Qual!
Hier dicht am Quell, wo Weiden stehn,
Die Sterne hell durchschauen,
Da will ich mir den Tod erflehn,
Mein stilles Grab mir bauen.
Wohl kommt auch er einst weit daher,
Und findet kaum die Stätte mehr —
Dann rauscht ihm sanft die Weide zu:
Sie fand von Lieb' unl Leide Ruh.
Die Blum' im Thaue spricht:
Nein, sie verrieth dich nicht.
(Sie wirft erschöpft im Schatten neben der Quelle hin. Die Morgenröthe steigt empor).

KING: Take the new fief, be true and just,
May God deal with you according to your works.
(Lysiart rises).

ADOLAR: Come, Euryanthe.

EURYANTHE: Welcome command!
I follow you to woe and death.

CHORUS: We all will go with you,
Our lives, and fortunes, all are yours

ADOLAR: Away! No eye shall see me.

KING: My youth, will you go from me?

LYSIART: (aside) Oh! that quite wretched I may see him!
How my rage revels in his woe!

EURYANTHE: Hear, O God! the prayer of innocence,
Your child walks in your protection.

ALL: Deceitful mask, you have been unveiled!
Quick followed punishment your deeds.
Woe to you who betrayed life and truth,
The measure of your crimes is filled.

END OF ACT II

ACT III

Desolate rocky glen. A full moon. A steep path leading down from a height; weeping willows encircle a bubbling spring in the foreground.

SCENE I

Euryanthe

EURYANTHE: Thus am I now forlorn,
Thus must I perish here,
In the waste rocky glen,
In solitude and pain.
Here close to the spring, where willows stand.
And the clear stars look through,
Here will I pray for death,
And build my silent grave.
Perhaps he too some day I'll come from afar,
And scarcely will find my grave remaining—
Then gently will the willow whisper to him:
She found rest from love and suffering.
The flower in the dew will speak:
No, she betrayed you not.
(She throws herself exhausted down in the shade near the spring. The sun rises).

SCENE II

Jäger. König.

CHOR: (hinter der Scene). Die Thale dampfen, die Höhen glühn, Welch fröhlich Jagen im Waldesgrün!
Der Morgen weckt zu neuer Lust;
Hoch schwillt die Brust, des Siegs bewusst.
Dringt muthig durch Schluchten und Moor,
Lasst schmettern die Hörner im Chor
Ihr Fürsten der Waldung hervor!
(Sie erscheinen auf den Bergen).
O seht, in Thränen eine zarte Frau.
(Euryanthe Wendet ihr Antlitz gegen den König).

DER KÖNIG: Himmel!

CHOR: Euryanthe!

EURYANTHE: Lasst mich hier in Ruh erblassen, Gönnt mir diese letzte Huld!

DER KÖNIG: Nein, ich will dich nicht verlassen,
Komm zu sühnen deine Schuld,

EURYANTHE: Gott kennt meine Unschuld nur,
Kennt das Leid, das mich getroffen.

DER KÖNIG: Du nicht schuldig? dürft ich's hoffen.

CHOR: Hilf und auf der Wahrheit Spur!

EURYANTHE: Eglantinens flehend Kosen
Lockt' mir das Geheimniss ab,
Natter war sie unter Rosen,
Die den Tod mir schmeichelnd gab.

DER KÖNIG: Euryanthe, sprichst du Wahrheit?
O, so nimm mein Wort zum Pfand, Höllentrug bring ich zur Klarheit,
Neu knüpf ich das schöne Band.

EURYANTHE: Wiedersehen! mich ihm versöhnen!
Wär es möglich?

CHOR: Hoffe! Lebe!

EURYANTHE: Stürb ich hin an diesen Tönen!
Täuscht mich nicht. O wie ich bebe!

CHOR: Hoffe! Lebe!

EURYANTHE: Kann ich's fassen, ach, ich bebe!

CHOR: Glaube, hoffe, liebe, lebe!

EURYANTHE: Zu ihm, zu ihm! o weilet nicht!
Wo bist du, meines Daseins Licht!
Dass ich dich fest umfasse;
Dich nimmer lasse;
So Herz an Herzen, Aug' in Auge,
Aus deinen Blicken Leben sauge —
O Hoffnung, Himmelsstrahl!
Ich trag es nicht! Ich sterb in Wonn'

SCENE II

Hunters. King.

CHORUS: (behind the scene) The valleys smoke, the hills are glowing,
What merry hunting in the forest-green!
The morning wakes us to fresh pleasure,
High swells the breast of victory sure.
Press boldly through ravine and moor,
Let sound the horns in chorus:
Oh chiefs of the forest, come forward!
(They appear on the mountain.)
Oh! see a tender lady in tears!
(Euryanthe turns her countenance towards the King.)

KING: Heaven!

CHORUS: Euryanthe!

EURYANTHE: Let me perish here in peace!
Grant to me this last of favors.

KING: No, I will not leave you—
Come and atone for your guilt.

EURYANTHE: God only knows my innocence;
Know the sorrow that has struck me.

KING: You, not guilty! Dare I hope?

CHORUS: Help us to trace the truth.

EURYANTHE: Eglantine's importunate caresses Allured my secret from me;
She was a viper under roses,
And, while flattering, killed me.

KING: Euryanthe, Do you speak truth?
Oh! then take my word as pledge—
I'll bring hellish deceit to light,
And then reunite your sweet bonds.

EURYANTHE: See him again!—
reconcile him to me!
Were it possible?

CHORUS: Hope and live!

EURYANTHE: I shall die amid these tones.
Deceive me not!—Oh! how I tremble.

CHORUS: Hope and live!

EURYANTHE: Can I seize it? Ah! I shudder.

CHORUS: Believe, and hope, and love, and live!

EURYANTHE: To him, to him! Oh! tarry not.
Where are you, light of my existence
That I may fast embrace you,
And never leave you!
Thus, heart to heart, and eye to eye,
From your glances life to draw!
Oh! hope!—you beam from heavund Qual!

(Sie sinkt ohnmächtig nieder. Sie wird für todt auf eine Bahre von Zweigen gelegt).

CHOR: (im Abgeben). O Jammer unerhört
O lieblichste der Blüthen,
Wie hat so früh das Wüthen
Des Sturmes dich zerstört. (Sie tragen Euryanthe ab).

SCENE III

Freier Platz vor dem Schlosse Nevers. Im Vorgrunde Berthas Hütte, Bertha, Rudolph. Landleute mit Blumengewinden die Hütte Berthas schmückend.

EINZELNE STIMME: Der Mai bringt frische Blumen dar, Die Rose schmückt der Jungfrau Haar,
Und niemand weiss im grünen Mai,
Was Rose noch was Mädchen sei.

CHOR: Den was da blüht, ist Ros' im Mai.

STIMME: Der Mai, der holde Mai erhellt
Nach Wintersleid die schöne Welt,
Und niemand weiss im grünen Mai,
Was einsam Leid und Sehnen sei.

CHOR: Denn Lieb und Treu frohlockt im Mai.

STIMME: Der Mai bringt frischer Blüthen viel, Die Liebe ist des Maien Spiel,
Und Niemand weiss im grünen Mai,
Was Blüthe, noch was Liebe sei.

CHOR: Denn was da blüht, das blüht im Mai.

STIMME: Der Mai bringt dir, du theures Paar, Der Blüthen allerschönste dar,
Wohl wisst ihr zwei im grünen Mai
Wie selig Lieb und Treue sei.

CHOR: Denne eure Treu krönt heut der Mai.

ADOLAR: (schwankt nach dem Vorgrunde). 'S gibt keine Treu auf weiter Erde mehr, Davon, davon ist mir das Herz so schwer,
In Liebesgluth ist nichts als Wankelmuth,
Am falschen Herzen sichs gafährlich ruht.

DIE LANDLEUTE: Welch Klagen hier stört froher Liebe Muth?

ADOLAR: Fahr hin, fahr hin, liebsüsser Liebe Traum, Gieb dunkler Nacht und ihrem Schrecken Raum.
Nacht ohne Licht herein mit Stürmen bricht; Heimath! ein Grab versag dem Müden nicht.
(Sinkt auf eine Rasenbank, sein Helm fällt ab).

en!
I bear it not; I die in joy and pain.
(She sinks, fainting. She is laid for dead on a litter, made of branches).

CHORUS: (whilst departing)
Oh! sorrow unheard of!
Oh! lovelist of blossom!
How has thus early the raging.
Of the storm destroyed you! (They carry off Euryanthe).

SCENE III

Open space before the Castle of Nevers. In the foreground Bertha's Hut. Bertha, Rudolf. — Peasants ornamenting with flower-garlands the Hut of Bertha.

SINGLE VOICES: May presents us with fresh roses;
The rose adorns the virgin's hair;
And no one knows in the green May
What's a rose or what's a maid.

CHORUS: For what blooms there's a rose in May.

A VOICE: May, lovely May brightens,
After winter's woes the beauteous world;
And no one knows in the green May,
What lonely grief and sorrowing is.

CHORUS: For love and faith rejoice in May.

A VOICE: May brings plenty of fresh blossoms,
Love is the game of May,
And no one knows in the green May,
What's a blossom, or what's love.

CHORUS: For what blooms there, that love's in May.

A VOICE: May brings to you, you cherished pair,
The loveliest of all blossoms.
Well know you too, in the green May,
How blessed are love and faith.

CHORUS: For May to-day crowns your truth.

ADOLOR: (comes forward).
There's no truth more on the wide earth;
Hence, hence my heart's so heavy.
Yes, love's fire is but fickleness:
On the false heart we dangerously rest.

PEASANTS: What plaints here mar the merry joy of love?

ADOLOR: Away! away! you sweetest dream of love;
Give place to dark night and its terrors;
Night without light now falls with storms:
Oh! home, refuse not a grave to the tired one.
(He sinks upon a bank of turf. His helmet fall off.)

CHOR: Er ist's, o Glück, o neuer Hoffnung Licht!

BERTHA: So musste der ersehnte Tag erscheinen.
Geliebter Herr! willkommen bei den Deinen!

ADOLAR: Hinweg! Lasst meiner Trauer mich!

BERTHA: Hier schlägt noch jedes Herz für dich!

BERTHA UND CHOR: Führ' an der Jugend muth'ge Schaar befreie Dein seufzend Land. —

ADOLAR: Du süsse heil'ge Treue!
Du lebst, doch nicht in Euryanthe's Brust.

CHOR: Den schnödesten Verdacht entferne,
Ich spreche Wahrheit sonder Scheu,
Es wankten eh' des Himmels Sterne, Als unserer süssen Herrin Treu.

ADOLAR: Nein, sie verrieth mich!

BERTHA: Hör' gewicht'ge Kunde:
Mit deinem Feind ist Eglantin' im Bunde;
Auf deiner Ahnen stolzem Sitz,
Wo du ihr Zuflucht einst gegeben,
Will Lyssiart heut' zur Herrin sie erheben.

ADOLAR: Allwaltender! wo ist dein Blitz!

BERTHA UND RUDOLPH MIT CHOR: Vernichte kühn das Werk der Tücke, Vertrau der Liebe und dem Glücke,
Es jauchzt dir zu dein ganzes Land;
Zum Schwert für dich greift jede Hand.

ADOLAR: Hilf mir durchschauen das Werk der Tücke, Allwissender mit klarem Blicke;
Gieb Kraft zum Siege meiner Hand für Ehre, Treue, Gut und Land.

SCENE IV

Prachtvoller Hochzeitzug. Lyssiart, Eglantine im fürstllichen Brautschmuck, todtenblass, von ihren Frauen unterstützt. Vorige.

LANDLEUTE: O Frevlerpaar! weh diesem schnöden Bunde!

ADOLAR: O klopfend Herz — sei stark zu dieser Stunde!

EGLANTINE: (mit Geberde des Schmerzes, indem sie mit Entsetzen, das in Wahnsinn übergeht, stehen bleibt). Ich kann nicht weiter! Todesschauer Durchrieselt mein Gebein!
Mich drückt die Luft — Sieh! Emma steigt aus dunkler Gruft.
Sie winkt mir mit der starren Hand

CHORUS: It's he—oh! joy!—oh! light of newborn hope!

BERTHA: Thus must the desired day appear!
Beloved lord! be welcome to your own.

ADOLAR: Away, and leave me to my grief.

BERTHA: Here beats still every heart for you.

BERTHA AND CHORUS: Lead on the hardly host of youth, and free
Your suffering land,—

ADOLAR: You sacred, sweet fidelity!
You live but not in Euryanthe's breast.

CHORUS: Banish the basest of suspicions,
I speak the truth without fear,
The stars of heaven would sooner waver
Than would the faith of our sweet Princess.

ADOLAR: No, she betrayed me.

BERTHA: Hear weighty tiding;
With your foe is Eglantine in league;
On the proud seat of your forefathers,
Where you once gave her refuge,
Will Lysiart today raise her to be a Princess.

ADOLAR: Onnipotent! where are your lightnings?

BERTHA AND RUDOLPH: (with Chorus.) Boldly crush the work of malice, Trust to love and happiness;
All your land meets you with rejoicing;
For you, each hand shall grasp the sword.

ADOLAR: Help me to see through the work of malice,
Omniscient, with an eye unclouded;
Give force for victory to my land,
For honor, fortune, faith, and land.

SCENE IV

Magnificent wedding-procession Lysiart; Eglantine in princely bridal attire, death-pale, supported be her women. The same.

PEASANTS: Oh! wretched pair! woe to this base union!

ADOLAR: Oh; beating heart for this hour be strong!

EGLANTINE: (With gestures of pain whilst she stands still in horror, which passes into madness.) I can go no further! Death-tremors Course through my bones!
The air oppresses me—
See! Emma rises from the dismal tomb,
She beckons me with rigid hand—
What? you demand back the pledge

Was! forderst du zurück der Rache Pfand?
Ich gab es hin, die Unschuld zu ermerden!

CHOR: Welch Entsessen! welch Gericht!
Die Vergeltung schlummert nicht.

LYSSIART: Hört! dass Wahnsinn aus ihr spricht!

ADOLAR: Ha! wir tagt ein schrecklich Licht. (Vertretend) Erzittre, ruchlos Paar, es wacht die Rache, Der Himmel führt bedrückter Unschuld Sache —

LYSSIART: Was zischest aus dem Staub du, nicht'ger Wurm?
Vasallen, werft den Fremdling in den Thurm!
(Die Reisigen dringen auf Adolar ein).

ADOLAR: (schlägt den Helmsturtz auf) Mich wollt ihr fahen mich?

CHOR: Heil Adolar in seiner Väter Hallen!
Geliebter, unsre Demuth dich versöhne!
(Alle drängen sich um ihn).

EGLANTINE: (fährt aus dumpfer Betäubung auf, fasst Adolar ins Auge und stürzt in die Arme ihrer Frauen). Er ist's! in seiner Glorie, seiner Schöne! Wehe mir!

LYSSIART: Verderben, Fluch euch Allen,
Verwegne Knechte, büssend sollt ihr fallen!
(Alle springen auf und stellen sich ihm drohend entgegen).

CHOR: Trotze nicht, Vermessener!
Straft dräut, Verruchter!
Tilgt das Werk der Nacht!
Zittre Gottvergessner!
Birg dich Missethäter!
Gottes Auge wacht!

ADOLAR: Zum Kampf, zum Gottgerichle, Verruchter Frevler du!

LYSSIART: Dass ich dich, Feind, vernichte, Jauchzt mir der Abgrund zu!

ADOLAR: Dein schwarzes Herz durchwühle
Mein sieggewohnter Stahl!

CHOR: Der Schande, dem Verberben, Bist ewig du geweiht.

LYSSIART: Sollt ich um Mitleid werben?
Heran! ich bin Bereit!

SCENE V

König Vorige.

of revenge?
I gave it away to murder innocence.

CHORUS: What horror! what a judgment!
Retribution slumbers not.

LYSIART: Hear that madness from her speaks.

ADOLAR: Ha! a fearful light dawns for me.
(Advancing.)
Tremble, infamous pair, revenge is watching,
And heaven takes the side of innocence oppressed.

LYSIART: You hiss in the dust, you miserable worm!
Vassals, cast the stranger into the tower.
(The Knights rush upon Adolar)

ADOLAR: (lifts his helmet.) Will you capture me?

CHORUS: Hail, Adolar, in his ancestral halls!
Beloved! let our humbleness conciliate you.
(All press round him)

EGLANTINE: (starts out of heavy stupor, fixes her eye upon Adolar and falls into the arms of her women.) It's he, and in his glory, in his beauty! Woe's me.

LYSIART: Perdition,—curse on you all!
Insolent serfs! atoning you shall fall!
(All spring up and place themselves in a menacing position.)

CHORUS: Defy us not, rash man!
Punishment threatens, traitor!
Destroy the work of night!
Tremble, forgotten-of-God!
Hide, malefactor!
God's eye's upon you!

ADOLAR: To the fight—to the trial by battle, Infamous criminal!

LYSIART: That, foe, I'll destroy you,
Hell shouts in my ears.

ADOLAR: In your black heart shall revel
My ever-conquering sword.

CHORUS: To shame and to peridition,
For ever you're devoted.

LYSIART: Should I plead for compassion?
Come on! I'm ready.

SCENE V

King. The same.

DER KÖNIG: (mit Gefolge tritt zwischen die Kämpfenden). Lasst ruhn das Schwert, der höchste Richter naht, Der Rächer jeder Frevelthat.
(Alle beugen sich ehrfurchtsvoll. Lyssiart senkt das Schwert; zieht sich aber kampffertig zurück).

ADOLAR: (stürzt des Königs Füssen). Mein König, hör' den grässlichsten Verrath, Wir sind getäuscht; der reinsten Tugend Bildniss War Euryanthe — Weh wir! in der Wildniss Verlassen irret sie umher —
Hilf, rette, strafe!

DER KÖNIG: Hemme deine Klagen,
Fass dich, als Held, das Grässlichste zu tragen, Denn Euryanthe lebt nicht mehr!
Dich segnend ist das treuste Herz gebrochen.

EGLANTINE: Was hör ich? Triumph!
Ist meine Schmach! der Feindin Herz gebrochen.
Verzweifle, dass sie schuldlos war;
Ich wars, von deren Hand den Ring
Der kühne Räuber dort empfing;
Ich war es, die ihn der Gruft entwandte —
Rein, wie das Licht, war Euryanthe!

CHOR: O höllischer Verrath! o herb Geschick!

LYSSIART: Wahnsinnige!

EGLANTINE: Schnödes Werkzeug meiner Rache,
Dich schleudr' ich in dein Nichts zurück!

LYSSIART: Was hält mich, dass ich dich zermalme, Mein eidige Verräthrin!
(Er stosst sie mit dem Dolche nieder; die Frauen drängen sich um sie her und suchen ihr beizustehen; alles stürzt auf Lyssiart, ihn ergreifend und entwaffnend.)

CHOR DER JAEGER: (hinter der Scene). O Wonne, sie athmet, sie lebt!

SCENE VI

Euryanthe, Jäger, Vorige. Euryanthe flieht in Adolars Arme.

EURYANTHE UND ADOLAR: Hin nimm die Seele mein!
Athme mein leben ein,
Lass mich ganz du nur sein,
Ganz bin ich dein!
Lass mich in Lust und Weh'n
An deiner Brust vergehn. (Sie umarmen sich).

CHOR: Treue, stark und rein, Wonne nach Todespein, Holdseliger Verein,
Du sein, Er dein.

KING: (with followers advances between the combatants.) Let the sworl rest; the highest judge approaches—
The avenger of every misdeed.
(All bow with reverence. Lysiart drops his sword, but recedes in a fighting posture.)

ADOLAR: (rushes to the King's feet.) My sovereign! hear the most horrid treachery;
We are deceived; the purest virtue's image
Was Euryanthe—Woe's me! in the desert,
She's wandering about forlorn.
Help, save, and punish!

KING: Stay your complaints!—
Prepare your self, as a hero, to bear extremest horror,
For Euryanthe lives no more!
While blessing you her faithful heart was broken.

EGLANTINE: What do I hear! Triumph! Revenged
Is my disgrace! The heart of my foe is broken!
Despair! for she was innocent;
It was I from whose hand the ring
The hardy robber there received;
It was I that stole it from the tomb.
Euryanthe was Pure as light.

CHORUS: Oh! hellish treachery!
Oh! harsh fate!

LYSIART: You're mad!

EGLANTINE: Base instrument of my revenge!
I hurl to you obscurity again.

LYSIART: What restrains me from crushing you, Perjured traitress!
(He stabs her. The women press round her, and seek to assist her; all present rush upon Lysiart, seize him and disarm him.)

CHORUS OF HUNTERS: (behind the scene.) Oh! joy, she breathes, she lives!

SCENE VI

Euryanthe. Hunters. The same. Euryanthe flies into Adolar's arms.

EURYANTHE AND ADOLAR:
Take my soul;
Breathe with my life;
I am quite yours!
Let me in joy and woe,
Expire on your breast.
(They embrace each other.)

CHORUS: Truth, strong and pure;
Joy after death-pain;
Angelic union!
You his; he yours.

ADOLAR: (von Entzücken ergriffen). Ich ahne Emma! selig bist du jetzt:
Der Unschuld Thräne hat den Ring benetzt, Treu bot dem Mörder Rettung an für Mord,
Ewig vereint mit Udo weilt sie dort.
(Gegen Himmel deutend).

ADOLAR: (in ecstacy) I divine Emma's meaning! She's blessed now!
The ring's been wetted by the tear of innocence;
Faith has offered pardon to the murderer for his crime;
For ever joined to Udo, she dwells there (Pointing toward heaven.)

SCHLUSSCHOR: Nun feiert hoch in vollen Jubeltönen Der Ritter Schmuck, die Treuste aller Schönen!
Geprüftes Paar, besiegt ist Nacht und Tod, Die Wahrheit strahlt im reinsten Morgenroth, Der Himmel schirmt dies Band!
Heil Adolar! Heil Euryanth!

ENDE

CHORUS: How celebrate high in full tones of rejoicing.
The pearl of Knights, the most faithful of the fair!
Tried pair, night and death are conquered!
Truth beams in the purest glow of morning!
Heaven protects this union!
Hail Adolar! Hail Euryanthe!

printed in an adjoining column, making it easy to refer back and forth as you listen to an opera on the radio, a record, or a CD, or watch it on television. Reading the libretto before attending an actual performance will give you the background you need to appreciate fully the glorious magic—and the subtle intricacies—of any opera as it comes to life on the stage.

From such early masterpieces as Claudio Monteverdi's "L'Incoronazione di Poppea"—to twentieth-century works such as Sergei Prokofiev's "Love for Three Oranges," The Book of 101 Opera Librettos features the works of forty-eight different composers—including Purcell, Handel, Mozart, Verdi, Mascagni, Bizet, Wagner, Tchaikovsky, Puccini, Humperdinck, Strauss, Rimsky-Korsakov, and Rossini. Spanning four centuries of extraordinary musical and literary achievement, it is an invaluable reference for opera aficionados and new-comers alike.
